Unions Cooperate To Supply Blood To Red Cross

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—Immediate steps to fill up the low blood banks of the Army and Navy by mass blood donations were announced here by the National Health Security Council. This organization, which acts as a medium of health education for a number of labor unions, has developed a plan by which the American Red Cross can be supplied with blood donations on a scale adequate to the present emergency, the membership of various labor unions to be the donors.

Ten unions have either approved the plan or are active collaborators of the Council. The Greater New York Industrial Union Council, a collaborator with the Health organization, is promoting a blood donors plan and has leaflets on the street covering the question.

AT UNION HALLS

The plan involves collections of blood in the trade union halls themselves, with the combined facilities of the Red Cross, the Health Security group, and the Interne Council of America. Clifford McAvoy, Legislative Representative of the Greater New York Council, believes this to be the method that will secure the most blood.

A Labor Union Donors' week will be urged upon the Red Cross to help promote the work. The Health Security Council believes that blood should also be made available to defense workers who are injured in industrial accidents.

Some idea of the immensity of the need for blood for transfusions may be had from peace time requirements of the Army and of the Navy, which, according to Major General James C. Myers, in the November 22 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, amount to no less than 200,000 pints.

'LIMITLESS NEED'

In time of war, when large numbers of men are engaged, the need for blood plasma is for all practical purposes limitless. The Red Cross is now expending its laboratories for processing of blood sevenfold. Blood plasma is used not only to replace blood lost but to lessen shock. Blood plasma can be put up in small unit packages and carried by soldiers, sailors, aviators, and everybody in the armed forces.

Unorganized individual volunteer blood donations have proved inadequate to the need and organized mass donation is an absolute necessity.

Murray In Parleys On War Labor Board

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—Talks between labor officials and government on the make-up of the new War Labor Board outlined in the agreement for voluntary settlement of all labor-management disputes continued here this week, with prospects that the Board would be set up late in the week or early next week.

Principal conferees with government were CIO Pres. Murray and Pres. Green of the AFL, who spent considerable time with U. S. Labor Secretary Perkins discussing the Board. Talks with industrialists were scheduled for later this week, according to Secretary Perkins. None of the conferees would reveal the nature of the conferences or of proposals for the composition of the new Board.

AGREEMENT REACHED

Setting up of the War Labor Board will carry out one of the principal points of the agreement reached last week between labor and management, which provided for mediation and voluntary arbitration of all disputes that might interfere with production in time of war. The agreement came after more than a week's conference, and represents the position unanimously supported by all the labor representatives from both CIO and AFL.

Chief cause for the week's time used up in reaching a settlement was the refusal of employers to permit mediation or arbitration of the union security issue, which they claimed could not be considered in war-time. Agreement came when the CIO and AFL maintained a united front on the issue, pointing out that union security was the best guarantee of uninterrupted production.

TORIES STILL ACTIVE

Though Congressional demands for repressive labor legislation died down somewhat as the result of the settlement during the week, after the first sharp outcries from the more extreme reactionaries, at least one Senator renewed the demand for outlawing the union shop. This was Senator Ball of Minnesota, who used a forum discussion in New York to raise the old (and phony) slogan of "the right to work" by men who refuse to join a union.

Not much attention was paid to him, however, as labor and the country generally waited to see the form the War Labor Board would take. In the meantime, as President Murray pointed out in talking with newsmen, industry continued to be responsible for production delays.

Relief Groups Get Office Union Gifts

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—Christmas donations totaling six thousand dollars— contributed in small sums by members of the United Office and Professional Workers, CIO—were presented today to five war relief and welfare organizations: United China Relief, British War Relief, the Red Cross and the United Service Organizations.

These donations are the first installment of a $25,000 quota for war relief set last November, before the United States entered the war, by the UOPWA's National Defense Committee.

DEFENSE GROUPS

The money is being raised through Defense Committees in the white-collar union's sixty-odd locals made up of advertising, art, insurance, film, publishing, social service and general clerical workers in 42 cities of the United States.

"Our members are willing to turn their pockets inside out, if need be, to speed the world-wide victory over Hitlerism," Joseph H. Levy, chairman of the UOPWA National Defense Committee, said in presenting the checks to the various organizations. "This is only the beginning of what we intend to do."

Local UOPWA unions have raised and are continuing to raise war relief funds by contributing a day's pay.

Urge Local Labor Parleys

St. Louis, Dec. 31.—Formation of local and state conferences of government, labor and industry along the lines of the recent national parley, were advocated here by the St. Louis Industrial Union Council, Secretary Luther M. Slinkard said today.

The CIO group endorsed the national conference as a "logical approach toward practical application of the program suggested by the CIO long before the present crisis."

The mayor of St. Louis and the governor of Missouri were called upon to convene similar meetings, and to invite representatives of the Brewery and Typographical Unions, both of which have been suspended from the AFL.

So You've Got Troubles?

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—If you're inconvenienced by the blackout, think how fortunate you are by comparison with the folks in Fairbanks, Alaska.

Because of the long Arctic nights, Fairbanks' blackout starts at three in the afternoon and winds up at nine the next morning!

Unify Labor Supply Agencies, Murray Ask FDR

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—Declaring that "much of the success of our war effort will depend on the effective organization of our total labor supply," Pres. Murray today urged President Roosevelt to transfer all present agencies dealing with labor supply, training, Selective Service exemptions for labor reasons and the like to the Department of Labor, where they can be more efficiently handled.

Murray's letter to Roosevelt pointed out that "no coherent labor supply policy has been established by the government," that responsibility has been dispersed over a number of agencies, and that the necessary cooperation with organized labor has not been effected under the present system.

"The CIO has for some time now made repeated efforts to have established a unified and coherent labor supply policy," Murray wrote. "It is of the utmost importance to organized labor that the nation's workers be utilized in the common effort as effectively as possible."

IN BRITAIN

Britain's experience with labor supply in war time has shown the wisdom of centralizing administration, Murray added, citing the fact that all such questions there are dealt with by the Minister of Labor, who also controls workers' exemptions from military service.

"It seems to me that sound administration of labor supply in this country calls for a reorganization of the government labor supply activities similar to that of Great Britain," Murray wrote.

This calls for the transfer of all such work to the Labor Dept. here, which labor has always regarded "as best suited to deal with problems affecting the working people."

In addition, Murray wrote, the Labor Dept. should have sufficient personnel drawn from organized labor and sufficient funds to carry out this vital part of the war program.

Newsmen Back Victory Program

Washington, Dec. 31. — Declaring that this is a "people's war calling for the highest degree of national unity behind the victory program," the Washington Newspaper Guild today resolved to do "everything in the power of our members as working newspaper men and women to aid our fellow workers in the CIO and all other loyal men and women in carrying out the victory program."

Tory Bills Seen Threat To Unity

Washington, Dec. 31.—Pending anti-labor bills in Congress are "a dire threat" to national unity needed for victory, according to an open letter signed by 352 prominent Americans and sent to President Roosevelt and to Congress this week by the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties.

"We cannot forget that one of the first steps in the coming of German and Italian Fascism was the passage of anti-labor legislation similar to that now being considered in Congress of the U. S.," the letter said, pointing out that such bills endanger the unity achieved at the recent labor-industry-government conference.

"All of these proposals remove, in varying degree, labor's freedom to arrive voluntarily at agreements covering employer-employe relations. There is not one of these anti-labor bills which does not take rights of American working men and women."

Plan Drive On Big Steel Lake Fleet

Detroit, Dec. 31.—A concentrated drive on the U. S. Steel Corp. fleet will be the main organizing job for 1942 on the Great Lakes, according to the decision of the annual National Maritime Union Lakes Conference just concluded here.

The fleet numbers about 80 ships, each with a crew of more than 30 men. They carry ore for steel mills owned by the corporation. Organization of these ships will give the NMU dominant strength in Lakes shipping.

SPLASH FOR THE AXIS: A sub-chaser slides down the ways in Brooklyn, N. Y., while the slogan, "Remember Pearl Harbor," is displayed on the guest platform.

REPORTS: Rep. John Tolan of California, whose Congressional investigating committee last week attacked "business as usual" methods in American industry, urged quick steps for full production.

Union Draws Victory Plan

DENVER, Dec. 31—A seven-point "victory program" was outlined for action by all locals of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union by President Reid Robinson this week.

The plan calls for setting up production committees composed of labor and management along the lines of the CIO Industry Council Plan, for full participation in civilian defense, Red Cross and war relief work, purchase of Defense Bonds, conservation of civilian goods, and vigilance by union groups against inflated living costs and other threats to national morale on the home front.

"In the minds of some there has been a tendency to divorce the war from union activities," Robinson wrote in presenting the plan to the union's locals.

"We must revaluate the importance and the effect of the war upon us. A victory for Hitler, for Mussolini or for the Mikado of Japan would mean also a victory for similarly minded forces in the U. S."

PRODUCTION

Production committees take first place in the program. In addition to devising new means of boosting war output, these committees should also be on guard against waste, against possible sabotage by Axis agents, against discrimination toward Negro and other minority workers, and should promote transfer of non-defense workers to arms production.

On civilian defense, the plan urges all members to enroll with local authorities for air raid precautions work, auxiliary fire and police duty, etc.

Other civilian activities urged on the union in addition to Red Cross and relief include vigilance against living cost jumps, against high rents, and against all attempts to lower trade union standards.

Adopt Plan For Rubber Workers

Washington, Dec. 31.—A five-point program designed to lighten the burden of rubber industry employes, facing severe unemployment as a result of the cut in imports from the Far East, was issued here by the OPM through Associate Director-General Sidney Hillman.

The program calls for protection of seniority rights, transfer of employes from non-war to war jobs within plants; preferential hiring of displaced workers; recall of workers by original employer for war tasks, and retention of seniority by workers in training for defense jobs."

Conferences leading up to adoption of the plan were held in Akron during mid-December. Representing the CIO United Rubber Workers were President S. H. Dalrymple, Vice-President L. S. Buckmaster, Secretary-Treasurer Frank Grillo, and eight local officers.

LITTLE LUTHER:

On Plant Shutdowns

"Father," said Little Luther, "what do you think Congress will do about it?"

"Do about what?"

"The walkout of more than 300,000 men from the automobile factories."

"What are you talking about? There is no strike in the automobile industry."

"This is worse than a strike, father. A strike wouldn't last more than a week or 10 days. But these men are being laid off for weeks and months, costing the war program 12,000,000 man-hours for every week of idleness. It is the greatest single blow to production since we began to rearm."

"Oh, you are talking about priorities. Well, Luther, I don't see anything much for Congress to do. Eventually most of these men will find work in war industries."

"I should think Congress would want to pass a law providing 10-year prison terms for those responsible for this stoppage."

"That would be absurd. No individual is responsible. It's just a question of making necessary adjustment in our production system."

"Father, haven't I heard you say that no obstacle is too great for America's industrial leaders to overcome?"

"Well, er, words to that effect."

"And haven't America's industrial leaders been running the show in Washington for a year now?"

"They have done the best they could."

"I'm glad you give them credit for trying, father. But it looks to me as if they have wasted 10 times as many man-hours as all the defense strikes put together."

2.5 Million In Training

Washington, Dec. 31.—Nearly 2.5 million people have been signed up for training in war industries during the past 18 months, according to Sidney Hillman, associate-director of the OPM, in an announcement that called for greatly increased training in the immediate future.

Twelve hundred public vocational and trade schools, 155 colleges and universities, and 10,000 public school shops are involved in the program, though the program is being held back by a shortage of machine tools and other equipment in the schools.

These figures do not include more than 2,000,000 workers who are getting in-plant training, Hillman added.

Murray Asks Unions Aid Gold Strikers

Washington, Dec. 31.—Though the CIO has made great sacrifices in adjusting disputes that might interfere with victory production, it "has not and does not intend to give up any of the fundamental rights won by working men and women over a long period of years," President Murray wrote today in urging full CIO support for the 4,000 members of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers on strike at Kirkland Lake, Ontario.

The workers at Kirkland Lake, employed in eight gold mines, have complied with every conceivable government regulation and have gone through every other process before taking strike action a month ago, Murray pointed out in asking CIO unions to send strike donations to the miners. In spite of that the company has remained adamant in refusing to grant even elementary union recognition.

"Using anti-labor elements in the Canadian government, the gold mine operators have formed a united front against any recognition of the union whatever," Murray said, though other unions have been recognized in Ontario and elsewhere throughout Canada.

LABOR'S FUTURE

"We wish to stress the fact that the future of the labor movement in Canada, involving all CIO unions, will be vitally affected by the settlement of this strike, and will make every possible effort to carry their struggle to a successful conclusion in the shortest time possible."

Contributions should be sent to the union at the Arcade Building, Kirkland Lake, Ontario, Canada, Murray noted.

CIO Member Heads City Housing Unit

Washington, Dec. 31. — The first CIO member in the United States to be appointed chairman of a local housing authority is Fred Zurell, Vice Chairman of UAW-CIO Local 626, Bristol, Conn.

Announcement was made here by R. J. Thomas, chairman of the CIO Housing Committee and president of the United Auto Workers. Pres. Thomas expressed pleasure that the first CIO housing authority chairman was a member of his own organization.

There are now about ten CIO unionists who are members of local housing authorities scattered throughout the country, but Fred Zurell is the first man to hold the post of chairman.

In Detroit, Mich., a former auto union official, George Edwards, is executive director of the Municipal Housing Commission, which is a full-time paid position. Frank Palmer, well-known labor journalist, is executive director of the Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, Housing Authority.

UNPAID JOB

The chairman of a local housing authority is an unpaid position. As a rule a housing authority is a five-man board. Local authorities function under state legislation and exist principally for the purpose of obtaining loans and subsidies from the United States Housing Authority for slum clearance projects. The local authorities manage the projects when completed.

In some parts of the country local housing authorities are playing an important role in the construction of defense housing.

CIO REPRESENTATIVES

Among the CIO representatives who serve on local housing authorities are the following: John Mullen, SWOC (Mayor of Clairton), Allegheny County, Pa.; Clifford Shorts, SWOC, Beaver County, Pa.; W. J. Hanka, Aluminum Workers, Westmoreland County, Pa.; Tony English, Textile Workers Union of America, New Bedford, Mass.; Benjamin Keyton, Hosiery Workers, Martinsburg, W. Va.; Clarence Keller, United Automobile Workers, South Bend, Ind.; and C. E. Ross, Furniture Workers, High Point, N. C.

EMPLOYED BY GM

Fred Zurell is employed at the General Motors Corporation plant in Bristol, which is now rapidly expanding its personnel as a result of defense needs. A critical housing shortage exists in Bristol, Zurell states, as a result of increased employment.

Councils Told to Aid Rationing

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—All CIO state and city councils were urged today to adopt immediate steps to seek representation on rubber tire rationing commitees being established throughout the country under the auspices of defense groups and the Office of Price Administration.

In a letter to all the state and city CIO bodies, John Brophy, director of industrial union councils, pointed out that "the whole problem of rationing is of great importance to the members of labor unions, both as producers and consumers, and in consequence it is essential that CIO organizations take an active hand in the matter."

SEEK REPRESENTATION

Brophy said he had already suggested to the state councils that they "proffer assistance in this work and seek appropriate representation on both state and county committees." State CIO officials were advised to transmit the message immediately to all their city affiliates for similar action.

The tire rationing committees may receive additional importance in coming months, the CIO affiliates were told, since they "may be charged in the future with the responsibility for rationing other commodities in addition to tires as shortages develop."

GOVERNORS APPROACHED

The Office of Price Administration has already approached governors of the 48 states in their capacity as heads of the state and local defense councils, it was pointed out, and "the persons who will actually be charged with the appointment of the state committees will, in all probability, be the heads of the State Defense Councils, operating under the governors.

"Appointments of local rationing committees will probably be in the hands of the local Defense Councils," Brophy's letter said.

"Since an effort is being made to complete all appointments to rationing committees this week, it is important that action be prompt."

Lumbermen, Union OK Joint Action

Duluth, Minn., Dec. 29—(FP)—Minnesota lumber operators have accepted the plan of Local 29, CIO Intl. Woodworkers, for joint action on wartime production.

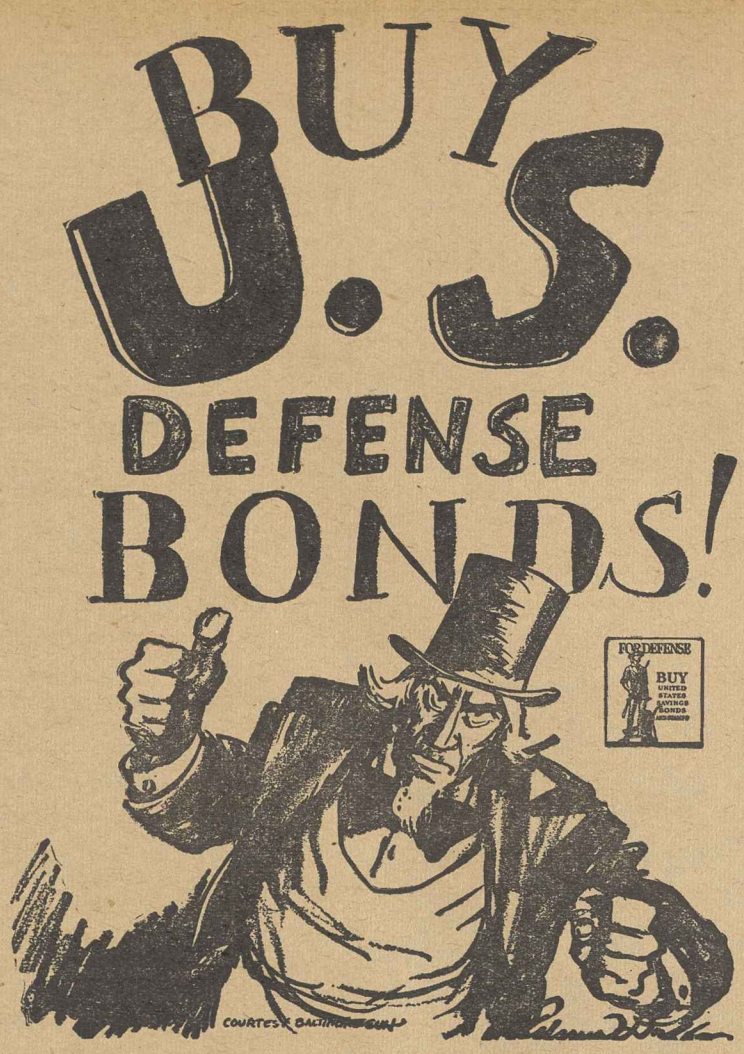
Following a preliminary meeting between representatives of the union and of the Timber Producers Assn., three-man committees from both sides were set up.

On the union committee are Local Pres. Ilmar Koivunen, Vice Pres. Fred Schultz and Sec. Ernest Tomberg. On the employer committee are C. L. Cecil of the Mead Timber Co., J. C. Campbell of the Campbell Timber Co. and F. A. Kelly of the Weyerhaeuser General Logging Co. A district representative of OPM has been asked to sit in on the meetings between the two committees.

The problems of maintaining sustained production and guaranteeing the labor supply required of defense demands were discussed at the first meeting.

Hailing acceptance of the joint committee proposal, the union said:

"Our action was taken in the same spirit that the CIO nationally, under the leadership of Philip Murray, proposed the industry council plan to give labor a voice in defense production, and in the same spirit that unions and employers in many other industries are cooperating wholeheartedly to guarantee the goods will be delivered."



Murray Hits 'Brush-off' Of Copper Plan

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—The CIO is ready and eager to help solve the problem of copper production for war needs "as soon as it finds a government agency or official ready to get down to work," President Murray told President Roosevelt in a letter today pointing out that there had been an "inexplicable failure" by OPM to take advantage of the CIO plan for greater copper output.

The plan, prepared by Pres. Reid Robinson, of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and presented by Pres. Murray, received a polite brush-off from OPM officials when presented. It calls for series of technical measures and for improvements in working conditions to step up copper and other metal production to meet arms requirements.

At the time of presentation, President Roosevelt wrote Murray that "our needs are obviously so great that all groups must pool their knowledge of production problems and must work together to find some means to overcome production difficulties."

NO RESULT

The OPM conference, however, ended without result "without setting up machinery or taking steps to guarantee increased production," Murray wrote. This happened, he said, "despite the drastic shortage of copper," that is already holding up arms output and has forced sharp curtailments in civilian consumption.

"The CIO and the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' Union are still deeply concerned with increasing the output of copper," Murray added. "Our union was the only group to present any concrete program to increase the production of the key non-ferrous metals. The union itself has already set up a special Production for Victory Committee. This committee was sent to Washington to participate in the conference and stands ready to aid in every possible way.

"The union assures me that it is ready and eager to help solve the production problem as soon as it finds a government agency or official ready to get down to work."

CIO Plan Would Triple Output Of Farm Machinery Industry

CHICAGO, Dec. 31—A plan for tripling production in the nation's agricultural implement industry was presented this week to OPM by the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee.

The proposal, latest in a series of suggestions from CIO affiliates for bettering the United States wartime production, contained 12 major points aimed at the dual goal of providing American agriculture with sufficient machines while devoting all possible capacity to equipment for the armed forces.

The plan was first presented to OPM Directors Knudsen and Hillman by FEWOC Secretary-Treasurer Gerald Fielde and other members of the OPM labor advisory group for the farm implement industry.

The union recalled that on October 27 it warned the government that failure of the industry to organize for large-scale defense production would result in serious unemployment for several thousand workers.

"Since our appearance before OPM, the International Harvester Co. has gone on a four-day week," the FEWOC statement pointed out, "and other companies are laying off workers, the amount of raw materials available to the companies having been reduced because of national defense needs."

The industry's dual role in the war emergency consists of "turning out implements to produce the foodstuffs necessary to feed the nation, the Army and help feed allies," the union said. "Secondly, the industry must organize itself along with the rest of American industry to arm our brave soldiers and sailors."

A principal feature of the union plan was a suggestion for "consolidation of non-defense production in a smaller number of plants so that some plants may be utilized almost entirely for defense production, including armed cars and light tanks."

At the same time, the union suggested a "freezing" of present farm implement models to avoid needless changes in machine tooling, with alterations being limited to those made necessary by shortages in some materials.

ASK CURTAILMENTS

Drastic curtailment or elimination of some less important farm implement models was also suggested by the union in order to make more materials available for tractors and combines. The industry was also urged to adopt cheaper mass production methods for manufacture of replacement parts, and to stop junking of traded-in equipment, with such trade-ins being reconditioned for use.

Turning to the labor relations problem, the union suggested a bonus system to reward increased production, and the establishment of higher minimum wage rates to deter migration out of the industry into other jobs. While pledging not to strike during the war emergency, the FEWOC urged voluntary and impartial arbitration of all disputes arising between workers and management.

JOINT COMMITTEES

Establishment of joint labor-industry committees. along the lines of the Murray Council plan, were recommended for each plant, with a national committee, comprising labor, industry, farmers, the OPM and the Department of Agriculture, was proposed to supervise the national program.

The FEWOC said its plan was submitted only after lengthy talks with interested groups.

"We do it with the sincere hope that it will not be examined for a business-as-usual viewpoint, but on the contrary will be considered in the light of the fact that these are not normal times, and normal production methods will not give our armed forces the instruments they need for victory."

Robinson To Speak

Washington, Dec. 31—Reid Robinson, CIO vice-president and president of the International Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, will speak for labor on the Town Hall of the Air radio program Thursday, January 8, from 9 to 10 p.m. Subject of the forum is "How Can We Speed Up War Production?"

Vice-President Robinson is chairman of the IUMM&SW Production for Victory committee, which recently submitted a detailed program for stepping up production of copper, lead and zinc.

Dedication

San Francisco, Dec. 31.—"Unity for Victory" will be the theme of labor's New Year celebration scheduled at the new CIO headquarters to be opened here New Year's eve. AFL officials and rank and file will attend the celebration, CIO Council officials announced. Blackouts will not interfere, since the party will take place in the "Air Raid Club," which is the concrete basement easily convertible to an air raid shelter.

Unions Join Consumer Council

Racine, Wis., Dec. 31—Alarmed by unjustified price increases, AFL and CIO unionists are preparing to fight back through a reorganized Consumers Council.

Each local union will be allotted two delegates for a meeting to be held in Co-Op Hall on Jan. 12. Other delegates will represent farmers' organizations and the Racine Consumers Cooperative Assn.

A New Broom To Sweep Clean

Attention Please

President Philip Murray of the CIO has written to President Roosevelt calling attention to the "inexplicable failure" of government officials to take advantage of the constructive proposals of the International Union of Mine Mill & Smelter Workers in working out a concrete program to increase production of copper and other vital metals.

A conference of labor, industry and government officials was called by OPM, it is true, the first to be held on production in that industry including the three groups. But it was allowed to end without result. No machinery was set up and no steps were taken to guarantee increased production.

This is not the first experience of a similar nature that CIO has had with the carefully prepared and practical plans of its unions for overcoming production lags in their respective industries.

The country's need for all-out production is too great for CIO to take such cavalier treatment lying down. It expects, and the country should demand, that every constructive proposal from the people who are doing the actual work of production should receive thorough examination, and that labor as well as industry should be enlisted in devising immediate steps for increasing production.

Social Welfare

Senator Byrd of Virginia, speaking for a majority of a joint Congressional economy committee, has proposed a cut of more than a billion dollars in the government's social welfare program.

The CIO is well aware of the need for proper economy in governmental administration. But what Byrd and his group are proposing would actually be the grossest extravagance and wastage of the human resources of our country.

Senator LaFollette, in a minority report, points out that the majority's recommendations would be almost entirely at the expense of the very lowest income groups among the population.

Curtailment of school lunches for the children of distressed farm and industrial families; less aid for low-income farmers, the youth and the unemployed; less public health and social welfare work of all kinds—these are samples of what the Byrd group considers "economy."

Now when national morale is of the utmost importance is the worst of all possible times to soak the needy and underprivileged for the sake of saving a few dollars for the rich.

Constructive

The Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee is the latest of the CIO unions to advance a practical production program for its industry. Its proposals are designed to triple the industry's productive capacity.

The farm equipment industry is of particular importance in this war emergency. It has to turn out the implements needed to produce foodstuffs for the nation and the armed forces; and its plants can be used for producing armored cars, tanks and other implements of war. Yet the International Harvester Co. has gone on a four-day week and other companies are laying off workers.

The FEWOC plan is designed to utilize the industry's capacity to the full through the adoption of a number of simple but practical proposals.

The CIO joins with this union in hoping that this plan "will not be examined from a business-as-usual viewpoint, but on the contrary will be considered in light of the fact that these are not normal times and normal production methods will not give our armed forces the instruments they need for victory."

LOOKING AHEAD
By Len De Caux

IF a new Pilgrim's Progress were written today about American People's toilsome journey to all-out production and victory, two of the chief characters seeking to lead the modern pilgrim astray would be Mr. Business As-Usual and his consort, Miss None-of-Your Business.

Mr. Business As-Usual would obviously be a modern counterpart of Mr. Worldly Wise. A superficially smart businessman, looking out for No. 1, he would say: "Sure, I'll help you reach your goal of all-out production. In fact, I'll show you the way—for a percentage of the take.

"But first of all, we must sit down and figure out the profit. After all, I must have an incentive. Then we must be sure no competitor gets a chance to muscle into my little monopoly. And there must be no interference with my right to run my own business my own way."

If American People became impatient with all the delays and obstructions of Mr. Business As-Usual, and pointed out that after all he was the guy doing the leg-work and had pretty good ideas himself about how to go places, then Miss None-of-Your Business would do her stuff:

"Imagine this pilgrim fellow thinking he knows as much as you do, sugar! Now, I call that cute. But don't you let him mess into your business, or next thing you know he'll be trying to run it. Tell him to stick to his work and do as he's told, and you'll do all the thinking."

But to cut the parable and get down to cases:

(1) We're in the war now. To out-produce the Axis is a matter of life and death. But business-as-usual attitudes and practices still prevail. Profiteering, monopoly and competitive considerations obstruct planned production. Result: bottlenecks, shortages, layoffs, unused facilities.

(2) The working people are first to feel what's wrong. A faulty blue-print, or some other dollar-a-year bungling in Washington, means actual unemployment to the men on the job. Some 300,000 auto workers will be rendered idle in Michigan alone, because of delayed conversion of plants to war production and failures to use all available machine tool capacity.

(3) Labor is the group most eager to lick that labor-enslaver, Hitler, just as it is first to suffer from production failures and to realize from practical experience what should be done. The CIO unions, in particular, representing all the workers in an industry, naturally think and plan in industry-wide terms, as distinct from employers primarily concerned with the profits and competitive status of their particular company.

(4) So it is that the CIO unions in practically every war industry have evolved industry-wide plans for increasing production, by full use of all available plant facilities and full employment for the workers. All of these plans are practical proposals of the people who are closest to actual production problems.

(5) But here we run slap into Miss None-of-Your Business. With a war to win, you might expect government and industry to seize eagerly upon these plans, to call the unions into close consultation, and jointly with labor to examine the feasibility of placing them into immediate operation.

Instead there have been polite, if perfunctory, acknowledgements. Some words of praise for the spirit shown. Impatient or insufficient consultations, if any. Some hints that the proposals might have received more consideration if they did not come from labor. And an impression left that labor might do better to "mind its own business" and let government officials and businessmen run the war-production program.

Whoever else may be kidding about this war, labor is in deadly earnest. It knows its role is of basic importance, and it is determined to pull its full weight.

The CIO advances its proposals in no partisan or carping spirit. It desires only that the best possible procedures be adopted to insure all-out production and victory. It resents the none-of-your-business attitude not so much as a slight as because it obstructs the full participation of all the American people in what is the whole people's business.

Finally, the CIO recognizes that basic to all the above troubles is the denial of proper labor representation in the administration of the war program. This it will continue to demand until given the opportunity to make its full contribution to victory.

Army Quits Plant As Air Associates Signs With Union

BENDIX, N. J., Dec. 29—(FP)—Air Associates Inc., which staged one of the bitterest anti-union struggles of 1941, has negotiated a contract with the CIO United Automobile Aircraft & Agricultural Implement Workers.

Federal troops, who have occupied the plant since Oct. 31, withdrew and the property returned to private ownership.

Negotiating for the company was Frederick G. Coburn, who replaced F. Leroy Hill as president of the firm. A UAW spokesman said that negotiations had been friendly and that bargaining with Coburn was in sharp contrast to dealing with Hill. Hill, whose defiance of the Natl. Defense Mediation Board led to army seizure of the plants, resigned under government pressure.

GOOD CONTRACT

The agreement is as good as any in the aircraft industry, the UAW said. It provides a 65c hourly minimum for women, a 75c minimum for men, a 9c hourly night bonus, a modified union shop, seniority and grievance machinery. Previously the minimum for both men and women was 40c.

The Air Associates situation became a national issue because of the extent to which the firm carried its anti-union fight. Although the company had substantial defense orders and was rapidly expanding, it continued to pay as little as 40c an hour and refused to deal with a union. Here are the highlights of the struggle which finally ended with an agreement:

STRUCK IN JULY

The UAW called its first strike against the firm on July 11 after 10 union committeemen had been locked out.

The UAW asked the government to take over the plant.

After stalling for several days, the company finally accepted an NDMB settlement plan ending the 18-day strike. The union renewed the strike on Oct. 1 after the company had failed to abide by the July settlement.

HILL WAS STUBBORN

Hill refused to accept an NDMB plan for immediate return to work pending further negotiations. Acting over Hill's head, the NDMB called the board of directors in Washington.

The company accepted the NDMB settlement plan and reneged within 24 hours.

The company again accepted NDMB plan, but at the same time encouraged scabbing workers to riot while army officers were trying to supervise the rehiring of strikers.

Federal troops took over on Oct. 31 and the plant resumed full operations under army control.

Hill resigned under government pressure.

The company finally gave in and negotiated an agreement.

Tories Blast At U. S. Social Welfare Program; LaFollette In Quick Reply

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—Congressional reactionaries and their allies among the ranks of the corporation-minded economists, this week let loose a torpedo blast at the national morale.

Led by Senator Byrd of Virginia and by the conservative Brookings Institution, the "economy bloc" trotted out proposals which in effect would let the rich get richer and would let the poor shift for themselves as best they may.

As part of a plan to save the wealthy big taxpayers a few dollars, the committee proposed curtailment of school lunches for the kids of distressed farm and working-class families!

Byrd, speaking for a majority of members of a joint Congressional economy committee, proposed a cut of well over a billion dollars in the government's social welfare program. A few days later the Brookings Institution—which has long issued reactionary economic schemes—in effect called Byrd a piker and suggested that the government cut its social service bill by two billion dollars.

Both proposals are seen as curtain raisers for the coming struggle in Congress over federal expenditures after Pres. Roosevelt submits his annual budget proposals next week. The economy bloc, which once raised the cry that each new billion-dollar appropriation for WPA would "bust" the country, has been kept quiet as the government earmarked huge sums for defense and war preparations.

'NON-ESSENTIALS'

Now the Byrd report calls for removal of "non-essentials in a government stripped for action." The non-essentials, the committee hastens to add, all affect the nation's least fortunate citizens.

It wants to trim a quarter of a billion from the Farm Security Administration, which aids the poor farmers. It recommends a cut of half a billion in the WPA and the Surplus Marketing Administration, which supplies food for the government's stamp purchase plan. It urges a cut of a third of a billion in funds for the CCC and the Natl. Youth Administration.

LaFOLLETTE DISSENTS

Sole dissenter on the Byrd committee was Sen. Robert LaFollette of Wisconsin, veteran liberal. The majority didn't let LaFollette know of their report, so that his dissenting opinion, released a couple of days later, received scant mention in the nation's press.

"To me," Lafollette said, "the conclusion is inescapable that almost the full impact of the recommendations of the majority would, if enacted, fall almost entirely on the very lowest income groups among the population.

"High morale—in fact, the very essence of dynamic democracy—is dependent upon a whole nation enjoying at least a minimum of the necessaries and comforts of life. All the social legislation of the past decades, all the trend toward greater public assistance for the underprivileged, have had the wholesome effect of tending to make democracy a reality in America. . . .

'ADVERSE EFFECT'

"To cripple or destroy the efforts which have thus far been made in this direction will have an adverse effect upon morale at the very time when we should be redoubling our efforts to build it up. . . .

"The entire civil arm of the government will spend in this fiscal year $6,600,000,000. Defense and war will cost at least $21,000,000,000. It is my contention that the majority report attempts to save at the spigot by drastic curtailments of essential aid to the underprivileged, while the waste occurs at the bunghole of war and defense."

FARM AID PROGRAM

The Farm Security Administration, which the Byrd group would like to cripple, has in the past made 900,000 loans to the nation's low-income farmers, and has enabled this segment of the population to increase materially its income. Sen. LaFollette noted in his report that some 2½ million farm families live on yearly incomes of less than $750 a year.

"The FSA has also helped more than 22,000 tenant farm families to become owners as a result of the tenant purchase program," LaFollette said. "A recent report shows that this government activity has the remarkable record of repayments of 96.5% of principal and interest due as of June 30, 1941."

This record compares favorably with the record of corporation repayments to the RFC, whose funds the Congressional tories have never yet suggested are too high.

SEES JOBLESS RISE

Priorities unemployment will rise between 1,500,000 and 3,000,000 in the next year, LaFollette predicted in his warning against the Byrd proposal to cut work relief funds.

"Except for unemployment compensation, which will cushion only a part of the impact because many workers are eligible for little or no compensation, there is no federal program which can take care of these people, until and if they receive defense employment, other than WPA."

SCHOOL LUNCH PROJECTS

"School lunch projects operated by such agencies as the WPA and the NYA are helping over 3,000,000 children in poor families with highly beneficial results in health and morale," Sen. LaFollette continued.

"Many other NYA activities, such as public health and hospital work, assistance in nursery schools for children whose mothers must work, and similar activities are positive contributions to the morale and well-being of the people, who must product the munitions and materials of war. . . .

"If it is necessary to preserve the morale of youth when the nation is not in danger, it is doubly important when the national security is at stake."

Offer Service To OCD

Philadelphia, Dec. 31—The service, technical knowledge and skill of members of the Broadcast Dept., Dist. Local 1, of the American Communications Assn., have been offered to Civilian Defense agencies for the duration of the existing emergency, Chairman L. E. Littlejohn announced this week.

Pamphlet Cites Peace Problems Facing U. S.

Washington, Dec. 31—American production is going up. In the next couple of years it will go even higher.

Some government economists have estimated that by 1944 the national income will be up to 105 billion dollars—an increase of 20 or 25 billions over the present.

In a new government pamphlet, entitled, "After Defense, What?", the Natl. Resources Planning Board points out that the nation's problem, when peace finally comes to the world, will be "to move over from a system of full employment for defense to a system of full employment for peace, without going through a low-employment slump."

WORK AGAINST CRISIS

American people will never stand for a post-war crisis, the government agency points out, and "the workers and farmers of America, the business leaders of America and the public officials of America know that the problem we face when the war ends is too big and complicated to be solved by the workers, the farmers, businessmen or the Government working alone or independently.

"Nothing less than energetic and intelligent teamwork will make it possible for us to move over from defense to peace while maintaining full employment."

The pamphlet states the major problems facing the country in the post-war situation, outlines the general constructive steps that should be taken, and urges the public to devote its thoughts to working out more detailed plans for permitting the nation's economy to swing into high peacetime production with a minimum of delay and hardship.

Seven Short Years

(The following story is reprinted from The Guild Reporter, official organ of the American Newspaper Guild, CIO. Written by a former editor of that paper, the story looks back seven short years—and shows how far the Guild, and every other CIO union, have gone in that period of time.)

By FRED MYERS

In the summer of 1934 a guy dressed presentably but distinctly not well in a $12 bargain basement suit bought, with some sacrifice, for the occasion, walked into the Chicago bureau of the United Press on the sixth floor of the ornate Chicago Daily News building.

He had combed his hair and braced his shoulders before opening the door, but the guy had been out of a job for nearly a year, and every city desk in the country had a heart-rending waiting list as long as the depression itself. He was scared, no fooling. A lot of good men were, too, along about that time.

Inside, he got to Charles B. McCabe, sandy-haired descendant of Scotland who bossed the UP central division at that time. He asked for a job. Any job.

To his own vast and incredulous surprise, the guy got a job. He was hired as a rewrite man and wire editor.

He was given a wage of $25 a week.

He asked for more, not very demandingly. He had three other persons to support, but he knew he was in no position to demand. He was out of a job, a lot of other guys were out of a job—and $25 was what McCabe was offering. Take it or leave it.

It is now 1941 and the same guy is out of a job.

For two weeks he's been looking for a job and, boy, oh boy, what a whale of a difference seven years have made.

I happen to be the guy I'm talking about, so I know. The difference has impressed me so much that it occurs to me that perhaps other newspapermen, even Guildsmen, who've been working steadily over recent years, don't really realize what's been happening even though they've been helping to make it happen.

For example: although I haven't asked for it, it occurred to me with a pleasant shock the other day, that if I were to walk into the Chicago bureau of UP and ask again for a job, there'd be no question of whether I'd take a $25 wage. The UP, if it had any job at all for me, would offer me at least $55 a week.

The reason is that in the intervening seven years the American Newspaper Guild has signed the UP on a contract that makes $55 a minimum wage for such work.

I worked six days a week for my $25 in 1934. The man who now has that job, whoever he may be, works only five days for his $55 or more.

Being on the beach, so to speak, has made me acutely conscious of such changes in our industry. There goes with consciousness a feeling that is hard to describe but which is wonderfully good.

I may be out of a job for quite a while. Perhaps again I shall be broke. But no matter how tough it gets, never again will I have quite the same helpless, licked feeling that I knew when McCabe offered me $25 a week on which to support a family of four—and I took it. No publisher or wire service chief can hire me at $25 a week, nor force me and other men into bidding each other down. I am part of something bigger than myself, bigger than any publisher.

The Good Old Days

Thinking of my old Chicago job led me into reminiscences about other things that in the last eight years I have seen changed by the Guild.

When I went to work for the New York Mirror in early 1936, experienced and capable rewrite men were getting as little—some of them—as 0 a week. I found a reporter, with seven years of experience, getting $18 a week. Copy boys got $9, $10 and $11.

As Emile Gauvreau says in his current best seller, "My Last Million Readers," Hearst executives weren't being paid from $30,000 to $100,000 a year "to cry over the help."

There was a Guild unit, but it consisted only of five copy boys and one caption writer. The caption writer got $25 a week.

We got a real unit organized in the next two months and the results were sensational.

There were wage increases all over the editorial department before we even had thought of asking for a contract. A scheduled reversion to the six-day week from the five-day schedule carried over from NRA days was abandoned a-borning.

We negotiated a bulletin board statement of improved wages, hours, severance pay, and overtime pay (remember those old bulletin board statements?). It was imperfect, even laughable by comparison with the last contract won by the Mirror unit.

But I remember with emotion and satisfaction that will live with me always, an incident of the day on which the bulletin board wage increases went into effect.

Came Guild Payday

The reporter I mentioned as having been receiving $18 a week came to get his pay. Under the new scale, he got $50. He stopped in the city room and asked me to come down to the lobby to meet his wife.

His wife was young. Thin, but pretty.

"I left the baby with my mother so we could do some shopping and I have to hurry home," she explained to me after the introductions. It was a polite but plain hint to her husband not to waste time on a rare day out together.

He replied by handing her his unopened pay envelope.

She held it in her hand, continuing to make small talk.

"Open it," commanded her husband.

"Later," she said. "I know too well what's in it."

"Open it," he repeated. "Don't be so sure you know everything."

She was puzzled, but she opened the envelope. Fifty dollars lay in her hand.

"What's this?" she asked. And then, with a quick gasp:

"You're not fired, are you?"

"Nope, honey, that's our pay check."

"What do you mean?"

"That's what we get paid now. That's my pay for a week. That's what I'm going to get every week. The Guild got it."

She just stood and looked at us for a full ten seconds. Then tears as big as any ever manufactured of glycerine rolled down.

Her husband looked at me, mumbled a good-bye, and swung his arm around her waist as she turned toward the outside door. I watched them go down the sidewalk toward grimy Third Avenue, she dabbing at her face with a handkerchief, he talking apologetically down to her averted face.

The Guild did that and I'm proud.

Co-Ops Boomed In '41; New Plants, Stores, Etc.

By WALLACE J. CAMPBELL
Asst. Secretary, The Cooperative League
Written for Federated Press

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 — (FP) — The year 1941 was a record year for consumer cooperatives, the Cooperative League of the U.S.A. reports. Hundreds of stores and service stations throughout the country were streamlined. New stores and headquarters buildings, warehouses and productive units were built. New sales records were established in retailing, wholesaling and production.

The most dramatic steps were in production, where the cooperatives purchased a $750,000 refinery and inventory at Scottsbluff, Nebr. This supplements the co-op refineries at Phillipsburg, Kans., Mt. Vernon, Ind., and Regina, Sask. All of these production units showed phenomenal earnings. One of the refineries saved consumers its entire cost during the course of the year.

Other productive units built or in the process of construction include feed mills at Superior, Wis., and Reading, O.; fertilizer factories in Ohio and Indiana; additions to the co-op paint and grease factories in Kansas City; compounding plants at Amarillo, Tex.; a $100,000 addition to the Farmers Union Central Exchange, St. Paul; two new warehouses for Pacific Supply Cooperative at Walla Walla, Wash.; and new headquarters for Saskatchewan Co-op Wholesale, Saskatoon.

Eight co-op wells in Kansas are feeding the co-op refinery there. The first co-op oil well in Indiana came in late in November.

STREAMLINING

The process of streamlining grocery stores and gasoline stations got under way in 1940.

The results achieved were so effective that scores of co-op stores and service stations from Massachusetts to California followed suit during 1941. Co-op super-markets have been built in Maynard, Mass., Waukegan and North Chicago, Ill., Winfield, Kans., and Berkeley, Cal. And a national committee on cooperative architecture and design has created uniform color schemes and designs for new co-op stores.

GRADING PLAN

Grocery co-ops, which pioneered with government grade labeling for two years before the major chains followed suit, added a system of 1, 2, 3 grading for those items not covered by government grading.

A new economy CO-OP Green Label was introduced to cut costs for lower income families. In co-op stores from coast to coast the red CO-OP label stands for the highest quality, with blue designating second and green label third grade.

Cooperation

Erie, Pa.—James A. Kennedy, president of Local 506 of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers (CIO), and H. L. R. Emmet, manager of the General Electric Company's works here, have issued a joint statement stating that both union and management "are resolved to continue and to improve the cooperation that has for so long existed between us to the end that we may together ensure that the Erie Works discharges its full duty."

REPORT FROM DOWN UNDER:

Union Shop Is Old Stuff In Australia; Bosses for It

NEW YORK, Dec. 29—Australia has found that maintenance of labor standards is a help rather than a hindrance to war production, reports Pres. Albert A. Monk of the Australian Council of Trade Unions.

Monk, who came to the U. S. for the first time to attend the recent Intl. Labor Conference, has headed the Australian labor federation for 11 years, though he is only 40 now. Quiet spoken and of slight stature, he takes the power of labor for granted—especially in politics.

The union shop battle of American labor sounds like a chapter of forgotten labor history to Monk.

"We settled that way back," he said. "One of our biggest employers was in this country not long ago. He surprised an American businessman by telling him he wouldn't dream of having anything but a union shop."

Australian war industries are still operating on the 44-hour week, with overtime permitted in some cases up to 54 hours.

TRIED LONGER WEEK

"At the beginning of the war, the workweek was stretched to as much as 66 hours," Monk said. "But we had to reduce it. Men can produce more in a long week for a while. Eventually they will produce less. Your problem here will be the same."

Overtime is paid for at rates that American employers and government spokesmen have stoutly opposed. For the first two hours, the rate is time-and-a-half; afterward it is double-time. Work on Saturday afternoons, Sundays and holidays also requires double-time.

REAL WAGES HIGHER

Monk reckons that the real wages of Australian workers are higher now than at the start of the war. Last February the arbitration court granted a $1.20 weekly increase to all workers in war industries, a raise that has since been extended to about 85% of the working population.

In addition, wages are adjusted each three months in accordance with the cost of living index. Since February the adjustments have totaled $1.40.

It would be impossible for an Australian employer to resist a union's attempt to bargain, Monk pointed out. The case of any recalcitrant employer would be referred to the Commonwealth Court of Conciliation & Arbitration, which would assign a judge to hear the evidence and hand down an award. The judge's award has the force of law.

QUICK ARBITRATION

Arbitration proceedings seldom require as much as three months. Reminded that NLRB cases in the U. S. have frequently dragged on for three years or even longer, Monk grinned. "We'd strike before waiting that long," he said.

It seems that strikes still occur in Australia, though striking unions are liable to fines for disregarding arbitration court awards. As a matter of practice, the fines are collected about as often as the U. S. government collects from shipowners who violate maritime regulations.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

Traditionally, the end of the year usually brings a slight let-down in organizing efforts and in production. People like to take it easy for a few days, stop and take stock, rest up for the new year ahead. The CIO is not indulging in this traditional practice this year. The country has a war on its hands—a war for survival that involves the whole future of the CIO and all humanity. This time, there is no relaxing—and there will be none during the coming year.

From hundreds of plants all over the country we hear and read of workers foregoing the usual holiday to keep at the production job. We hear of new and greater efforts to build up our arms supply—and the supply to our allies—to the point where we can out-fight and out-produce the Axis. CIO unions are coming forward with new blueprints for increasing arms production, with new proposals that will loose the full force of the greatest industrial nation against the mad dogs of fascism.

All these things are more than ever necessary. More than ever necessary too is the need to organize, to build the organized strength of American workers to the point where no aggressor can ever again threaten our liberties or those of our allies.

ALL DIFFERENCES PAST

The CIO knows how to do this job; the record of the past year and the five years before 1941 shows that CIO can organize the unorganized. Now we have the greatest job of all on the agenda—the job of organizing for victory.

Every CIO official, every organizer, every member must keep this job foremost in mind during 1942. All differences, no matter how slight, must be resolutely buried in the great common task. All temptations to take things easy, to slacken off even in the least degree must be brushed aside. We must work at the job of organizing in 1942 as though we had never worked before. This is the year that will tell the story between fascism and freedom—and on our will and our work depends the issue.

CIO is not accustomed to taking things easy. Our great orgnaization was built by hard and unremitting labor and sacrifice. Now we are called on to double and re-double the efforts we have put in so far. Hitler has made this plain. If we fail, our country and the cause of liberty fails with us.

REPORTS

It is good, therefore, to see that CIO is winning victories, is marking up new progress every week. Here is a sampling of reports that have come in since the last issue of THE CIO NEWS:

Frank Bonacci, acting CIO regional director for Utah, during the absence of Brother James Morgan, due to illness, reports the winning of an election by CIO with a vote of two to one at the Cudahy Packing Company and the breaking up of one of the strongest independent (company) unions within the state of Utah.

CIO Field Representative Sam Macri, Sr., in Newark. N. J., reports the signing of a contract with the Spratts Patent Limited of Newark, N. J. in behalf of UCAPAWA. with check-off, union-shop, wage increases and many other fine gains for the employes.

CIO Regional Director Fred Pieper in New Orleans reports the signing of a contract with the Chickasaw Wood Products Company and the United Cooperage Workers LIU 1126 with substantial gains for the workers involved.

Workers at the Robert Craig Nursery in Collingdale, Pa., have won a 21 per cent increase through the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers Union, President Henderson reports. Workers at the Page Milk Co. in Shelbyville, Ind., have voted 22 to four for the same union in a Labor Board election, as have workers at four cotton compresses in Houston, Tex., where the CIO majority was nine to one.

Unionists Fight Rent Jumps At U. S. Housing Project

RAVENNA, O., Dec. 31—(FP)—Union tenants in Westlawn Homes, U. S. defense housing project near the Ravenna ordnance plant, are fighting against proposed rent increases up to 75%. Monthly rentals would jump from $20 to $35 in some cases.

Most of the tenants are members of unions employed at the plant. These unions have pledged full support, especially if a rent strike becomes necessary.

First action of the group was to petition President Roosevelt and Congress to aid in the fight against rent boosts. The petition was signed by 80 of the 99 tenants.

Included in the petition was a protest against existing living conditions at the project. The tenants complained that there was no basements, poor drainage, no plaster walls, improper coal furnaces, no laundry facilities and no fire alarm system.

Mississippi Goes Union

KOSCIUSKO, Miss., Dec. 31—Mississippi slipped out of the ranks of CIO holdouts here, as the Textile Workers Union won an NLRB election at the Aponaug Manufacturing Co.

The TWUA polled 246 votes, to 176 for the AFL and 18 for no union.

H. S. Williams, Alabama state director for the union, asserted "this is the first CIO victory in the state of Mississippi.

"The company owns three other mills in Mississippi, and we stand a pretty good chance of also getting them in the union."

Handbook For Citizens

Washington, Dec. 31—Acting on the theory that "intelligent, patriotic citizenship is the bulwark of national defense," the Natl. Education Assn. has issued "The American Citizen's Handbook," which it seeks to place in the hands of every young man and woman of 21 years of age.

In its 369 pages the Handbook contains valuable information about the rights, privileges and duties of American citizens, and is full of highly useful material for citizens young and old.

Copies of the book may be obtained from the Natl. Education Assn., 1201 Sixteenth St., N. W., Washington, D. C. The books sells for $1 a copy, with discounts on quantities.

REPORT FROM THE SOUTH:

Millions Look to CIO For Delivery from Poll Tax Congressmen

By HAROLD PREECE

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 31—No headline-hungry Southern congressman is going to fool the South's working people in the present drive of the Dixie bloc to clamp down on the nation's trade unions through repressive anti-labor legislation.

They know that Tom Connally of Texas and Howard Smith of Virginia are not only scared to death at the prospect of a unionized America—but that Connally, Smith, and the rest of the Southern poll tax crowd in Congress fear, above all things, the continued spread of the CIO in the South.

The congressional servants of the South's big anti-labor employers are worried over items like this which appear in the press: "A three-pronged organization drive was launched by the CIO in Texas as industrial unions were set up to recruit Houston oil workers, cab drivers, and motion picture operators."

When the Southern people—white and Negro—are fully organized into the CIO, they will wipe out the poll tax. Then Tom Connally, Howard Smith, and Sam Rayburn will be looking for new jobs.

"THE FIRST STRIKE"

"I wish to know if you know who called the first strike?" inquires Vester Burkett, former organizer of the Alabama Farmers Union, when he talks to hill country farmers back in the creek bottom schoolhouses.

"It was God when he told Moses to go down and bring his children out from under Egyptian bondage. Those people were slaving for the Egyptians and God called a strike and sent a man after them.

"Brothers and sisters, God has sent the CIO after the folks who slave down here for them Egyptians who own the mines and textile mills. The South is run by the beast crowd who worship the Golden Calf, and its the beast crowd who've filled up all the offices down here."

WHAT THEY THINK

I wanted to see what Southern people themselves think of the Southerners in Washington who are trying to put the chains on every last working man and woman in American. So I started visiting cousins and friends who live in South Dallas where 90 per cent of the folks are workers.

I wanted to know particularly what they thought of Hatton W. Sumners, Dallas congressman, who used his position as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee to push Florida Congressman Joe Hendricks' bill to execute strikers under the provisions of the 1918 anti-sabotage bill.

"I feel ashamed down to my guts when I see Southerners like Hatton Sumners putting their mark on everything which would make poor folks poorer," said my cousin Link who works in the Dallas Ford plant.

"When Hatton Sumners first suggested that strikers be put in the electric chair, I felt like he was signing my own death warrant. And I couldn't help but remember that he has never said anything against the beating and killing of union men right here in Dallas by Ford service men nad the Ku Klux Klan.

"Hatton is a politician and knows where his bread is buttered—on the side of big employers like the Texas oil companies. But I'm a working man and I know where my bread is buttered—on the side of the CIO."

MINORITY RULE

Southern members of Congress are fond of rising up on their hind legs and yelping about "minority rule" by the unions. They would have America believe that the 53,000 striking workers of the captive mines are an unruly and "subversive" minority out to dictate to their fellow-countrymen.

But, let this correspondent say as a Southerner, that the shoe fits on the other foot. Every one of the Southerners who sponsored anti-labor legislation was elected by minority rule since 75 per cent of the Southern people—white and Negro—are disfranchised by poll taxes of from one to three dollars before a citizen may vote. In four of the eight poll tax states, the payment is cumulative—a person is required to pay up his past poll taxes before he can mark a ballot.

WHO THEY ARE

Texas elects the biggest ring of labor baiters to Congress—Tom Connally, Flour Peddler Senator W. Lee O'Daniel, Martin Dies, Sam Rayburn, Hatton Sumners, Charles L. South, and Eugene Worley. In the 1940 general election, only 28.7 per cent of adult Texans over 21 voted.

Meanwhile, according to a report issued early in the year, 1,000,000 out of 6,000,000 Texans are slowly starving to death. Throughout the South, the majority of Negro workers and a huge percentage of poor white workers are either "exempted" from social security laws or do not earn eough annual wages to draw any social security benefits.

Congressman Howard Smith of Virginia is called by the workers of his district "Dime-an-Hour" Smith. Another Virginia representative, Clifton Woodrum, led the attack on the WPA which resulted in almost a million unemployed workers—North and South—being sentenced to starvation. The 1940 vote in Virginia representated 20.8 per cent of the adult population.

Congressman Eugene Cox of Georgia, Smith's right-hand man, would also smash the trade unions. And in Georgia, 16.3 per cent of the people vote.

17.6% FOR HOBBS

Congressman Sam Hobbs of Alabama, taking a trick from Hitler, sponsored a bill to establish concentration camps for foreign-born workers. When election day comes around in Alabama, 17.6 per cent of the adult population go to the polls.

Only 9.8 per cent of the people vote in South Carolina, and that vote keeps "Cotton Ed Smith," friend of the Carolina mill owners in the United States Senate. Voting percentages for the three remaining poll tax states are Tennessee 27.9 per cent, Arkansas 17.8 per cent and Mississippi, which has never ratified the Thirteenth Amendment abolishing slavery, 15.2 per cent.

FORCE FOR DEMOCRACY

The CIO is the main force for democracy in the South today. It has brought millions of dollars in incerased earnings to Southern workers. Wherever it has penetrated down here in Dixie, it has fought to abolish those two main restrictions on democracy in the South—poll tax and lynching.

What the people of the South think of the CIO may be told in the words of Jesse L. Burton, Negro sharecropper and secretary of the Local 285 of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers at Camp Hill, Alabama:

"A new light is shining and we are all waking up and will sleep no more. That new light is the CIO."

L. A. Transit Firm To Meet with CIO For First Time

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 31—Stanley V. White, west coast commissioner of the U. S. Conciliation Service, summoned all parties concerned in the Los Angeles Railway Union controversy to a meeting to settle the dispute early this week.

The meeting marked the first time LARy management had ever met with representatives of CIO Transport Workers Union, whose members had been discharged by the company for failing to join an AFL organization.

In his summons to the meeting, White said that it was called "in the interests of national defense and the public."

Meanwhile, a fact-finding committee, appointed by Mayor Fletcher Bowron, threw its weight behind the U. S. Conciliation Service, and announced it would render no findings inasmuch as the Government agency had intervened.

BASIS OF DISPUTE

Basis for the dispute is that employes of the railway have been discharged for failing to join a union which they had no choice in establishing as bargaining agent. No election has ever been held, but the company entered a closed shop agreement with the AFL organization last summer when a CIO organizing drive was making headway.

The CIO union charged that the company deliberately chose the week before Christmas to launch its firings, and pointed to the fact that the contract was in effect for more than six months withhout an effort to enforce the closed shop until last week—15 days before the contract was due to expire.

THREE-POINT PROPOSAL

CIO Transport Workers Union has advanced a three-point proposal as basis for settlement of the dispute: 1—A halt to the discharges; 2—Reinstatement of the discharged men, and 3—An immediate collective bargaining agent election to decide which union the men favor.

The union said it had 2,043 signatures on petitions demanding that such an election be held, and offered the petitions as evidence before White. The company employs 3,200 men.

IMPAIRS TRANSPORT

In a statement early this week, the CIO said that the discharges are threatening the operation of the transit system here.

"More than 20 bus runs have been cancelled," the union said, "because capable and experienced men have been discharged.

"This constitutes a threat to smooth transportation in this key war city. Thousands of defense workers depend upon this system to go to and from their jobs. To fire men unnecessarily is to hurt the war effort."

Agree to Bar Strikes in Connecticut

....Hartford, Conn., Dec 31—(FP)—A statewide pact barring strikes for the duration of the war has been signed by labor, industry and government.

Signatories include the presidents of the Connecticut Federation of Labor, the Connecticut Industrial Union Council and the Manufacturers Assn. of Connecticut. Gov. Robert A. Hurley added his indorsement for the state.

Under the agreement, a copy of which was sent to Pres. Roosevelt, all labor disputes will be submitted to the governor or to arbitrators chosen by him.

"Both labor and management have agreed that there will be no cessation of work or production, arising from any differences which may interrupt or curtail in any way Connecticut's ability to produce the weapons of victory," the agreement said.

Fake Plane Union in Forced Landing

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 31.—The Aircraft, one of the most vocal company unions in the country, was trying to sing itself out of a hot spot this week.

Cause of the distress was an NLRB trial examiner's report accusing the outfit of being illegally supported by the Curtiss-Wright Corp., one of the nation's largest plane producers. The Aircraft has attempted in recent months to sell itself as something new in unions — an independent organization wearing no man's collar.

Howard Myers, NLRB examiner, recommended that the Board order disestablishment of The Aircraft on the basis that it was serving the company's, rather than the workers' interests.

The Aircraft was organized in 1934 to break a strike of the majority of Curtiss employes, who were organized at that time in an AFL federal local. It came back to life when the CIO United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers undertook an organizing drive among Curtiss-Wright's several thousand employes.

Union Licks Lockout

New York, Dec. 29 (FP)—Constance Hope Associates, one of the biggest publicity firms for opera, concert and stage stars, changed its mind about insisting on the sacred right to hire and fire publicity writers at will, after a 9-day lockout.

On Dec. 13 Constance Hope closed her lavish 57th Street office with the announcement that she would rather go out of business than renounce the right to hire and fire. She had refused to arbitrate the dismissal of a publicity writer, as provided in a recently signed contract with the American Advertising Guild, an affiliate of the CIO United Office & Professional Workers.

REINSTATED 21

On Dec. 22, the agency agreed to reinstate all 21 employes, including the publicity writer.

Among the accounts handled by the agency are those of Lily Pons, Rise Stevens, Lotte Lehmann, Ilka Chase and Lauritz Melchior. The agreement with the firm, signed in November, was the first won in the publicity field.

NOVELTY IN FIELD

The clause providing for grievance machinery and arbitration of dismissals was a novelty for the publicity field, where employes are hired and fired on an hour's notice.

Another innovation was the overtime clause. Executives get time off for the overtime they work, while the clerical workers get paid time and a half. The contract also provided increases from $2.50 to $15.

Consumer Head Warns of Abuses In Advertising

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—The charge that advertising abuses have lowered ethical standards, corrupted and distorted the press, and fostered monopoly was made here by Dr. Colston E. Warne in a radio address over the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Dr. Warne, who is president of Consumers Union of the U. S. and associate professor of Economics at Amherst College, spoke on "The Consumer View of Advertising."

"For years," he said, "American radio broadcasts have been punctuated on the quarter hour by insincere pleadings on behalf of alkalizers, cigarettes, soaps and beauty lotions.

TOO MANY HALF-TRUTHS

"Advertisers can talk until doomsday on how their craft lowers the cost of living and produces the American way of living. Until they eliminate the heavy loading of half-truths from their advertising, we just won't believe them. And we will organize our own independent and democratic consumer organizations to find the truth about commodities. Moreover, in a war period we will thunder loudly about their waste of essential resources.

"We feel that advertising has by its abuse stressed inconsequential values and brought a false perspective as to the merit of products.

"It has lowered ethical standards, corrupted and distorted the press, wasted much good timber, blocked the speedy use of correct medication, and has fostered monopoly through its large-scale use by a few financially favored companies.

"Today, bigger and expanding consumer organizations have been challenging the distortion of advertising and emphasizing the needs for technical information in buying."

'Pay Raises Imperative'—Federal Union

Washington, Dec. 31—War needs for maximum production and efficiency make pay raises for government workers imperative, the United Federal Workers, CIO, announced here in supporting a bill designed to raise pay in some sections of the Federal service.

Pointing out that 44 percent of Federal employes here get less than $1,500 a year, though the lowest "maintenance level" fixed by U. S. studies is higher, the UFWA declared that pay raises to take care of rapidly rising living costs were immediately necessary.

The UFWA is also seeking passage of a bill to provide overtime pay as paid in private industry and by government service in Britain.

Rents Up In South

Columbia, S. C. (FP)—State Labor Commissioner Harley reports that South Carolina rents have increased an average of 1.8% in the last 11 months. The range was from 3.3% to 65.2%.

No Dice!

BIRMINGHAM, Dec. 31—Next time someone tries to hand you a line that labor's not doing its part for Uncle Sam, tell 'em this story:

Union members at three Birmingham plants of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co. offered to work on Christmas day in the interests of the nation's Victory production program.

The company refused, closing down the plant for 24 hours. Only departments kept in operation were coke works and blast furnaces, whose continuous operations make a shutdown impossible.

OFFICIAL WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

VOL. V, No. 2 — 82 — January 12, 1942 — Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C., under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925. — $1 a Year, 3c a Copy

An Open Letter to Mr. OPM

Mr. OPM:

You read the news.

Wake Island has been taken. Guam has been taken. The Philippines are in dire straits. The United States, the nation with the greatest mass production machinery, has been unable to match Japan in equipment.

Why is that, Mr. OPM?

You know that to bring the war to a quick, victorious end, we have to produce a maximum of the implements of war as rapidly as possible.

You know that our automobile industry is the greatest mass production organization in the world. We have the basic machinery, the plant space, the skilled man-power, the managerial force to produce tanks and planes, guns and trucks. We can give our country and our allies unquestioned military superiority over our enemies.

Mr OPM, why aren't we doing it?

Half of the nation's auto plants today are closed down. Virtually all of them will be down by the end of January—blacked out not by Hitler and Japan.

Approximately 250,000 automobile workers, men trained in precision, mass production methods, and highly skilled tool and die makers, are now idle. Fully 400,000 will be idle by the end of January.

The nation has lost 2,000,000 man days every week in war production thru failure to put the 400,000 automobile workers to work.

Does this make sense, Mr. OPM?

Our war production is poorly allocated. It is on an insignificant scale, in inadequate quantities. Only a few plants are turning out the vital materials of war. Only one General Motors plant has been converted. We are promised accomplishments many months from now when new plants will be completed.

This is the record of the costly price we have paid for permitting business-as-usual to shunt aside the needs of national security.

1. "Only a negligible part of this (the automobile industry's) plant capacity is presently employed in the war effort."
2. "A great automobile corporation showed that it was producing the tools of war at a rate, which, if general, would require fifteen years for the completion of the armament program already projected."
3. "Manufacturers have been reluctant to convert their production facilities from civilian to military production, and the defense agencies of the Federal Government have not required such conversion."

Mr. OPM, more than a year ago, the Congress of Industrial Organizations presented a simple, practical plan for utilizing and adapting the available machinery in the automobile industry for plane production. The program, drafted by Walter P. Reuther and other members of the CIO's Automobile Workers' Union, was referred to you for study and recommendations. You did nothing about it.

Similar plans for increasing production of steel, aluminum, copper and other materials vital to the successful execution of the war program were proposed. You did nothing about them.

Labor is ready and determined to do its part in the national war effort. It is willing to accept the bitter necessities of a righteous war.

Labor has the right to expect that industry shall also do its part.

On Monday in Washington, representatives of automobile labor, automobile management, and of OPM will meet to determine what part the automobile industry is to play in America's war effort. It is a conference long overdue.

The Automobile Workers' proposals for all-out production will again be placed before you.

Mr OPM, the responsibility of war production is yours. What are you going to do?

CIO'S AD: This ad, appearing in full page size in Washington and New York newspapers, told government and industry leaders why arms production is lagging, and informed "Mr. OPM" that "labor has the right to expect that industry shall do its part." The ad appeared just before the meeting of auto labor and industry officials in Washington under OPM auspices.

OPM Auto Plan 'Inadequate'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10—Plans for conversion of the auto industry to armaments production are inadequate to do the tremendous schedule facing the nation, the CIO United Automobile, Aircraft & Agricultural Implement Workers charged today.

A long statement by the UAW-CIO representatives attending the government's two-day conference pointed out that establishment of a sub-committee to "assist in the development" of conversion methods is insufficient.

Without genuine labor and government representation, the automobile industry will continue "business as usual" methods which have dominated its actions for the past 18 months, the union officials declared.

Under the set-up finally devised by OPM "labor will have no effective voice" in determining the policies of the industry, the UAW-CIO pointed out. Seriousness of the situation is gauged by present unemployment of 250,000 auto workers and by admission from C. E. Wilson, head of General Motors, that another nine months at least will be needed before the company reaches its top war production level.

One For The Book

New York, Jan. 10—Who's crazy?

The Treasury Dept. appeals for labor support of its defense bond sales campaign to aid the nation's war effort.

Responding to that appeal, Local 333 of the State, County & Municipal Workers appealed to W. F. Carey, New York City Sanitation Commissioner, to authorize its officers and stewards to promote the sale of the bonds among its members in the department.

Carey, who was appointed to his job by Mayor LaGuardia, who ran on a labor-endorsed campaign for the war effort, refused!

The union charges that Carey's "arbitrary labor policy . . . obstructs the application of constructive proposals for mobilizing Sanitation employes behind our government's war effort."

Survey Shops

Cleveland—As part of its campaign to step up war production, District 7 of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers (CIO) last week launched a survey in all UE shops in this area to find out how workers and machines could be used more efficiently.

More Jobs Forecast For Negro Workers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10—"A representative segment of American industry, engaged in manufacturing war materials, is now giving serious thought to how thousands of Negro workers can be utilized in semi-skilled and skilled occupations in order to speed up war production," the National Negro Congress reported today.

The Negro Congress quoted reports in the Management Record, official organ of the Natl. Industrial Conference Board, among 402 firms in the eastern part of the country.

"The survey shows that, despite the business-as-usual attitude expressed by many employers who continue to refuse employment to Negro workers despite the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee, a growing number are expressing agreement with government officials that the number of Negro workers in war industry during 1942 will have to increase by scores of thousands," the Negro Congress said on the basis of the article in the employers' magazine.

"On the basis of their experience these employers express the belief that Negro skilled and semi-skilled workers measure up equally with skilled and semi-skilled white workers in ability, skill, production, regularity in attendance, accident record and general intelligence.

"They also express their belief that white workers, with few exceptions, have no objections to working with Negro workers, and that the overwhelming majority of labor unions do not discriminate against Negro workers, and welcome them within their membership."

Bonus for Babies

St. Louis, Mo.—Every baby born in 1942 to an employe of Benjamin Air Rifle Co. will get $25, according to the renewed contract between the firm and Local 1128 of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers (CIO). Wage raises of 7.5 to 15 cents, and other standard contract provisions are included.

Bay State CIO Votes No-Strike Pledge

BOSTON, Jan. 10—A pledge to settle peacefully all disputes in Massachusetts without resort to strikes or stoppages was adopted here Jan. 3-4 by the Bay State Industrial Union Council's special emergency convention.

The declaration, in line with that made by the national CIO during recent conferences with government and industry, followed a plea from Pres. Joseph Salerno on the need for all-out production to help win the war.

The state CIO leader outlined as a major task for the CIO the proof that "free labor can out-produce slave labor."

"Speedier production will mean speedier victory," Salerno declared. "If we will perspire more in the factories at the home front, we will bleed less at the war front. Labor will fight over there. But labor will not allow the profiteers to pick our pockets over here.

DENOUNCE SABOTAGE

"Pocket-picking patriots will never be pillars of patriotism. Organized labor must be the voluntary policemen of industry. We must denounce to the public those employes who sabotage production and national defense."

A feature of the convention was the visit of a 6-man committee to the state AFL convention, also meeting in the city, and the return visit of an AFL delegation to the CIO parley.

Both conventions urged labor unity to eliminate jurisdictional strikes and promote peace in industry. Committees from the two state labor groups will meet jointly to work out common problems.

In other actions the CIO convention called for a greater labor voice in the war, establishment of safety committees in all plants, continuous operations in defense factories and opposition to war profiteering.

Textile Union Offers Plan For Woolens

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—With 60,000 workers in the wool and carpet branches of the textile industry threatened with loss of their jobs due to priorities, the Textile Workers Union has offered a plan to OPM to relieve the situation.

TWU President Emil Rieve said that the plan would not only cushion the shock of unemployment upon the workers, but would equitably distribute national defense orders among all manufacturers, large and small, and by utilizing all available facilities would more quickly meet the vast requirements of the government.

"Of the 220,000 workers employed in the manufacture of woolen goods and carpets," Rieve said, "at least 60,000 are threatened by unemployment. Those workers, who are the innocent victims of this emergency, must be cared for by the government.

EQUAL ALLOTMENT

"Furthermore government orders must be equitably distributed in order that one area may not suffer a famine while another area gorges on a feast. In a great many instances, textile communities are one-industry towns.

"If the mills in such communities are not awarded their just share of government work, providing of course that they are equipped to manufacture the desired cloth, the populations of those communities will suffer unnecessary privations.

"We must not waste human effort in this crisis, the successful conclusion of which requires the last ounce of effort of every resident of the United States. Idle man power must be immediately enlisted in this struggle against tyranny, totalitarianism and the encirclement of our country by despotic forces.

IDLENESS MUST GO

"Idle plants must be brought into our productive effort to manufacture the supplies vital to our victory. There is no place for idleness, either of man or machine, in our embattled democracy."

The plan calls for increased unemployment benefits, elimination of waiting periods, retraining projects, defense work in areas hit by unemployment, and conversion of mills to defense work wherever possible.

It also asks for a 40-hour, five-day week in the industry, and recommends that future contracts be withheld from companies now permitted to operate in excess of 120 machine hours a week until within this limit.

Other recommendations call for a joint labor, industry, government committee; distribution of contracts by area; an immediate survey of all equipment; a study of availability of substitutes where shortages exist and a re-examination of specifications for woolen and worsted products for military needs to permit greater participation in government work.

The union has already sent a questionnaire to all woolen and worsted mills asking information on the effects of the wool curtailment order on employment; availability of machinery for defense work, and the type of work that can be performed.

Sweep Poll At Bank In New York

New York, Jan. 10—(FP)—The first election to be held among bank employes here resulted in a 25-3 victory for the Bank & Brokerage Employes Local of the CIO United Office & Professional Workers.

Local 96 had a contract in the defunct Banco di Napoli, but it proved its majority among the 113 employes by a check of cards, instead of by an election. That bank was recently closed by the government because of its Italian connections. Through their contract, the workers will receive two weeks' severance pay for each year of employment, plus vacation pay.

In another bank dispute, the SLRB ordered the Bank of Yorktown to post notices that it would cease coercion, intimidation and discouragement of membership in the CIO union.

The board dismissed the union's charges that two employes had been fired for union activity, although Trial Examiner John T. McCann in his intermediate report had recommended reinstatement of one.

Magazine Honors Carey

Chicago, Jan. 10—CIO Sec. James B. Carey was named one of the "ten outstanding young men of 1941" in the annual selection made by Future, official magazine of the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The selection of the ten persons, all under 35 years of age, was made by a commitee headed by F. B. Streyckmans, editor of the magazine.

Of Carey, the magazine commented: "He has become a prominent official of the CIO at a period in American industrial history when the union movement has become a tremendous part of our industrial life."

Frisco CIO, AFL In Joint Meeting

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 10—United labor's slogan of "Unity for Victory" will come to reality today in a historic joint meeting of San Francisco's CIO and AFL councils, with independent unions such as the Railroad Brotherhoods also invited to participate.

The meeting will be held in the AFL Building Trades auditorium, with presidents of the CIO and AFL councils, George Wilson and John F. (Jack) Shelley, sharing the gavel. The CIO and AFL groups both approved the proposal last week, and the General Chairmen's Association of the independent Brotherhoods is considering it.

It will be the nation's first such session since the outbreak of hostilities a month ago, and is the more significant because the 500-odd delegates expected to attend represent a membership of narly 150,000 in a city of 600,000 population.

EARLIER CONFABS

The meeting comes as culmination of two conferences of CIO, AFL and independent union leaders, the first of which on Dec. 11 produced the already-famous "Unity for Victory" statement pledging complete cooperation to win the war.

The second meeting, held last Friday in the CIO's new headquarters, brought a unanimously-adopted five-point program that will be presented to the double council session. This program called for:

1. Creation of a production committee of nine members, three each from the CIO, AFL and Brotherhoods, to plan for expansion of production as a war measure.

2. Creation of a jurisdiction committee of similar composition to recommend settlement of questions between unions with the idea of forestalling all interruptions of production.

3. Forcing hotel and department store employers to accept the national labor-employer program for prevention of lockouts and strikes by submission of all disputes to the War Labor Board.

4. The joint council meeting.

5. More labor representation in Civilian Defense and on policy-making bodies of city, state and Federal governments.

PRODUCTION

The important production committee will have the job of obtaining war contracts for the many plants able to produce but denied opportunity because of the policy of the dollar-a-year men of giving most of the war work to a few large concerns.

The CIO's representatives will be Regional Director Harry Bridges and Frank Drum and Paul Pinsky, chairman and secretary of the CIO Bay Area production committee. AFL and Brotherhood representatives are still to be named.

The jurisdiction committee, it was made clear, will not interfere with the jurisdiction of any international union, but will simply attempt to mediate disputes between unions so as to keep production going.

Offer Plan For Fish Industry

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 10—Immediate adoption of an industry council plan in the fishing industry along the line of the plan proposed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray has been called for by the CIO International Fishermen & Allied Workers here.

Such a plan is absolutely necessary, the union stated, "if the 1942 fishing season on the Pacific Coast is going to be able to produce the supply of food fish required by our government."

Asserting that the fishing industry on the West Coast is now faced with its greatest crisis, J. F. Jurich, president of the union, said the problems now facing the industry can be solved by joint planning and effort.

URGE CONVOYS

"Ships and convoys must be arranged for transportation and production of our fishing fleet," he declared. "Fishermen and shore workers must be protected both by war risk insurance and by protection against Axis raiders. Canneries must be protected both from attack by submarines and bombing planes, and from sabotage."

CONVENTION

Delegates to the third convention of the IFAW which met in San Francisco Dec. 1-5, had scarcely returned to their homes, when Japan bombed Pearl Harbor and America was at war with an enemy some of whose natives had long been a source of trouble to the American fisherman. The CIO Fishermen's union have protested repeatedly against the raids made by Japanese on fishing grounds in the North Pacific.

The IFAW, which has some 20,000 members, re-elected Pres. Jurich and Vice-Pres. Martin Hegeberg at the convention held last month, and elected Fred Scheel, secretary-treasurer.

U. S. Bond Sales Spurt

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10—Demands for U. S. Defense Savings Bonds soared faster than the ability of the government to rush them through the presses in December, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said this week—but the amount of sales still wasn't high enough.

Proof that the country "remembers Pearl Harbor" was seen in the Treasury's figures that December sales reached the half-billion mark for the first time.

The Treasury's goal, Morgenthau declared in a radio address, "is to make every pay day Bond Day.

EVERY WORKER

"It is to have every wage earner and every salary earner put aside a part of each pay check, every week, for the purchase of defense bonds and stamps. And when I say 'a part' I do not mean a mere token contribution of a few nickels every week, or the mere contribution of 1% or 2% of the weekly pay check.

"This is not a token war. It is not a 2% war. It is not a war that can be won with spare change.

"Each of us will have to figure out the very most that we can set aside to buy defense bonds, for our own good and for our country's good, as long as the war may last."

'Business As Usual' Dominates OPM Auto Production Parley

AUTO CONFERENCE: Representatives of CIO auto workers union meet with OPM officials just before a government conference on methods to assure full production from the nation's huge automotive industry. Left to right: Walter Reuther and Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile, Aircraft & Agricultural Implement Workers; OPM officials Sidney Hillman and William Knudsen; and C. E. Wilson, prexy of General Motors.

Auto Union Criticizes Sub-Committee Plan As 'Inadequate'

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10—"Business as usual" still dominates the thinking of industry and of the OPM on the problem of converting industry to production for the victory program, the CIO charged here at the end of a two-day conference called by government to work out plans for quick conversion of the auto industry from civilian production to war needs.

The charge was made in a statement issued by Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Auto Workers and other UAW representatives which sharply attacked the OPM for setting up a "completely inadequate" subcommittee whose only function is to "assist in the development" of conversion methods. This sub-committee, without power and without real function, is the sole result of the conference.

"We would be lacking in candor and remiss in responsibilities as American citizens and spokesmen for labor if we did not indicate our view that the powers of the joint sub-committee, as announced by OPM, are completely inadequate to insure effectuation of the tremendous armament program called for by the President," the UAW statement said.

FORESEE FAILURE

The sub - committee, set up ostensibly to secure labor participation in the gigantic task of converting the auto industry from civilian operation to arms production, fails to give labor a real voice, fails to guarantee quick conversion, and merely perpetuates the business-as-usual line that the auto manufacturers have been following at incalculable cost to the nation's war effort, the UAW declared.

"The scope of power accorded the sub-committee is such that labor will have no effective voice," the statement said. "The attitude of the spokesmen for industry, clearly indicated in our conference is such that we must conclude that conversion will be handled in a leisurely way, and that there will be no pooling whatever, between the companies, of available machinery and skilled labor."

"Total war is a fact; it requires total employment. We shall not get it if the automobile industry is permitted to continue as in the past 18 months, an industry dedicated to profits and competition first and national defense second," the statement added, citing employers' attempts to keep on building passenger cars, to get still more government-built factories in place of conversion, and to protect profits by "escalator clauses" in all contracts.

CONCRETE PLANS

This was in sharp contrast to the concrete plans produced by the Auto Workers union, only to be told in conference "that it was not labor's place to offer such suggestions, that these matters were solely a management function."

These rejected plans, in addition to the Reuther plan for 500 planes a day offered more than a year ago, provided methods "to determine and make effective the best method of utilization of labor, tools, machinery, etc., for the most expeditious conversion of the automobile industry to the production of war materials."

Failure of the auto manufacturers to put defense before profits has already resulted in unemployment for 250,000 auto workers, and will throw a total of 500,000 out of work in this industry alone—with an estimated total of 2.5 million jobless within a few months.

This failure, abetted by the more than lenient attitude of the OPM on conversion, has produced a situation where idle workers and idle machines are kept apart—while the Axis marches ahead with superiority in tanks, planes and guns.

OPEN LETTER

Opening of the conference here was featured by "An Open Letter to Mr. OPM" published by CIO President Murray and UAW President Thomas, that flatly accused the OPM of failure to carry out its responsibilities to the nation's security. Written in a series of short and very sharp questions, the open letter asked:

"You know that to bring the war to a quick, victorious end, we have to produce a maximum of the implements of war as quickly as possible. You know that our automobile industry is the greatest mass production industry in the world: We have the basic machinery, the plant space, the skilled manpower, the managerial force to produce tanks and planes, guns and trucks. We can give our country and our allies unquestioned superiority over our enemies.

"Mr. OPM, why aren't we doing it?"

CITES CIO PLANS

The open letter cited the Reuther plan and other CIO plans for expanded production, declaring; "you did nothing about them." It cited the Tolan Committee's report showing that one auto company would take 15 years to complete arms orders at present production rates.

It declared that, "labor is ready and determined to do its part in the national war effort. It is willing to accept the bitter necessities of a righteous war. Labor has the right to expect

FDR, Biddle, Murray Hit Alien-Baiting

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10—Appeals to curb increasing hysteria directed against aliens holding jobs in industry were sent to the nation this week by Pres. Roosevelt, Atty.-Gen. Biddle and CIO Pres. Murray.

Roosevelt's statement, issued Jan. 2, expressed deep concern over reports of employers "discharging workers who happen to be aliens or even foreign-born citizens."

"This is a very serious matter," the Chief Executive declared. "It is one thing to safeguard American industry, and particularly defense industry, against sabotage; but it is very much another to throw out of work honest and loyal people, who, except for the accident of birth, are sincerely patriotic."

A policy of dismissing aliens from their jobs is "as stupid as it is unjust," the President asserted, and plays into the hands of those who would use the Nazi technique of "divide and con..quer."

'SANE POLICY'

"I urge all private employers to adopt a sane policy regarding aliens and foreign-born citizens," he concluded, "and to remember that the sons of the 'foreigners' they discharged may be among those who fought and are fighting so valiantly at Pearl Harbor or in the Philippines."

Atty.-Gen. Biddle described the policy of firing aliens as short-sighted, wasteful and un-American.

Of the 5,000,000 non-citizens residing in the country, only 3,000 "have been regarded as dangerous to the peace and safety of the United States. Those have been taken into custody by the federal authorities," Biddle said.

U. S. POLICY

The Attorney-General pointed out that the government's stated policy provides that "there shall be no discrimination in the employment of workers in defense industries because of race, creed, color or national origin."

Only one exception is recognized, he said. "In the case of secret, confidential or restricted government contracts, and in the case of contracts for aircraft parts or accessories, the employer must secure permission from the head of the federal department concernd for the employment of aliens . . . It should be noted that the percentage of cases in which permission has not been granted to employ aliens, even on such confidential work, is negligible.

"There are no other federal laws restricting the employment of aliens by private employers in national defense industries, and there are no federal laws whatsoever rstricting the employment of foreign-born American citizens of any particular national origin.

"There is no reason in the world why loyal persons, either aliens or Americans of foreign birth, should not be employed by American industry; and there is no possible justification for discharging such employes. The federal government condemns all such discrimination and urges all employers not to adopt such a policy."

MURRAY'S LETTER

CIO Pres. Murray sent the Attorney-General's public letter to all CIO affiliates and suggested that as a statement of policy "it can be used to advantage and very effectively in any of the cases that may arise within your jurisdiction."

Murray advised unions which discover special anti-alien hysteria in industry to communicate with Lee Pressman, general counsel, at CIO national headquarters.

WARNS: Atty. - Gen. Francis Biddle, who warned against hysterical alien-baiting and denounced discharge of non-citizens by private employers as creating "disunity."

Few Firms Get Lion's Share

Washington, Jan. 10—One hundred large corporations have received 82.6% of the government's commitments for armaments construction in the 15 months ending Sept. 1, official figures revealed today.

The statement, released by the Office of Production Management, served to confirm CIO criticism that government war contracts are being bottlenecked into a relatively few producers.

Three corporations had commitments from the government totaling $2,657,000,000. Another four companies were given an almost similar amount of business.

TOP 100

Altogether, the top 100 companies received commitments valued at $12,611,500,000 in the period between June 1940 and September, 1941.

On the other hand, a total of only about 2½ billion dollars was distributed among 3,022 companies in contracts of $50,000 or more.

OPM said the commitments contained in the study covered "procurement of ships, airplanes, tanks, guns, other equipment, food and fuels, as distinguished from cantonments, fortifications, arsenals and factories."

Fitzgerald, Curran To Speak

New York, N. Y., Jan. 10—Albert J. Fitzgerald, General President of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers (CIO) and Joseph Curran, national president of the National Maritime Union (CIO), and Mayor LaGuardia of New York City will be principal speakers at a conference of UE District No. 4 is holding Jan. 25 at Hotel McAlpin here.

Delegates from all UE shops will "get down to brass tacks on the 'how' of meeting our war responsibilities," according to James McLeish, President of District 4. The UE has more than 40,000 members in this District, consisting of the Greater New York City area.

Emergency Times

"The ordinary business ways take care of the emergency times we are in." So said Pres. C. E. Wilson of General Motors, in a press conference in which he denounced proposals for industry-wide planning of war production in the auto industry, with labor participation, as "socialization."

Mr. Wilson is just about 100% wrong when he says the "ordinary business ways" are sufficient. It is this business-as-usual attitude that is responsible for the fact that auto plants are closed and hundreds of thousands of workers idle at a time when the industry should have already been converted to war production, as proposed by the CIO a year ago.

What are some of the "ordinary business ways"? They include production primarily for profits; a struggle for competitive advantage between companies, instead of industry-wide pooling and cooperation; and the demand to "run our own business our own way," without government interference or labor participation.

Whatever the merit of these "ordinary business ways" in ordinary times, they are clearly out of place in a war emergency like the present, as every other warring country has found.

If we are to out-produce the Axis, private profit considerations must take second place to production for victory. Production must be planned on an industry-wide scale, with pooling of facilities so that competition may not create a bottleneck here and idleness there. And, finally, governmental direction, with full participation by labor as well as industry, is essential if all of the factors in production are to be geared to an all-out effort.

Adherence to the "ordinary business ways" has been responsible for the present sorry condition in the auto industry, as well as for delays, shortages and lagging production in other war industries.

It is responsible for failure to adopt the CIO proposals for all-out production of steel, aluminum, copper and other vital metals, as well as similar plans in the construction, longshore, farm equipment and other industries—not to mention the over-all Murray industry council plan.

No, Mr. Wilson, "the ordinary business ways" are not good enough. These are emergency times, and they call for emergency ways.

Not Deportable

The Board of Immigration Appeals has rendered a unanimous decision reversing the findings of Judge Charles B. Sears and recommending that deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges be cancelled.

This is the second time that the longshoremen's leader has been found innocent, after the most exhaustive investigation, of the charges on which it has been sought to deport him. Dean James M. Landis, after months of hearings for the Department of Labor, had earlier found that Bridges was not deportable.

The attempts of anti-union employers to drive Bridges out of the country because of his union activities have now been continuing for more than seven years. They have been aided and abetted by all the forces of social and political reaction, which have sought to make the "Bridges case" a threat and an example of labor repression.

Now that the second full-dress government investigation, like the first, has ended with the complete vindication of Bridges, let us hope that the decision will be upheld by Attorney General Biddle, and that this long and sorry story of anti-labor persecution will once and for all be ended.

Labor Supply

Arranging for an adequate supply of trained workers to be available for all essential production is one of the most important jobs in the war program. With the progressive conversion of industry to war production, it is assuming continually greater importance for labor, for the armed forces and for the whole country.

That is why CIO President Murray has written to President Roosevelt emphasizing the importance of a "unified and coherent labor supply policy." He points out that at present responsibility is dispersed among a number of government departments, most of which operate without close labor cooperation.

Murray therefore calls for the centering of all labor supply activities, including training and the U. S. employment service, in the Department of Labor, as is done in Britain. "It is our judgment," he says, "that this department, fortified by additional personnel from organized labor, is the proper agency to handle the critical question of labor supply."

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

A BATTLE which will have a decisive effect on the outcome of the war is now being fought in Washington and throughout American industry.

It is a battle between those who demand immediate all-out war production, on the one hand; and those who allow traditional procedures, profit-making, competition, and other business-as-usual considerations to obstruct all-out production, on the other.

Some battle-cries of the two contending sides were recently printed in full-page ads in the press. A CIO ad pointed out:

(1) That the closing of the country's auto plants has made idle hundreds of thousands of trained workers, and the nation is losing 2,000,000 man-days a week in war production.

(2) That war production is poorly allocated and entirely inadequate. Auto manufacturers have been reluctant to convert their plants, the defense agencies have not insisted, and as a result only a negligible part of the industry is presently employed in the war effort.

(3) That the CIO, more than a year ago, proposed a practical plan to adapt auto machinery for plane production, but the OPM did nothing about this or any of the other CIO proposals for all-out production.

The CIO therefore demanded that the OPM act at once for speedy and planned conversion of the auto industry and to bring labor into partnership in the war production effort.

The reply of the Automobile Manufacturers' Assn. blithely ignored the damning facts published by the CIO. It claimed that "since the beginning of the emergency the industry has had the vision to see ahead and realize what the country might require of it"; and that everything was going as well as could be expected.

Then it turned to attack the CIO for past sitdown strikes and for seeking to "obtain control" of industry. It declared that "the plans of certain labor leaders constitute a design to transfer management of the automotive industry from the men who know how to make things, to those who have no training or qualifications for the responsibility."

Needless to say, the CIO is advancing no designs to obtain control or management of industry. But it is amusing to find manufacturers, and the financiers who control them, describing themselves as "the men who know how to make things," as distinct from the workers who actually do the making.

At the OPM-sponsored conference of auto industry and labor which followed, a sub-committee was set up, with both labor and industry represented but without any real powers.

The UAW representatives were forced to point out that the manufacturers show "little change from their business-as-usual attitude"; that they insist such specific suggestions as the CIO has been making are "solely a management function"; that plant conversion, as a result, will be handled in "a leisurely way," with no pooling of machinery and skilled labor; and that the sub-committee will have insufficient powers to correct this situation.

The CIO unionists expressed their "keen disappointment that OPM and the auto industry have refused to insure the basic necessities of all-out, speedy conversion; of the pooling and integration of the industry; and of granting labor, with its acknowledged creative abilities, a proper place at the council tables."

What is happening in the auto industry reflects a too-general condition in the whole war-production program.

Employers are still following their peacetime competitive and profit-making instincts. For instance, many auto companies have been reluctant to convert their plants for war-production, lest this handicap them in returning to auto production once the war is over. Aversion to pooling arises from similar competitive reasons.

The government, for its part, is just trying to "muddle through," without a centralized procurement agency; without any comprehensive production planning, as proposed in the Murray industry council plan; and without cracking down on business-as-usual industrialists.

Labor, on the other hand, is first to suffer from production failures through layoffs, etc., and the first to realize from practical experience what should be done. Lacking the competitive inhibitions of individual employers, industrial unions turn readily to pooling and other forms of industry-wide planning. Yet labor is treated as an outsider trying to interfere with management, when it advances its constructive suggestions.

Until labor's voice is heeded, and the workers are taken into full partnership in the war effort, the battle for all-out production will not be won.

Report Raps Sears

U.S. Board Over-Rules Bridges Ouster Order

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10—A second finis—and probably the last—has been written to the Bridges case with the report by the Appeals Board of the U. S. Department of Justice unanimously cancelling the deportation warrant and closing the proceedings. The report now goes to Attorney General Francis T. Biddle for final action, with no bets offered that it will be reversed.

The report, issued in a 99-page document six months after hearings concluded in San Francisco before Judge Charles B. Sears, goes into the record in an exhaustive fashion and disposes of all evidence on which Sears relied for his unfavorable verdict.

Findings of the Appeals Board, headed by J. A. Fanelli of the department, were seen as a crushing answer not only to anti-union forces seeking Bridges' deportation but also to San Francisco waterfront employers who recently threatened to "get" Bridges if the Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union did not stop pressing its plan for increased production on the waterfront to meet war needs.

"We are deeply gratified by the decision of the Board of Appeals," officials of the Bridges Defense Committee said. "The ruling, which comes after a most careful review of the case, is a victory for the millions of persons who have staunchly supported Bridges and have contributed financially and morally in this great cause . . .

"Mr. Bridges will most certainly press his union's plan for increasing America's war production in the longshore industry through full utilization of dock facilities, the introduction of labor saving equipment and the most economical methods of cargo handlings. The union's determination to obtain this increased production only several days ago resulted in certain Pacific coast shipowners again threatening to 'get' Bridges. These shipowners were given their answer today by the Board."

THE FINDINGS

Written in a style reminiscent of the analysis presented by Dean James M. Landis in the first hearings, where Bridges was found not deportable for the first time, the report is in effect a stinging rebuke to Judge Sears for his reliance on two unreliable and prejudiced witnesses, for his obvious attempt to convict rather than sift evidence, and for the general tone of lying and labor-baiting shown in prosecution testimony.

For example, take James D. O'Neil, one of the main props on which Sears relied for his verdict. To begin with, O'Neil contradicted himself freely on the stand. He swore that a statement allegedly made to the FBI had not been made at all. In that statement itself he made contradictions, saying at one time he "knew" Bridges was an admitted Communist, at another time declaring that this was not true. This is what the Appeals Board says of him:

'TANTALIZING'

"James D. O'Neil, produced by the Service (i.e., by the FBI) was a most tantalizing witness. Speculation as to the ultimate motives for his testimony may fill many fascinating tomorrows. But on the record before us, decision on his testimony both on and off the stand is relatively simple. His testimony off the stand is not to be heard, and when his testimony on and off the stand is heard it cannot be believed."

And again "O'Neil lied under oath in this proceeding when he denied making the statements. His unsworn prior statements show him therein the bragging sensationalist with little regard for precision in truth."

Harry Lundeberg, leader of the AFL's paper Int'l Seafarer's Union, and the second principal witness on whom Sears relied, comes in for equally incisive comment from the Board. Lundeberg, it will be recalled, was described by Sears as admittedly prejudiced against Bridges, though his testimony on Bridges' affiliation to the Communist Party was blandly accepted by the elderly judge as gospel truth.

This is what the Board says about him:

"The Presiding Inspector (Sears) notes that Lundeberg gave his testimony 'in a natural, rugged, hard-bitten fashion.' These are adjectives of varying content and connotation. It may well be. On the record here, Lundeberg impresses neither in truthfulness nor in forthrightness."

And again, in examining the three separate (and increasing) versions of Lundeberg's story of Bridges' invitation to him to join the Party: "It is at least as likely an hypothesis that he is at first hesitated to commit perjury, but having once decided to do so, he assumed a strong offensive in uneasiness."

PAPER'S CONNECTIONS

A considerable part of the Board's report is devoted to examining the question of the "Waterfront Worker," and whether or not Bridges was an editor while the paper was published by the Marine Workers Industrial Union. The report describes certain minor errors in Bridges' testimony on a long and involved matter of dates and other minute details:

"To label devious the testimony on such matters simply because, when elicited piecemeal more than five years after the event and over the course of two hearings, it does not present a tightly articulated and smoothly rationalized story, would be little short of gratituitous

"The Alien's testimony is not that of a witness who is straining to justify himself by dovetailing every detail of carefully planned or coached testimony . . . Minor deviations in this setting are evidence of uncoached and forthright honesty."

AFFILIATION

The same section on affiliation disposes of the prosecution's charge that cooperation by Bridges with the MWIU and other organizations was evidence of affiliation by saying:

"The ILA, the longshoremen's union of which Bridges was an influential member, was a legitimate union with legitimate grievances. The strike (in 1934) was legitimately directed at removing the grievances. It did. That much is unquestioned.

"It is urged, however, that mutual assistance between the ILA and the MWIU during the strike shows Bridges' affiliation to the MWIU. We think not."

Concluding on affiliation, one of the three main props on which Sears leaned for his deportation verdict, the Board sums up:

"We have reviewed the evidence as bits making up an attempted complete mosaic, yet evaluating each particle so that its true worth might stand out in the whole with chiselled clarity. The picture fails to materialize. We can find on this record only that affiliation is not established."

Announce 7-Point Plan

Newark, N. J., Jan. 10—A seven-point program "to speed up defense production" has been adopted by the New Jersey CIO Council's executive board, State CIO Pres. Irving Abramson said here.

The plan, introduced by Carl Holderman, CIO state treasurer, calls for production seven days a week, 24 hours a day in defense industries, and the abandonment by industry of its "business as usual" policy.

Pay Raises

Pittsburgh, Pa.—More than 1,300 employes at Standard Sanitary Co. and McKinney Manufacturing Co. here get approximately $50,000 in retroactive pay raises, as a result of negotiations by Locals 626 and 623 of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers (CIO). Newly signed agreements include general wage raises, union shop, paid vacations, seniority and other standard provisions.

Pres. Murray Cites CIO Goal For '42

On behalf of the Congress of Industrial Organizations I welcome most sincerely the spirit of national unity shown in a program of this kind. The five million members of the CIO are proud to take their place in the forefront of our national effort for victory over Hitler and his Axis partners. We are also ready and eager to cooperate to the full with industry and government, and with other sections of organized labor, for the fulfillment of our country's aims.

In fact, I may say that this idea of cooperation between labor, industry and government is fundamental to all the plans and activities of the CIO for achieving all-out production for victory.

BASIC INDUSTRIES

Our members are employed in the industries that are of the most basic importance for war production. They are the first to suffer from any dislocations or inadequacies in the production program. For instance, more than a quarter of a million automobile workers are now idle, as a result of the failure to convert their industry to airplane and other essential war production. Such conversion was proposed more than a year ago by the CIO, when it advanced the Reuther plan.

Similarly in other industries, the unions of the CIO and their members have been directly aware, from their practical experience, of what steps must be taken to increase war production. We have embodied our proposals in production programs for nearly every war industry, and in our Industrial Council plan.

NEED FOR PLANNING

The basic idea of this plan is industry-wide planning for full use of all facilities through councils in which labor, industry and government will be fully represented. It would simplify administration of the war program and enlist the close cooperation of all parties for the achievement of more, and more production.

The CIO is committed to a no-strike policy for the duration of the war. We have subscribed to the constructive agreement recently reached at the labor-industry-government conference in Washington for the peaceful adjustment of all industrial disputes. We realize that nothing must be allowed to stand in the way of continuous and ever-increasing production for our armed forces and for our national security.

CIO WON'T BE IDLE

At the same time, the CIO in the coming year will not be idle in its organizing work. It will rather intensify its efforts to bring fairer wages and conditions to the workers in industry, and to defend our civil liberties and social legislation. For we realize that the morale of a free people defending its liberties is essential to victory; and that poverty, oppression and exploitation are among the worst saboteurs of our war effort.

So, as we look ahead in these dark days of world crisis, the working people organized in the CIO, like all true Americans, seek first and foremost to do their full share for victory. Labor will not fail America. It offers its energies, its brains, its full cooperation.

Let us hope that its constructive suggestions will be more heeded in the future than in the past, and that it will be accorded its proper place in the councils of our nation.

'Business As Usual' Ideas Flayed by Robinson In Network Broadcast

New York, Jan. 10—Freedom depends on victory over Hitler; victory depends on production and more production; and full production can only be assured through foresighted economic planning by joint labor and management councils.

That was the message given to the nation this week in a radio speech by Reid Robinson, CIO vice-president and head of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, in a plea for adoption of the Murray Council Plan and of production proposals offered by a number of CIO unions.

"We are not producing enough today," Robinson said in his speech, broadcast over a nationwide NBC network on the America's Town Meeting of the Air program Jan. 8.

"The reason can be stated in three words: 'Business as Usual.' Business as usual means simply this: that management still thinks more of profits than it thinks of the nation's security. This is a serious charge. It is proved by the facts."

CITES STATISTICS

Cited by the CIO official to back up his charge were damning statistics—an auto union survey which showed Detroit machine tools working only 55% of capacity; copper mines closing down in a squeeze play for higher prices; the fact that production rose 37% at the Air Associates plant in New Jersey when the Army took over the plant from a stubborn management.

Not every management has resisted the proposals for joint union-company supervision of production, Robinson noted.

"The Doehler Die Casting Co. of Toledo, Ohio, one of the largest in its field, cooperates with the CIO Association of Die Casting Workers to increase production, and as a result, Doehler is ahead on deliveries of vital war materials," he declared.

"Wages and working conditions are good in plants where labor and management cooperate. Intelligent management knows that better wages and working conditions increase production. Business as usual refuses to recognize this; refuses to admit that workers who have good wages and working conditions are able to produce more and better weapons for the battle for freedom."

KEYSTONE OF POLICY

Increased production, Robinson pointed out, "is the keystone of CIO policy." The Murray Council Plan, presented to the government more than a year ago, "would provide the machinery for speedy adaptation of America's boundless industrial resources to war needs," he asserted.

"In addition, the CIO calls for quick conversion of all plants to war production, for full use of small and medium sized plants in the victory program, for proper allocation of war contracts, for full use of all the nation's manpower, for elimination of waste, for vigilance against sabotage, for increased efficiency—and above all, for complete dedication of our nation's wealth and manpower to the task of winning the war."

COPPER PLAN

Robinson recalled that only a few weeks ago the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers presented Pres. Roosevelt a complete plan to increase production of copper and other vital war materials.

"This plan has not yet been accepted by our government, despite the fact that our armed forces are starving for copper. This plan, and many others like it offered by the CIO, would bring about the production we need to defeat Hitler."

New Pamphlet

Washington, Jan. 10—A 32-page mimeographed pamphlet containing a suggested reading list of novels, plays, poetry, and biographies dealing with social and economic problems has been issued by the American Labor Education Service, 437 West 59th St., New York City. The price is 15 cents.

Labor Girds For Wartime Schedule

Washington, Jan. 10—American labor vowed today to carry out the enormous Production for Victory Program outlined to Congress by Pres. Roosevelt so that Axis fascism may be wiped off the face of the world with weapons "made in U.S.A."

The President's program for 1943 called for:

125,000 airplanes.
75,000 tanks.
35,000 anti-aircraft guns.
10,000,000 tons of ships.

This year the nation must produce 60,000 planes, 45,000 tanks, 20,000 anti-aircraft guns and eight million tons of shipping.

Recognition that labor's part will be decisive in the successful completion of the program was contained in the President's speech.

"Production for war is based on men and women—the human hands and brains which collectively we call labor," he said.

"Our workers stand ready to work long hours, to turn out more in a day's work, to keep the wheels turning and the fires burning 24 hours a day and seven days a week. They realize well that on the speed and efficiency of their work depend the lives of their sons and their brothers on the fighting fronts."

NEED FOR CONVERSION

In another section of his message to Congress, the President warned that "we must strain every existing armament-producing facility to the limit. We must convert every available plant and tool to war production.

"That goes all the way from the greatest plants to the smallest—from the huge automobile industry to the village machine shop."

It was clear, as the President set forth the nation's productive goal, that a quick hike in industrial efficiency and planning will be necessary in order to accomplish the task ahead.

THOUSANDS IDLE

Several hundred thousand workers in Michigan's auto industry are facing long layoffs pending conversion of plants to war production. Aluminum production must be intensively increased for the plane program. Copper shortages face the country while demand keeps booming.

Steel plants are closing down because of shortages in scrap iron—which only a few months ago was being shipped by profit-minded traders to Japan. The farm equipment industry is working only a few days a week when it should be producing tractors and tanks. A rubber crisis impends because RFC lagged in providing for synthetic rubber factories.

CIO OFFERED PLANS

CIO unions have offered plans for almost every one of these situations which now torment the national economy. The plans are still gathering dust in offices of the OPM, while the industrialists who have practiced business as usual methods in the past get a respectful ear from government agencies.

CIO unions will continue to push their production plans, according to all indications, and to demand that American industry fulfill its share in the next few years.

"Labor will not fail America. It offers its energies, its brains, its full cooperation. Let us hope that its constructive suggestions will be more heeded in the future than in the past, and that it will be accorded its proper place in the councils of our nation."

Women Present Skit

Detroit, Jan. 10—A short three-character skit written by Carl Haessler, editor of several Michigan labor papers, was presented here recently by the Michigan CIO Women's Auxiliary.

Aimed at stimulating the defense activities of women folk of CIO members, the skit's theme is: "Don't let a chilly reception freeze you out"; or, "the harder they come, the harder they fall."

Mimeographed copies of the skit, called "All out for Defense," may be obtained from the UAW-CIO Women's Auxiliary, 281 West Grand Blvd., Detroit, at 10 cents each or three for 25 cents.

Red Cross Drive

Bridgeport, Conn.—More than 8,000 employes of the Colt Patent Fire Arms Manufacturing Co. here, through the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers (CIO) have undertaken to raise $40,000 for the American Red Cross.

Auto Union Criticizes OPM Sub-Committee Plan

Text of Statement On Auto Conference

R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers (UAW-CIO), joined by George F. Addes, Walter P. Reuther, Richard T. Frankensteen and Richard E. Reisinger, labor members of the automobile industry management-labor committee created by OPM, this week issued the following statement:

"The UAW-CIO is whole-heartedly committed to prosecution of the war to a decisive, victorious conclusion. It stands four-square behind the foreign policies of the President, and will cooperate fully in the carrying out of any assignment given its members and officers by the government.

"However, we would be lacking in candor and remiss in our responsibilities as American citizens and spokesmen for labor if we did not indicate our view that the powers of the joint sub-committee, as announced today by OPM, are completely inadequate to insure effectuation of the tremendous armament program called for yesterday by the President.

FUNDAMENTALS

"The American people have been led to believe that three fundamental requirements for mobilization of the auto industry behind the war program have been realized. These fundamentals are the conversion of the industry to war-time production, the pooling of the industry's facilities, and the granting to automobile labor participation in conversion and pooling.

"The scope of power accorded the sub-committee is such that labor will have no effective voice. The attitude of the spokesmen for industry, clearly indicated in our conference, is such that we must conclude that conversion will be handled in a leisurely way, and that there will be no pooling whatever, between the companies, of available machinery and skilled labor.

"As far as the vital principle of pooling is concerned, the manufacturers take the view, as expressed in effect by one of their leading spokesmen, that "we will pool ideas but not machinery." Obviously we need more than 'pooling of ideas.' With the desperate need for quick production of war materials there can be no justification for one large company holding orders for 4,000 vital dies, which it cannot complete, while another corporation refuses to grant this company the use of skilled tool and die makers who are largely idle.

BUSINESS AS USUAL

"The conclusion is inescapable that the manufacturers contemplate but little change from their 'business as usual' attitude. It is equally clear that the kind of a sub-committee which OPM is creating will have insufficient power to correct that attitude.

"The position of management is perhaps most clearly revealed by the position taken by one of the corporate spokesmen on Monday. During his entire series of statements to the conference he pleaded only for the right to build more passenger cars in February, for more new factories to be constructed by the government, and for an escalator clause in the contracts which would fully protect the profit-taking position of the corporations.

CIO's PLANS

"The spokesmen for the UAW-CIO, on the other hand, offered specific suggestions for conversion. When we got into meetings of the joint committee, management bluntly stated that it was not labor's place to offer such suggestions, that these matters were solely a management function. This is a repudiation of the basic purpose for which the present conferences were instituted.

"There are today more than 250,000 unemployed auto workers; by the end of January, due to failure of the industry to convert its machinery to war production, twice that many will be jobless. We have been informed that 'priorities unemployment' in all industries may effect as many as 2,500,000 workers.

ACT WITHOUT DELAY

"Some methods must be created, and without delay, to provide for these workers and their families. The alternative to immediate conversion and pooling of the automobile industry is an additional relief bill of $250,000,000 a month. On top of expending half of the national income for defense, we face the prospect of spending more billions for relief of millions of unemployed—and this at a time when we need every man and woman at work producing weapons of defensive and offensive warfare.

"Total war is a fact; it requires total employment. We shall not get it if the automobile industry is permitted to continue as in the past eighteen months, an industry dedicated to profits and competition first, and national defense second.

"In view of these facts we must reiterate our keen disappointment that OPM and the automobile industry have refused to insure the basic necessities of all-out, speedy conversion, of the pooling and integration of the industry, and of granting labor, with its acknowledged creative abilities, a proper place at the council tables."

that industry shall also do its part."

EMPLOYERS' STORY

The employers' answer appearing the next day in newspaper ads was confined to ringing statements on patriotism and intended smears at labor and its leaders as former "sitdown strikers" who were now presuming to tell "the men who know how to make things" (the employers, believe it or not) how to run their business. Nothing was said to meet labor's accusations.

General Motors' attitude toward the whole question was summed up in a press conference held by C. E. Wilson, GM head, who blandly remarked that "ordinary business ways" would be sufficient to handle the tremendous production needs created by the war. This astonishing statement was followed up by Wilson's admission that only one-seventh of GM's production during the past year was for defense—the remainder in civilian goods.

Wilson was very emphatic on the matter of labor participation, however, and on conversion. Both these subjects seemed painful to him, savoring of "socialization" and "regimentation." The industry council plan of the CIO seemed to touch off the sharpest reaction, bringing the statement on "ordinary business ways."

WHY OUTPUT LAGS: This CIO Economic Outlook chart shows the loss of 10 times more man-days from accidents, 20 times more from illness and 73 times more from unemployment than were lost in strikes. Period covered is the first 10 months of 1941.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

The outcome of the two-day auto production conference has again justified CIO's repeated emphasis on the need for planning. The auto industry is, as the UAW-CIO has pointed out, the greatest mass production enterprise in the world. The needs of the victory program require the fullest use of this productive apparatus. Yet last year the auto industry turned only one-seventh of its facilities over to arms production, the remainder to civilian goods.

There are a number of reasons for this, and when they're all added up, they spell "Business as Usual." The auto manufacturers are more interested in profits than they are in the nation's security, more interested in blocking labor than in arming the nation to defeat the fascist aggressors.

Labor wants to produce for victory. The CIO, speaking as the voice of organized industrial workers in this country, has offered the industry council plan and detailed blueprints for production. These plans have been ignored. Labor participation is still denied. Until labor is given the right to contribute all the skill and strength in its power to arms production, our country is not safe.

FINIS TO THE BRIDGES CASE

On another front, labor scored a decisive victory in the Department of Justice ruling on the deportation order against Harry Bridges. Let us hope now that this persecution of labor in the seven-year attack on Bridges will come to an end. The case has been tried twice, and both times the "accused" has been found not guilty. Surely the enemies of labor who have pressed this drive against Bridges and the CIO will drop this particular line of attack.

The Justice Department's report setting aside the deportation order means more than the correction of a wrong against labor and against civil rights. It means that the amount of labor's resources and labor's fighting ability that necessarily went into the defense of Bridges can now be released for the job of fighting Hitlerism, for the job of organizing.

The fight was a good one, well planned and directed by the CIO from President Murray and the CIO Bridges Defense Committee down to the rank and filers who contributed the necessary funds.

REPORTS

Organizer Howard reports from Akron, O., that the UAW-CIO won an election at the Akron Lamp and Mfg. Co. by the impressive vote of 101 to 22. The Natl. Maritime Union has won an election on the Jones and Laughlin river boats by 81 to 47 and signed a closed shop contract covering 160 men with the American Barge Line Co., both of Pittsburgh.

Pres. Morris Muster of the United Furniture Workers reports an election victory at the Williams Furniture Co. in Sumter, S. C., where 484 workers voted CIO to 342 for no union. The election is among the largest held in the South, Pres. Muster adds. Harvey Fremming, regional director in Kansas City, Mo., sends news of a good contract won by Local Industrial Union 1153 at the Kelly Milling Co. in Hutchison.

Director Yelverton Cowherd of Birmingham reports a comparatively quiet holiday period, with one charter installed for State, County and Municipal Workers and his own appointment to the local tire rationing board. N. Y. Director Pete Mosele reports a contract won by the Cannery and Agricultural Workers at the Spratt Co. in Newark, N. J., another with the same union at the Hill Coffee Co. in Edgewater, and progress among packinghouse workers in the area.

Director Craig of Philadelphia lists a new contract signed by the Troy Laundry Co. of Chester, Pa., which gives a 10 to 15 per cent wage increase and represents the second pact won by the United Laundry Workers, Local 309, in seven months. He also reports that CIO has taken over a company union at a Philadelphia plant employing 260 workers, who voted 100 per cent for CIO at a recent mass meeting.

A flat increase of 12.5 per cent, plus improved seniority, vacations, etc., were won by Local 1013 of the Paper, Novelty and Toy Workers from the Bedfor Paper Co. at Big Island, Va., according to a report of Regional Director Ernest B. Pugh. Director Pugh also reports a 10 per cent raise for workers at the Crump Co. in Richmond, where CIO Fur and Leather Workers recently organized a local.

KEARNY, N. J., Jan. 10—The Kearny plant of the Federal Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., seized by the U. S. Navy last August when the firm refused to accept a National Defense Mediation Board recommendation for union security, was turned back to its owners—the U. S. Steel Corp.—this week.

Return of the plant, one of the largest of the nation's shipyards, was made possible by the no-strike, no-lockout pledge of the government-sponsored labor-industry conference, according to Secy. of the Navy Frank Knox.

Leaders of the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, which conducted a strike following the company's refusal to accept the NDMB proposal, said that bargaining conferences with the management were resumed Dec. 31 and have been in progress since that time. The negotiations, it was stated, included the question of union security.

WILL CONTINUE RATES

L. H. Kornsdorf, head of the company—which is a subsidiary of U. S. Steel—said the firm "will continue those changes in wage rates negotiated and established by the Navy Dept. during its operation of the plant, as well as changes resulting from reclassifications already agreed upon by the company with the union."

The shipyard union called attention to a statement by Admiral Bowen, who supervised the plant's operations for the Navy, that production had increased by 30% during the Navy's four-month operation of the company. Union officials asserted this increase was due to the Navy's cooperation with the organized workers, which had made possible enlarged output.

A similar production increase, amounting to 37%, was reported by the Army when it relinquished management of the Air Associates, Inc., plant at nearby Bendix, N. J., two weeks ago. The company regained possession of the plane parts plant after removing its die-hard president, Leroy Hill, and hiring a new executive willing to negotiate with the CIO auto workers union.

Yule Signs

New York, Jan. 10—CIO strikers at the Metropolitan Wire Products Co. gave their picket signs a Christmas touch during the holiday season.

To their banners, they attached light bells hooked up to pocket batteries.

Wage Boost Gained At Cannery

San Diego, Cal., Jan. 10—A wage increase for some 800 workers at the Van Camp Sea Food Co. here has been negotiated by Local 64, United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers, with the aid of a U. S. Dept. of Labor conciliator.

The company agreed to a flat increase of 10 cents an hour with a minimum of 75 cents for women and 80 cents for men.

Before the agreement was reached, the local negotiating committee was asking the membership at a meeting held shortly after Japan attacked the United States, to postpone strike action, when the city's first blackout took place.

"Members kept their seats and finished the meeting in total darkness," said Josephine Flower, a member of the union. "The proposal was passed and we filed out soberly with the thought brought home to us forcibly that we are really in this war."

Victory Rally

New York, Jan. 10—A rally to discuss increased production in the technical professions will be held here Jan. 12 under the joint auspices of the Natl. Council of Marine Draftsmen and the CIO Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians.

Scheduled to speak are Pres. Lewis Allan Berne of the FAECT; Pres. John Green of the CIO Shipbuilding Union; Admiral Andrews of the 3rd Naval District and William Francis Gibbs. Emery Land, head of the U. S. Maritime Commission regretted inability to attend and wished the sponsors "every success."

Vote CIO 2-1 At N.Y. Shipyard

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—Workers at the Tietjen & Lang drydock of the Todd Shipyards Corp. voted 1,441 to 663 for Local 15, Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers in an NLRB election held here, ending a five-year battle against the concern's anti-labor policies.

"The victory closes up the Port of New York for the Industrial Union, with its locals certified in every one of the major repair and construction yards here," the union stated.

"Local 15 started to organize Tietjen & Lang from the day the concept of industrial unionism came to this city's shipyards workers. Then came the struggle for recognition, opposed every step of the way by the bitterly anti-union management.

"In a large measure, the efforts of the men at Tietjen & Lang were tied up with those at the sister Robins yard in Brooklyn. In 1937 both yards were in the forefront of the port-wide general strike."

When this strike was called off, the Todd management intensified its union-busting activities, the union declared.

Accuse Firm Of Violating Labor Law

New York, Jan. 10—Ledkote Products Co., Inc., Long Island City, manufacturers of manifolds and airplane shrouds, has been accused by Local 1207, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, of refusing to arbitrate an industrial dispute.

William H. Miller, busines agent for the union, charged the company with violating a contract signed with the local, requiring that all disputes be submited to the N. Y. State Board of Mediation for arbitration.

Employes of the plant have petitioned the government to compel the employer to arbitrate or to take over the plant.

Relief Donations Growing

New York, Jan. 10—Effective campaigns by a number of CIO unions this week were being translated into cash donations for the people fighting Hitler.

At a New York luncheon the United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes turned over $15,000 to three relief agencies and promised that more would be forthcoming.

Vice-Pres. Murray Kudish of the union presented to Matthew Woll, head of the American Labor Committee to Aid British Labor, a check for $5,000, and gave similar checks to Miss Jean Reid of the Red Cross and to Edward C. Carter of the Russian War Relief.

'FIRST SUM'

"These checks represent the first sum raised by the clerks, members of our union, throughout the United States," Kudish said. "This is only the beginning. Larger sums will follow."

Pres. Lewis Merrill of the CIO United Office & Professional Workers, in making public news of a $1,500 contribution of his union to each four relief agencies, noted that "this is just a portion of the money which our organization intends to raise for the welfare of our own soldiers and sailors and for the relief of the victims of war among those nations fighting for democracy."

Russian War Relief, Inc., announced receipt of a $45 contribution from Local 53 of the United Federal Workers and said that other civil service locals "have already sent contributions for the purchase of much-needed medical supplies."

Stress Need For CIO Voice In Councils

Washington, Jan. 10—Importance of CIO representation in state, county and city defense councils was stressed again today by John Brophy, director of industrial union councils.

In a letter to local CIO groups, Brophy said that reports show representation has been obtained in many places by the councils.

"Where such representation has not yet been obtained, it is desirable that our Councils seek it at their earliest opportunity," he said. "Representation should be through persons actually designated by labor, rather than by government on behalf of labor."

SURVEY UNDER WAY

Brophy revealed plans for a thorough-going survey of CIO councils' participation in the Office of Civilian Defense set-up throughout the nation, and appealed to the councils to keep the national office fully informed of their activities in OCD work.

"We have undertaken to place data on these matters before the national office of the OCD before the end of this month," he said, in urging speedy replies from the council to national CIO queries about their participation.

Name Molloy To Council

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 10—Thomas R. Molloy, president of the Connecticut CIO Council, has been appointed a member of the Defense Council of this state, so important in the nation's war industries.

Governor Robert A. Hurley, in announcing Molloy's appointment, said, "The work of the State Defense Council will be greatly strengthened by the addition of Mr. Molloy as a member.

"The battle which we are waging today in Connecticut is a battle of production. As the representative of thousands of workers in our defense plants who are members of the CIO, Mr. Molloy's counsel and assistance will be of great value in winning of this battle.

"With its pledge of all-out effort towards the achievement of victory, organized labor is now fully represented on the defense council and will unstintedly do its part in the tremendous job which confronts all of us."

The appointment of Mr. Molloy to the eight member Defense Council assures the CIO and Connecticut labor an important voice in a state body that will be the Governor's war cabinet, and provides a machinery through which the CIO can cooperate to the fullest in the defense program and in Connecticut's war effort.

L.A. Transit Workers Face Shutdown As Company Refuses To Arbitrate

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 9—A strike on the Los Angeles Railway and Motor Coach Lines was imminent this week, even though the CIO Transport Workers Union made a last-minute appeal to government agencies to arrange for a peaceful settlement of the controversy. All previous efforts to settle by arbitration have been turned down by company representatives.

Unless government agencies intervene, CIO workers were due to walk off their jobs Thursday night, Jan. 8, at midnight.

Demands of the union are that the more than 80 discharged employes be reinstated and a collective bargaining agent election ordered. This many workers have been fired because they refused to join an AFL union—with which the company has a closed shop agreement. CIO men have refused to join because, they say, the AFL organization is company-dominated.

"We have been very patient," a statement issued by the strike committee said, "and we are willing still to settle our dispute peacefully.

HIT STUBBORN STAND

"However, the Los Angeles Railway has sabotaged all attempts at mediation or arbitration; therefore we are exercising our last recourse."

The union told how a recommendation of Stanley White, U. S. Conciliation Service commissioner, that the points of dispute be arbitrated was accepted by the CIO and turned down by the company.

Results of the strike vote taken by the CIO were: For the strike, 970; against, 77.

"This shows," the strike committee announced, "that despite coercion by the company, more than a thousand of our members had courage enough to cast votes.

"Hundreds more of our sympathizers have assured us they will refuse to cross picket lines when we establish them."

INFORM STEELMAN

Dr. John Steelman, head of the U. S. Conciliation Service and mediator of the as yet unnamed war labor board, was informed of the contemplated action, and hope was expressed by CIO leaders that the case would be certified to the new board before the strike deadline.

"This is no jurisdictional fight," CIO leaders stressed. "It is simply a case of workers resisting a lockout by a company which is trying to force a company union on them."

Hard at work almost immediately after the votes were announced was the strike committee. The members prepared placards, arranged for welfare of discharged employes and distributed picket cards.

Pointing to the efforts it had made to settle peacefully, the union charged that the "full responsibility for anything which happens this week must be borne by the company."

Trouble on Time:

'Fortune' Raps Union Shop, Luce Fires Guild Leader

New York, Jan. 10—Fortune, fat $1-a-month magazine for business tycoons, took time out this week from extolling the virtues of American industry to hand down a decision that the union shop is neither democratic nor desirable.

Written by John Chamberlain, the article suggests that American industry has some reforming to do if it is to counter its employes' demands.

"It management doesn't voluntarily relinquish old habits of union-baiting and union busting, if it refuses to bargain with union on an above-board basis, then we shall get the universal closed shop or a condition of chaos alleviated by industrial slavery," Chamberlain asserts.

FOUGHT GUILD SHOP

Unlike many another publisher, Henry Luce—boss of the Time-Life-Fortune—believes what appears in his own columns, for the American Newspaper Guild has found the management sternly resistant to demands for the Guild shop.

As a matter of fact, the union has been trying to bargain for a year on demands for a 10% wage increase, and just last week appealed to Federal Conciliators for assistance in a dispute over the dismissal of Anna Goldsborough, former Guild unit chairman.

Anna Goldsborough is the wife of Milton Kaufman, who retired Nov. 1 as executive secretary of the ANG; she was Guild unit chairman for many years. Less than six weeks later, she was fired.

BEGIN CAMPAIGN

The New York Guild has begun a nation-wide campaign to publicize refusal by the publishers of Time, Life, Fortune, March of Time and Architectural Forum to arbitrate the serious controversies with their editorial employes.

A work stoppage voted by the unit was called off by the Guild when the United States entered the war. The Guild's proposal to arbitrate the differences was rejected by Roy E. Larsen, president of Time Inc.

The Guild then called upon the United States Department of Labor's Conciliation Service to attempt mediation. Conciliator James W. Fitzpatrick was scheduled to meet with Louis Gratz, representing the management, today.

A public statement of the Guild's position is being sent to advertisers and readers of Time Inc. It will also be mailed to leading public officials throughout the country, to the labor movement and will be distributed in centers where those publications circulate most widely.

Plan CIO Ladies Council In Gotham; Meet Jan. 17

New York, Jan. 10—Declaring that "hitherto untapped reserves of strength for the trade unions are still to be organized among the women in union members' families," the New York City CIO Council this week issued a call for the first N. Y. Council of CIO Auxiliaries, to meet here January 17 at 110 W. 48th St.

"The gigantic national effort required to defeat Hitler and wipe fascism off the earth places many new tasks on the labor movement," the call says. "The women of our families, who stand to gain or lose as we do in this national emergency, and who can be a source of enormous strength have thus far remained in the background.

"This is the time to correct that situation. Women are everywhere joining auxiliary groups with the sole purpose of helping their trade union husbands and brother. We must help to make these groups a real force in the labor movement."

For this purpose, the call adds, the New York Council is convening the meeting of all CIO city auxiliaries "to guide and rally the activities of women behind the war effort and for protection of labor's gains."

The call was signed by Joseph Curran, Council president, and Saul Mills, secretary.

CIO Optical Union Wins Contract

New York, Jan. 10—Greatest victory so far attained over the powerful American Optical Co. was announced today by Local 208, CIO United Optical Workers Union.

Workers in five of the company's plants won a contract that brought vacations and holidays with pay, wage scale for apprentices and increases running up to $5 a week.

Signing of the pact followed a 10-day strike at the five plants throughout the New York metropolitan area which terminated with an understanding that any points on which no agreement could be reached would be referred to the State Board of Mediation.

Sebastian Rebaldo, secretary-treasurer of the Optical Workers Coordinating Committee reported that all issues were worked out in the conference, with none requiring mediation.

The victory is expected to help speed up the union's organizational drive throughout the metropolitan area. The union anticipates that before the war is over the few remaining unorganized wholesale shops will be under union contract.

Union Appeals To Churchill For Strike Aid

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 10—The CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers this week appealed the case of 4,000 striking gold miners at Kirkland Lake, Ont., directly to British Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

Pres. Reid Robinson of the union wired Churchill that "unfortunately the failure to recognize the trade union movement in the Dominion of Canada has weakened our united war effort and has forced four thousand skilled mechanics and miners into a strike . . . after they had followed every provision of the Canadian Industrial Disputes Act and all Orders-in-Council.

BASIC RIGHTS

"We urge that you use your influence with Prime Minister Mackenzie King to recommend the granting of this basic democratic right conceded in Great Britain, United States and all other democratic nations. We especially urge this so that the full-time effort of American labor will not be diverted from its main task by a struggle of its fellow members for union recognition in a sister democracy."

Churchill's reply thanked the union for its pledge of support to the united war effort and announced that the matter was being referred "to the competent Canadian authorities." A similar message was sent to the strikers in Kirkland Lake.

The walkout against eight gold mine companies started after the firms had defied a government conciliation board and flatly refused to negotiate. CIO and AFL unions in the U. S. and Canada are supporting the walkout.

Latest strikebreaking move by the companies was to release information purporting to show that the majority of the strikers are of foreign and non-British extraction. An immediate protest was made to Minister of Justice L. St. Laurent.

The strikers have also wired Canadian Prime Minister Mackenzie King asking clarification of the status of gold mining as a war industry.

They requested that if mining were not a war industry, all strikers be transferred to war industries in the base metal field and the struck gold mines be shut down for the duration of the war.

Special Convention

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 10—A special "Production for Victory" convention of the Minnesota Industrial Union Council has been called to meet here February 7th and 8th, in view of the emergency created by the war.

Senate Group Scores Defense Bungling

(See Story, Page Three)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17 — "Profits As Usual" handling of the defense program by dollar-a-year men was under fire again today.

This time it was the special committee headed by Senator Truman of Missouri that blasted the failure of the OPM and of American big business to make full use of the country's great resources in the death struggle with Hitler's fascism. Backing up long-standing criticism by the CIO, the committee accused the dollar-a-year men of serving a dual master—their own corporations and the government. The corporations, the committee charged, got by far the best of the bargain.

The committee's criticism followed by only a few weeks similar accusations from a House of Representatives group, the Tolan Committee, which also attacked the "business as usual" methods adopted by the corporation executives who man a huge share of OPM's key jobs.

SEE HOPEFUL SIGNS

It was hoped, meanwhile, that appointment of Donald Nelson as boss of the defense program would bring about the speedier production for which the nation is looking.

Labor did its share this week to help the defense program. President Murray of the CIO promised full cooperation with the new War Labor Board. Communications workers, finally assured of a voice on their industry's defense board, predicted 100 per cent backing of government plans. In Detroit CIO representatives on the OPM's automobile industry committee, meeting in executive session, were once again demanding speedy conversion of the nation's auto plants to war production.

Michigan CIO Adopts Statewide Program For Civilian Defense

DETROIT, Jan. 16—Adoption of a state-wide civilian defense program marked the special session of the executive board of the Michigan CIO Council just concluded here. Following the board meeting, representatives of affiliated CIO unions met and approved the five-point program.

The program calls for adequate unemployment compensation to take care of hundreds of thousands of displaced workers; for civilian defense in plants and homes; for preservation of labor's social and economic gains as vital to morale and to high production levels; for rent and price control to guard against lowered living standards; and for "political vigilance" to ensure governments adequate both to war needs and to postwar reconstruction.

TO WORK OUT DETALS

The program is to be worked out in complete cooperation with state and city authorities and the public, the Council declaring "it is with and through other groups of our fellow citizens that we must function under direction of the government."

"There can be no compromise with war, especially when it is such a war as this, waged by an enemy intent upon enslaving all peace-loving peoples," the Council's statement said.

"When it is considered that as individuals we owe much of what we possess to the union organizations we have formed under the CIO to protect our daily livelihood, it seems to follow naturally that our determination to win should be registered through these same organizations."

Tennis Stars Sign With CIO

NEW YORK, Jan. 17—A strike called by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers at a laundry employing 35 workers was settled by the owners, Donald Budge and Sidney Wood, America's ranking tennis players, the ACW announced this week.

The laundry caters to the Racquet and Tennis Club, the Yale Club, and other swank establishments.

Hail Court DecisionOn Lorillard

Chicago, Jan. 17—The decision of the U. S. Supreme Court handed down early this month requiring the P. Lorillard Co., big tobacco concern, to negotiate in good faith with its CIO local in Middletown, Ohio, was hailed enthusiastically by employes in the plant, the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers said today.

STRUCK IN 1937

The Lorillard workers, mostly women, were forced in 1937 to work by the State Militia after they had voluntarily gone back into the plant following a 31-day strike. They then took the case to the NLRB.

The Labor Board in 1939 upheld the local's contention that cut and dried correspondence from New York City did not constitute collective bargaining, and ordered the concern to bargain with the union in good faith.

Lorillard fought the Board's decision in the courts, claiming that the union no longer had a majority. The Supreme Court decision upheld the Board's right to insist that the company bargain with the union which was clearly the bargaining agency before the company committed unfair labor practices.

Urge U. S. Steel To Work Mines

EVELETH, Minn., Jan. 17—(FP)—This vital iron mining center is attempting to force the U. S. Steel Corp. to initiate winter mining in order to build up stock piles of the war-needed ore while lake shipping waits for spring.

Mayor Richard Floyd and former Rep. John T. Bernard head a delegation which took the demand to Washington and the OPM.

High Court KO's State Slave Law

Washington, Jan. 17 (FP)—Southern landowners were deprived of one of their principal weapons here Jan. 12 as the U. S. Supreme Court declared unconstitutional a Georgia statute making failure to repay a debt a crime.

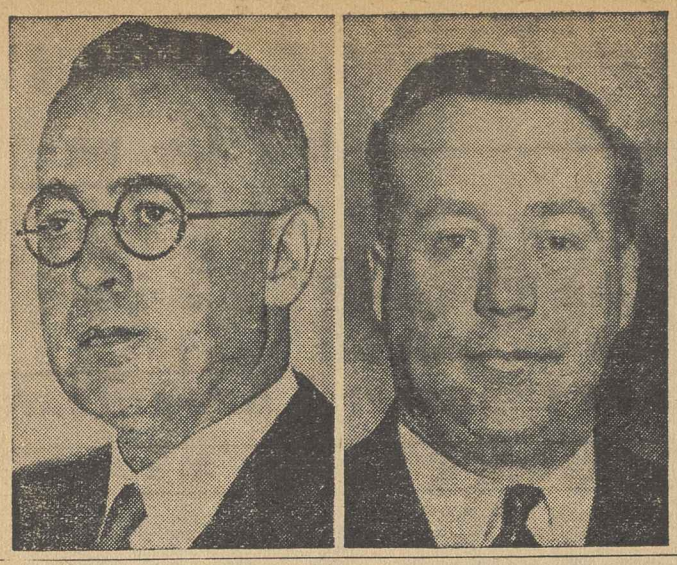
In an opinion delivered by Justice Byrnes, the court held that the statute violated the 13th amendment to the constitution which prohibits involuntary servitude.

Under the Georgia statute, a person failing to perform work for which he had obtained an advance of money was liable to imprisonment.

The case was brought before the court by Ira Taylor who, it was charged, had gotten $19.50 from R. L. Hardie to be paid by working at $1.25 a day.

Taylor failed to perform the work and he was convicted of fraud by a jury. The verdict was upheld by the Georgia Supreme Court.

The civil liberties section of the Department of Justice joined in the appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court and urged that the statute be declared unconstitutional.



Die Casters OK Merger With Metal Miners

CLEVELAND, Jan. 17—Merger of the National Association of Die Casting Workers with the International Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers was voted unanimously last week at a special convention held here by the NADCW.

Steps to amalgamate the two unions, which have been under consideration for some time, were pressed at this time as an aid to the war production program. As a united organization in the non-ferrous metal industry, leaders of the two unions felt that amalgamation would strengthen both groups and enable them to function more effectively.

President Reid Robinson of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, and E. T. Cheyfitz, national secretary of the Die Casters, both addressed the convention explaining the benefits to be achieved by the merger, and George Peacock, NADCW president, assured the delegates that it was "a step in the right direction."

TO VOTE ON ACTION

In conjunction with the vote to unite the two unions, delegates passed a motion to submit the matter to the local unions for ratification in accordance with provisions of the NADCW constitution. The vote will be completed by March 1, and the merger will be declared accepted if approved by 60 per cent of the locals.

After ratification by the NADCW locals, the question of the merger will be submitted to the CIO executive board for approval, at its meeting in June.

FORM NEW DIVISION

Under the terms of the agreement drawn up, a Provisional Casting Division will be set up in the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union. This Division will have an Administrator, a Chairman of a Coordinating Committee, and Industry and Corporation Councils.

"It is understood that the present Executive Secretary of the NADCW (Cheyfitz) shall continue in the capacity of Administrator, and that the present President of the NADCW (Peacock) shall continue as Chairman of the Coordinating Committee," the agreement states.

"The international president of the IUMMSW shall appoint the Casting Division Administrator as Coordinator of Organization in the casting division who shall work directly under the supervision of the International President in order to carry on continuous and effective organization work. The present organizational staff of the NADCW shall be placed upon the organizational staff of the IUMMSW."

The agreement also provides that the Administrator and the Chairman of the Casting Division shall sit in on all sessions of the IUMMSW executive board, and that all regular delegates elected by locals of the Casting Division shall be seated at the next IUMMSW convention.

New York, Jan. 17—The second $2,000 check to go to the Red Cross from a local of the International Fur and Leather Workers Union in its current drive was presented today on behalf of Fur Dressers Local 2 to Brooklyn Borough President John Cashmore by Samuel Mindel, International Vice-President and Manager of Local 2, and by General Secretary-Treasurer Pietro Lucchi.

Cashmore, in accepting the check, which he turned over to Postmaster Francis Sinnott, representative of the Brooklyn Chapter of the Red Cross, declared: "I wish to express my deepest thanks for this generous contribution. I can only say that if the millions of Brooklyn people will follow the example which you have set, we need have no fear about raising our Brooklyn quota and going over the top."

Electrical Union To Seek Wage Boosts

Washington, Jan. 19—The CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers said today it is going to ask for wage increases in coming contract renewal negotiations.

Parleys with firms employing about 350,000 electrical and machine workers—including General Electric and Westinghouse—will get under way within a short period of time, the UE announced.

In preparation for the negotiations, the union is sponsoring a number of conferences among the local unions involved.

CIO Officials On U. S. Agencies

CIO unions moved a step towards winning long-sought recognition by government defense agencies this week—though there's still a long way to go.

Ford of Canada Signs With CIO

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 17—The largest citadel of anti-unionism in the British Empire, the Ford Motor Co. of Canada, embraced industrial democracy this week with the signing by the company and Local 200, UAW-CIO, of an agreement providing improvements in working conditions for nearly 11,000 employes.

Now Chrysler Corp. is the only one of the "Big Three" in Canada which has not negotiated an agreement with the UAW but a majority of its employes have asked for a contract and a conciliation board will likely be appointed shortly. Signing of the contract was a blow to Premier Hepburn of Ontario who said in 1937 he would "stop the CIO at the Detroit River" and won an election on the phony issue after he failed to stop the GM workers at Oshawa from obtaining a UAW "formula" recognition.

The signing of the agreement was considered comparable here to the U. S. Steeel capitulation in 1937. The agreement followed a whirlwind organizational campaign and the largest collective bargaining election in Canadian history.

ALL-OUT RECOGNITION

Complete recognition was gained by the union. Other features of the agreement which are considered superior to any other major Canadian automotive contract include representation by 50 chief stewards who shall be permitted to negotiate grievances with absent time paid; accumulated seniority for men entering the armed or Government service; 40-hour week and time and a half overtime; grievance procedure; no discrimination; equal distribution of overtime and payment for work if an employe is prematurely called in.

"Signing of this agreement with the largest automotive plant in the Empire makes it in reality a democratic arsenal and should be a large factor in our most important task of working with all our energies to defeat Hitlerism.

"The agreement, if adopted as a pattern of collective bargaining by the industrial groups of mine and mill would go a long way to improving the morale of Canadian workers and giving much-needed acceleration to our war effort."

ASK CONFERENCES

Representatives of thousands of workers in three of Canada's major industries, auto, steel and rubber, sent requests to Government agencies at Ottawa this week for union-management conferences to speed production and map plans to absorb workers threatened with loss of jobs by curtailment programs.

Map CIO Drive In Tennessee

Knoxville, Tenn., Jan. 17—The Executive Board of the Tennessee State CIO Council, meeting here, talked of labor's role in the war program and adopted suggestions for recommendation to the CIO in the forthcoming drive to complete organization of the South's 3,000,000 industrial workers.

Special emphasis was given to plans for organizing some 65,000 textile and shoe and leather workers in Tennessee, and reports were received on possibilities of expanding and solidifying CIO unions in several highly industrialized areas.

The Executive Board authorized Pres. William Turnblazer and Sec.-Treas. Paul R. Christopher to issue the 3rd annual convention call during March, the convention to be held in Memphis early in June. The date will be announced later.

SUPPORT WAR EFFORT

The executive officers adopted resolutions pledging support of the declaration of war and endorsed the action of CIO members on the President's conference board which devised means for the peaceful settlement and mediation of industrial disputes in war industries and recommended creation of a War Labor Board.

A greater representation of labor on Civilian Defense Committees and a seat on defense councils was urged, and efforts will be made to get authorization for sale of Defense Stamps by local union secretaries so CIO members may make their purchases through the unions.

OFFER USE OF SCHOOL

Endorsement was given the proposal already made to the Office of Civilian Defense by the Highlander Folk School at Monteagle for utilization of the labor school's facilities as a defense training center, and the OCD heads have been asked to accept this offer for training CIO unionists to assist in providing machinery for the defense of the civilian population and property against air raids and sabotage, and to teach labor intelligent measures to aid in maintaining public morale.

Of 91 Labor Board elections involving CIO unions in Tennessee, it was reported the CIO came out on the top end of 86. The year 1941 saw membership increases of more than 25,000, while nearly 200 wage agreements were signed with employers of 100,000 workers.

Murray Pledges Aid To War Labor Board

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16—The CIO is pledged to "cooperate to the full" with the new War Labor Board set up as the outcome of the recent labor-industry-government conference called on CIO's suggestion, President Murray told all CIO affiliates in a circular letter sent from here today. (Full text on page 5).

This pledge is made, Murray stressed, in line with CIO's "wholehearted support of our nation's war effort" and with its determination to win the battle of production for victory over the Axis.

The new Board, appointed by President Roosevelt some three weeks after the conference agreed that all disputes should be handled by the proposed machinery for conciliation, mediation and arbitration, consists of four representatives from labor, four from industry and four representing the public. Chairman is William H. Davis, former head of the Natl. Defense Mediation Board which the new body displaces as final agency for settling labor-management disputes.

Labor representatives from CIO are Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers and R. J. Thomas, president of the United Auto Workers; from AFL, George Meany, secretary-treasurer, and Matthew Woll, vice-president. Pres. Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers and Clinton S. Golden, regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, are CIO alternates.

STEPS OUTLINED

Procedure outlined for the Board in Roosevelt's executive order follows the lines of the conference agreement, comprising (1) negotiation by existing collective bargaining methods, (2) conciliation through the U. S. Labor Dept. and (3) certification to the Board by the Labor Dept. or by the Board taking jurisdiction on its own.

Murray's letter emphasized the fact that "all disputes" are included in the field of mediation and voluntary arbitration, pointing out that this includes questions of union security, union and closed shop, etc., despite employer opposition during the conference. This point, he indicated, offers a guarantee that "labor's rights may not be infringed upon" and is the direct result of CIO's successful fight to block anti-union legislation in Congress.

Murray also underscored the importance of the first step in the process of settling disputes through collective bargaining agreements, which he declared are "the best and most expeditious means of resolving such disputes" and which "should be fully explored and complied with before further steps are taken."

LABOR LAWS

An important section of the President's order provides that nothing in it will set aside or supersede labor laws such as the Wagner Act, the Wage-Hour Act and others. This means, Murray pointed out, that the right to organize and bargain collectively under the Wagner Act is still in full force, as is all other labor protective legislation.

Murray urged all CIO unions "to exercise the greatest care to avoid misunderstanding or unnecessary conflict" in making use of the Board, calling on locals to handle cases through their internationals and on internationals to channel cases through Allan S. Haywood, director of organization for the CIO.

BOARD MEMBERS

Board members in addition to Chairman Davis and the labor representatives listed above are: For industry, A. W. Hawkes, head of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, Roger Lapham, head of the American-Hawaiian S. S. Co., E. J. McMillan, head of Standard Knitting Mills, and Walter C. Teagle, head of Standard Oil of N. J.

Representing the public are: Davis (chairman), George W. Taylor of the U. of Pennsylvania, Frank P. Graham, head of the U. of North Carolina and Wayne L. Morse, dean of the U. of Oregon Law School and arbitrator for the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and the waterfront employers on the west coast.

Win Raise

Win Poll

Boston, Mass., Jan. 17—An election held among workers at the plant of the Monsanto Chemical Co. in Springfield, Mass., has been won by District 50, United Mine Workers, Hugh Lyons, CIO regional director here, announced this week.

"The Monsanto Co. has proved to be one of the toughest nuts to crack in the chemical industry," he said. "The results of the Springfield campaign will undoubtedly have a favorable influence upon the organizing efforts of District 50 in the many plants operated by this company throughout the country."

Truman Committee Blast 'Dollar-A-Year' Defense Bungling

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16—Three major developments on the production battle line kept the front pages busy this week, though they did not necessarily add up to more planes, tanks and guns for victory—at least not immediately.

Most sensational of these was a detailed blast from the Senate Committee investigating the defense program that charged the OPM with failure to produce enough planes even for training purposes, that put the finger on the dollar-a-year men for representing industry rather than the country's security, and accused one steel firm of making an "outrageous" grab for profits before it would consider necessary expansion.

Previous to the Senate Committee's charges, issued by Senator Harry S. Truman of Missouri as chairman, President Roosevelt announced appointment of Donald M. Nelson, Sears-Roebuck executive, as No. 1 man in charge of production with sole responsibility for carrying out the 53 billion dollar victory program.

COMMITTEE MEETS

And, coming slightly as an anti-climax to bigger news, the sub-committee set up last week by the OPM to "assist" in converting the auto industry to arms production, got to work in Detroit. Its first announcement, that tool pooling should be on a voluntary basis, was immediately attacked by UAW Secretary George Addes as "another indication that manufacturers are more interested in maintaining business as usual than in effective conversion for complete victory over the Axis."

The Truman Committee report was more than blunt in blaming OPM and the dollar-a-year patriots for failures to produce, demanding drastic reorganization and suggesting that the dollar boys be either sent back to the home plants where their hearts belong or put on regular government salary and taught to forget about the stockholders. This is what it had to say about OPM:

"NOT IMPRESSIVE"

"Its record has not beeen impressive; its mistakes of commission have been legion; and its mistakes of omission have been even greater. It has all too often done nothing when it should have realized that problems cannot be avoided by refusing to admit that they exist."

And on the dollar men after saying that "in a very real sense the dollar-year-men and the no-compensation man can be termed lobbyists," the report added:

"In addition to the above benefits, the companies loaning the services of dollar-a-year men and no-compensation men obtain other and less tangible, but perhaps even more important benefits.

"All important procurement contracts must be approved by these men, which means that contracts must conform to their theories of business. Since they represent the largest companies, this means that the defense program in all its ramifications must obtain the approval of the large companies."

LABOR BRUSH-OFF

A part of the report was devoted to the failure to make use of production plans offered by the CIO, notably the airplane plan of the UAW. Though the report avoids giving the UAW credit for working out the conversion, it notes that since labor "had, and has, valuable knowledge with respect to the operation of such plants and the possibilities of converting them," the OPM is to be criticized for refusing to take advantage of this knowledge.

The report, though it did a thorough job in raking OPM and business as usual over the coals, was marred by a serious error in its section on the labor situation, where it calls for legislation such as the Connally bill on the ground that strikes have been a major factor in holding up production.

This charge is based on a mistaken figure of 26 million man-days lost due to strikes in defense industries during the 17 months between June, 1940 and November, 1941. This figure is incorrect, according to U. S. government studies, since it applies to strikes of all

Labor Wins Seats On Communication Board Policy Groups

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17—American labor this week won representation on the important U. S. Defense Communications Board.

James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission and head of the Board, asked representatives of the CIO, AFL and an independent union to nominate representatives on the board. Chosen for the positions were Pres. James Selly of the CIO American Communications Assn., Robert Watt of the AFL and Paul E. Griffith of the Natl. Federation of Telephone Workers.

The labor members will hold membership on seven of the Defense Communication Board's ten sub-committees: aviation, cable, domestic broadcasting, international broadcasting, radio communications, telegraph and telephone.

PRAISE ACTION

ACA leaders praised the Board's action as a far-reaching step towards adequate voice for labor on government agencies, a basic plank in CIO's program for the past several years. As members of the Board's committees, the union officials will have an opportunity to help formulate the policies of the government on communication problems.

Labor's influence on these matters in the past has been limited to its membership on an Advisory Committee. The Labor and Industry Advisory Committees will continue to function, and will hold a series of joint meetings, it was pointed out. But membership on the Board's own sub-committees will greatly enhance the effectiveness of the labor representatives.

The Labor Advisory Board issued this statement following Chairman Fly's announcement:

"The members of the Labor Advisory Committee welcome the action of the Defense Communications Board in convening a joint conference of the Industry and Labor Advisory Committees at our request to consider communications problem affecting the war effort. We believe the conference was a step in the direction of the full utilization of the resources, facilities, manpower, intelligence and initiative of each component part of the communications industry in the total war effort.

ISSUE STATEMENT

"Both industry and labor recognize that all matters which are properly the subject of collective bargaining will not come within the purview of these discussions but will continue to be referred to the established appropriate government agencies.

"We hope in successive joint meetings to be able to evolve effective methods of working out jointly the many problems which affect our industry in this crisis.

"The action taken by the Defense Communications Board today in appointing labor representatives along with industry and government on the various special planning committees of the Board will, we feel, facilitate the work of these committees. The constructive and sympathetic approach to labor's proposals expressed by Chairman Fly for the Defense Communications Board will be a source of gratification to the workers in the communications industry."

Court Upholds Wage-Hour Division

Washington, Jan. 17 (FP)—In an opinion delving deeply into the social and economic aims of Congress in adopting the Wage-Hour Act, the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the Wage-Hour division in its interpretation of the overtime provisions of the Act.

The opinion is the second Circuit Court opinion upholding the division in its interpretation that overtime pay must be at the rate of time and one-half the employee's regular hourly rate—not merely time and one-half the minimum rate under the Act.

Doing Our Part

The Congress of Industrial Organizations is "committed to wholehearted support of our country's war effort," as President Philip Murray points out in his recent letter to the membership on the new National War Labor Board.

The unions and the members of the CIO are determined to let nothing stand in the way of the speediest possible production of all the airplanes, tanks, anti-aircraft guns, ships and everything else that is needed for victory.

That is why the CIO has voluntarily agreed to a no-strike policy for the duration of the war and has subscribed to the procedures for the peaceful adjustment of all labor disputes which are now implemented by the President's executive order establishing the War Labor Board.

That is also why the CIO is insisting, in season and out of season, on the elimination of big business sitdowns, profiteering, monopoly practices and the lack of planning that have retarded production more seriously than all the past strikes put together.

At the same time the CIO will not be laggard in defending labor's rights. It will intensify its organizing work, to bring fairer wages and conditions to the workers, and to protect our civil liberties and social legislation.

For, as the CIO president said in a recent speech, "the morale of a free people defending its liberties is essential to victory; and poverty, oppression and exploitation are among the worst saboteurs of our war effort."

Among the points noted by Pres. Murray in the President's executive order are the following:

(1) That the adjustment machinery set up is to handle "all disputes." That is to say, the issue of union security, which the employers sought to have eliminated from consideration, is also included.

(2) That first resort is to be had "to direct negotiations or to the procedures provided in a collective bargaining agreement." Collective bargaining, in other words, is the first and best method of peacefully adjusting disputes.

(3) That nothing in the order is to be construed as superseding or conflicting with the National Labor Relations Act, the wage-hour act and other existing labor legislation. Labor's right to organize and bargain collectively, as protected by the labor act, is still in full force and effect.

The CIO is happy to do its part for victory by the willing efforts of its members in industry; by the constructive procedures of collective bargaining; by adherence to the peaceful adjustment of disputes; and by promoting practical proposals for ever-increasing production.

Why Employers Sit Down

Many people have wondered why there is so much employer resistance to CIO union proposals for increasing war production.

In industry after industry, the CIO has pointed out, after painstaking and comprehensive surveys, how much more can and should be done to utilize all existing plants and facilities and to organize maximum production.

Yet these CIO plans have generally been opposed by the employers, and the OPM and other government agencies as a result have failed to insist on the adoption of such suggestions.

The recent announcement by Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones of big price increases to copper, lead and zinc mining operators illustrates in a most glaring fashion the profit motive behind most of these big business sitdowns.

Pres. Reid Robinson of the International Union of Mine, Mill & Smelters Workers describes these price increases as "a complete victory for the deliberate sitdown of the metal mining operators during the last year and a half."

For months the union has been pressing an industrywide program for increased production, which has been ignored by both industry and OPM.

Robinson now charges that "the refusal of the corporations to produce more necessary metals was a deliberate act on their part to force higher prices and win higher profits," regardless of the nation's desperate need for the metals.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

MAYBE it's only a coincidence, and then again, maybe it isn't. But every time the National Association of Manufacturers, or the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, or any other group of sufficiently big employers sound off an alarm about some labor proposals, most of the daily press immediately begins to "view with alarm" the same proposals.

The latest example is the recent outburst of editorials and columns on alleged CIO proposals to take over the management of industry. The extreme alarmists are foaming at the typewriter about attempts to "sovietize" or "socialize" industry; while the more restrained confine themselves to deploring "interference with management functions."

And why are all these journalistic sirens sounding just now? What raiders of the capitalist system have been sighted on what horizon?

It all started with the recent auto industry conference in Washington. The CIO was demanding more production for victory. It was indignant that hundreds of thousands of auto workers should be unemployed, with little if any war production coming from auto plants, because the industry and OPM had failed to heed CIO proposals for early plant conversion and all-out production.

The CIO urged that labor as well as industry should be given a voice, under government supervision, in the direction of a properly planned production program. It deplored the inadequacy of the merely advisory committee that was set up.

But, even so, why all the press "alarm" just now? After all, the auto workers made their original proposals along these lines as far back as 1940. And the CIO, for more than a year, has been vigorously pushing the Murray industry council plan, which provides for labor representation in the administration of the defense program.

Furthermore, there is hardly a war industry in which the CIO unions have not long been advocating plans for increased production, similar to those of the UAW.

All of these proposals have been praised or criticized, or more often ignored. But heretofore there has been no general press campaign to the effect that their purpose is to "take over" industry.

It seems that no considerable employers' group thought of laying down this line to its press and political followers, until the Automobile Manufacturers Association ran its recent full-page ads alleging that the CIO was trying to "obtain control" of industry and take away its management from "the men who know how to make things."

But once this line was laid down, the editorial writers and columnists sure jumped to it. Or was it just a coincidence that they all got this idea suddenly at the same time?

The CIO has encountered this type of concerted propaganda campaign many times before in its history. In every case it has been due to powerful employing and financial interests taking alarm at certain organizing advances or other similar progress by the CIO.

Their reaction has not been to say what is really on their minds—namely that too many workers are becoming organized, that collective bargaining is becoming too firmly established, that union demands for fairer wages and better conditions threaten to reduce the profits and arbitrary powers of big business.

If they had done so, most of the American public would merely have said: "Why, that's fine. Collective bargaining is a good thing. The workers have a right to organize. And higher wages lead to better business and more general prosperity."

So what these powerful interests did was to pull out some red herring like violence, communism, sitdown strikes, irresponsibility, etc., and to concentrate their propaganda campaigns around some phoney issue that concealed their real purpose.

The present propaganda against CIO proposals for increasing production and taking labor into war partnership is similar to such past campaigns.

It has been launched by business-as-usual employing and financial interests, which fear that the adoption of the constructive CIO plans for all-out production would interfere with their tremendous war profits, and with their running their businesses their own way regardless of war needs.

This campaign is started at this particular time precisely because we are now at war and actual experience is demonstrating how right the CIO has been and how urgent is the necessity for adopting its suggestions.

If these interests stated their real reasons for opposing the CIO union proposals and the industry council plan, they would simply increase the public favor which these proposals are now gaining. That is why they are trying to create a phoney issue as a red herring.

Hope Seen For Defense Improvement

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16—Appointment of Donald M. Nelson, former executive of Sears-Roebuck and Co. as head man responsible for all war production was greeted with favorable — and h o p e f u l — comment throughout the country on announcement of President Roosevelt's surprise move.

"Please accept the pledge of the fullest cooperation of the officers and members of the UAW-CIO in the prosecution of the great task Pres. Roosevelt has assigned you," R. J. Thomas, head of the UAW, wired.

"We offer the manpower of our more than 600,000 members, our technical knowledge and the machinery of our organization toward accomplishing the imperative objective of defeating the enemies of our nation."

OVER OPM

Nelson's appointment was seen as a sign of drastic shakeups in the present control of war production, which has led to a barrage of charges of inefficiency and "business-as-usual" methods against OPM and the dollar-a-year men who have beeen in charge to date. Nelson's first act was to promise just such shakeups, in a statement declaring:

"We have just one job to do—to make enough war materials to lick Hitler and the Japs, and to do it in the shortest possible time.

"Any organizational changes that have to be made in order to do this job will be made. The present organization must and will evolve into the most effective possible instrument to do it.

"Everyone connected with production and procurement, in all agencies of the government, must carry on with the utmost devotion and energy."

Offer Blood

Boston, Jan. 17—Fifty members of the Industrial Insurance Agents Union, Local 41 of the United Office & Professional Workers of America, CIO, will make a group donation of blood to the Boston Red Cross Blood Bank this Friday, Jan. 9, at noon.

This is the first of a number of such groups who will go from the union each week to make their contribution of blood for Red Cross use among soldiers, sailors and civilians,

Copper Price Rise 'To Pave Mines With Gold', Union Charges

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 17—The government' s latest handout to big business—a 40 per cent hike in copper prices and rises for other vital ar ms metals—is "a complete victory for the deliberate sitdown of the metal mining operator s during the past year and a half," Reid Robinson, president of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Wor kers and a vice president of the CIO, said here on learning of the award by the Metals Reserve Corp. of the Federal Loan Administration.

The price hike, granted after the OPM had brushed off the union's copper production program presented last month, applies to copper, lead and zinc mined in excess of amounts produced during 1941, thus putting a premium on the actions of mine owners in cutting down production during the past 18 months.

"The refusal of the corporations to produce more necessary metals was a deliberate act on their part to force higher prices and win higher profits, in the face of the nation's desperate need for the metals right now to prevent more Pearl Harbors and Wake Islands," Robinson said.

"The action by Metals Reserve, OPM and OPA in going along with this holdup by industry is merely another expression of the 'business as usual' mentality and practices being pursued both by industry and defense officials.

UNION PLAN

Pointing out that the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers production plan, which would have broken the industry's sitdown without increasing the price, was ignored by government and industry alike, Robinson added:

"These proposals have been ignored by both industry and OPM officials. Industry representatives have consistently taken the position that their corporations will produce more for the war effort if and when the federal government will pay more. Labor is still looking for any government agency or official more interested in production than in profits as usual."

PROFITS SOARING

"Terrific profit increases" during the past year were cited by Robinson, showing that Anaconda and Phelps-Dodge have upped their take 33 per cent in the past year, while Eagle-Picher Lead has raked in an increase of 125 per cent. These figures are from the U. S. Federal Reserve Board.

Ask Survey

New York, Jan. 17—The National Maritime Union has called upon OPM to make an immediate national survey of industry preparatory to withdrawal of trained seamen working in unskilled positions ashore.

Ladies Set 'Beat Hitler' Week Feb. 2-9

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17—Declaring that women's "first job is to help win the war," the Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries today called on all affiliates to set Feb. 2-9 as "Beat Hitler Week," and outlined a program of activities to rally CIO wives to the victory program.

First point on the program is a call to women to be ready "to take our place in industry whenever and wherever we are needed" in line with the CIO's program of all-out war production. Following this point, the Congress urges special attention to the home front, including civilian defense activities and action to ensure adequate food for workers and their families, struggle against profiteering, and general morale building.

"These are the aims which must keynote our Beat Hitler Week," the Congress said. "All of these jobs can be done best by organized women. In carrying out our program, we must make increasing our membership and cooperation with all other women's organizations a major part of our activity. Strong unions are the guarantee of strong morale. We must do everything in our power to help build and strengthen our unions."

ASK UNIONS' HELP

Cooperation of all CIO unions in making the week a success is asked by the Congress, which instructed its locals to seek the aid of their unions in carrying out the program. Radio broadcasts, mass meetings, special organizing campaigns, intensive campaigns around the problem of child care for women workers, are other major parts of the program outlined by the Congress.

RADIO BROADCAST

"Beat Hitler Week" will be featured by a coast-to-coast broadcast speech by Mrs. Faye Stephenson, president of the CIO Congress, on Monday, February 2. Exact time will be announced later.

Publish Labor List

New York, Jan. 17—"Labor in the World Today" is the subject of a reading list compiled by the Readers' Advisers of the N. Y. Public Library. The list recommends titles of books and pamphlets available for circulation to those who wish to be inforced on the part now being played by labor.

Pres. Murray's Letter on War Labor Board

Following is the full text of President Murray's letter notifying CIO affiliates of the National War Labor Board and outlining CIO policy in relation to it:

Pursuant to the agreement reached between representatives of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the American Federation of Labor, industry and the public at the conferences held last month in Washington, the President of the United States has established the National War Labor Board to aid in the peaceful adjustment of labor disputes.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations and its affiliated unions are committed to wholehearted support of our country's war effort. Because we realize the importance of maintaining continuity of operation and achieving all-out industrial production in this emergency, we have agreed to a no-strike policy for the duration of the war. In order that labor's rights may not be infringed upon, however, we have opposed repressive anti-strike legislation and have insisted that the most effective way to prevent stoppages is through voluntary agreement on procedures for the peaceful adjustment of all disputes.

Such a voluntary agreeemeent was achieved in the recent conference of labor, industry and g o v e r n m e n t representatives, which was called in accordance with CIO suggestions. This agreement was designed to make strikes and other stoppages unnecessary by providing the machinery whereby labor will have the right to conciliate, mediate and arbitrate all disputes.

All Disputes

It should be noted that, despite employer representations to the contrary, the final agreement and the President's executive order provide that "all disputes," which includes disputes around the issue of union security, should be handled by the adjustment machinery set up under the agreement.

It was further provided that the President should set up a War Labor Board with labor, management and the public represented. The Congress of Industrial Organizations is therefore pledged to cooperate to the full with the new War Labor Board, in line with the agreement to which its duly authorized representatives subscribed.

I am now writing to outline the set-up of the Board and the procedures which should be followed by our affiliated organizations in handling labor disputes in the future.

The full text of the President's executive order establishing the National War Labor Board is enclosed with this letter for your information. I am also sending you a list of the members of the board and of the alternate members named by the President.

You will note that the Board consists of four members representative of the public, including Mr. William H. Davis as chairman and Mr. George W. Taylor as vice chairman; four labor representatives, and four employer representatives. The two CIO representatives who are members of the Board are Mr. Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, and Mr. R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers of America.

Peaceful Means

The President's executive order specifically refers to the agreement, to which the CIO subscribed, that "for the duration of the war there shall be no strikes or lockouts, and that all labor disputes shall be settled by peaceful means." This agreement must be strictly complied with so that the CIO may do its full part in maintaining uninterrupted production and in increasing output until victory is won.

Another point which should be noted in the President's executive order is the provision that "the parties shall first resort to direct negotiations or to the procedures provided in a collective bargaining agreement."

The collective bargaining procedures provided in our union agreements are the best and most expeditious means of resolving such disputes as may arise. These procedures should be fully explored and complied with before further steps are taken.

If a dispute is not settled by the regular procedures of collective bargaining, the commissioners of conciliation of the Department of Labor should then be notified. If such conciliation fails, the Secretary of Labor is required to certify the dispute to the War Labor Board, or the Board may take jurisdiction on its own motion, after consultation with the Secretary.

The Board is then authorized to make final determination of the dispute through mediation, voluntary arbitration or arbitration, under rules established by the Board. At this writing the Board has not yet established its rules and procedures.

Labor Laws Stand

Another important point which should be noted in the President's executive order is the final paragraph, providing that nothing in the order shall be construed as superseding or in conflict with the Railway Labor Act, the National Labor Relations Act, the Fair Labor Standards Act and other existing labor legislation. In other words, the provisions of the Labor Relations Act protecting the right to organize and bargain collectively are still in full force and effect, as is the Wage-Hour Act and other protective labor legislation.

In following through the procedures outlined in this letter, I wish to urge all CIO unions to exercise the greatest care to avoid misunderstandings or unnecessary conflict. I would urge that international unions ask their local unions to act through the internationals, rather than directly, in presenting their cases before the War Labor Board; and the national CIO for its part will be glad to offer its services to international unions, in order that the most effective and consistent policies may be followed in the handling of CIO cases.

For this purpose, I have asked Mr. Allan S. Haywood, Director of Organization, to make himself available to all international unions having cases before the War Labor Board. He will be glad to assist in correlating and coordinating the handling of CIO cases, and I would urge that he be contacted by internationals when they have cases coming before the Board.

kinds, defense and non-defense. Actually there were only 2.5 million man-days lost during that time in defense industries, the remainder taking place in civilian production.

PROFITS CITED

Commenting on stories that big industry is losing all its war profits to taxation, the report pointed out that nine months of 1941 showed an increase of more than 22 million dollars for three companies alone over 1940, and double that amount over 1939. This is happening at the same time that huge firms are getting the "newest and finest machine tools and factory buildings practically free of charge," while small firms are being pushed to extinction.

Summing up the record, the report declared, after calling for production to win the war "as soon as possible and at a minimum expenditure of life and property":

"Carelessness and inefficiency have already cost us a great deal, and, if continued, can cost us much more, even though in the long run we will win the war because of the sheer extent of our resources."

Cleveland CIO Acts as Scrap Lack Closes Steel Mills

By TED COX

Cleveland, Jan. 17—With two open hearth furnaces already closed at Otis Steel Co. and more facing shutdowns within the next week both there, at Republic and other mills, CIO leaders moved into action to grab every available bit of scrap iron and throw it into the furnaces for war production.

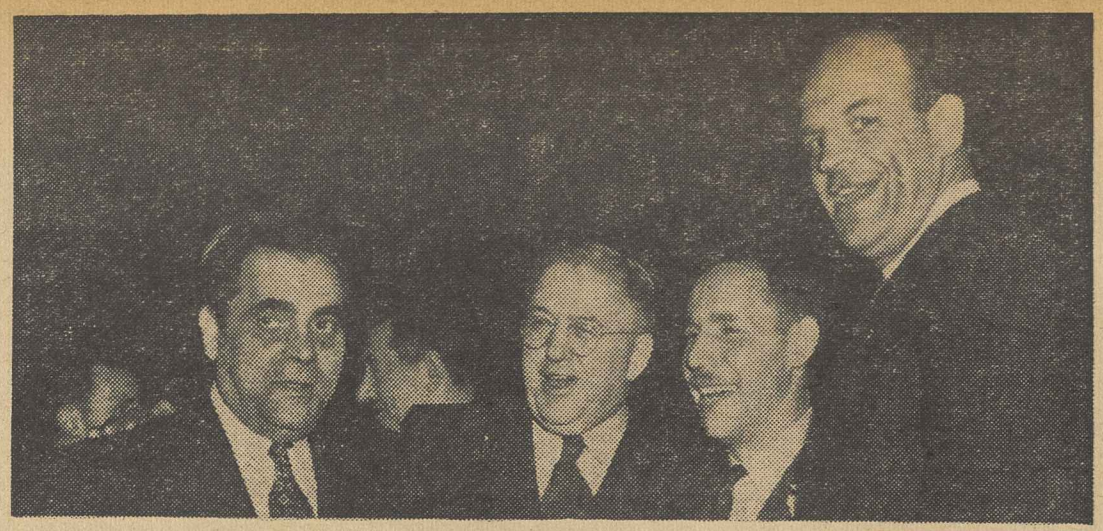
Immediately, they found 3,500 tons in an abandoned bridge and demanded the city tear it down. The demand was made by Jack Ferline, president of Otis Local 187 of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and also president of the Cleveland Industrial Union Council. A committee of steel unionists is working out details with city officials.

When the story appeared on the front pages of Cleveland newspepers the management immediately seconded the motion and included it in its demands for scrap.

STREETCAR TRACKS

The Cleveland Union Leader, local CIO paper, which has been conducting a survey of unused scrap iron in Cleveland, discovered that another 3,000 tons of scrap steel is rusting away on abandoned street railway tracks here. City Traction Commissioner Ed Scheid has formally requested the Cleveland Street Railway Company to turn over the deed to the abandoned rails so they may be torn up and turned over to the government for war production.

More detailed plans of meeting this and other war production plans will be presented by CIO leaders at a conference of management, labor and government to be called by Mayor Frank J. Lausche within the next seven days.



BIGGEST LOCAL MEETING: First CIO local union meeting to fill Madison Square Garden in New York City was held last week by Local 65, United Wholesale & Warehouse Employes. Union staged the big get-together to celebrate victory in its seven-month organizing drive. Some 7,000 members were initiated at one time! Upper picture shows four speakers at the Garden meeting, all obviously pleased with the local's success. Left to right: Pres. Samuel Wolchok of the United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes; CIO Organization Director Allan S. Haywood; Pres. Arthur Osman of Local 65; and Pres. Joseph Curran of the Greater New York Industrial Union Council.

One Local Packs N. Y. 'Garden'

NEW YORK, Jan. 17—20,000 members and friends of Wholesale and Warehouse Workers Union, Local 65, United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes of America, overflowed Madison Square Garden for the Union's Victory Festival, January 12. More than 1,000 people were turned away when police declared the city's largest indoor arena was filled to capacity.

High point of the meeting was when, after Pres. Phillip Murray's message of greeting was read at the Garden, CIO Organization Director Allan S. Haywood conducted the ceremonies inducting the 7,000 new members enrolled in Local 65's most ambitious organizing drive. Enthusiastic cheers rang through the arena as the new members rose to take their pledge to the CIO and their Union, Local 65.

Arthur Osman, re-elected President of Local 65, received an ovation when he was introduced. Osman delivered the inauguration address on behalf of the other officers and executive board members installed by Samuel Wolchok, URWDSEA president.

LaGUARDIA SPEAKS

Mayor LaGuardia, main guest speaker of the evening, spoke by direct wire from Washington, D. C., where he was attending the United States Conference of Mayors.

Scores of union members were in the cast of the pageant, "Marching to Victory," a full-length dramatic production portraying the history of Local 65 for a fuller and richer life. The cast was made up of members from the local's five dramatic groups, which perform at regular weekly Union socials.

Messages greeting Local 65's growth to 16,000 members, were received from Governor Herbert H. Lehman and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. Hundreds of wires came from many other civic and labor leaders, including presidents of internationals and local unions throughout the country. Numerous messages also came pouring in from hundreds of shops where members are employed, and who attended the Victory Festival. Members now serving the nation's armed forces were also heard from.

Channel War Relief Funds Through CIO Group, Murray Asks

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17—CIO affiliates and members are urged to channel war relief contributions through the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief, in a letter sent to committee chairman Irving Abramson by President Murray this week. The National Committee was set up by CIO convention action in Detroit last November.

The Committee, whose chairman is also president of the New Jersey CIO Council, sent letters to CIO internationals and state and city councils urging them to "translate resolutions into action" by contributing all within their power for relief, setting as a goal the sum of $1,000,000 a month.

PROGRAM

The letters outlined a program to raise this and greater amounts by securing contributions of one hour's pay a month, voluntary check-off, and arrangements with employers to contribute "an amount equal to the profit that would normally accrue" from the extra hour's work. Earmarked donations will be routed as ordered by contributors, others to be apportioned by the committee.

"It is important that you act now," the committee letter said. "Don't delay. Get the machinery rolling. Our slogan is: 'Work an Hour—Save a Life.' Our goal is: $1,000,000 a month."

All checks should be made payable to John Brophy, treasurer, National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief, 17 William St., Newark, N. J.

Rhode Island CIO Backs Murray Plan

Providence, R. I., Jan. 17—Support to the limit in America's fight against enemies seeking to destroy it was pledged by 150 delegates to the fourth annual convention of the Rhode Island Industrial Union Council which met here recently.

The government endorsed the Industry Council plan of CIO President Philip Murray; urged the development of trade union education among women as an effective means of mobilizing support for unionism among families of union members; backed unemployment insurance for seamen and authorized the President of the State Council to set up a group to be known as the "Smash Hitler" Committee.

Among the speakers were Pres. Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers Union; Joseph W. Knapik, president of the Federation of Dyers; and Joseph Mayo, CIO sub-regional director.

Frank J. Benti was elected president of the Council for the coming year, succeeding Adelard Gingras. Anne Marsoli was re-elected secretary-treasurer for a fourth term, and Albert Clifton was elected first vice-president.

Fight Looms On Price Control Bill

Washington, Jan. 16—The fight for an adequate price control bill to curb inflated living costs opened on a new front this week as Pres. Roosevelt intervened to eliminate a Senate amendment that threatens an increase of 25 percent or more in food costs.

The amendment, put in by Sen. O'Mahoney as the Senate was debating a version of the bill substantially better than the one recently passed by the House, would up farm price ceilings to 120 per cent of parity, thus paving the way for inflationary food costs. An additional amendment put in by Sen. Bankhead of Alabama would divide farm price control authority between Leon Henderson, present Office of Price Administration head and Claude A. Wickard, secretary of Agrciulture. This is also opposed by the President.

CIO CAMPAIGN

CIO has backed an adequate price control bill ever since the measure came up, putting on a large scale campaign at the time of House passage, whose fire was chiefly aimed at wage freezing proposals put forward by House reactionaries.

The CIO campaign also pointed to the serious dangers to the victory effort of allowing living costs to rise beyond already high levels, stressing the need for decent living standards to maintain production workers' health and morale.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

The President of the United States has set up the new War Labor Board, whose job it will be to mediate and arbitrate all disputes that might lead to interruptions in production. The principles under which the Board was set up were agreed to by the CIO in the original conferences between labor, industry and government. President Murray now calls on all CIO unions to avoid work stoppages and to use the facilities of the Board in settling disputes where collective bargaining methods are not effective.

President Murray has asked all CIO unions to send full particulars of any cases they may have coming before the Board to the writer as Director of Organization. In this way, we will avoid confusion and duplication, since a central clearing office for such cases will be provided.

COMPANY STALLING

The dispute on the Los Angeles Railroad, involving transportation for thousands of arms production workers, is the first case to come before the new Board. This dispute has a long history of company and AFL collaboration, in which the two have combined in an endeavor to shut out the CIO. This is a brief resume of that history:

Some months ago, the CIO's Transport Workers Union, acting on request of the workers, organized a substantial majority of employes who had grown tired of the company union. As soon as the majority was organized, the company attorney got together with the AFL to work out a transfer of the old company union "contract" to the newly chartered AFL local. The transfer was sweetened by the addition of a closed shop clause. Under this clause, the company proceeded to fire workers for refusing to join the AFL. It did not matter whether they were CIO members or not—in fact, they even fired members of other AFL unions.

The anti-union campaign of the company reached its height immediately after Pearl Harbor, culminating in total of some 140 employes discharged—many of them with 20 years seniority. The CIO Transport Workers appealed to the U. S. Government, and was upheld when Labor Conciliator John R. Steelman twice asked the company to cease the firings and submit the dispute to mediation. The union was also upheld when an election was set after many months of delays. The company refused both proposals.

The case has been certified to the War Labor Board, and this week Chairman William H. Davis wired the company reaffirming the proposal made by the Labor Department through Steelman. It remains to be seen what the company will do—stop trying to break the union or go ahead risking a stoppage that would tie up transportation for thousands of arms production workers.

BIGGEST MEETING

This week the writer had the privilege and honor of inducting 7,000 new members into one local union—Local 65, Wholesale and Warehouse Employes, CIO. The 7,000 new members were all recruited in the past seven months. The meeting, which filled New York's Madison Square Garden, is the first time a local union has filled the huge auditorium. The oath of induction which follows in part was impressive:

"To the CIO: we will use the courage and solidarity you gave us to defeat all the enemies of labor. To our country: we will use the freedom you gave us to defend our nation, to smash Hitler and his allies and to win a world of peace, prosperity and happiness."

ELECTION VICTORIES

Biggest CIO election victory of recent weeks is the two-to-one win chalked up by the Packinghouse Workers at Swift's Chicago plant, where the score was: 2,662 for CIO, 1,180 for the independent and 661 for no union. From Trenton, N. J., James P. Sweeney reports that the Textile Union took the Flatex Corp. by 78 to 42. E. L. Howard of the Aircraft Division of the UAW-CIO sends in an excellent contract won by the union for workers at the Goodyear Aircraft Co. in Akron.

The Record

During 1941 the membership jumped from 8,795 to 17,736.

Good standing climbed from 67% to 96%.

Cash in the bank increased from $33,435 to $79,094.

John Hancock In National CIO Pact

New York, Jan. 17—The first national union pact with a major insurance company, negotiated between the John Hancock Life Insurance Co. and the United Office & Professional Workers has gone into effect.

It provides pay increases and effective grievance and arbitration machinery for industrial agents of the company in all areas where UOPWA organization exists, including some 1,000 men in Greater New York, and 500 in Boston.

The agreement will be extended automatically to any area where the union establishes a majority representation among Hancock agents.

Compensation clauses provide for increased commissions averaging $3.55 a week per man, effective Jan .1. Other terms call for two weeks' vacation and arbitration on all firings.

The contract was negotiated in Boston, the company's home office, by a nationally elected union committee representing Hancock agents from all organized areas and headed by Lewis Merrill, UOPWA president.

Union Shop Pact

Minneapolis—A union shop pact covering workers at the Minneapolis & Moline Co's new shell plant has been signed by the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

'We Need Aluminum'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17—Six months ago the CIO Aluminum Workers of America offered a plan to the OPM—a plan to increase drastically the supply of the nation's most precious metal. Aluminum is vital to plane construction and to hundreds of other war materials—but dangerous shortages still exist, and the union's plan still gets the brushoff from OPM.

The following article was written by the research director of the aluminum union—and it shows how matters stand today:

By BEN FISCHER

December marked the entrance of America into the war. The conduct of this war and the rapid victory of our nation concerns every union man vitally. Aluminum workers come closer to their own backyard when they make it their special concern to see to it that this nation produces sufficient aluminum to build an adequate military force. Labor does not want this war to drag out, draining our energies, hammering down our standard of living, killing off our boys and destroying immense resources.

One of the great problems facing America today is whether aluminum production is being increased to fit our actual military requirements or whehter military needs are being adjusted downward to fit an inadequate aluminum supply. Aluminum workers through their union consider it their patriotic duty to help answer this question realistically and constructively.

Situation Last Summer

According to esimates last summer by high OPM officials, the supply of aluminum by our military forces for 1942 was 1,400,000,000 pounds. This rough estimate did not consider essential civilian needs and indirect military requirements. Since that time, the U. S. A. has pledged aid to Russia and has itself entered the war. No new estimates have been announced but President Roosevelt has repeatedly demanded the production of more planes.

As a result of the disclosures made by the Senate Truman Committee and the Aluminum Workers of America, some steps have been taken to increase the production of aluminum. We may barely reach the figure set in the first part of 1941 of 1,400,000,000 pounds of aluminum for 1942. We know of no plans to increase that supply for 1942 to take care of new military responsibilities.

As we enter 1942, our total aluminum producing capacity is about 750 million pounds annually. If present construction schedules for new plants can be met and if the new plants can begin capacity operations within a few weeks of their opening, we will be able to produce 350 million pounds in these new plants during 1942. In judging whether this figure can be achieved, remember that some of these plants will be operated by companies which are new to the reduction business.

In addition to this possible 1,100,000,000 pounds from existing and new plant facilities, we are expecting some aluminum from Canada. It is very difficult to estimate what to expect from this source. The most optimistic figures are 200 to 300 million pounds. This means a maximum supply of 1,400,000,000 pounds and it is entirely possible that this figure may be cut as much as 300,000,000 pounds.

These figures prove that the estimates of last Spring and Summer cannot possibly be increased during 1942 despite the declaration of war and the opening of the Far Eastern front—unless new rapid expansion is inaugurated immediately. It is probably too late for this to improve the situation for 1942 anyway.

By the beginning of 1943, thanks to the government's huge investments in aluminum expansion, the total domestic capacity will be above one and a half billion pounds of aluminum. If this capacity production is achieved throughout the year, and if we are able to import aluminum from Canada, we will be able to expand slightly the manufacture of war equipment requiring aluminum, provided that it is not found that indirect military needs, essential civilian defense needs and possible increased aid to our Allies cut so far into our supply as to permit no actual expansion of our own military manufacture.

It is certainly possible that our experiences in the war will point to the need for more planes, lighter field equipment for the Army, and increased use of aluminum products for the Navy. We must at least be prepared to fulfill such needs. Therefore, increased aluminum becomes an absolute necessity.

Investigation Needed

Careful, unbiased study of the over-all requirements for aluminum would surely reveal that the AWA claim that three billion pounds are needed annually is justified. Therefore, the AWA is demanding that the government set up an investigating commission, made up of representatives of industry, labor and the government, to ascertain actual aluminum requirements and supply.

The AWA is convinced that such an investigation would prove the need for MORE ALUMINUM TODAY. To get speedy action in the public interest and to assure the maximum use of existing facilities, the AWA has proposed that the government set up an Aluminum Industry Council and a program to guide such a council. We must increase our bauxite supply; we must have new reduction plants as soon as they can be constructed; aluminum must be put to the best possible use in the shortest possible time to produce the military implements for victory over Fascism.

Firm 'Bets' Man Ineligible For Union, Loses $325!

Palmer, Tenn., Jan. 17—It pays to belong to the CIO and to have the CIO actively interested in the rights and welfare of working men and women.

Ted Long, office employe of the Tennessee Consolidated Coal Company, is loudly testifying to that truth. Long is a member of Local 319, United Retail, Wholesale and Dept. Store Employes, but the company protested he was not eligible to membership in the CIO, and continued to pay him 30c an hour. The union took the case in hand, challenged the company's position and offered to submit the case to arbitration if the company would agree to pay Long 50c per hour in case the union won the case.

On Jan. 8 the Arbitration Board met in Chattanooga to decide the Ted Long case. The union was represented by Paul R. Christopher, secretary of the Tennessee State CIO Council; the company sent its superintendent, Everett Roberts, to present its arguments to the Board chairman, Judge L. D. Miller.

LONG WON

Result: Judge Miller declared Long eligible to membership and entitled to the benefits of the agreement between the union and company.

This meant Long could take the obligation of membership, and get $325 in back pay, the difference between 30c and 50c per hour for the first 40 hours of each week since July 1, 1941, and the difference between 45c and 75c per hour for an average of 15 hours overtime each week since last July, or $12.50 per week for 26 weeks and 50c an hour from now on.

Salt Workers Reject 'Sugar', Vote CIO

DETROIT, Jan. 17—District 50, United Mine Workers, continued its march of organization in Michigan by winning an NLRB election at the Diamond Crystal Salt Company (Division of General Foods Corp.) at St. Clair, near here. The CIO union gained a 60% majority, with the AFL running behind with only 1% of the entire vote. Exact figures were 168 for District 50, 108 for No Union and 4 votes for the AFL.

Announcement of the victory was made by Ray Thomason, Regional Director of District 50. Stanley Dobry, Field Representative, was in charge of the campaign at the Diamond Company.

The company agreed to an NLRB election some time ago, but this move was blocked by the AFL, which entered the picture in an attempt to obstruct CIO organization among these workers. Because of the AFL intervention, the NLRB ordered a hearing. The AFL representatives did not attend the hearing but demanded a place on the ballot after the election was ordered. In order to speed settlement of the entire matter, District 50 agreed to AFL participation in the election.

COMPANY CAMPAIGN

With the election date set, the company began a campaign to sway its workers away from the union. Bonuses and wage rates were granted and the employes were tendered a banquet by the management. Many grievances which had piled up through the years were settled. These tactics did not fool the workers, as the result of the election indicated.

In announcing that the company will be asked to immediately start negotiations for a contract, Dobry said, "It is a credit to the intelligence of the Diamond Crystal workers that in spite of the subtle anti-union campaign instituted by the company they were not fooled, nor could they be bought off." The overwhelming victory for District 50 was proof that they realize that only through a strong union can they really receive protection.

In commenting on the victory Thomason stated that, "The win at Diamond Crystal Salt is in line with the policy begun by District 50 in this state to bring the benefits of honest unionism to thousands of workers as yet untouched by organization. We are doing a job of organizing and we are proud to add Diamond Crystal to a long list of victories for those who toil."

U. S. Appeal to Company Averts Coast Transit Strike

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 17—An eleventh-hour proposal by John Steelman, director of the U. S. Conciliation Service, requesting the Los Angeles Railway Corp, as a "patriotic duty" to reinstate discharged employes, averted a scheduled strike last week.

CIO Transport Workers Union, whose members had been fired by the company, immediately agreed to the Steelman proposal, which postponed the strike call for five days.

Company officials said they accepted the proposal late Friday.

Steelman wired his request an hour before the midnight strike deadline set by the union Thursday. Meeting at a pre-strike rally, union members accepted the recommendation.

100 DISCHARGED

More than a hundred CIO men had been discharged for failure to join an AFL union, with which the company signed a closed shop agreement—without benefit of an election. Demands of the CIO were that these men be reinstated and an election ordered. Steelman's request asked that the discharges be halted and the fired men be put back on the job immediately.

Prior to the scheduling of their strike deadline, CIO workers had appealed to local, state and federal agencies to intervene and to arrange for a peaceful settlement. Each offer of arbitration by the union was turned down by company representatives. The CIO said it took strike action "as a last recourse."

COURT AGAINST AFL

Earlier Thursday, as the time for the CIO's scheduled walkout neared, the California Supreme Court reversed a decision by a Superior Court here which had upheld the validity of the AFL agreement.

CIO men hailed the decision by California's highest court as a victory, and said that it meant that the closed shop agreement could not be enforced by the company.

Chicago, Jan. 17—CIO's biggest election victory in recent weeks was marked up by the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee in a Natl. Labor Relations Board poll at the local Swift & Co. plant when the CIO union took a more than two-to-one lead over an "independent."

The score was 2,662 for the PWOC, 1,180 for the independent, and 661 for no union. The PWOC has agreements with many units of the "Big Four" in the packing industry, following similar election victories in the past.

CIO Sweeps Harvester Poll

Richmond, Ind., Jan. 17—Undaunted by its long relentless compaign waged to destroy their union, the workers of the International Harvester plant here turned out to vote a smashing 2-1 victory for the CIO in a National Labor Relations Board election held this week.

With 39 Harvester workers still facing jail on framed-up charges growing out of the attack made on CIO unionists by police and armed gangs during a strike last winter, the men and women of the plant went to the polls and voted 515 for the CIO Farm Equipment Workers to 262 for the independent union. The vote for no union was 10.

The election victory gives the CIO union sole bargaining rights for some 1100 employes in the Richmond plant, bringing the number of Harvester plants now under the CIO Farm Equipment Workers banner to six.

Bond Sales Boss Fights Own Workers

Deupree is president of Procter & Gamble Mfg. Co. (Ivory soap, Crisco, etc.), which owns the local Buckeye mill and 13 others. On Christmas Eve he locked out the 150 Little Rock workers because they had revolted against Procter & Gamble's notorious paternalism and signed up with the United Cannery Agricultural Packing & Allied Workers (CIO).

REVOKED STRIKE ORDER

Exasperated by a futile struggle to force an NLRB election, the workers voted in November to strike. Then came Pearl Harbor, and the strike plan was rescinded. But Deupree's company, which holds substantial war contracts, apparently had not heard of the ban on strikes and lockouts.

Local 98 has asked Associate Director-General Sidney Hillman of OPM to take action.

Net profit of Procter & Gamble for the year ending June 30, 1941, was $27,581,523, equivalent to $1,902 for each of the 14,500 workers. Under the widely ballyhooed profit-sharing plan the 7,500 employes who own 2% of the company's common stock received dividends that averaged $71.

SARONGS TO BONDS: Dorothy Lamour of the movies threw aside her famous sarong for more conventional dress as she took a temporary, full-time job helping the national campaign to sell U. S. Defense Savings Bonds.

Gifts To Army Boys 'Hit The Spot,' Union Learns From Letters

LYONS, Ill., Jan. 17—When Local 719 of the CIO United Automobile, Aircraft & Agricultural Implement Workers decided to send Christmas presents to members serving in the armed forces, they hit on a mighty pleasing idea for the boys in khaki.

Local Pres. Terry Kendal said a number of letters had been received expressing thanks for the union's gift, which included a carton of cigarettes, razor blades, a book of stamps, copies of The CIO NEWS, and cash.

Here are a couple of the "thank you notes" that show how the Army boys feel about gifts from home:

"I received your wonderful present which pleased me very much. It really is wonderful to know that you are remembered back home by your fellow workers.

"I enjoy Army life and at present I am attending the largest Air Corps Technical School. In another two months I will graduate as an air merchanic.

"Some day, I hope to join all my friends and fellow workers at Electro-Motive, where I enjoyed working for almost three years.

Again, may I express my sincere thanks for the carton of cigarettes, blades and stamps, three of the most widely used items of a soldier. The CIO NEWS and Labor Today are both very good reading material and good to keep informed about Labor back home. I enjoy them so please keep sending them.

Wishing you success and Victory in the coming year, I remain,

Fraternally yours,

Pvt. Frank J. Demski,
Chanute Field, Ill."

"Thanks a million for the Xmas card and cigarettes. They sure come in handy. We are in a combat zone and cannot get out to buy any. The only smokes we get are those the chaplain can bring to us and those that are sent to us.

"I sure appreciate the magazine Labor Today and The CIO NEWS. We don't have a lot of time to read, but I get to read the biggest part of it. A few of the men here enjoy reading The CIO NEWS, so the paper is really gone over before we are through with it.

"Incidentally, I don't believe I notified you, but I have been promoted to the rank of Corporal. We have seen a little action, but nothing much to talk about. All of the men in my company are really anxious to get into the thick of it. I hope they don't keep us waiting too long.

Fraternally,

Corp. R. Jarchow."

Union Label On Gelatin

Camden, N. J., Jan. 17—Amidst pledges of continued satisfactory relationships, a contract has just been signed with the management of Charles B. Knox Jell Company by its employes, who are members of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America, CIO.

The UCAPAWA Union Label will now be on all the products of this company as a result of this contract.

Consumer Bureau In Detroit

Washington, Jan. 17 (FP)—Opening of Detroit's first consumer information center to provide local citizens with advice on wartime consumer problems, was announced here by Dan A. West, deputy director of the consumer division of the Office of Price Administration, and E. W. McFarland, chairman of the Greater Detroit Consumers Council.

The information center, it was announced, will maintain a program to aid consumers and consumer organizations in protecting the standard of living during this war period. It will cooperate with federal, state and local authorities in aiding the consumers to carry out his role in the nation's war effort.

The center is now ready to supply speakers on consumer subjects, arrange displays, exhibits, demonstrations and classes, assist in planning programs for groups, aid in finding the answers to consumer problems, and provide personal consultation to individuals.

CIO Executive Board Hears Unity Proposal

(See Story, Page Three)

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 — The CIO Executive Board meets today in a special session called by Pres. Philip Murray to hear the "viewpoints" of John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers on a plan for relations with the AFL.

Murray called the meeting after his arrival in New York, where he came to attend steel union contract negotiations with four Little Steel corporations. Lewis' proposal for "accouplement" of the CIO and AFL was released while the CIO president was en route to this city.

In a reply to the mine union leader, Murray pointed out that "as you are well aware, all arrangements in behalf of CIO with reference to unity with the AFL will necessarily have to be initiated through the office of the President of the CIO."

The Industrial Union Council has arranged a series of 13 weekly half-hour programs from 10:30 to 11 p. m. on Friday nights over Station WCAM.

The program will consist of transcribed music by well known orchestras, bands and carol groups in 15 minute dramatic episodes prepared by the U. S. Treasury Dept.

BOND AS PRIZE

Each week a $25 defense bond will be awarded for the best 100-word essay on "Why I should buy a defense bond." The prize will be presented to the winner during the course of each program.

Free tickets for admission to the broadcast will be allocated to each local union. Holders of tickets, in order to see the broadcast, will have to purchase a 25c defense stamp at the studio.

Principal speaker at the first broadcast will be John Green, head of the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

Shoe Workers Win International Pact, Predict More

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 24—The International Shoe Co., largest of its kind in the world, has signed its first CIO contract covering a shoe manufacturing plant.

The pact, covering 1,100 workers at the St. Charles, Mo., plant, was signed with Local 187 of the United Shoe Workers of America. It marks a major victory for the CIO's organization drive in the shoe industry, commenced late last year.

International's only previous contract with the USWA had covered a sole and counter factory in St. Louis which employs specialized and skilled workers.

LIFTS WAGES

The St. Charles agreement lifts wages 2½ cents an hour and gives the union the right to seek further increases during the life of the agreement. In addition it provides grievance and seniority systems, the eight-hour day, overtime and two hours' pay if an employe is called to the factory when there is no work for him.

Meanwhile Director Walter Harris of the shoe campaign revealed that the union had added another to its string of election victories at International plants, gaining a 73 per cent majority at Mt. Vernon, Ill. The USWA received 423 votes to only 151 against.

TO ASK MORE POLLS

Elections will soon be requested at Flora, Ill., Windsor, Mo., and Cape Girardeau, Mo., employing a total of close to 2,300 workers.

Priorities Hit Auto Union Labels!

Detroit, Jan. 24—The CIO union label which was riveted on the engines of medium tanks that smashed Hitler's hordes in Africa is no longer being affixed.

Officials of the auto worker union said it's not because the union-shop union-label contract with Continental Motors has run out. It's the supply of labels that has run out.

Priorities have held up manufacture of additional labels. A release has been obtained and as soon as government red tape permits, the motors will be labeled again.

GARDNER, Mass., Jan. 24—Workers employed at the Heywood-Wakefield plant here, largest and oldest furniture company in New England, voted 737 for the CIO United Furniture Workers to 518 for an independent union in a poll conducted by the National Labor Relations Board.

"This victory brings approximately 1,400 new members into UFW Local 154, making it one of the largest local unions in this part of the country," a statement issued by the local declared.

"Victory at Heywood's was most important for the union because the company has always stood as a symbol for open shoppers who were always ready to point to this big furniture plant and use it as an argument for not granting way increases and a union shop contract."

The local gives main credit for the victory "to the Heywood shop stewards who worked day and night in sub-zero weather passing out handbills and visiting workers in their homes to bring them the message of unionism."

Fishermen, Beached by Japs, Buying Bonds

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 24—Although temporarily unable to work because of Japanese submarines lurking where only sardines should be, 81 members of Local 33, International Fishermen, have purchased $44,000 worth of National Defense bonds.

The rush to show their patriotism with dollars was started by a member who had been unemployed two years. He bought $5 worth of Defense stamps. The average purchase was $550, and the top was $10,000, the entire life savings of one member.

PROTEST LAY-OFFS: Some of the 3,000 members of the CIO auto union at the Fisher Body Works in Lansing, Mich., who demonstrated against unemployment on the grounds of the state capitol this week. Harvester Dispute To War Board

Chicago, Jan. 24—Hearings on the ten months' dispute between International Harvester and the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee are scheduled to come before the new National War Labor Board next Wednesday, it was stated at FEWOC headquarters here. Union officials said the case was "the oldest unsettled labor controversy on the government's docket."

Involved are 20,000 workers in three Harvester plants in Chicago, East Moline and Rock Falls, Illinois, and 1100 in the Richmond, Ind. plant where the FEWOC recently won sole bargaining rights in a Labor Board election.

Also to be included in the hearing are the demands of some 6000 workers in two Harvester truck plants at Springfield, Ohio, and Ft. Wayne, Ind., where the CIO United Automobile Workers has sole bargaining rights, and two AFL locals in plants of the company in Rock Island, Ill., and Milwaukee, Wis., employing about 7,000.

All of the unions are united in their demand for a wage increase and a union shop. So far Harvester has signed contracts covering only the Chicago tractor plant and the Ft. Wayne truck plant.

U. S. Plans Regional Confabs

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24—A series of regional conferences at which government, labor and industry leaders can discuss methods of increasing the output of war materials was announced today by Sidney Hillman, head of the War Production Board's labor division.

"The principal objective of the sessions," he said, "will be to bring labor organizations into the war effort on their home grounds."

Conferences will be held February 7-8 at Philadelphia for unions in eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware; Feb. 21-25 at Pittsburgh for western Pennsylvania and northern West Virginia; and Feb. 28-Mar. 1 at Columbus, Ohio, for unions in that state.

Similar meetings are to be held in California, Colorado, Washington, Tennessee and Alabama.

CAREY TO SPEAK

Prominent figures in the government's war agencies, in industry and labor will address the meetings, the announcement said, with CIO Sec. James B. Carey scheduled to speak at both the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh assemblies.

The meetings will follow the pattern of highly-successful conference held at the Harvard Business School in Boston last December. That two-day parley was attended by 436 delegates representing 119 CIO and AFL unions in 59 Massachusetts communities.

Texas CIO Holds War Conference

Houston, Tex., Jan. 24— CIO unions in the Lone Star State have formed a special Defense Coordinating Committee following a conference called by M. J. Dineen, regional director.

The committee, headed by Jack Owens of the United Mine Workers, will consider means of winning added support for the Murray Industry Council Plan and for winning a full voice for labor on government production agencies and in the civilian defense apparatus.

TELLS OF DRIVE

Edwin S. Smith, director of the Oil Workers Organization Campaign addressed the meeting and pointed to the necessity for workers in the oil industry joining the CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union so that their voice might be heard on the various regional Petroleum Coordinating Boards set up by the government.

The conference voted full support for the oil organizing drive, with the unions pledging special assistance as it is needed.

In another resolution the labor delegates asked that the Harris County Association for Industrial Peace give representation to labor.

"The only workable plan for industrial peace is one which gives all labor equal voice," the resolution declared, pointing to the recent no-strike pledge adopted by CIO and AFL at the government-labor-industry conference in Washington.

Leaders To Speak In Connecticut

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 24—President Thomas R. Molloy and Secretary John J. Driscoll of the Connecticut CIO Industrial Union Council will be among the main speakers at the sixth annual conference on Social Labor Legislation to be held here Feb. 8. Lieutenant Governor Odell Shepard is scheduled to give the keynote address.

Organizations throughout the state have been invited to the conference, Chairman Daniel Howard said. The group's aim is "to stimulate production of war materials and aid in the solution of problems resulting from the war emergency."

WASTED MANPOWER: With the nation's war program calling for more workers, thousands of auto workers in Michigan are out of jobs through failure of the industry to accept CIO recommendations for gradual retooling to defense production. Here are some of the jobless auto workers applying for compensation at an office of the Michigan Unemployment Compensation Commission. Auto plants' idleness has thrown additional thousands in related industries out of work.

Criticism Ain't Nice, Says NAM Head, Whitewashing Record Of Industry

NEW YORK, Jan. 24—Criticize industry's failure to achieve all-out production of war materials and you're guilty of "undisguised sabotage"!

That was the hopeful whopper let loose this week by W. P. Witherow, head of the reactionary Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers in a last-ditch effort to still the criticism running through the country in recent weeks.

By Witherow's definition, the Senate Truman Committee, the President of the United States and scores of high government officials, labor spokesmen and a good many industrialists would all fit into the so-called "sabotage" classification.

The NAM boss took six columns in an issue of the New York Herald-Tribune to air his views and whitewash the record of big business. He criticized labor, he criticized government, blamed them for hampering management!

But Witherow was painfully silent about most of the criticism of the defense program issued by Senator Truman's defense committee. That report insisted with abundant facts that the blame lies principally on big-business and its dollar-a-year lieutenants in the ranks of the government defense agencies.

End 'Profits As Usual' Stall, Carey Urges Business Group

NEW YORK, Jan. 24—Before an audience composed largely of big business men, Sec. James B. Carey this week warned that needed war production and business as usual methods can't go hand in hand—and the sooner we get over the idea the better.

In a speech to the Natl. Industrial Conference Board, Carey pointed out that Donald Nelson, new war production chief, "knows our production program didn't fail for lack of resources, for lack of manpower, skills, managerial ability, or ingenuity. We're the richest country in the world. We've got the most iron, the most steel, the most coal, the most cotton, the most shipbuilding facilities, the best design, the best production techniques. We've got the most energetic, the most intelligent, the most resourceful, the most skillful working force in the world.

"Is it good enough to match the Nipponese and the Nazis?"

It will be, Carey said, when we've finally paid the price for "depression-born theories of scarcity" and selfish interest on the part of corporation big-wigs.

INDUSTRIES AS UNITS

"The basic war industries must be put to work as units, not as collections of individual enterprises," the CIO secretary asserted. "The auto industry, for instance, must be put to work as a unit in the same way as Ford or General Motors or Chrysler operate separately . . .

"Since December 1940, we of the CIO have been asking that all get down to work planning this war job and doing it. Philip Murray, our great president, time and again has offered the full assistance of the CIO. His proposal that councils be set up for each industry, with management and labor represented equally, and with a government representative as chairman, has been called everything from revolution to an open invitation to violate the law."

Despite the name-calling and the efforts to bury the Murray plan, Carey continued, "Steel capacity still isn't expanded, auto plants aren't converted, stockpiles don't exist.

JOB OF PLANNING

"If we are going to win this war of production, the corporations and government can't continue to dodge the fundamental problem of planning."

In a second speech, before a luncheon the Union for Democratic Action, Sec. Carey reiterated the CIO's position of support for price control legislation and its opposition to wage-freezing propositions.

Imposition of price control measures, he declared, would automatically bring a "reasonable control over wage levels" in such a manner as to keep the economic system in adjustment.

"In a competitive economy, wage increases are restrained by price levels, which are held down by competition," he said. "In a non-competitive economy, such as that toward which we have been moving with the development of our giant corporations, and such as is exemplified by the wartime economy as a whole, wage increases are restrained by price ceilings established by corporate or government dictum."

Office Union Wins Raise

New York, Jan. 24— An agreement providing pay increases up to $7.50 a month and other improvements has averted a strike at the Credit Clearing House, according to a statement issued by Local 16, United Office & Professional Workers. The settlement was reached with the aid of the U. S. Conciliation Service.

A previous contract which expired Jan. 3 was extended twice and then negotiations were broken off because the employers refused to arbitrate the differences.

NLRB Hits Shipyard Labor Spies

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 — Spying on union meetings, favoritism to company stooges and other underhanded means used by the Sun Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. of Chester, Pa. "to destroy any trace of legitimate unionism in its plant" were condemned by the National Labor Relations Board last week in an order directing the company to throw out its stooge Employes Association.

The board also ordered the company to stop trying to destroy the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers Union and to reinstate with pay four welders fired for union activity.

LONG HEARINGS

The CIO union filed charges against Sun Shipbuilding in Nov. 1940, and at subsequent hearings held from December to February 1941, the long ugly account of the means used by the company to destroy the union was told in full detail. Harry Campbell, former leader in the company union, who later joined the CIO Shipbuilding union, was the outstanding witness.

Leader of a back to work movement started during a strike in 1936, Campbell told how he was permitted to devote all of his working time for more than two years to activities of the stooge union, the Sun Ship Employes Association.

When the company learned from its spies that Campbell "was endeavoring to effect affiliation of the association with an outside organization," the board stated, "it immediately effected his summary removal from the position of influence held by him in the association since its organization."

Enemy Aliens Must Register

Washington, Jan. 24—Beginning February 2 and running through to Feb. 7, all aliens of German, Italian and Japanese nationality must apply for Identification Certificates at the nearest post office, the U. S. Attorney General ordered this week.

This order applies to Germans, Italians and Japanese living in California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Arizona, Montana, Utah and Idaho. Aliens of these three enemy countries living in other parts of the U. S. must apply in the week beginning Feb. 9.

The Attorney-General explained that the new regulations were as much for the protection of the aliens themselves as for protection of the U. S. from possible sabotage or other hostile acts.

"The objective in issuing identification certificates to aliens of enemy nationalities is the dual one of strengthening our internal safety and protecting the loyal alien, even if he has become technically an alien enemy," Attorney-General Francis T. Biddle said in issuing the order.

Civilian Defense Parley Hears Labor Cite Needs

Washington, Jan. 24—Leaders of unions and of government met here in an all-day session yesterday to consider labor's role in civilian defense.

Representatives of CIO and AFL were present at the parleys, at which James M. Landis, executive of the Office of Civilian Defense, presided. After the morning session, the group lunched at the White House and heard talks by Mrs. Roosevelt, Sidney Hillman, John Brophy—who read a message from CIO President Murray—and AFL Pres. William Green.

Considered at the meeting were questions of labor representation on defense councils, the function of labor advisory committees, representation on state and local defense councils, the role of unions and ladies auxiliaries, plant protection and possible labor contributions to effective community mobilization.

In his message to the conference, President Murray pointed out that "full participation by labor unions and their members, by registration at the volunteer agencies, and cooperation in the entire protection program is definitely the order of the day."

Murray noted that an important part of the OCD's civilian morale program must concern the living conditions of defense workers.

LIVING CONDITIONS

"Where over-crowding begins to occur, as war orders stimulate production, it is essential that well-planned and well-built defense housing communities be constructed at once and be made available as rents which our people can pay.

"It is essential that adequate hospital and other medical and health facilities be provided. It is essential that educational opportunities keep pace with the growth of wartime industrial communities.

"The labor organizations will concern themselves directly with those issues, and properly so. One of the vital contributions that the OCD can make, however, to the whole war effort will be to rally sentiment in the various communities behind programs for the provision of all these facilities which will be needed by working people if they are to do their job as it should be done."

NEW YORK, Jan. 24—The CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee this week asked the four Little Steel corporations to join the rest of the industry in signing union contracts.

The companies have already consented, through a Labor Board stipulation, to sign on the dotted line as soon as agreements are reached. Led by Chairman Philip Murray, the SWOC negotiators are meeting with representatives of Republic, Bethlehem, Youngstown and Inland.

From the four corporations, which employ about 175,000 workers, SWOC is seeking $1-a-day increases, union recognition and the check-off of union dues.

SWOC Sec.-Treas. David McDonald announced that increases of a similar nature will be sought in future negotiations with firms already under contract.

The CIO's big steel union gained sole bargaining rights at the Little Steel companies last summer through Labor Board comparisons of union cards and company payroll lists, and in the case of Bethlehem, through a series of major elections.

The board found the union had an overwhelming majority in all the plants and certified it as exclusive bargaining agent. Negotiations with the companies started several months ago but were postponed after a few preliminary meetings when the United Mine Workers launched its successful campaign for the union shop in the captive mines, many of which are owned by the Little Steel firms.

The Little Steel firms waged a bitter fight against the SWOC during the summer of 1937, using force and violence to counter a strike of several thousand workers. When the strike was ended, the union took its complaint to the NLRB, which conducted a series of hearings that led to decisions accusing the companies of Wagner Act violations.

Armco Hit By NLRB

Washington, Jan. 24—A proposed order requiring the American Rolling Mill Co., Ashland, Ky., to abolish a company-dominated Employe Representation Plan, to reinstate 22 fired workers and to stop discouraging membership in the Steel Workers Organizing Committee has been announced by the National Labor Relations Board.

Under the Board's rules, the parties have 20 days within which to request oral argument before the Board in Washington, and 30 days to file exceptions and briefs.

In its proposed order, the Board charged the company with "vilifying, ridiculing and denouncing unionism" and "shadowing and spying upon union organizers and pilfering union records."

Bonds Sales Zoom

Tarentum, Pa.—CIO workers in the Allegheny Valley industrial area have already purchased nearly $100,000 worth of Defense Savings Bonds, it was estimated today.

CIO Board Meets To Hear Proposal For Unity with AFL

NEW YORK, Jan. 24—Pres. Philip Murray called together the CIO's Executive Board for a special meeting here this morning to discuss proposals for relations with the AFL.

His action followed a surprise letter sent to Murray and to Pres. William Green of the AFL by Pres. John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers. The CIO leader, en route to New York from a brief mid-winter vacation in the south when the Lewis letter was released, announced the CIO board meeting a day later.

Murray sent this letter to Lewis:

"I shall present your communication of Jan. 17 to a meeting of the Executive Board of the CIO scheduled to convene in New York City Jan. 24.

"I am sure the Executive Board will be pleased to have you attend and present your viewpoints. As you are well aware, all arrangements in behalf of the CIO with reference to unity with the AFL will necessarily have to be initiated through the office of the President of the CIO."

STEEL PARLEYS

President Murray was in New York with leaders of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, of which he is chairman, for the resumption of long-delayed contract negotiations with "Little Steel"—Republic, Bethlehem, Inland and Youngstown.

At the press conference where he made public his letter to UMW President Lewis, Murray made clear that his immediate job would be the negotiation of the contracts with the last major holdouts in the steel industry, which he described as "necessarily of more importance than any other matters now pending."

"So far as the president of the CIO is concerned," he said, "it is his purpose to give all of his time to the steel workers' negotiations until they are concluded. That, of course, you will understand, relegates matters of so-called peace to secondary importance."

During the week, the CIO president made a hurried trip to Washington at the invitation of President Roosevelt for a discussion of the unity problem.

HITS 'TIMES' STORY

Murray lashed out at a widely discussed "dope story" in the New York Times, which claimed that Secretary George Meany of the AFL would head the united labor movement, with Murray serving as its secretary-treasurer. The CIO president labeled the yarn as "newspaper bunk," adding:

"No one is privileged to trade me. Jobs are not sufficiently alluring where principles are involved."

The story also received sharp criticism from AFL President William Green, speaking in behalf of the AFL's executive council.

LEWIS' LETTER

In his letter to Murray and Green, Lewis asserted that the AFL and CIO have achieved "proportions demonstrating their ability to live and endure, even though engaged in rivalry and conflict with each other." He said that "accouplement"—a joining together—under competent leadership would be advantageous and added that the situation has changed since the breakdown of the last CIO-AFL unity negotiations in the spring of 1939.

Lewis addressed his letter "as a member of the standing negotiating committee of the CIO, acting under authority of its third constitutional convention" in November, 1940, at Atlantic City, N. J. Other members of the committee at the time of the 1939 discussions with the AFL were Murray and President Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, now on leave as associate director-general of the OPM.

Members of the AFL committee are Daniel Tobin, head of the teamsters; Harry Bates of the bricklayers, and William Hutcheson of the carpenters, who was recently elected to fill the place of Matthew Woll. Woll asked to be relieved from a place on the committee because of his duties on the War Labor Board.

Unions Back Murray Position

New York, Jan. 24—As leaders of affiliated unions headed for New York today to attend the special CIO executive board meeting, a number of officials endorsed the position taken by President Philip Murray in his letter to President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers.

The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, through President Albert Fitzgerald, announced:

"We will support President Murray's position."

The UE statement noted that while unity must preserve the industrial unions of the CIO without craft division and permit them to grow.

Another message of support to Murray came from Reid Robinson, head of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers and a CIO vice-president.

The auto workers executive board, meeting in New York, voted full support to President Murray after hearing an exposition of his views on labor unity.

Murray Backs U. S. Plan To Aid Conversion Victims

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—A program to provide emergency relief for workers made idle by shutdowns as plants switch over to war production, today had full CIO support.

In a letter to all affiliates, Pres. Philip Murray urged all unions to win backing of the proposed measure from their Congressmen. The program, worked out by the federal government with the assistance of the CIO Social Security Committee, would permit special benefit payments running up to $24 a week for 26 weeks.

Pres. Murray's letter came shortly after a White House announcement of approval for the program, estimated to entail expenditure of about three hundred million dollars.

"This appropriation, together with regular unemployment compensation benefits, will result in displaced employes receiving total weekly benefits approximating 60% of their average weekly wage, up to a maximum of $24 a week for 26 weeks," he said.

BETTER TRAINING PROGRAM

Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, pointed out after discussing the program with Pres. Roosevelt, that utmost speed is necessary in getting the program under way. He estimated that workers in the automobile industry might be out of work as long as six months before the industry attains its maximum work force on war production.

The federal program is in line with repeated CIO demands for special relief appropriations to handle the emergency during the "change-over" period. Leaders of the CIO United Automobile, Aircraft & Agricultural Workers, whose membership has been particularly hard hit, have pressed the point in numerous conferences with U. S. officials.

In Michigan the UAW-CIO has been calling for increased payments under the state unemployment insurance program. The commission's reserve funds are swollen as the result of heavy employment during the past two years, and the union has maintained that the present emergency calls for greater jobless benefits.

Blow For Martin Dies:

CIO Sweeps Key Election In Texas Oil Drive

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 — The CIO's Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, swinging into high gear after several weeks of initial spade work, hung up its first major victory today.

Director Edwin S. Smith announced an overwhelming majority vote for the CIO in a National Labor Relations Board election at the Texas Co. refinery, Port Arthur, Tex. The results:

CIO	1351
No Union	781

The vote for the CIO Oil Workers International Union blacked out efforts by the AFL to steal the thunder of the CIO campaign, designed to bring another of the nation's great mass production industries into the industrial union column. The AFL had nine organizers at work in Port Arthur for several days prior to the poll.

The CIO gained a plurality in a craft unit poll in the welding department, but was less successful in three other small elections ordered by the NLRB.

REFINERY CENTER

Port Arthur, one of the two largest cities in labor-baiting Rep. Martin Dies' home district, is important refining center. Near the Texas Co. plant are refineries of the Gulf Oil Co. and the Atlantic Oil Co., while in nearby Beaumont the Socony-Vacuum Co. operates the big Magnolia refinery.

Smith revealed that organizing activity is already under way at Pan-America at the South port Refinery in Texas City and at the Humble Oil Co. in Baytown.

Americans All

President Philip Murray has recently called general CIO attention to the fact that many workers are being discharged from their jobs, or are being discriminated against in hiring on account of bearing "foreign-sounding names" or being of foreign birth.

He points out that all responsible national authorities, from the President down, are emphatically opposed to such policies as being unjust, stupid, wasteful, un-American and playing into the hands of the enemy.

In this war, as never before, our country needs the services of all its loyal population, both foreign-born and native-born, both Negro and white. Nor is there such a thing as a "foreign name" in a country whose population has been drawn, in earlier generations if not in the present one, from every part of the world.

The test of true Americanism has never been the accident of birth or national origin. It is rather loyalty such as is shown as much by most of the foreign-born who have sought a haven of liberty in this land, as by those who were born here. To discriminate in employment is to create disunity and to follow the precepts of Hitler. It is also frequently a cloak for union-busting and other anti-labor purposes.

The stated policy of the federal government is that there shall be no discrimination in the employment of workers in defense industries because of race, creed, color or national origin. And this goes also for discrimination against Negro workers, against which the CIO has so repeatedly protested.

In uncovering such discriminations, and in taking them up with the employers, with the national CIO and with the federal authorities, CIO unions are performing a patriotic national service besides doing their labor duty.

Civilian Defense

If ever there was a total war, this is one. Bombs that fall from the air do not distinguish between soldiers and civilians. The troops at the front in modern mechanized warfare are completely dependent upon industrial production behind the lines. Everyone, whether in khaki or mufti, must do his or her part if victory if to be won.

There are three main sectors to such total war—the armed forces, industrial production and civilian defense.

The last-named of these three will assume ever-increasing importance, as the United States becomes more and more deeply involved in the war. For the term civilian defense, in its broadest sense, covers all the multitudinous activities necessary to defend our cities and industries from air raids, sabotage and other forms of enemy attack.

It also includes rationing, Red Cross work, fire protection, consumer protection and every other form of organized civilian activity necessary to maintain the morale and welfare of the home population.

As yet this work of civilian defense is in its infancy. Where it involves thousands today it will involve millions tomorrow. Every organization must do its part, and labor unions should be in the very forefront, because of the importance of the great section of the population they represent, and because of the invaluable contribution which the organizational experience of their members enables them to render.

John Brophy, director of industrial union councils, who represents the CIO in its relations with the Office of Civilian Defense, is engaged in arousing all Councils of the CIO to the importance of actively participating in this work; and many state and local bodies have engaged themselves most vigorously in it.

It is particularly important, Brophy points out, that labor be fully represented in the network of state, county and city defense councils now being established throughout the country, as well as on the rationing committees which will exert more and more widespread influence as more shortages develop. He also urges all individual members to register with the volunteer agencies for participation in air raid precaution work and the many other community activities which will become necessary.

Every American owes it to himself, his family and his country to do his part in civilian defense. Labor participation and representation will insure against lopsided direction of the program and neglect of the interests of the working people, besides assuring maximum effectiveness for victory.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

CONFIRMATION OF many of the charges made by the CIO is found in the recent comprehensive report of the Truman Senate committee investigating the war production program.

Though conservative on the whole in its composition, this committee was compelled by the mass of factual evidence which it assembled to draw the most scorching conclusions about big business domination, profiteering, bungling and lack of planning and failure to heed labor's suggestions.

The committee's report on the influence of the dollar-a-year men was devastating. It pointed out that they are in effect "lobbyists" for their companies; that large companies obtain very substantial benefits from having their executives in such jobs; and that in general the dollar-a-year men tend to reflect big business attitudes in the placing of contracts and with respect to government competition, taxation, amortization, financing of new plants and the margin of profit that should be allowed.

It was recommended that the dollar-a-year men should either give up their government jobs or sever their connections with private industry and live on government salaries.

The Truman committee called attention again and again to the enormous war profits that are being made, notably in shipbuilding, aircraft and the auto industry. It noted that General Motors, Chrysler and Ford made combined profits of $408,000,000 in 1940, and of $430,000,000 in the first nine months of 1941.

From such profit figures it concluded that "however heavy the tax program is, companies which obtain large defense contracts obtain increases in their profits to such an extent that they are more than able to pay the increased tax and, in effect, are in a position where the tax involves no sacrifice whatsoever to them."

Referring to past defense strikes, the committee expressed its belief that "many of the strikes for wage increases were inspired by noting the tremendous profits being reported by companies having defense contracts."

One of the worst features of the Truman committee's report was the boost it gave to the anti-labor bills introduced by two of its members, Senators Connally and Ball.

In this connection, the report created a most false impression as to the extent of defense stoppages by declaring that 26 million man-days were lost in defense industries through strikes between June, 1940, and October, 1941.

The fact of the matter is that this was a rough estimate by some committee witnesses of the total number of man-days lost in all strikes, non-defense as well as defense; and that government figures show only 2½ million man-days were lost in the 17-month period through strikes that substantially affected defense production.

Confirmation of CIO charges on the misconduct of the defense program has also come recently from many authoritative sources as well as the Truman committee. The excellent report of the Tolan House committee investigating defense migration, for instance, was full of facts and outspoken conclusions which bore out nearly everything that CIO leaders have been saying for a year or more about the maladministration of the production program.

As to the monopoly tendencies evident in the misallocation of contracts, resulting in bottlenecks and idle plants, as the CIO has so frequently complained, recent OPM figures speak more eloquently than words.

One hundred large companies, for instance, received 82.6 per cent of the government armament commitments in the 15 months ending Sept. 1, amounting to more than 12½ billion dollars; while a total of only about 2½ billion dollars was distributed among 3,022 companies in contracts of $50,000 or more.

Or consider the annual report of Asst. Attorney-General Thurman Arnold. "Looking back over 10 months of defense effort," he says, "we can now see how much it has been hampered by the attitude of powerful groups dominating basic industries who have feared to expand their production because expansion would endanger their future control of industry.

"These groups have been afraid to develop new production themselves. They have been afraid to let others come into the field. . . .

"Anti-trust investigations during the past year have shown that there is not an organized basic industry in the U. S. which has not been restricting production by some device or other in order to avoid what they call 'the ruinous over-production after the war.' "

Labor Union Funds 'Shock' Tory Probers—Big Profits Get Yawn

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24—Huge profits by corporations working on war orders and considerable progress by labor unions are both noted in the report of the House Naval Affairs Committee released here this week—the one with mild disapproval, the other with genuine horror.

The profiteering, while deplored by the committee, simply calls for "some method of profit limitation." The union situation, however, is a much more serious matter in the committee's mind, since it asks drastic anti-union legislation to break up the "concentration of wealth" by the unions, and other stringent laws to prohibit strikes, force unions to register, etc.

The anti-union background of the committee chairman, Poll-taxer Carl Vinson of George and its chief counsel, Edmund Toland, who acted as counsel for the Smith smear committee that "investigated" the Natl. Labor Relations Board and came out with plans for abolishing the Wagner Act, explains much of the labor-baiting in the report.

MINORITY DISSENT

The report, signed by about half the committee members, was accompanied by two minority reports, one signed by seven members and the other by Rep. Joseph B. Shannon of Missouri. Of the two, Shannon's report does by far the more thorough job, while the seven man dissent is content with citing the recent agreement between labor and employers to submit disputes to arbitration as reasons for refraining from "criticism of either or both."

Shannon's dissent flatly accused the committee of being "unfair to labor and grossly inaccurate" in its assertion that "the greatest single cause for delay in the defense program has been the strike situation."

This prejudiced statement, Shannon pointed out, entirely ignored the fact that capital's prolonged sitdown, during which corporations refused even to bid on defense orders until guaranteed exorbitant profits, was the real cause for delays in the program, plus inefficiencies in government departments.

RESOURCES GROWING

The majority's principal gripe against the labor unions was based on the fact that their financial condition, gleaned from replies to a long questionnaire sent out (with threats) by Toland, shows substantial improvement over recent months. This condition, showing that the unions of the U. S. have roughly $82,000,000 in funds, was responsible for the majority's outburst about the "concentration of wealth" that must be broken up by anti-union legislation.

Writing on Toland's part in this, Shannon said: "The comment that he makes in the report on this situation is that it is 'startling.' What reason is there for applying such a conclusion to a unionized movement which shows that it is solvent and able to care for its members and to conduct its affairs in a businesslike, orderly way"?

BLOW AT UNITY

Both Shannon and the seven-man minority make a point of the report's attack on national unity in singling out the labor movement for special persecution, despite the fact that workers in America are solidly behind the national war effort and are making the major contribution to the battle for production.

". . . we cannot sign this report unless there is revision of conclusions and statements regarding labor," the seven minority members said. "Immediately following the outbreak of war by the act of aggression of Japan in her attack on Pearl Harbor, both capital and labor through their proper representatives and spokesmen pledged themselves to settle by mediation and arbitration all disputes for the duration of the war."

The same pledge is cited by Shannon, who adds: "This labor section of the report, therefore, is irrelevant and could serve no worthy purpose at this time. It merely injects a disturbing factor in the present unified situation."

PROFITS CITED

The section on profits makes much more valuable reading, showing an average of 7.99 percent, with 8.33 per cent as the figure for contracts still uncompleted—proof that profits are up and going up further.

Several individual contracts netted their owners as much as 247 percent, while other companies made as high as 54.4 percent on their total business. General Motors averaged 21.5 percent on its Navy work, Alcoa around 50 percent, Bendix Aviation 27 percent on one contract alone, Todd Drydocks 21.6 on another, and so on down the profiteering line.

The profits section, while showing sensational figures, was admittedly only a partial survey, since several huge firms flatly refused to reply to the committee's questionnaires. Among these holdouts was Bethlehem Steel, which did show, however, that it cleared 20.75 percent on ship repair orders.

Much of the blame for excessive profits figures was laid by the committee on inefficient and wasteful methods of cost-accounting. The report also cited three points raised by the Monopoly Committee investigation, 1) disorderly purchasing, 2) inefficiency and delay and 3) excessive profits and profiteering as causes for failure of the arms program to make better progress.

Vinson Files Bill To Register Unions

Washington, Jan. 24—Acting with unaccustomed speed, Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee his week offered a bill in Congress providing for federal registration of labor unions.

Vinson, a southern poll taxer elected by a fraction of the residents of his district, expressed alarm at the growth in trade union resources—which are actually a drop in the bucket compared to the super-profits bared by the Naval Affairs report. Labor has opposed registration of unions on the basis that it will be used to curb the rights of workers.

Vinson's bill was so worded as to come under the Constitution's commerce clause, thereby removing it from the jurisdiction of the House Labor Committee and giving it to a more reactionary group for consideration.

'We Want More Say'

By JOHN BEECHER

This poem about CIO Pres. Philip Murray first appeared in the fall-winter 1941 number of Twice a Year Magazine, published by Twice a Year Press, 509 Madison Avenue, New York City. The excerpts appearing here are printed with the permission of Twice a Year Press.

It was dark
Coming into Pittsburgh
And the night was misty too
But all up and down the river valleys
The mills were full of light
Cranes raising ingots from the glowing pits
Blooms slabs billets bars and shapes streaking hot through the rolls
Whitehot seethe from open hearth peepholes
Spouts of high fire melting into fume
Blast furnace slag flowing golden on the dumps.
Even beehive ovens
I never thought I'd see coked up again
Winking red in smoky wasteful rows . . .
Working for defense
All up and down the Allegheny and the Monogahela
The Ohio the Mahoning and the Beaver
The mills the furnaces the powerhouses coke-plants machine shops and foundries
Working all night for defense.

That night I went to a banquet
For Pittsburgh's "Man of the Year"
And after a lot of speeches about him
The man himself spoke
And it seemed to me as I watched his eyes
And as I listened to his words
That he knew he was talking
Not just to the people who came there to honor him
But to all the people in this country
And it seemed to me also
That this man was more than just this man
But all the men back of him
Those not knowing it equally with those knowing
Those before his time and those of it and those to come after
Their thoughts in his mind
Their desires in his heart
Their words in his mouth . . .

The thing he was saying was
What Americans have always been saying
But America has never caught up with . . .
Just that we all of us belong
And nobody belongs any more than anybody else does
And America belongs to all of us.

And if America is in danger
We will defend America
All of us that is will defend all of us
But most of us will not defend
A few of us
Which has happened before
Nor will most of us
Let a few of us
Run America for the advantage of a few
Which is happening now
Even now . . .
The most of us want a say
In how we shall live and how we shall work
In how industry shall be run—
We work there
We have ideas
We could help—
And since we are going to have to do
Whatever fighting and dying are necessary
We want more say in defense . . .
We are loyal Americans
And because we are
We want more say . . .

These are my words
But his meaning
And it doesn't matter that his name was Phil Murray
And that he is head of the CIO
Because like I say
He wasn't talking just for himself
But for all the men back of him
Those not knowing it equally with those knowing
Those before his time and those of it and those to come after
Their thoughts in his mind
Their desires in his heart
Their words in his mouth . . .
A few of us had better be listening.

California CIO Leaders Sue Hearst For Libel

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 24—William Randolph Hearst, bejowled duke of the vast publishing empire, was today smack on the receiving end of a California CIO libel suit.

The suit, asking $600,000 in damages as the result of "false, malicious and unprivileged" articles and editorials appearing in Hearst papers, was filed against Hearst, Hearst Publications, Inc., and other of the publisher's corporations.

Basis of the suit was a fake story in the San Francisco Call-Bulletin of Dec. 16 and editorials appearing in that paper and the San Francisco Examiner.

The story distorted action taken by a special meeting of the California CIO to channelize reports from workers of suspected industrial sabotage through the CIO office so that it might be brought to the attention of the FBI and other government agencies. The council's move was in line with Pres. Philip Murray's call for CIO to be on guard against efforts to impair the nation's productive machinery.

DISTORTED STORY

Hearst's trained seals distorted the story in an effort to convince the public that the CIO was instead trying to hide sabotage in west coast factories by refusing to report them to police officials.

Counsel for the state CIO charged the facts and implications in the Hearst story were "false and untrue . . . published through evil motive, malice and ill-will . . . with the intent and design to injure, disgrace and defame plaintiffs."

The suit was filed in the name of Harry Bridges, California CIO director who asked a total of $100,000 damages for each of the three articles, and by Pres. Philip Connelly and Sec.-Treas. Louis Goldblatt acting for the California Industrial Union Council.

On request of CIO President Murray, the two council leaders came to Washington last week and described in detail to national FBI officials the plans for combatting enemy sabotage in California.

Seek Plan For Carpet Workers

New York, Jan. 24—A program to reduce the shock of priorities unemployment upon workers in the carpet industry was drawn up at a conference called by the CIO Textile Workers Union. Delegates representing about 25,000 organized carpet workers attended.

The plan calls for the setting up of plant conversion committees in each mill and community to assist employers in transferring from civilian to defense production; censures the Carpet Manufactures Institute for rejecting the union's proposal for an industry-labor conference, and urges government officials to give special consideration to the industry.

Coast Firms Hinder Red Cross, Bond Campaign

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 24—Opposition to unions looms a lot more important in the minds of some company managements in this area than the need for increased Red Cross and Defense Savings Bond collections.

Two instances of firms fighting CIO plans for fund raising are being cited here as evidence of that fact.

The Pacific Gas & Electric Co. put the kibosh on a unanimous proposal of Utility Workers Organizing Committee, Local 134, that every man contribute a half day's pay to the Red Cross, the sum to be deducted by the company from his pay envelope.

To cover up, it instituted a haphazard collection campaign of its own. Though the union has urged its members to contribute generously, it sees little hope of collecting the half day's pay.

BANNED BOND POSTERS

Members of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians complain that the Shell Development Co., huge petroleum research outfit, has objected to the union's posting U. S. Treasury Defense Savings Bond posters in the offices.

The posters carry the slogan, "See Your Shop Steward" for bonds and stamps. The management objected that permission to post such a slogan might constitute recognition of the union—from which Shell Development recoils in horror.

A similar fate met an FAECT request for payroll deductions for the Red Cross and for joint union-management study of necessary air raid precautions at the plant. The union even offered to stipulate in writing that such joint war efforts would not be deemed recognition of the FAECT—but management refused.

SERIOUS COMPLAINT

An even more serious complaint was launched against the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. for its refusal to take war precautions beyond the hiring of 250 special guards to watch key parts of the gas system in Oakland.

Union leaders ridiculed the notion that the guards could cope with air raid emergencies. Paul Heide, a national UWOC representative, pointed out that if high explosive bombs burst gas mains or down power lines, the cities would not only be deprived of the facilities, but escaping gas would create a terrible danger of fires and explosions as damaging as any bomb could produce.

Under the company's present set-up, utility company employes volunteering to repair damages from a possible air raid would face arrest for traveling contrary to blackout regulations! The company nevertheless refuses to work out a cooperative arrangement for improving this situation.

If unpreparedness resulted in the desperate expedient of closing main gas valves, Heide said, it might take two months before the ticklish task for feeding gas back into the mains and all branching pipes could be completed.

SWEETHEART: Miss Alice Ryan of Cleveland was voted the prettiest girl friend of a soldier at the Kansas City military reservation. And who can say she doesn't deserve the title?

Ladies Auxiliary Adopts Program To 'Win War'

NEW YORK, Jan. 24—"Help win the war" and "Organize for Victory" are the keynotes of the national program of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO adopted at a special Executive Board meeting held in New York this week.

"The degradation which fascism means for women intensifies our determination to give all our organized strength, even our very lives, to the victory of our country over our fascist foes," the program says.

Pointing to the fact that absorption of men into the armed forces will necessitate employment of millions of women in industry the program urges training courses for women needed in defense industry, day care for children of women defense workers, and pledges to the CIO help in making "the entry of women into industry a source of strength and growth for the labor movement."

MANY WAYS TO HELP

Representation of auxiliaries on national and local defense councils, full participation of all members in volunteer defense activities, raising money and knitting for war relief, serving as blood donors and buying defense bonds and stamps are urged as part of the program.

Maintenance of the morale of our people and making our communities better places to live in are stressed as essential to victory. The Auxiliary Congress pledges to work for increase of social services, increase of unemployment compensation benefits, more health facilities and low cost housing. They also include support of the government consumer program, the fight against profiteering and extension of hot school lunches, food stamp plan, penny milk and other consumer services.

PROGRAM FOR VICTORY

The program concludes:

"This is our program for victory. We pledge to carry it out with all our strength.

"In order to carry it out most effectively, we pledge (a) to organize for victory and build the auxiliary movement to draw the wife and family of every CIO worker into our victory program; (b) to work unitedly with all women's groups, and especially with our sisters in the American Federation of Labor."

Clothing Union May Postpone Convention

New York, Jan. 24—A recommendation that the next convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, scheduled to be held in May, be postponed until 1944 because of unsettled conditions, has been made by the ACW general executive board.

As the union's constitution requires that conventions be held biennially, Secretary-Treasurer Jacob S. Potofsky has sent out notices to all Amalgamated locals and joint boards calling for a referendum on amending the constitution to permit postponement of the next convention.

ACA To Meet

New York, Jan. 24—Notice that the fifth convention of the American Communications Association will be held April 13 at the Ansley Hotel in Atlanta, Ga., has been sent out by Josephine Timms, international secretary-treasurer.

Guild Parley

New York, Jan. 24—The international executive board of the American Newspaper Guild announced this week that the 1942 convention will be held June 22-26 in Denver, Colo.

Virginia CIO

Richmond, Va., Jan. 24—The next convention of the Virginia CIO Industrial Union Council will be held at Norton, Va., May 14-16, Ray Thomason, president of the State Council announced this week. The date was set at a meeting of the Council's executive board.

Steel Plant Wants To Produce — — But It's Stymied!

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24—Clinton S. Golden, eastern regional director of the CIO steel workers, this week sent a hair-raising letter to the OPM.

The letter wasn't excited or hysterical; its hair-raising qualities were contained in a coldly sober description of how an Ohio steel firm can't do its bit for national defense because of the solid opposition of dollar-a-year men functioning in the OPM. Last week, in fact, the company was forced to close three of its six open hearth furnaces.

Golden's letter was sent to William L. Batt of the OPM's Division of Materials, whom the steel union described as one of the "many unselfish and genuinely patriotic business men" serving the government. His story, however, concerned the actions of business representatives anxious to preserve a semi-monopoly position for the larger steel producers.

The Steel Workers Organizing Committee official cited the case of the Empire Sheet & Tin Plate Co., Mnsfield, Ohio— a firm which has considerable capacity for producing war material. Company officials figure that less than a million dollar loan or expenditure by the government would enable Empire to turn out 15,000 tons of ingot production each month.

Dollar-a-year men have shoveled out tremendous sums to the larger corporations in the steel industry to permit expansion and modernization of their properties for defense production. But Empire seems unable to get a cent. The result is idle capacity and idle men.

The OPM officials involved in the matter, Golden charged in his letter to Batt, are "so small and their vision so limited, that they would just naturally use their positions to block any effort by a competitor to secure government funds or loans to be used for expanding production, if such resulted in improving existing equipment and facilities."

TRIED TO BE NICE

"We have tried to be nice and polite but it doesn't get us anywhere," the union official recalled in his communication to Batt. "The other brass hats down there don't even answer our letters. That is why I am writing to you.

"We are going to smoke out some of those fellows who seem to place private profits above patriotism. We are going to tell the people about them and how they are muffing the ball."

The dollar-a-year men, he continued, "are so afraid Empire Steel and other 'little fellows' may survive if they can get some help that will enable them to contribute more toward winning the war, they have succeeded in blocking all the 'little fellows' efforts thus far to make a real contribution.

BROUGHT CASE TO OPM

Golden recalled that in October 1940 officials of the company and of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee brought the case to the attention of the OPM Labor Division, which sent a representative to Mansfield to survey the plant.

"Assurance was given at this time that proper steps would be taken to utilize the productive facilities of this company," the union leader wrote. "No action whatsoever was or has since been taken . . .

"A detailed plan for increased ingot production of 180,000 tons per year by improving present plant equipment and rolling stock has been available at all times for the past eight months," and installation of the needed equipment would "enhance the production of the mill for war needs," Golden charged.

Roll Up Gains In Massachusetts

The Armour & Co. plant in Boston, the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee won sole bargaining rights by a 68-22 vote.

At the big Heywood Wakefield plant in Gardner, the United Furniture Workers polled 737 votes to 518 for an independent and 88 for neither union.

Workers in the important Monsanto Chemical Co., Springfield, voted 540-330 for District 50, United Mine Workers of America.

Lyons said the Monsanto plant is one of the largest chemical firms in the state, and that Heywood-Wakefield is the second largest in the industry throughout the nation.

Strike Ends at Perfumerie, As NLRB Opens Hearing

NEW YORK, Jan. 24—CIO workers in the cosmetic factory of Princess Gourielli-Tchkonia—Madame Helena Rubenstein to you—were back on their jobs today.

Ending a three-month strike in the "interests of national unity," the 200 employes based their action on the fact that the Natl. Labor Relations Board has started hearings on union charges that the Helena Rubenstein Employes Assn. is an illegal company union.

Members of Local 12165 of District 50, United Mine Workers, the strikers, will have the continued support of the District and the CIO, Michael F. Widman, District 50 Regional Director, declared.

"The strikers' just exercise of their American rights has been transferred in the interests of national unity from the picketline to the NLRB," he commented.

"We are setting an example of Americanism which, we hope the company may emulate," declared Organizer Fred Hamilton.

"Madame pays her girls $16 a week, but charges $16 an ounce for her perfumes. The employes organized in the CIO and insisted upon union recognition because they did not think that was an American ratio."

HELP FROM STARS

The walkout gained widespread support from prominent Broadway, radio and screen talent, including Helen Hayes, Betty Field, Lillian Hellman, Hester Sondergaard and Gypsy Rose Lee. Efforts by city and state officials to get Mme. Rubenstein into conferences with the union were unsuccessful.

Cause of the walkout was the sudden demand of the Employes Assn. for a place on an NLRB ballot last October. District 50 charged the outfit with company sponsorship and called the walkout against its recognition by the company.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

The Los Angeles Railroad case went to the War Labor Board in Washington this week, one of the first to be taken up by the new agency. The CIO has clearly shown its patriotism in taking repeated acts of anti-union intimidation from the company without going on strike. It is now up to the board to see that the workers involved receive simple justice.

More than 140 workers have been fired for refusing to join a company dominated union. Some of them have had as much as 30 years with the company. The board could hardly ask for a clearer case of anti-union activity by a company.

ELECTION VICTORIES

The CIO has been winning elections again this week. From New York, Director Pete Mosele reports that the workers voted six to one for the CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee at the Jersey City Armour plant—the score, 310 for CIO, 55 for AFL.

The first major victory in the oil drive is reported by Director Smith of the Oil Workers Organizing Campaign who informs the CIO that the Oil Workers Union won its election at the Port Arthur, Tex., plant of Texaco. The score: 1,351 for CIO, 67 for AFL, 781 for neither union. This major victory starts the oil drive off on the right foot. It was won, incidentally, despite the hard work that Coulter, who went over to the AFL, put in in his attempted disruption.

The packinghouse workers have won another important victory in the Kansas City, Mo., election at the Wilson plant, where they took the poll by 886 to 498 for a company union. Only one plant, Swift and Co., remains to be organized in Kansas City, according to Regional Director Harvey C. Fremming.

The Farm Equipment Workers report an important election won at the Richmond, Ind., plant of the International Harvester Co. The score here, 515 for CIO and 262 for a company dominated union, is an impressive item in the major drive to organize Harvester workers. This company has been one of the most bitterly anti-union of any big corporation in the country, resorting to every trick in the anti-labor bag to attack the CIO. The FEWOC sends thanks to CIO Field Representative Robert Foley, who was in charge of the campaign, and to Powers Hapgood for aid rendered.

NEWSPAPER GUILD PROGRESS

One of the toughest fields in all American industry faces the American Newspaper Guild, whose employers represent entrenched reaction at one of its strongest points. Despite a mounting tide of publisher pressure seeking to smash the newspaper workers' union, the Guild has been making progress. The recent meeting of the Executive Board of this union was able to report four new locals chartered, and news of wage increases and improved contracts has been coming in from many cities.

The International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union has won an election at the Walgreen warehouse in Chicago, according to a report from Regional Director Fullerton Fulton. The score, 153 to 114, puth the ILWU definitely in the picture in Chicago. From Richmond, Va., Regional Director Ernest B. Pugh reports a contract won from the American Lumber and Treating Co. by Local Industrial Union 1061. The contract carries exclusive bargaining rights and wage increases.

An excellent example of the way CIO unions are cooperating to increase production for victory comes from the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union at San Diego, Calif., whose president reports on plans for cutting down the time required to load and unload ships. These plans, which include labor participation in working out new methods of loading and unloading, were welcomed by the naval authorities in the port.

U.S. Committee Bares Employers' Race Bias

CHICAGO, Jan. 24—Indications of drastic job discrimination against members of minority nationality and race groups in Chicago's booming war industry were uncovered here this week.

The facts, showing particularly bitter discrimination against Negroes, were presented at a hearing of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices which lasted over a two-day period in the Windy City.

Complaints of discrimination, which is a violation of federal policy for firms holding government contracts, were lodged against some of the largest manufacturers in the Chicago area.

One of the firms was the anti-union Stewart-Warner Co., maker of radio and machinery parts. Not one of the company's 8,000 employes is a Negro, it was admitted by Personnel Director R. W. Mathers, who nevertheless argued that the management has no "definite policy" against Negroes.

"Although it's not a written policy, it's the practice, isn't it"? Mathers was asked by Chairman Mark Ethridge of the President's Committee.

"Evidently," was the reply, "but we will change it."

G. M. Johnson, assistant executive secretary of the committee, then brought forth evidence that two Negroes had been refused jobs because of their color after they answered newspaper help wanted ads. Mathers asserted that his assistant erred in refusing them the jobs on that basis.

EXPERIENCE AT BUICK

Further testimony showed that of 25 graduates of the Illinois Institute of Technology who applied for jobs at Buick's new aviation plant, the lone Negro—and he had the highest grades in the group—and eight of nine Jews were refused positions.

"There was probably discrimination against him because of his color," an Institute instructor testified in discussing the case of the Negro student.

Ethridge assailed the discrimination barriers and warned that the national morale is weakened by failure to hire employes on any basis except fitness for the job.

'NEED EVERY HAND'

"We are engaged in an effort in which every hand which can run a machine must be used, in which every skilled and loyal workman must have an opportunity to participate," he said.

"This is an all-out war, and anything that does not fall in line with that idea is close to treason. We cannot afford to play Hitler's and Japan's game of indulging racism and prejudices while we are attempting to destroy these undemocratic ideals."

The chairman's remarks were borne out by surveys of the Chicago area made by a number of Negro civic and social welfare groups.

HIGH UNEMPLOYMENT

A. L. Foster, executive secretary of the Chicago Urban League, said that race bias in industry is "creating a bitterness which jeopardizes the entire defense program."

State Senator William A. Wallace pointed out that largely because of discrimination, Negroes constitute 47% of Chicago's relief load although they form only 7% of its population. He cited the case of a truck assembly company which has $25,000,000 in defense contracts but hires only one Negro—as a janitor.

The President's Committee was set up by Executive Order last June. Its members are Ethridge, David Sarnoff of the Radio Corp. of America; CIO Pres. Philip Murray; AFL Pres. William Green; Milton P. Webster of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and Alderman Earl B. Dickerson of Chicago.

The committee points out that individuals having complaints about racial or minority discrimination in defense employment should send all the facts to the Committee on Fair Employment Practice, Social Security Bldg., Washington.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

January 14, 1942

Mr. Joseph Curran, President
National Maritime Union
346 West 17th Street
New York, N. Y.

My dear Mr. Curran:

I am informed that the discrimination against colored seamen, referred to in your telegram of January 2nd, was eliminated by the action of the United States Maritime Commission on the day it occurred.

It is the policy of the Government of the United States to encourage full participation in the National Defense program by all citizens, regardless of race, creed, color, or national origin, in the firm belief that the democratic way of life within the nation can be defended successfully only with the help and support of all groups within its borders.

The policy was stated in my Executive Order signed on June 25, 1941. The order instructed all parties making contracts with the Government of the United States to include in all defense contracts thereafter a provision obligating the contractor not to discriminate against any worker because of race, creed, color or national origin.

Questions of race, creed and color have no place in determining who are to man our ships. The sole qualifications for a worker in the maritime industry, as well as in any other industry, should be his loyalty and his professional or technical ability and training.

Sincerely yours,

Franklin D. Roosevelt

161 PEU

HITS RACE BIAS: President Roosevelt sends a letter to President Joseph Curran of the National Maritime Union reiterating the government's official position against discrimination on jobs. The NMU won a fight to get jobs for Negro workers on the S. S. Kungsholm of the United States Lines.

Marine Union Warns Lines On Prejudice

Refusal of some shipowners to engage Negro members, the union said, has caused ships to sail shorthanded.

In a strongly worded resolution adopted by 3,000 persons at a headquarters membership meeting, the NMU declared:

"We, as American trade unionists have and always will continue to accept aboard ship all bona fide members of the union regardless of race, color or creed . . . We, as members of the NMU, will not tolerate any violating of the preamble of our Constitution by any individual member of the union or by the shipowners."

Pres. Joseph Curran told the meeting that the NMU "is prepared to fight to the limit against discrimination. Our membership is aware that during the war emergency there will be all kinds of attempts to agitate against races. Everybody knows it, and no members of a crew should be led down a blind alley."

Ask Voice For Seamen

New York, Jan. 24 — President Roosevelt has been asked by the National Maritime Union's Council to recognize labor as an "equal partner, with the right to participate in shaping policies and making decisions in all phases of the war effort."

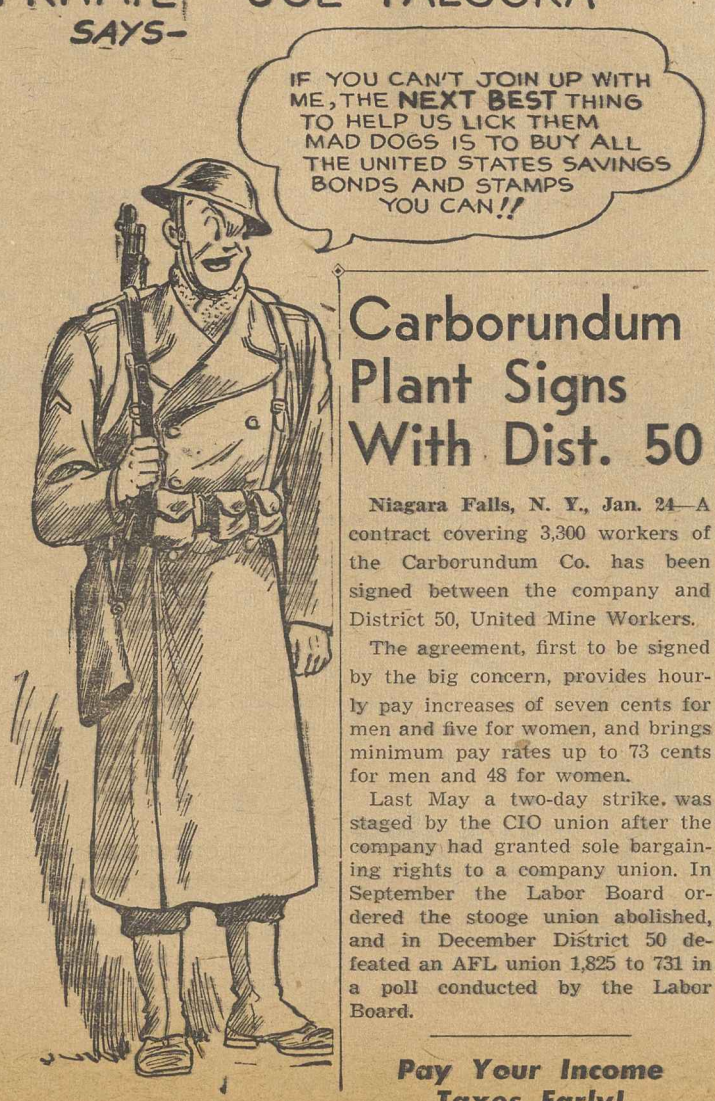
The NMU Council is composed of the national officers, the National Port Committee and representatives from 17 American ports where the union has branches. It met to map wartime policies for the union.

Although labor has been called upon to produce, sacrifice and fight, a resolution passed by the Council charged, the government has not yet invited it to contribute its creative ability to help formulate policy and make decisions.

Want Detroit Training Schools Open 24 Hours

Detroit, Jan. 24—Twenty-four hours a day operation of Detroit's defense training program was asked today by UAW-CIO Sec.-Treas. George Addes in a letter to the Board of Education.

The auto union officials noted that the Board's program "has been very successful, probably the best in the country," having trained 63,000 persons in an 18-month period.



Carborundum Plant Signs With Dist. 50

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Jan. 24—A contract covering 3,300 workers of the Carborundum Co. has been signed between the company and District 50, United Mine Workers.

The agreement, first to be signed by the big concern, provides hourly pay increases of seven cents for men and five for women, and brings minimum pay rates up to 73 cents for men and 48 for women.

Last May a two-day strike was staged by the CIO union after the company had granted sole bargaining rights to a company union. In September the Labor Board ordered the stooge union abolished, and in December District 50 defeated an AFL union 1,825 to 731 in a poll conducted by the Labor Board.

Win Increase

Baltimore—Increases amounting to $24,000 a year were won for 350 employes of the Comfy Manufacturing Co. here through an arbitration award handed down by Judge Eli Frank. The employes are members of the CIO United Furniture Workers of America.

Win Pact At Steel Firm

The company manufactures warm air furnaces and employs more than 300 persons, the union said.

Under the agreement the SWOC is recognized as sole bargaining agency, employes win vacations with pay and seniority, as well as cumulative seniority for any worker serving in the U. S. armed forces.

OPM Out; Labor Division Placed In New Set-Up

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24—The OPM went out of existence this week.

In his first major action, Donald Nelson, newly-appointed chairman of the War Production Board, wiped out the OPM but retained practically all its key executives at similar work in new divisions of the WPB.

Whether the OPM's former division chiefs and their staffs of dollar-a-year businessmen will be able to function at maximum efficiency in the new war agency was a question of intense speculation here following Nelson's reshuffling of agencies.

William S. Knudsen, former OPM director general, has already been nominated by Pres. Roosevelt for a commission as lieutenant-general in the Army, with instructions to supervise production work throughout the country.

LABOR DIVISION

Sidney Hillman, associate director-general becomes head of the Labor Division of the War Production Board. Nelson announced that the Division's functions will be left entirely to Hillman in view of his accomplishments at OPM.

Because Hillman has been ill with a cold, Nelson has had no opportunity to consult with him on labor features of the program, he said.

The Labor Division will be one of six principal sections of the War Production Board, Nelson revealed. The other five and their executives are:

Production, W. H. Harrison; Purchases, Douglas MacKeachie; Materials, W. L. Batt; Industry Operations, J. S. Knowlson; Civilian Supply, Leon Henderson.

A seventh division, not yet organized, will work in the field to help coordinate priorities and contract distribution work.

NEW AUTO CZAR

In another important step, Nelson announced appointment of E. C. Kanzler to head the WPB's automotive branch, backed by "all the power I've got" to secure complete conversion of the nation's huge automobile industry to war production. Kanzler, a brother-in-law of Edsel Ford, has been head of the Universal Credit Corp., which finances purchases of Ford cars.

The automobile industry group and others to be set up for other branches of production, will all report to Knowlson of the Division of Industry Operations.

SEEK BETTER RESULTS

While most of OPM's personnel are fitted into the new arrangement, Nelson told newspapermen he expected better results than in the past because executives will now be backed up "with all the power delegated to me by the President.

"In approaching this job, I have proceeded from the basis that every one in this country, including labor and management, is interested in only one thing—production of war materials.

"I am no superman. I don't believe in super-men, but if I can do this job, and I think I can, it will be done. If not, I shall be the first to admit it and step down.

NELSON LAUDS KNUDSEN

Nelson had high words of praise for W. S. Knudsen, one-time head of General Motors and more recently OPM boss. Knudsen was appointed an Army lieutenant general amidst increasing criticism of the agency's failure to whip industry into line for the war production job—a failure that came clearly to the surface recently when OPM admitted it had not yet collected real knowledge on the ability of the auto industry to produce for the nation.

Lt.-Gen. Knudsen will be asked to serve on the War Production Board, Nelson said, "so that we can have the benefit of his expert counsel on problems of production."

Offer School To OCD

MONTEAGLE, Tenn., Jan. 24 — The Highlander Folk School, on whose executive council sit a number of union leaders, has proposed to the Office of Civilian Defense that its facilities be used as a southern training center for civilian defense. The regular program could be adjusted at any time for defense needs school officials said.

The annual report shows that 475 students attended classes at the labor school in 1941, half of them at Monteagle and half at extension classes in Memphis and New Orleans.

Board Gets L. A. Transit Dispute

Los Angeles, Jan. 24.—Leaders of the CIO Transport Workers Union this week were winging toward the nation's capital to present the case of 3,000 employes of the Los Angeles Railway Corp. to the newly-established War Labor Board.

The Los Angeles transport case was one of the first to be certified to the new board. It involves the local transit company, which had attempted to enforce a back-door signed closed shop with an AFL union, and 141 discharged men who were thrown out of their jobs for refusing to join the company-dominated organization.

REPUDIATION CARDS

Armed with more than a thousand "repudiation cards," signed by LAry employes who say they were "coerced into joining the AFL by the company," the CIO leaders were scheduled to arrive in Washington Wednesday for the first session before the board.

Further demands of the CIO are that a collective bargaining agent election be ordered. There never has been such an election on the Los Angeles Railway, but the company nevertheless signed a closed shop contract with the AFL last summer, just as a CIO organizing drive was moving into high gear.

Faced with the alternative of joining what they called a "phony union," or of losing their jobs, 141 men were discharged.

Company officials resisted all efforts to reinstate the men, even spurning three demands by the U. S. Conciliation Service, and ignoring an order of the War Labor Board which had asked the company to put the men back on the job.

Threaten Strike at Rem-Rand To Spur War Production!

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 24—In what is believed to be the first action of its kind, a union local has voted to strike because the employer is blocking all-out production of war goods.

The strike vote was taken Jan. 19 by Local 308, CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers against Remington Rand Inc. The union's executive board was given authority to call the strike if necessary to force the company to work with the union in war production. The union, however, immediately asked for the intervention of the U. S. Dept. of Labor.

An accompanying resolution declared the union was being prevented from devoting its fullest energies to the war effort because of company attempts to smash the union instead of cooperating with it.

Remington Rand has pursued a consistent labor-baiting union-busting policy for many years. James H. Rand, Jr., a top official of the wealthy corporation, is known to be a close friend of Merwin K. Hart, chairman of the New York State Economic Council, which has been exposed as an ultra-reactionary organization.

Canadian Auto Workers Urge Increased Output

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 24.—Canadian locals of the CIO Auto Union will confer soon with the controller of the automotive industry to discuss proposals for a union-management committee to accelerate war production in the industry. Proposals for converting the automotive industry and otherwise utilizing its facilities to the fullest extent in producing war materials were approved at a conference this week.

Faced with unemployment immediately by the curtailment of domestic production, Canadian auto-workers have not yet received assurance that they will be cared for during their lay-off. Most of them are ineligible for unemployment insurance of roughly $12 per week for married men because they have not been employed the required 180 days necessary since it was inaugurated last July. The weekly sum today represents only $8 in purchasing power. Displaced American auto-workers are scheduled to receive $24 weekly.

"The obligations to our Allies and armed forces demand that maximum production of war materials must be achieved in the shortest possible time," the conference statement declared. "It is necessary that patent rights, all available equipment, manpower and materials must be utilized to full capacity to achieve victory over Fascism."

Portland, Oreg., Jan. 24—The Doernbecher Co., one of the largest furniture plants in the Pacific Northwest, deliberately forced a strike of its CIO employes when it refused to arbitrate contract demands, William Dalrymple, Oregon CIO director, declared in a long letter to the Oregon Daily Journal here.

"Refusal to arbitrate demonstrates that the management does not want to keep the plant operating pending a decision," the CIO official said. "They must be afraid of what an investigation would develop."

IF WORKERS DID IT . . .

Pointing to the press' willingness to criticize labor under similar circumstances, Dalrymple declared:

"Were workers to take the same position on proper questions of disputed points that come under the heading of arbitration, they would be classed at this time as un-American, unpatriotic and opposed to the best interests of the country. They would be held up before the public as an element trying to sabotage the defense projects of our country . . .

"Fundamentally, the only conclusion that can be reached is that the Doernbecher Co., through its management, has decided to set aside collective bargaining, judging from the attitude it has taken in the scale negotiations.

"The workers at the Doernbecher plants are willing to abide by any decision that may be rendered by an arbitration board, and will agree to return to work at once if the company will agree to submit all disputed points to an arbitrator and abide by the decision as rendered."

Win Election

Los Angeles—The Oil Workers Intl. Union has won an important NLRB election at the Continental Oil Co. in three California cities, gaining 105 votes to 65 for no union.

'Victory Board' Wins Endorsement of CIO

ON VICTORY BOARD: CIO's three representatives on Pres. Roosevelt's new Labor's Victory Board talk things over during the CIO Executive Board meeting last week. Left to right: Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers; Pres. Philip Murray; and Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile, Aircraft & Agricul tural Implement Workers. The trio, together with three from the AFL, will meet with FDR on all matters affecting labor.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—The CIO moved today towards a position of greater influence in government through participation in President Roosevelt's six-man "Labor's Victory Board" after leaders of its affiliated unions had given Pres. Philip Murray a unanimous vote of confidence in his leadership.

Rejecting a proposal by Pres. John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers for immediate resumption of negotiations looking to "accouplement" of CIO and AFL, the CIO Executive Board in special session here voted instead to accept President Murray's plan for participation on the new government committee and for close relations with the AFL in all questions affecting the war effort.

President Murray and numerous Board members argued that amalgamation of the two labor organizations, however desirable it may be, would turn the unions from questions affecting the welfare of the nation and of their members to a kilkenny cat fight over jurisdiction and position within a single labor movement.

Appointed to the "Labor's Victory Board" were President Murray, Vice Pres. R. J. Thomas and Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers. Also named were five alternate members.

In a series of other important actions, the Board urged unions to seek higher wages to protect workers against increased living costs; warned that a "soak the poor" taxation program would endanger the national morale; called for relief of workers thrown out of their jobs during industry's conversion to war production; and demanded that Congress refuse further funds to the Dies un-American Committee.

Price Control Bill, Badly Battered, Finally Passes

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—After close to seven months of wrangling and horse-trading while living costs jumped with every week—Congress finally passed a much amended and rather battered price control bill and obtained President Roosevelt's signature.

As it stands now, the bill provides for one administrator who has authority to license dealers and buy and sell commodities to preserve price levels, but who must share authority with the Secretary of Agriculture over farm prices, and for power to control rents in arms production areas if local authorities fail to act.

Farm prices will be set not lower than 110 per cent of parity, which is an improvement over the inflationary amendment proposed by Senator O'Mahoney, that would have caused food price rises up to 25 per cent and more.

Labor's fight for the bill began months ago in the House, when the CIO led the battle to secure an effective bill and to prevent House reactionaries from putting wage-freezing causes into it. Wage freezing was defeated in the House bill, though their bill so emasculated the original that administration leaders announced they would fight it to the end.

Average commodity prices were up 26 per cent above levels of July, 1929, in the week in which the bill was finally passed. A sizeable amount of this increase took place during the past six months—while Congress stalled on the bill.

Two CIO Shops Win Bond Flag

Detroit, Jan. 31—The CIO scored again this week when Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, presented the first two blue-and-white Defense Bond flags to two CIO organized firms—Chrysler Tank and Great Lakes Steel.

Because of the work of the auto and steel workers' locals at these two defense plants they were the first in the country to achieve more than 90 per cent worker support for the payroll savings plan of purchasing Defense Bonds on a systematic "every payday" basis.

At the Chrysler plant, Mrs. Morgenthau was in attendance. Climbing upon a tank, she declared:

"Your company was the first in Michigan to introduce the payroll deduction plan. What you have done in subscribing to the plan is a credit to both management and labor."

CIO Worker In War Poster

Brackenridge, Pa., Jan. 31. — Amazement flashed across the face of George Woolslager, member of the Straightforward Lodge of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee when he saw his picture on the big striking poster "Men Working Together" distributed throughout the country by the Office of Emergency Management in Washington.

The poster is a life-sized picture of three men—Riveter Woolslager in the center with a soldier on one side and a sailor on the other.

War Effort To Involve Million Women

Washington, Jan. 29—More than 1,000,000 women workers will be needed for arms production, Sidney Hillman, labor director of the War Production Board, announced this week.

"Airplanes can sink battleships," Hillman said. "Women can build airplanes. War is calling on the women of America for production skills. More than a million will be needed in our long, hard war."

Hillman urged women register at state employment centers and to secure training for war work. The CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries has gone on record urging women to get into production work wherever possible, and calling for government training, child care centers and other projects to make women's war work possible.

Describes Nazi Attack on Ship

By FRED d'AVILA

BALTIMORE, Jan. 27—Momentarily expecting an Axis torpedo to smash rusty plates and spew steam and horrible choking death from engine room boilers, a CIO engineer, two oilers and a fireman nonetheless held their posts courageously through 40 minutes that seemed like 40 years, as they waited tensely for the death blow that sank the ore carrier Venore off the North Carolina coast late last week. Only 21 of her crew of 43 were rescued.

The story of the sickening blast that shook the Ore Steamship Co.'s converted tanker like a giant tidal wave was told today by a quiet, modest, unassuming man, who said: "I'm not a hero, and don't try to make me one." He is Richard L. Garrett, first assistant engineer and a long-time member of the CIO Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn.

SUB NEARBY

Revealing for the first time that the four-to-eight black gang watch knew 40 minutes before the torpedo struck that a submarine had just drawn blood in the vicinity, Garrett, who returned to Baltimore from the rescue port of Norfolk, said:

"That 40 minutes until the torpedo hit us seemed like all night. My mouth was as dry as though filled with cotton. I had about six or seven drinks of water and it still was dry."

Garrett, now nearly recovered from 39 hours exposure in a lifeboat, said that the black gang learned from the chief engineer at 7:45 p. m. Friday, January 23, that a blazing tanker had been sighted two or three miles away, and that the same submarine that probably accounted for her would undoubtedly tackle the 10-knot Venore next.

"We felt two concussions, that probably were the torpedo striking the tanker and later one of her tanks exploding," Garrett said. Every minute until 8:25 p. m., when a torpedo smashed into us, we expected to get it. It actually was a relief when it happened!"

Demand Guns For U. S. Ships

New York, Jan. 27—Guns and adequate lifeboats to protect American ships and seamen from Nazi subs were demanded by unanimous action of the CIO Executive Board meeting here, after a plea by Joseph Curran, National Maritime Union president, in which he told how Nazi subs had circled our ships as much as three times before torpedoing them.

These vessels, the resolution declared, "have little or no protection, not being armed, and employers not having seen fit to service them with adequate life-rafts and conditioned life-boats," and can be sunk with no fear of their fighting back, while seamen are left to drown.

"The National Maritime Union has pledged itself to sail all vessels regardless of their destination or what zones they must travel through," the resolution said.

CIO Board Renews Backing For Striking Gold Miners

NEW YORK, Jan. 27—Renewal of support for the Kirkland Lake strikers, members of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union, and an urgent request to Secretary of Labor Perkins to have the U. S. Government "make appropriate representations to the Canadian government" for settlement of the dispute was decided by unanimous vote of the CIO Executive Board in its two-day session here.

After pointing out that the CIO has led in winning the battle of production to arm the United Nations in the fight against Hitlerism, and has guaranteed industrial peace in the U. S. for the duration of the war, the resolution declared:

"The valiant strike of the 3,800 gold miners in Kirkland Lake, Ontario, was caused by, and continues because of, the failure by the industry to recognize labor's rights to collective bargaining and full participation in the nation's problems."

The strike has been prolonged more than three months by the flat refusal of the company to grant the most elementary recognition to the union, a refusal backed by a united front of Canadian industrialists.

Govt. Union Rights Win CIO Support

New York, Jan. 29—Support for CIO unions of government workers was voted by the CIO Executive Board meeting here in a resolution that called on government agencies to carry out principles of collective bargaining as practiced in private industry and for wage increases to bring employes' standards up from present low levels. The resolution was introduced by Pres. Abram Flaxer of the State, County and Municipal Workers.

The Board also urged government employers, federal, state and municipal, to set up offices for collective bargaining negotiations with employes and to give the workers participation in problems arising from civilian defense and similar war activities.

BADLY UNDERPAID

Government employes are among the most underpaid in the country, and recent moves to lengthen the work week and generally worsen conditions are acting as an anti-union barometer for private industry, it was pointed out in discussion.

Following the Board resolution, Pres. Murray discussed the problem in a press conference, declaring that the CIO intends to press ahead with demands for bargaining rights and for decent wages for such employes.

DESERVE RECOGNITION

"Government workers are human beings and the elementary rules of reason require that they be recognized as such, be given the same degree of recognition as workers in private industry," he told newsmen.

"In Great Britain the government bargains collectively with all its workers. It has been a practical proposition there—and there's no reason it can't be done here.

"We are in war. Morale must be maintained. Conditions growing out of poverty are bad for morale. All workers must be protected from the rapacity of the high cost of living."

Stone Workers Report On Gains

BARRE, Vt., Jan. 31—A number of gains made by the United Stone & Allied Products Workers in various parts of the country were listed in the quarterly report issued recently by Secretary-Treasurer John Lawson.

At the Sta-so Milling Co., Fair Haven, Vt., 200 workers with 15 months' service received one week's paid vacation. Minimum pay ranges from 55 cents to 93 cents an hour.

An agreement providing pay increases of 3 to 11 cents an hour has been signed with the Baker-Wood Co. at Marion, O. Wage increases were also won for quarry workers in Milford, N. H., and for granite workers in the Barre, Vt., granite belt.

GAINED RAISES

Following an election won by the CIO among workers at the Delite Co. in Gibsonburg, O., the union signed a contract calling for 5 and 10 cent hourly increased pay rates and paid vacations. Similar gains were won for workers at the Buckite Refractories plant in Woodville, O.

Settlement of discrimination cases in Roanoke, Va., provided for the rehiring of several men and the payment of more than $300 to one worker.

After defeating an AFL union at the Johns-Manville Co. plant in Alexandria, Ind., the CIO Quarry Workers signed a contract giving three and five cent hourly pay increases to 400 workers.

Gain Increase

Richmond, Va., Jan. 31—A ten per cent wage increase and other benefits were won in a contract signed with the Benjamin T. Crump Co. The increase will benefit 100 employes. Ernest Pugh, CIO regional director, negotiated the pact in behalf of the Fur and Leather Workers Union.

Aside from the wage boost, the pact calls for the establishment of grievance machinery, seniority rights and pay for five annual holidays, Pugh announced.

Ask Labor Voice In Civilian Defense Set-Up

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—Full and official participation by labor, through representatives of its own choosing, in the civilian defense program was urged in a statement of policy adopted at the labor conference called by the Office of Civilian Defense here.

The conference, presided over by Dean James Landis, newly appointed executive director of OCD, who shared the platform with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, was attended by representatives of CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhood unions, and took place at the White House and the U. S. Labor Department.

Main point in the program centered in the "declaration of principles," which called for the "extension of state and local defense councils to include labor representation in every state and community, as official members of these councils and through persons recommended by labor itself."

This declaration was implemented by election of a three-man executive committee of the whole labor committee, consisting of John Brophy, director of Industrial Union Councils of the CIO; Robert Watt, representative of the AFL; and D. B. Robertson, representing the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen.

LABOR'S PLACE

Labor's leading place in civilian defense was stressed throughout the conference, Dean Landis making it the principal note in his opening speech and Mrs. Roosevelt calling on labor to help the OCD and the government in preparing the population for the dangers and and stresses of a war period.

Pointing out that victory requires security, proper nutrition and adequate housing for all the people, Mrs. Roosevelt urged organized labor to use its leadership among the people in helping the government satisfy these essential war needs.

"Defense workers work better when they know their families are secure," she said. "Through labor we will reach the people, learn their needs, and build unity for victory. Labor has a great role to play in civilian defense. Through labor we will win the war and increase the value of the nation to the worker and the people."

PROBLEMS OF SECURITY

Labor speakers also stressed problems of security raised by conversion to arms production and other dislocations whose solution was essential to adequate defense on the home front. CIO speakers at the conference in addition to John Brophy, included Saul Mills, secretary of the N. Y. City CIO Council, Irving Abramson, president of the N. J. State Council, Ted F. Silvey, secretary of the Ohio State Council, Louis Goldblatt, secretary of the California Council, John B. Easton, head of the W. Va. Council, Joseph Salerno, head of the Massachusetts CIO body, John Phillips, of the Pennsylvania Council, and August Scholle, president of the Michigan Council.

Following the declaration of principles, the conference adopted a "Statement of Federal Policy by the OCD" which read in part as follows:

"The OCD recognizes that labor's role in the war is of vital importance to maximum production, adequate protection and effective volunteer participation. Labor's responsibilities require that labor shall be adequately represented in the determination of policy and in the administration of civilian defense."

The conference received a message of support and endorsement from Pres. Murray, who was unable to attend due to pressure of contract negotiations with the steel companies, and heard brief speeches at a White House luncheon from Secretary of Labor Perkins and AFL Pres. William Green.

Carey, Rieve Cite CIO Moves To Outproduce Axis

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—Labor accepts President Roosevelt's call for planes and tanks, ships and guns to defeat the Axis, two CIO leaders declared in a round-table discussion broadcast this week by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

The two CIO speakers were Secretary James B. Carey and Emil T. Rieve, vice-president of the CIO and president of the Textile Workers Union. Two AFL speakers, Secretary George Meany and Vice-President Matthew Woll, also appeared on the program.

Carey's speech stressed the production for victory plans drawn up and presented by the CIO, beginning with the Murray Industry Council Plan and implemented by various detailed plans for production of steel, copper, airplanes, aluminum, etc.

Rieve pointed out that all-out production can best be carried on by organized workers, and that they must be protected in their right to organize and bargain collectively in order to give their best effort for the victory program.

The broadcast, lasting a half hour, was sent on shortwave to South America and to European countries.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—The CIO's Executive Board last week moved to place the full strength of its affiliated organizations squarely behind the nation's war effort, at its meeting in New York.

In a two-day session studded with important actions, the Board:

1. Approved CIO participation in a six-man "Labor's Victory Board" which will meet with Pres. Roosevelt on all matters affecting labor and the war.

2. Expressed enthusiastic support for Pres. Philip Murray's leadership of CIO, and for his handling of relations with the AFL.

3. Strongly urged all affiliated unions to seek sizeable wage increases to protect the workers' standard of living against spiraling increases in living costs.

4. Warned that unjust taxation which might bear too heavily on low income groups rather than on the wealthy, would harm national morale.

5. Urged immediate and adequate relief and compensation for workers thrown out of their jobs during the period of conversion from civilian to war production.

Foremost in the minds of the Board members as they met at the Hotel Biltmore here was the exchange of letters between Pres. Philip Murray and Pres. John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers that followed Lewis' surprise demand for "accouplement" between CIO and AFL.

After day of discussion devoted to the relationships between the two labor bodies, the Board unanimously adopted a resolution backing up Murray's contention that peace moves with the AFL must be initiated by the CIO president.

The Board also voted endorsement of a policy statement on labor unity presented to the meeting by President Murray and authorized his appointment of three CIO representatives on the new Labor Victory Board.

THREE ON BOARD

Named to meet with President Roosevelt and the AFL officials were President Murray, Vice Pres. R. J. Thomas and Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

Five alternates were also named: Sec.-Treas. Joseph Potofsky of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Pres. Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers Union; Pres. Joseph Curran of the National Maritime Union; Pres. John Green of the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers; and P. T. Fagan, president of District 5, United Mine Workers.

The policy statement pointed out that labor unity on a basis of protecting the interests of the workers in the mass production industries has always been supported by CIO. At the present time, it continued, the question of labor unity must be viewed in the light of only one objective—"to win the war."

FAVOR JOINT ACTION

"The CIO is wholeheartedly in favor of initiating and perfecting arrangements with the AFL looking toward joint action on all measures which will aid our nation in winning the war," the statement asserted.

"Important and basic questions" of production and morale should be the concern of joint action by both major wings of labor, it continued.

"Labor is vitally concerned in the successful outcome of the war. Only through united and joint action will organized labor succeed in obtaining its rightful participation in the Government war councils. Likewise, through joint action, labor will be able to best fulfill its duties and responsibilities to the nation.

POST-WAR PROBLEMS

"In addition, labor must face the difficulties which will follow in the wake of the war and assume the leadership in the present formulation of measures to meet post war problems. Organized labor must establish its rightful place in the councils of the nation and secure the representation in Government to which it is entitled."

But the attainment of organic unity—a definite amalgamation of CIO and AFL—would pose numerous difficulties, the Board pointed out, and the adjustments must not be permitted to "weaken or destroy the existing and developing united action of labor, both nationally and locally, in the prosecution of the national war effort."

Participation in Labor's Victory Board, the policy statement concluded, will "assure the maximum contribution and participation of labor in the war program. Such action will best strengthen the national war effort and promote the cause of labor unity."

Adoption of the resolution and the policy statement followed several hours of discussion by Board

Board Urges Wage Increases To Protect Living Standards

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—Victory in the war against Hitlerism calls for maintaining and improving living standards for workers and for security and growth of labor unions to protect those standards, the CIO Executive Board declared in its major resolution on wage policy and union security passed at the meeting here this week.

The resolution, considered one of the most important of the group passed on by the Board, was voted unanimously after lengthy discussion by Pres. Murray and other leading CIO officers, and came at the time when CIO unions are negotiating or beginning to negotiate for new contracts with the biggest industrial corporations in the U. S.

Pointing out that workers' standards are being seriously cut down by spiraling living costs, while 1941 profits reached new highs and are predicted to go even higher in 1942, the resolution directed all CIO unions to press for "substantial" wage increases and for union security in their negotiations for renewals or for new contracts.

MOST IMPORTANT

Such demands must become the business of the whole CIO, Pres. Murray said in discussing the resolution, since no single union can hope to take on all the forces involved in industry's opposition to wage increases and to union security.

The situation is the most important facing the CIO, he declared, adding that CIO unions must be prepared to meet all sorts of attacks and accusations that they are causing inflation. Murray also urged that CIO unions make these points known to government leaders, suggesting that members write to War Production Board officials, to Congress and to the President along the lines of the resolution.

Murray was followed by other CIO officials who cited current or approaching wage talks they were having with employers, especially in the heavier industries, as evidence of the need for a firm and united CIO stand on wage demands.

PROFIT FIGURES

Part of the discussion centered on a report of Ralph Hetzel, CIO economic director, who listed seven

Jobs, Relief Sought For Unemployed

New York, Jan. 29—WPA jobs, bigger unemployment compensation checks and large scale retraining are all urgently needed to take care of hundreds of thousands of workers who will be jobless due to delays in converting industry to war production, the CIO Executive Board said in a resolution outlining an aid program adopted at the meeting here this week.

The resolution called on all CIO affiliates to support President Roosevelt's request to Congress for a $300,000,000 appropriation to increase compensation payments through the state systems, speakers pointing out that over 500,000 workers in the auto industry alone will be out on the streets at the end of this month.

The resolution also urged WPA and other Federal agencies to provide jobs at living wages and to pay workers while retraining them. Congressional reactionaries, more concerned with beating labor down than with victory over the Axis, are opposing the $300,000,000 appropriation and other measures to relieve widespread distress, it was pointed out by Board speakers.

CIO Asks Use of Plans To Aid War

New York, Jan. 29—Full dedication of all its "resources in manpower and brains" for the victory program was reaffirmed in a unanimous resolution on war production passed by the CIO Executive Board meeting here.

The CIO has been "foremost in the national effort to achieve as quickly as possible the maximum production of all munitions of war", the resolution said, in citing the Murray Industry Council Plan, the steel plan, copper plan, airplane plan and others as examples of CIO's determination to push all-out production.

The resolution, after reaffirming its pledge of full support to the government in carrying on the war, directed President Murray to resubmit the Industry Council Plan and other production blueprints to the War Production Board.

It also called on the War Board to carry out President Roosevelt's plans for labor participation in the victory effort "by affording labor direct representation and complete participation within the administrative machinery responsible for obtaining the production of munitions of war."

Joint Action

United Effort

Labor unity has been a major aim of the CIO ever since its inception. The CIO was formed to unite the millions of unorganized workers with the existing labor movement. The split which occurred, when the AFL drove out the CIO unions, was not of the choosing of the industrial unions.

Since that time the CIO has made repeated efforts to re-unite the ranks of labor, without forfeiting the tremendous gains made through industrial organization.

Now that our country is engaged in war, the need for labor unity becomes greater than ever before. Recognition of this need was shown by both CIO and AFL in the recent labor-industry-government conference in Washington, when the two movements reached an agreement in the most amicable spirit to prevent stoppages and to increase production for victory.

At its recent executive board meeting in New York, the CIO strongly endorsed the leadership of Pres. Philip Murray, in his handling of the unity question. It adopted a program for joint action with the AFL, which measurably advances the cause of labor unity. It resolved on united effort, both nationally and locally, on all measures that will aid in winning the war. And it accepted President Roosevelt's proposal for joint participation with the AFL in Labor's Victory Board.

As to organic unity with the AFL—an actual merger of the two labor bodies—that continues to be an objective of the CIO. For its achievement, the board held, there must be full recognition of the industrial form of organization in mass production and basic industries and no discrimination against any union or member of the CIO.

But at the same time the CIO board recognized there are many difficulties in the way of such organic unity. It was fearful that hasty attempts to reach a permanent solution of these difficulties might actually increase rather than diminish friction, thus interfering with the promising developments of united action between the two movements.

The CIO board therefore resolved that joint action with the AFL through Labor's Victory Board, and in all national and local moves necessary for winning the war, is the best and surest way to achieve both labor unity and victory.

Let's Speak Up

It is imperative that all CIO unions and members make their voices heard at once on two major issues directly affecting the welfare of themselves and their families and of the whole country.

Both these issues relate to the maintenance of American living standards and the morale of our population for winning the war.

(1) There is critical need for speedy and substantial wage increases and for definite guarantees of union security, if the workers in industry are to achieve the all-out production which is their aim.

(2) Pending tax proposals threaten to undermine the war effort, if Congress increases the already over-heavy burden on the underpaid, instead of obtaining the necessary increases in national income from war profiteers and the upper-income brackets.

The position of the CIO, as developed at its recent board meeting, is clear-cut, logical and patriotic. It is that soaring living costs are cutting deep into the living standards of the workers, while their productivity is increasing and war profits have risen tremendously.

Wage increases are therefore clearly due and can be paid from surplus profits without increasing prices; while union security is essential if labor is to secure a fair deal and industrial friction is to be averted.

Furthermore wage-cutting taxation imposed on the low-income groups through general sales taxes and the like, would have a most demoralizing effect. It is also unnecessary in view of the large untapped sources of taxation from excess profits and other forms of surplus wealth.

But as against this labor point of view, the profiteers and their agents are already intensifying their propaganda for soaking the poor and coddling the rich both industrially and legislatively.

All CIO unions and members should therefore act without delay to publicize labor's viewpoint and to impress it upon Congress and the other governmental authorities.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE ISSUE of labor unity furnished the headline news at the recent meeting of the CIO executive board in New York. But actually it was only one part of a rounded program of war policy worked out at the first board meeting to deal with many new issues created by the war.

Meetings of the CIO board are much broader and more representative than the executive sessions of other organizations, which compare more closely with the meetings of the CIO vice presidents. A CIO executive board meeting is in effect a small convention. Every one of the affiliated unions is directly represented.

The meeting in New York, in particular, might almost have been called the first war "convention" of the CIO. It is true the board had been called into session in December, shortly after Pearl Harbor. But then it was for one specific purpose, to deal with the industry-labor-government conference. The New York meeting, on the other hand, dealt with nearly all major CIO policies.

The keynote of the board meeting was the policy statement adopted on labor unity and labor's participation in the war. This treated unity between CIO and AFL as one phase of the broader objective of maximum labor effort for winning the war.

It called for joint action between CIO and AFL to increase war production; to improve workers' morale by protecting their living standards and the growth and security of their unions; and for other economic and legislative steps to make more effective labor's participation in the war effort.

Organic unity (an actual merger of CIO and AFL) was considered as a more long-range objective, presenting many difficulties. It was held that the adjustment of this problem should not be allowed "to weaken or destroy the existing and developing united action of labor" for war purposes.

Finally, the CIO board welcomed Pres. Roosevelt's suggestion for joint CIO and AFL representation in a new war board to meet with himself. It dubbed this new body "Labor's Victory Board," and described it as the best method for strengthening the war effort and promoting labor unity.

Other actions of the CIO executive board dealt with wage policy, union security, CIO plans for increasing production, taxation, unemployment and many other subjects.

The Steel Workers Organizing Committee is at present engaged in negotiations with the big Bethlehem, Republic, Youngstown and Inland companies. It is asking a $1-a-day wage increase and the union shop. Many other CIO unions are now or soon will be engaged in similar negotiations, in which increased wages and union security are dominating issues.

On behalf of the whole CIO, therefore, the board hammered out a broad policy dealing with these issues, and brought out the facts and arguments in support of this policy.

It pointed to the rapidly rising living costs which have lowered the real wages of the workers. It pointed to the tremendous increases in industrial profits which permit employers to raise wages without corresponding price increases.

And finally, the board emphasized that maintenance and improvement of the workers' living standards, and freedom from attack for their unions, are essential to "unleash the unmeasured energies of the workers for maximum war production."

Of equally immediate importance is the disemployment of millions of workers due to war shortages and to the conversion of countless plants from peacetime to war production.

The CIO board adopted a program for the relief of these workers through increased unemployment compensation and WPA work, and for their retraining for new war jobs.

The enormously increased taxation soon to be enacted by Congress was another major subject dealt with. The board called on Congress to adopt a program which will stop war profiteering; will place the tax burden on those best able to pay; and will protect low-income groups from disastrous reductions in their living standards.

All in all, the war program adopted by the CIO executive board reflects the wishes and needs of American working people in this most critical period of world history. It is inspired throughout by their ardent desire for the quickest and most complete defeat of Hitlerism and all it stands for. And it reconciles the normal and constructive aims of labor with this major basic purpose.

It is a program for joint action and united effort which should enlist the enthusiastic support of all workers and all sections of organized labor.

CIO Hails Murray's Unity Plan

members following a long and vigorous keynote address by President Murray.

Expressing regret that UMW President Lewis had not seen fit to accept his invitation to explain his unity proposals to the Board, Murray read the exchange of correspondence between them. He warned that a move towards organic unity at this time would destroy the growing harmony between CIO and AFL on questions of supporting the war, and would plunge the labor movement into months of disastrous battles over jurisdiction and other problems brought to the fore by amalgamation.

Murray repeated his earlier expressed contention that unity moves must originate from the office of the CIO president—a position unanimously ratified by the Board—and reiterated his interpretation of the CIO constitution that between conventions the Board sets major policies of the organization and has the power to review "any constitutional interpretation" made by President Murray.

His speech and the passage of the resolution followed reading to the Board of a letter from Lewis in which he claimed that as chairman of the CIO unity negotiating committee in 1939, he was delegated to handle such questions, and reiterated his arguments for resumption of unity negotiations with the AFL.

Lewis declared that he had made "no commitments of any character to anyone that affect any phase of this problem." He urged that the Board alternatively "express their good will and their hopes for successful negotiations"; convene a special CIO convention on the subject; or submit the question of negotiations to a referendum.

Overwhelming support for Murray's position was expressed during the day's discussion, and the final vote was unanimous.

Fair Taxation Vital To Victory, CIO Warns

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—Fair taxation to raise revenue from excess profits and war millionaires and to spare already meager workers' income is essential to victory production, the CIO Executive Board declared in a resolution on the tax program passed unanimously during the two-day session here this week.

Full production requires that American workers "receive incomes sufficient to maintain the worker and his family in full efficiency, good health and well-being," the resolution said in pointing out that Pres. Roosevelt's tax program could be raised without further cutting into workers' earnings.

FIVE-POINT PROGRAM

The resolution called for a five-point tax program to be presented to Congress within the next few weeks as the 1942 tax bill comes up, based on:

1. Increased normal and excess profits taxes on corporations;

2. Increased taxes on high incomes, leaving the present exemptions;

3. Closing of present loopholes in taxes on the rich and on corporations;

4. Higher rates and lower exemptions on estate and gift taxes;

5. Excise taxes on certain luxury goods.

The Executive Board expressed sharp opposition to proposals for a general sales tax, now much discussed in Congressional circles, describing them as "the most vicious kind of discrimination against the working people."

The Board's action was based on studies prepared by the CIO showing that present taxes bear most heavily on those least able to pay and citing official figures to show that most workers have "less income than is necessary to provide a standard of living providing full efficiency, good health and well-being for the workers and their families."

"Taxes which cut into incomes below the level necessary to maintain a proper standard of living will seriously impair the war effort by injuring the health and efficiency of American workers," the CIO report read.

"It therefore seems essential that the last income to be taxed should be that necessary to maintain a proper standard of living for American people. All other sources of taxation should be exhausted first."

TAXES ON LIVING

Plans for sales taxes, percentage taxes and wage taxes come from "reactionary groups seeking to prevent effective taxation of profits and high incomes," the CIO pointed out, warning that reactionary Congressmen are hard at work scheming to put over such imposts on the workers.

The CIO study also criticized proposals for withholding taxes and forced savings, explaining that both were usually accompanied by schemes adding to the burden on workers' incomes and would also cut into living standards and morale necessary for full war production.

Seek Raises, Union Told

main points as an economic basis for wage increases.

Included in these points were huge profits reports by corporations, a 9.8 per cent rise in living costs during the past year, with more coming, and studies to show that workers must have wage boosts to keep living standards from collapse, with consequent damage to morale and loss of war production.

HIT FALSE ARGUMENTS

Meeting the false argument that wage increases would cause inflation—an argument used both by employers in negotiations and by their agents in Congress in pushing wage freezing and other anti-union schemes, the report said:

"Wages should be increased in order to distribute equitably the income of industry. It is improper for industry to refuse wage increases on the ground that to do so would increase general purchasing power to inflationary levels."

Board Blasts Dies

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—The record of Chairman Dies of the un-American Committee "has been one of the most sordid and reprehensible in the annals of Congress," the CIO Executive Board declared at its Jan. 24-26 meeting held here, and Congress should refuse to grant him any more funds for his disruptive work.

The Board, hitting out sharply at the red-herring expert from the poll-tax state of Texas, accused him of using Congress and the "status of a House Committee" to "interfere with and harass the President of the U. S. in his conduct of foreign affairs and the establishment of cooperative relations with the Allies of this nation," in addition to his smear attacks on labor and on liberals and progressives in the government.

SEEDS OF DISUNITY

The resolution, which was forwarded by Pres. Murray to the Speaker of the House, to the two major party leaders and to the chairman of the House Accounts Committee, declared that Dies had consistently conspired:

"To attack and weaken bona fide labor unions when engaged in the life-and-death struggle with employers and at the very moment when such attack was intended to lend aid and comfort to the employers;

"To sow the seeds of disunity and discord among the people of this nation by creating evil hatred against labor unions, aliens and other minority groups, thereby weakening the national unity so earnestly desired by most Americans, which policy, if continued, merely offers aid and comfort to the Axis powers."

The resolution also pointed to Dies' invariable trick of making lavish promises of probing Axis fifth column activity at appropriation time, and then using all the money obtained under these false pretenses to attack labor unions and other progressive groups.

The Board recommended to the House "in the interests of our nation and in order to achieve the national unity so necessary to successful prosecution of the war, that if Congress believes it to be necessary to have a continuation of any investigation of un-American activities in this country, or of any activities intended to disrupt or weaken the united war effort, a new committee with responsible and fair-minded leadership be established in lieu of the un-American Dies Committee."

CIO Resolutions on Unity, Victory Drive, Wages, Taxes

UNITY:

WHEREAS, 1) The most effective prosecution of the war demands that the living standards of the workers be maintained and constantly improved and that the continued existence and growth of labor unions be guaranteed; and

2) The living standards of the workers of the nation are being seriously threatened as a result of the spiraling of the cost of living and the increased taxes upon the low income groups; and

3) Financial reports for 1941 show a tremendous increase in profits for employers, after all taxes, as compared to 1939, in such basic industries as steel, shipbuilding and electrical and machine manufacturing, with even greater profits to be anticipated in 1942 due to vastly increased production. These returns clearly permit employers to pay wage increases without involving corresponding price increases; and

4) The burdens and sacrifices inherent in our war effort must be borne equitably by all groups and segments in our national life. NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED THAT:

1) The Executive Board recommends to its affiliated unions that there be incorporated among the demands in current or anticipated collective bargaining wage conferences one for a substantial wage increase and union security; and

2) The fulfillment of this policy will assure workers that their unions are guaranteed the right to live free from attack and that they will receive a fair share of the national income, which conviction will unleash the unmeasured energy of the workers for maximum war production.

WAR POLICY:

The CIO was organized to afford the workers in American industries the opportunity of achieving economic and political democracy. Today the presence of five million members in the CIO testifies to its sincerity of purpose and soundness of principles. Through powerful industrial unions, the CIO has steadily improved the living standards of the workers throughout the nation. Through its determined action the CIO has secured national and state legislation preserving and extending the rights of labor. Through its progressive policies, the CIO has achieved for its members a greater and more democratic participation in the political and economic affairs of the nation.

Labor unity among all the workers of the nation within a powerful labor movement espousing these basic progressive and humanitarian principles has always been one of the aspirations of the CIO.

One Objective

The issue of labor unity must be viewed today in light of the all embracing problem which now confronts the American people. Every American is interested in one objective—to win the war. Any contribution which organized labor can make toward this objective must be the desire of every affiliated member.

The CIO is wholeheartedly in favor of initiating and perfecting arrangements with the American Federation of Labor looking toward joint action on all measures which will aid our nation in winning the war.

The CIO and AFL recently entered into an agreement with the government that in the endeavor to obtain maximum production to assure victory, there would be no stoppages of work and that all disputes between labor and management or between rival labor organizations would be submitted to available government machinery for peaceful settlement and disposition.

Pursuant to this agreement, the President of the United States issued an executive order establishing thereunder a National War Labor Board in which the CIO and the AFL are participating to assure its successful operation and administration. This initial step of joint action between the CIO and AFL should be broadened and extended.

There still remain certain important and basic questions confronting the nation in our war program toward which organized labor can make valuable contributions, particularly if joint action is taken.

First, it is crucial that every step possible be taken for the increase in production of ships, guns, airplanes, tanks and other munitions of war. The CIO has been foremost in this national effort. The CIO and AFL should proceed to effectuate a joint program which will obtain maximum production in every mill and plant throughout the nation. This is the primary task before us today and one which cannot await discussion on any other issue.

Joint Action

Labor is vitally concerned in the successful outcome of the war. Only through united and joint action will organized labor succeed in obtaining its rightful participation in the government war councils. Likewise through joint action labor will be able to best fulfill its duties and responsibilities to the nation.

Second, in prosecuting the war it is of the utmost importance that the morale of the American workers be maintained and constantly improved. Only in this manner will we convey to the American workers the real meaning of our present war against the Axis powers.

The living standards of the workers must be protected. The continued existence and growth of labor unions must be guaranteed. This can be accomplished through the establishment of union security.

A proper tax program apportioning the burdens of the cost of government expenditures among the people on an equitable basis is essential. It is equally important that steps be taken to control and prevent the spiraling of the cost of living. Measures must be adopted to extend and broaden social security.

The impact of present unemployment resulting from conversion of plants from a peace to a war basis must be cushioned through governmental payments to the unemployed and steps taken to shorten the period as much as possible to avoid any loss of production through idle men or idle machines.

Postwar Problems

In addition, labor must face the difficulties which will follow in the wake of the war and assume the leadership in the present formulation of measures to meet postwar problems. Organized labor must establish its rightful place in the councils of the nation and secure the representation in government to which it is entitled.

These are but a few of the immediate social and economic problems for which executive and legislative action must be taken. Joint action between the CIO and AFL in regard to these questions would command attention.

Organic unity between the CIO and AFL is an additional problem which merits the attention of organized labor. The CIO desires a unified labor movement which will reflect the aspirations and needs of the American workers. This would necessarily require a recognition of the industrial form of union organization in the mass production and basic industries and the absolute need of nondiscrimination against any affiliated union or any member of the CIO.

A permanent solution of this question presents numerous difficulties. The adjustment of this problem must not be permitted to weaken or destroy the existing and developing united action of labor—both nationally and locally—in the prosecution of the national war effort.

The CIO therefore accepts with sincere appreciation the suggestion of President Roosevelt to participate in the formation of Labor's Victory Board to serve during the war in collaboration with the President of the United States and thereby assure the maximum contribution and participation of labor in the war program. Such action will best strengthen the national war effort and promote the cause of labor unity.

TAXES:

WHEREAS, (1) The war production program requires the best efforts of all American workers, and

(2) It is essential in order to reach such maximum production that American workers and their families receive incomes sufficient to maintain the worker and his family in full efficiency, good health and well-being, and

(3) Profits of industry under the war program are soaring to outrageous heights, and

(4) The President of the United States has asked for an additional tax program of seven billion dollars and such an amount can be collected from taxes which do not fall further upon working men and their families, NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED:

That the CIO call upon the Congress to enact a tax program which will stop war profiteering and the creation of war millionaires and which will protect the standard of living necessary to maintain American production at a maximum. Such a program should provide for the necessary federal revenue to come from the following sources:

1. Increased normal taxes and excess profit taxes on corporations.

2. Increased taxes on the present individual income tax base.

3. Closing of loopholes in the individual income tax and the corporation taxes, such as mandatory joint returns and tax-free bonds.

4. Increased rates and lowered exemptions on estate and gift taxes.

5. Excise taxes on certain luxury goods; and further

BE IT RESOLVED:

That the CIO oppose most vigorously any attempt to establish a general sales tax or a flat wage tax for general revenue because such taxes are the most vicious kind of discrimination against the working people.

The executive officers of the CIO are hereby authorized to proceed with the prosecution of such a tax program, to urge its passage in the Congress of the United States and to call upon all affiliates to support it unstintingly.

PRODUCTION:

WHEREAS, (1) The CIO has been foremost in the national effort to achieve as quickly as possible the maximum production of all munitions of war and other goods required for the successful prosecution of the war.

(2) Toward this end the Murray Industrial Council Plan was formulated by the CIO and presented to the national officials responsible for the war production program and pursuant to which individual plans for increased production were also submitted by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee for the steel industry; by the United Automobile Workers of America for the automobile and aviation industry; by the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers for the copper and non-ferrous metals industry; by the Aluminum Workers of America for the aluminum industry; and by the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union for the maritime industry;

(3) The war production administrative machinery has been recently reorganized by the President of the United States as the result of nationwide demand for increasing production of munitions of war; now, therefore, be it RESOLVED

(1) The CIO offers to Donald Nelson, chairman and director of the newly created War Production Board, its full resources in manpower and brains to achieve the maximum production so necessary for the successful persecution of the war;

(2) The President of the CIO is hereby directed to communicate with Mr. Nelson for the purpose of resubmitting to him the various plans and proposals which the national office of the CIO and the several affiliated unions of the CIO have formulated in the endeavor to achieve such maximum production; and

(3) The War Production Board should immediately implement the recent proposal of President Roosevelt to organized labor inviting full labor participation in the prosecution of the war by affording labor direct representation and complete participation within the administrative machinery responsible for obtaining the production of munitions of war.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

The CIO Executive Board meeting in New York took a broad and thoroughly realistic position on the most vital issues of the day—the victory program, the question of united labor effort behind the war against the Axis, wage policy, taxation and other major issues.

In each resolution and decision passed the CIO showed its determination to press ahead with full determination to do everything in the power of the representatives of five million workers to attain the nation's No. 1 objective—winning the war for freedom.

Of the list of major issues decided, CIO's determination to serve on the Labor Victory Board on President Roosevelt's request is perhaps one of the most important and far-reaching in recent labor history. The CIO has been pressing for direct labor participation, first in the defense program and since Pearl Harbor in the victory program, for many months. The new Labor Victory Board is a long step in the direction of this direct participation.

It will be of the greatest service to our country and to our allies to have labor officially represented by persons of its own choosing in the councils of the national war effort. It brings the energy, the brains and the fighting capacity of America's millions of workers more and more closely into the national drive to beat Hitler and his fascist puppets.

Planning Still Needed

The need for use of labor's production plans is still great, as the board pointed out in another resolution urging adoption of the Murray Industrial Council Plan, of the steel plan, the copper plan, and others put forward by CIO affiliates. These plans represent the best thought of the men who know how to produce—the men who do the producing. They offer a blueprint for victory, for all-out production of the material for arms and of the finished arms themselves.

At the same time, the CIO Board went on record to protect the welfare and morale of the men and women who produce the arms and goods we need by registering its determination to seek higher wages and to resist unduly heavy taxes on the people least able to pay.

Both these issues are extremely important in the victory effort. We cannot make planes and tanks, ships and guns with workers who don't get enough wages to buy sufficient food. The cost of living is constantly jumping—recent wage increases have been greatly cut down if not eliminated by rising food costs. To keep our country strong, we must keep our people strong. The only way to do this is to guarantee that they get enough money to buy the food, the clothing and the shelter they need.

Organizing

And this means we must organize and keep on organizing. Nobody ever won a better wage and a decent standard of living by wishing for it. If that were possible, we wouldn't have a CIO or any other kind of labor union, because we wouldn't need it.

But wishing never got anyone very far—and that is why we must organize and organize until every worker has a strong, industrial union to stand up for him and win him a better life. Organization is essential to keep up and improve our living standards. Good living standards are essential to morale and to the nation victory effort. Every member we sign up, every election we win, every contract we secure is another nail in Hitler's coffin.

Elections, Contracts Won

Paul R. Christopher in Knoxville, Tenn., reports winning an election at the Tennessee Products Corporation in Rockwood, Tenn., with following results: IUMMSW, 323; against, 1.

This victory is particularly significant in view of the fact that the workers in Roane County determined to avenge the brutal assault of two CIO organizers last September.

George Craig, regional director in Philadelphia, reports winning an election at the Harbison-Walker Brick Manufacturing Company, with following results: UCWOC, 241; no union, 15.

CIO Field Representative Whitman in Indianapolis reports signing a contract with the Wonder Bread division of the Continental Baking Company which he believes is one of the best contracts in that area. They obtained the union shop, vacation with pay, seniority rights, increase in wages and many other fine gains. They also signed an agreement with the Hostess Cake division of the Continental Baking Co., which carries a wage increase of 10 cents per hour plus other gains for the workers.

Two of the most important Labor Board elections held since Pearl Harbor have just been won by CIO unions with big majorities. One was at the huge Caterpillar Tractor Co. in Peoria, Ill., where the Farm Equipment Workers took the vote by 5,814 to 4,886 from the AFL. The other was at the Sikorsky aircraft plant in Fairfield, Conn., where the UAWA beat the AFL 2,440 to 290, no union getting 1,401 votes.

Caterpillar Shop Goes Heavily CIO

PEORIA, Ill., Jan. 31—Caterpillar Tractor, largest farm equipment plant in the world, is now CIO. The Farm Equipment Workers' Organizing Committee won a run-off election there this week by a vote of 5814 to 4886 for an AFL union.

In defeating the AFL, Local 105 of the FEWOC secured sole bargaining rights for the 14,000 "Cat" workers employed in the huge plant. An independent union withdrew from the ballot before the run-off was held.

At the first election held at the Caterpillar plant, the CIO topped the AFL by a thousand votes but fell short of a clear majority because of the "no" votes.

In a statement issued after the election Forest Cummings, president of the FEWOC Caterpillar local and FEWOC Secretary-Treasurer Gerald Fielde, urged all AFL members to unite with the CIO to achieve the union's program of higher wages, increased war production and genuine labor unity.

Grant Oakes, chairman of the CIO Farm Equipment Workers, said that the victory at Caterpillar left the Deere Co. as the only major farm equipment concern not yet organized by the CIO. The majority of the workers of International Harvester, Allis Chalmers, Oliver and J. I. Case have all voted for the CIO as sole bargaining agent, he declared.

CIO Auxiliaries Celebrate Beat Hitler Week

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—Nationwide plans for the celebration of Beat Hitler Week, Feb. 2-9, were reported this week by auxiliaries affiliated with the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO.

Tag day on Feb. 6, 7 and 8, in cooperation with the British-American Ambulance Corps, will feature the week in New York City. A thousand auxiliary women will be on the streets with collection cans marked, "Beat Hitler, Help Buy an Ambulance for the AEF," according to Mrs. Beatrice Abramson, president of the newly-formed Greater New York Auxiliary Council. Papier mache ambulances are being distributed to every New York union hall for the collection of funds from union members.

A mass meeting in Los Angeles, in which women's groups will participate, was reported by Louise Bennett, secretary of the Los Angeles Auxiliary Council. Flying squadrons of auxiliary members are visiting every CIO union in the area to put on a skit entitled, "The Incendiary Bomb," and advertise the auxiliary Beat Hitler Week program.

A state-wide radio broadcast in Utah, and a mass meeting or party in every local auxiliary in the state, is reported by Harriet Duffin, president of the Utah State Council and member of the National Board of the Auxiliary Congress of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union. Two days in the week have been set aside during which each auxiliary member will sign up at least one new member as Utah's contribution to the National "Organize for Victory" drive.

Billie O'Neil, secretary of the Utah Council, announces a dance in the Cocoanut Grove in Salt Lake City, largest dance hall in the west, to be held during the week and sponsored jointly by Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Local 347 and its auxiliary.

Goodyear Signs Pact For Michigan Plant

JACKSON, Mich., Jan. 31—Substantial gains were won by Local 185 in its first contract with the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. here, according to Harry Doll, chief of the Goodyear Organizing Drive.

The new contract provides for a 7 cents an hour increase in base rates for men and a 5 cents an hour increase in base rates for women.

Piece-work prices are to be adjusted so that they will be at least 10 per cent over the new base rates.

Base rates of truck tire builders were upped from $1.05-1.10 an hour to $1.20-1.25 an hour.

The wage increases provided for in the contract were in addition to a series of wage raises granted at the Goodyear plant in the course of a URWA organizing drive last year.

The contract also provides standard clauses on senoirity, paid vacations, overtime pay and other provisions.

Stone Union Wins Boost

Barre, Vt., Jan. 31—An agreement providing a nine per cent pay increase has been signed with the Carlyle Tile Co., the CIO United Stone & Allied Products Workers announced this week.

John Lawson, secretary-treasurer of the union, said that a feature of the contract was an accumulative seniority clause covering employes who enter the military service and guaranteeing to return them to their former jobs upon their discharge by Uncle Sam.

FASHION NOTE: Pretty Marcella Hendricks of New York reported for air warden duty in this snappy hat model. The recipe: One 1917 war helmet; a feather for her hat, Yankee Doodle style; and a V for Victory.

Auxiliaries On CBS Feb. 3

Washington, Jan. 30—The first coast-to-coast broadcast by the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries will be on the air Tuesday, February 3, from 6:30 to 6:45 p.m. EST, over the network of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Speakers will be Mrs. Faye Stephenson, president of the CIO Congress of Auxiliaries, and Allan S. Haywood, national director of organization, CIO.

All CIO Auxiliaries are urged to get in touch with their local CBS station to make sure the program is carried. Letters have gone out from the Congress, 1407 L St., N.W., Washington, D. C., asking affiliates to plan listening parties, etc.

Morgenthau Lauds CIO Auto Workers For Bond Sales Drive

DETROIT, Jan. 31—The real heart of the war effort is not in Washington but in the workshops and factories of America, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., told more than 5,000 listeners at a defense rally of the United Automobile Workers held here last Sunday.

"It is a good and wholesome experience for any official from Washington to come here to Detroit to meet a great audience of automobile workers," the Secretary said, in opening his speech.

"We in Washington are much too accustomed to think that we sit in the very center of the war effort. For the past few weeks we have seen our Capital City become, in a sense, the capital of the world, the scene of wartime planning on a world-wide scale.

WORKERS COUNT

"The officials and admirals and generals of many countries are working together in Washington at this very moment, planning the military, naval and economic strategy that will bring Japan and Germany to their knees. Yet all our strategy, no matter how brilliant, cannot accomplish its decisive purpose until the materials of victory have rolled from America's assembly lines.

"All the individual daring and bravery of our men in uniform cannot win the war unless they are backed by the mass production of the implements of war. The real heart of the war effort is, therefore, not in Washington but right here in your workshops and factories. The big push begins here."

SOUNDEST SENSE

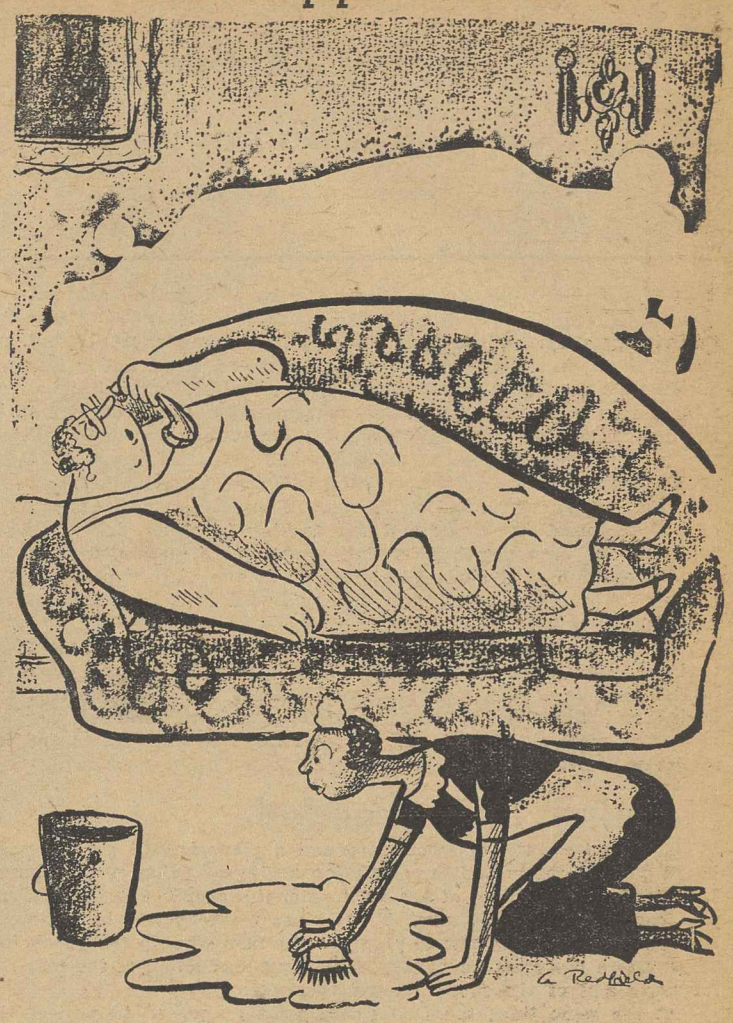
Referring to an earlier appearance he had made in Detroit when he attended meetings of shop stewards at Pontiac, in November, Secretary Morgenthau said that in that one evening he heard "more sound common sense than I had heard in many meetings, in Washington and elsewhere. From that day I have been convinced that American labor has been ahead of all of us in its willingness to produce armaments to win the war, whatever the sacrifices, whatever the consequences."

The rank and file of American labor had good reason, the Secretary said, to be in the forefront in understanding the war and responding to wartime needs. "Upon your skill, your sweat, your willingness to dedicate yourselves to war production, the ultimate outcome will very largely depend," he told the auto workers.

Morgenthau explained in his speech, which was to promote the sale of U. S. Defense Bonds, that he was aware of the mass unemployment facing workers in the automobile industry who had temporarily lost their jobs because of the conversion to wartime production, and that he did not expect those who are walking the streets to buy bonds.

"But for those who do receive regular pay, those who have good jobs at good wages, there is a greater need than ever to 'make every payday Bond day,'" he said.

The Upper Crust



"Oh, those horrid sugar rations. I suppose next they'll want me to keep fit by scrubbing my own floors."

Oppose Rise In Gotham Transit Fares

New York, Jan. 31—Opposition to any increase in the fare on city-owned subway lines was declared this week by the Greater New York Industrial Union Council. The Council also asked Mayor La Guardia to reconsider his order placing city employes on a six-day work week.

A resolution passed by the Council said that "there are no emergency work needs which at present make such an order necessary."

A resolution on the proposed fare increase declared that it "would considerably increase the cost of living for hundreds of thousands of small wage-earners," and that not one penny of the "millions of dollars of increased revenue" would go to the 33,000 transit employes."

Street Car Men Win Union Shop

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—An interim agreement with the three contending unions involved in the dispute which threatened to tie up street car and bus transportation in Los Angeles was announced last week by the National War Labor Board.

The agreement which affects 3,500 employes of the Los Angeles Railway Corp., was made with the aid of the labor members of the Board and was signed by representatives of the CIO Transport Workers, the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and by the AFL Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway & Motor Coach Employes.

It provides for the immediate reinstatement of 135 employes discharged by the company for failure to join the AFL union, which has a closed shop contract and for a freezing of the status quo on membership in the three unions pending final decision by the Board.

MUST JOIN UNION

Employes who are not members of any union are to be required to join one of the three unions within 30 days and to remain in good standing as a condition of employment.

The dispute has been referred to the full Board for final determination with all parties agreeing to comply with the Board's decision.

Biggest Men's Hose Firm Signs Again With CIO

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., Jan. 31—Negotiated under a formal "no-strike" policy, a new contract has been signed between the CIO American Federation of Hosiery Workers and the Interwoven Stocking Company here, providing for two cost-of-living wage increases of five per cent each. The first increase is effective in March and the second begins in June of this year.

Announcement of the signing of the new contract was made by Alfred Hoffmann, First Vice-President of the AFHW, following acceptance of the instrument by membership of Branch 92 on January 26th. The contract replaces one cancelled by the Company late last year, which action forced calling a National Labor Relations Board election to determine whether the CIO union or the so-called "independent" represented the majority of Interwoven employes. The union won the election December 19th by a vote of 750 to 632.

IMPROVEMENT

Hoffman described the new contract as a definite improvement over the one cancelled in that it contains "a generally strengthened overtime pay provision, a reporting-pay clause, the checkoff of dues for union members, complete arbitration under American Arbitration Association and provides that the wage clauses may be reopened next November 1.

"I believe that this contract contains the most clearly defined method of handling grievances I have ever seen," Hoffmann said.

Interwoven is the largest manufacturer of men's hose.

Go Back to Jobs

Los Angeles, Jan. 31—Employes of the Los Angeles Railway Corp. and the Los Angeles Motor Coach Co., who had been fired for refusing to join an alleged company dominated union, this week were back on their jobs under a decision of labor representatives on the National War Labor Board.

Company officials, who had spurned an earlier recommendation of Board Chairman William H. Davis that the men be reinstated, hurriedly changed their minds.

A clause in the temporary settlement reached by labor men on the board last week said that the status quo in union membership be maintained as of Jan. 15. All employes who were members of the CIO on that date shall remain members of the CIO, while workers who were in the AFL Streetcarmen's Union or the Brotherhood must continue membership in those organizations.

What the ruling means, union leaders pointed out, is that three closed shops are in effect on the property, pending final action by the War Board.

However, no worker can be discharged while he belongs to any of the three unions.

In the event any disputes arise because of the overlapping of the closed shop or the application of any of the provisions of the agreement, the local representatives of the three unions shall try to settle them, but if they fail, the disputes shall be referred to the four labor members of the board for final decision.

Major NLRB Polls Won by CIO Unions

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7—Proof that workers are continuing to look to the CIO for protection was seen today in reports of several major victories in National Labor Relations Board elections.

At Haverhill, Mass., workers in 23 shoe factories turned in disgust from the do-nothing tactics of a reactionary AFL affiliate and voted to be represented by the CIO United Shoe Workers. Almost 4,000 workers voted.

In a poll of similar size, employes of the big Sikorsky plane factory in Connecticut chose the CIO United Automobile Workers. An earlier election had been indecisive, with neither CIO nor AFL winning a majority.

CIO unions overcame terror tactics in two southern communities to win bargaining rights. At the Limestone Mills in Gaffney, S. C., employes voted 2-1 for the Textile Workers Union, while Roane County smelter men voted 323-1 for the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers despite a wave of vigilanteism that had swept the county for some time.

Meanwhile the NLRB's annual report showed that CIO unions won more than 70 per cent of the 1,400 elections in which they participated during 1941. Altogether, over 330,000 workers voted CIO during the year in those polls.

Washington, Feb. 7—Hearings on Senator Pepper's bill to abolish the poll-tax in federal elections are to begin March 5. They will be conducted by a sub-committee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, headed by Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming. CIO President Philip Murray will be among those invited to testify.

The CIO has long campaigned for abolition of the poll-tax, which effectively disfranchises millions of workers and other low-income groups in the states where it is in effect. But the issue has long been dodged by Congress.

Other members of the sub-committee conducting the poll-tax hearings are Senators Austin of Vermont, Connally of Texas, Norris of Nebraska and Abe Murdock of Utah.

The National Committee to Abolish the Poll-Tax, headed by Representative Eliot of Massachusetts and with mail address, P. O. Box 1355, Washington, D. C., is seeking the cooperation of all democratically-minded Americans in its drive against the poll-tax. It urges that as many individual letters as possible be addressed to their Senators by opponents of the tax, now that the issue is finally being brought to the fore in Congress.

Indiana CIO Hits Sale Tax

Indianapolis, Feb. 7—Opposition to Federal sales taxes, now being planned in reactionary Congressional circles, was expressed by the Indiana State CIO Council in a statement issued by Secretary-Treasurer Walter Frisbie.

"Sales taxes, such as have been proposed by several congressmen would, we are confident, have a deleterious effect upon our defense program," Frisbie said. "Right now next to the men who are facing the enemy, the men who man the machines of industry are most important to our war effort.

"With their incomes reduced by the rising cost of living, the low income group of defense workers would upon the passage of a sales tax be faced with a serious health problem."

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 7—"Uncle Sam" gained a $40-an-hour income boost here as the result of negotiations conducted by Local 206 of the CIO Transport Workers Union.

After winning five-cent-an-hour raises in recent pact negotiations, the local's 800 members voted to have the increases turned over to the government.

The local has 90 per cent of the New Orleans trucking industry under contract. It has agreed with the individual employers to check off the pay boost from each worker until enough money has been accumulated to purchase a defense bond. The bond will be turned over to the employe and deductions will start on the next one.

ACTIVE IN OCD

Intl. Representative Warren G. Horie pointed out that the local has taken active part in Civilian Defense activities, with every member signed up for one project or another. Classes in first aid are being conducted in the union hall.

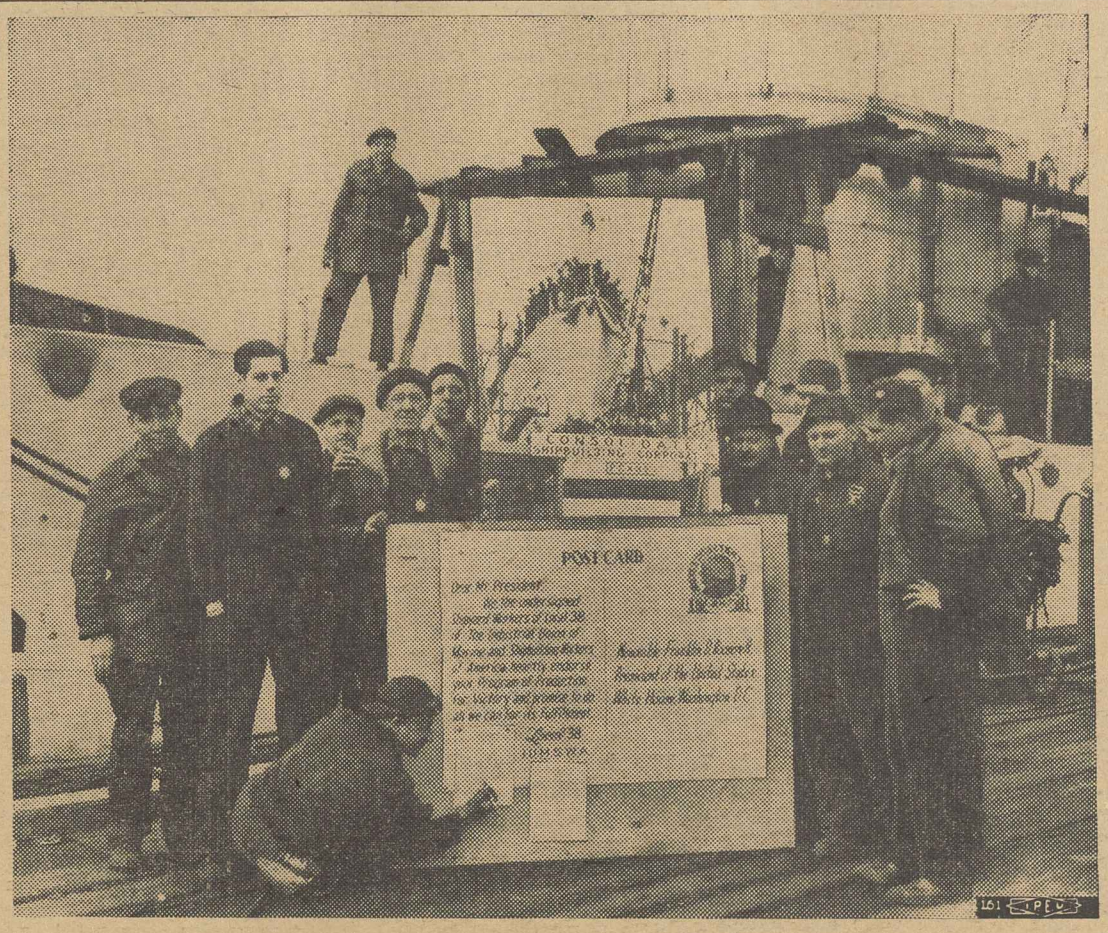
Members of the local and auxiliary are also collecting scrap metal needed by the government. Barrels are set up in places of employment and at union headquarters, and the collections are turned over to the Salvation Army.

Income Tax Service

TOLEDO, Feb. 7—Answering dozens of requests, the Toledo Industrial Union Council has set up a service to aid CIO members puzzled by income tax problems.

The council has made arrangements with a local labor attorney to be on hand at council headquarters three evenings a week to assist unionists in filling out their tax blanks. A small fee is being charged for the service.

Council Secretary Kenneth Cole pointed out that a large number of CIO members who will be paying income taxes for the first time "are confused as to how to go about it."



KEEP 'EM SLIDING: That's the slogan of Local 38, CIO Shipyard Workers at the Consolidated Shipbuilding Corp., and they're striving for increased production so that an ever-increasing number of boats may slide off the ways into the ocean waters. Members of the local's committee are shown signing a pledge for greater output; the card and picture were mailed to President Roosevelt.

Bellanca Signs Union Shop Pact

Baltimore, Feb. 7—A union shop, check off contract providing an estimated $286,000 a year wage increase for 500 employes will be signed this week by the United Auto Workers Union and the Bellanca Aircraft Co., of New Castle, Del., Regional CIO Director Frank J. Bender said today.

The contract, which is expected to affect 4,500 additional employes to be hired by mid-Summer, boosted plant minimum pay from 50 cents an hour to 70 cents for women and 75 cents for men, Bender declared.

Ratified unanimously by the workers, the pact provides for a general 15 cents an hour increase, but actual raises average 20 cents an hour due to reclassifications of jobs and pay scales which must be completed by June 1, Bender said.

The contract, signed for a year, provides for an eight-hour day, and a 40-hour, five-day week—Monday to Friday, with time and a half paid for Saturday work and for all work done before the regular starting time or after the regular quitting time.

CIO Unions Sweep Big Polls

4,000 Shoe Workers Vote CIO, Discard Sleepy AFL Outfit

By HORACE DAVIS

HAVERHILL, Mass., Feb. 7—Haverhill's thousands of shoe workers this week kicked out a reactionary and autocratic AFL union and cast their lot with the CIO United Shoe Workers of America.

Workers in 23 shops, representing the bulk of the industry in this important manufacturing city, repudiated the autocratic reign of the AFL Boot & Shoe Workers Union in an NLRB election in which some 3,700 persons voted. The results:

CIO	1,952
Neither	143

It was at the beginning of January 1936, that the Haverhill shoe workers, who had lost interest in the independent United Shoe and Leather Workers Union, accepted the leadership of the AFL union and settled down to an interval of appointed officials and no union meetings.

HAD NO MEMBERS

The Boot and Shoe Workers Union had no members in most of the shops for which it signed contracts at the end of 1935. The workers had not seen these contracts, which were periodically renewed, up to the time that some genuine local leaders called in the United Shoe Workers in 1941 and demanded democratic rights.

Faced with the prospect of an NLRB election, the Boot and Shoe at first refused; but later, rather than go through the hearing on the merits of the election petition, it consented and the election was held on January 29.

The workers voted as a unit in the 23 shops, all of which are now obligated to bargain with the United Shoe Workers as agent of the workers. It is very seldom that the NLRB holds elections in so many shops as a single unit. This is the greatest mass transfer of AFL shoe workers into the CIO since the shoe and slipper industry of New York City came over in 1937.

In the campaign which preceded the election the CIO leader was Harry Capell of New York. He was ably assisted by E. H. Tucker, leader of the component parts locals of the USWA, which have been in the CIO from the beginning. Also active in the fight was a local committee of Haverhill shoe workers.

The USWA (CIO) emphasized the issue of democracy in the union.

The Boot and Shoe conducted a subtle campaign of terrorization, spreading the rumor that if the CIO won the election, the shoe industry would move out of town. This argument was effectively answered when the United Shoe Workers of America quoted figures from New York, showing that the number of shoe workers had increased in five years under the CIO at the same time that the industry maintained the highest wages and the best conditions in the industry.

Since the victory in Haverhill, inquiries have come pouring in from open shops in other parts of New England, and a rapid expansion of United Shoe Workers of America membership in that area is anticipated.

Vigilantes Licked in Tennessee

Rockwood, Tenn., Feb. 7—Like the people in the correspondence school advertisements, Tennessee reactionaries "laughed when the CIO set out to organize Roane County," long a vigilante stronghold.

This week the Tories were laughing on the other side of their faces as the CIO Mine Mill & Smelter Workers came up with a 323-1 election victory at the Tennessee Products Corp. The smashing election victory indicated that Roane County's long career as a center of vigilanteism and terror is nearing an end.

In Knoxville, Tennessee, CIO Secretary Paul Christopher asserted that the election "is the key to the organization of Roane County by the CIO and shows beyond any possible doubt that given a free election, southern workers want real unionism."

HELP FROM UNIONS

Assisting Christopher in the long and hectic organizing campaign were members of the southern staff of the Mine Mill & Smelter Workers, Districts 19 and 50 of the United Mine Workers, and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Kidnapings, beatings, police intimidation and some plain and fancy terror concocted by the county political machine figured in the campaign that began here last summer.

Rockwood is the center of a vicious, American Legion-led movement to keep unions out of Roane County. With the victory here, it is expected that the CIO unions of the state will move in quickly to organize the various brick plants, hosiery and textile mills that have used terror to resist all forms of unionization.

SCENE OF FLOGGING

It was in Roane County last September that Homer Wilson, organizer for the Mine Mill & Smelter Workers, and Oscar Wiles, an organizer for District 50, were tarred, beaten and left nude on a lonely mountain after being kidnapped from their automobile while riding back to Knoxville from a union meeting here.

The FBI has investigated the flogging, but so far no formal action has been taken against those responsible, although reliable reports indicated that the G-men had identified the five men.

Gain Big Majority At Sikorsky

DETROIT, Feb. 7—A major election victory today spurred the aircraft organizing drive of the CIO.

In a swift comeback from a reversal at the polls last September, the UAW-CIO won sole bargaining rights at the busy Vought-Sikorsky plane plant in Stratford, Conn. The results:

CIO	2,240
No union	1,401

Richard T. Frankensteen, director of the aircraft drive, recalled that last Autumn, the largest group of workers voted for no union, with a slightly smaller group voting for the CIO and the AFL running third. At that time, none of the groups gained a majority.

Meanwhile the CIO union appeared headed for an election victory at the giant Wright Aeronautical Co. plant near Paterson, N. J., where well over 20,000 persons are employed. The UAW-CIO announced it will seek an NLRB poll after the council of the independent union at the plant had voted 29-20 to affiliate with the CIO union.

By DON McKEE

GAFFNEY, S. C., Feb. 9—Workers of the Limestone Mills here answered five years of ruthless company opposition against the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, by voting almost two to one for TWUA-CIO as their collective bargaining agency.

A recent South Carolina TWUA conference called attacks against union organization at the Limestone Mill and the four other plants of the same Hamrick chain "a reign of terror unequalled in the history of organized labor in South Carolina."

But today the Limestone workers had voted 205 for the Textile Workers Union of America to only 120 against.

Out of 380 eligible voters in the plant, 336 cast their ballots. TWUA challenged the votes of ten supervisory employes whom the company insisted on sending to the polls. One vote was blank.

H. P. White, TWUA Representative from Columbia, S. C., was in charge of the TWUA drive which led up to the election victory. He was assisted by Dr. Witherspoon Dodge, Greenville TWUA representative.

TERRORISM, VIOLENCE GONE

The TWUA victory at the Labor Board polls today signaled an end to the violence and terrorism which has been directed against the CIO in the Limestone, Hamrick and Alma plants of the Hamrick chain of mills here.

Three years ago TWUA had to postpone a scheduled Labor Board election at these three plants when company union thugs broke up a TWUA mass meeting at the Alma mill, attacked two union leaders, and showered TWUA Representative Witherspoon Dodge with rocks. Local police were present but did not interfere with the beatings.

Prior to this attack on the union in 1938, the AFL had tried to organize the Hamrick plants but its organization had been smashed after strike-breakers were imported from Atlanta to break up picket lines and 75 shotgun pellets pumped into one of the union's leaders.

With the postponement of the scheduled Labor Board election in May, 1938, a systematic campaign was started to drive out the TWUA. Organization of company unions—"Free Fellowship Clubs"—was helped by the sudden appearance of "Prayer Bands" on the mill villages which preached that CIO stood for "Christ Is Out."

Settle Bendix Dispute

Washington, Feb. 7.—Settlement of the dispute between the Bendix Aviation Corp., South Bend, Ind., and the CIO United Automobile Workers was announced last week by the National War Labor Board.

President S. H. Dalrymple of the United Rubber Workers was the labor member on the mediation panel which effected the settlement after four days of hearings. The plant employs 7,612 workers.

Terms of the agreement which were not announced, are subject to ratification by the union. The issues involved were the union's demand for increased wages, the union shop and the check-off.

CIO Wins 'Music' Polls

Elkhart, Ind., Feb. 7—The United Musical Instrument Workers Union which conducted a 13-week strike against the Pedler Co. and the Martin Band Instrument Co. here recently won a Labor Board election by a vote of 107 to 66.

The union's victory was won in the face of numerous attempts to break its ranks, including an effort by supervisors and stooges to line the members up with the AFL and sign a "sweetheart" contract; a back-to work movement and formation of a company union.

Win Toy Walkout

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 7—Several years' effort to unionize the Boorum & Pease Co., second largest manufacturer of loose-leaf books, ledgers and office supplies, is approaching successful conclusion, the United Paper, Novelty & Toy Workers International Union announced here this week.

The union conducted a ten-weeks' strike against the company, which ended with an NLRB election victory and a stipulation agreement requiring negotiations for a contract, and reinstatement of all workers on strike without discrimination.

1,500 Fur Workers Get Second Raise

New York, Feb. 7—Wage increases of about $100 a year for each of the 1,500 fur dressing and dyeing workers of the A. Hollander & Sons Co. were announced today by the CIO Intl. Fur & Leather Workers.

The increases, which are retroactive to Jan. 1, were agreed upon after several weeks of amicable negotiations between the union and the firm, the largest of its kind in the world.

The wage boost will amount to about $150,000 altogether, the union said, and is the second gained by Hollander employes in the past 12 months. The new increase was obtained under a cost-of-living clause in last year's agreement.

Negotiations for further increases based on a new rise in the cost of living, may be reopened by the union in August, 1942. All other provisions of the contract remain in force, including a cash bonus by the employer for all volunteers and draftees, and re-employment with seniority upon their return.

Wage Increase

Independent Goes CIO

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 7.—A big independent union at the Lake Erie Engineering Corporation went over to the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee 100 per cent, Joseph P. Molony, SWOC representative here reported this week.

The move to affiliate with the SWOC was taken at a meeting of the Lake Erie independent union following a talk by Molony outlining the advantages of belonging to a strong national union.

Glass Union Wins $80,000

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 7—An increases totaling $80,000 annually will go to the workers of Sharpe Inc., under a contract signed by the Federation of Glass, Ceramic & Silica Sand Workers. The company employs about 300 workers engaged in manufacturing cut glass tableware.

The agreement provides a 10 per cent wage increase; vacations with pay for employes with more than one year's service; a union shop and check off of union dues.

Royal Typewriter Signs; 5,500 Get Nickel Raise

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 7—The long reign of company paternalism at the Royal Typewriter Co. came to an abrupt end this week when the firm signed its first agreement with the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

Under the pact, the 5,500 workers gain nickel wage increases and the right to reopen wage negotiations in July. Improved overtime and vacation provisions, seniority and better working conditions are also granted.

The pact followed a one-year organizational drive which started after a spontaneous one-day stoppage in protest over the company's refusal to pay a Christmas bonus in 1940. A company union was formed, which was defeated 2 to 1 by the UE in an NLRB election.

The plant, largest of its kind in the world, is the second Hartford typewriter factory to come under union contract.

It Sure Pays To Organize

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 9—When workers at Struthers, Dunn, Inc., threw off the shackles of company unionism and went into the CIO, the "dividends" started to roll in.

George Craig, Philadelphia CIO regional director, reported that the newly-chartered local of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers gained a 30% wage increase plus a 10% bonus.

Employing nearly 300 persons, the electrical manufacturing company also granted the union shop and an arrangement through which members who are called for military service retain their seniority.

SCRAP FOR STEEL MILLS: Answer to steel magnates' protests against expansion is the photo of an auto scrap yard in Detroit. A report by Chairman Philip Murray of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee points out there's enough scrap to keep the industry going at 100 per cent capacity for five years—but "much of the tonnage is being hoarded in the hope of raising prices."

'Scrap-Metal Hoarding Hits Output'—Murray

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7—The nation is losing over 2,000,000 tons of steel annually because of an alleged scrap shortage—a "shortage" which does not exist and which is created by brokers to drive prices upwards, and by an important segment of the steel industry to prevent expansion.

Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, made this revelation in a memorandum to Donald Nelson, chief of the War Production Board, following a six-month investigation by the union of scrap iron and steel supplies throughout the country.

"Our investigation," Murray said, "discloses that there is no long-term shortage of this essential war material. On the contrary scrap is not finding its way into the open-hearth furnaces for ulterior motives that not only have no relation to the war production program, but are definitely inimical to its successful execution."

Two million tons of steel would be enough to build 25 cruisers; 200 destroyers; 10,000 tanks; 15,000 light tanks; 10 battleships and 4,000 heavy tanks.

COMPANY COLLUSION

"From the outset when the Office of Price Administration, on April 3, 1941, established maximum prices on sales of iron and steel scrap other than railroad scrap, the scrap iron and steel industry, especially the brokers in it, began to promote a 'shortage scare' for the purpose of attempting to break the maximum price ceiling," he said.

These interests won a concession from the government through a revised price schedule issued on December 23, "but despite this concession, which has amounted to increasing scrap prices, substantial interests dealing in scrap iron and steel are still endangering the war production program to gain still further profits."

Steel firms are also promoting the "shortage scare," he said, to resist expansion and thereby preserve monopolistic control.

ENOUGH SCRAP METAL

Murray declared the present scrap shortage at certain mills is a temporary thing and that there is enough scrap in this country to keep the mills going at 100 per cent of capacity for the next five years. The difference between the present operation of around 96 per cent and 100 per cent represents the loss of some 2,000,000 tons. More than 30 open-hearth furnaces are idle today for lack of scrap—which means a loss every 24 hours of more than 5,000 tons of steel.

Murray proposed that the government convene a meeting of the scrap interests, steel firms and the SWOC for the "purpose of effectuating a practical program to keep the steel furnaces of Democracy's arsenal burning at total capacity."

Bethlehem Parleys Head For WLB

New York, Feb. 7—Demands of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee for a contract from the Bethlehem Steel Corp. will go to the War Labor Board, it was announced here following a request to the U. S. Labor Dept. from Federal Conciliator James F. Dewey.

Negotiations began September 16, and to date the company has flatly refused to meet the union's proposals.

Chief issue in the contract demands is a $1.00 a day pay raise and union security. More than 90,000 workers are involved in 14 Bethlehem plants. SWOC negotiations, led by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, are continuing with other Little Steel corporations, employing over 200,000 workers.

Ask FDR For Weapons On Ships

New York, Feb 7—Mounting casualties inflicted by Axis submarines make imperative speedier installation of guns and lifesaving equipment on American merchant vessels, Pres. Joseph Curran of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union wrote this week to Pres. Roosevelt.

"We have been unable up to this time to obtain any clear-cut reasons from various government agencies as to why the installation of this equipment on merchant vessels is proceeding so slowly, and in some instances is not being done at all," Curran wrote.

CIO Won 70% Of NLRB Polls, Report Shows

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7—Unions affiliated to the CIO won 70 per cent of some 1,400 elections in which they took part during the year ending June 30, 1941, according to figures from the sixth annual report of the National Labor Relations Board released this week.

Board Chairman H. A. Millis found the most significant fact revealed by the data for the year to be "the vastly increased desire of the workers to determine their bargaining representatives."

Nearly three quarters of a million valid votes were cast in secret elections held by the Board, he declared in his statement on the report. Seventy per cent of these were cast for nationally affiliated union, a new high in the Board's records.

335,000 VOTED CIO

The Board's figures show that 335,619 or 46 per cent of all workers voting in NLRB elections chose CIO affiliated unions, while 181,009, or 24.8 per cent voted for the AFL, and 72,000 or 10 per cent of the total, voted for local and national unaffiliated unions.

CIO unions took part in 1,414 elections, or pay roll checks, winning 991 or 70 per cent. The AFL participated in 1,396 elections or checks and won 925 or 66 per cent. The Board conducted 2,566 elections or pay roll checks altogether.

A total of more than 9,000 cases involving 2,373,000 workers were handled by the Board during the year. Of these, 4,817 or 52.6 per cent, involving nearly one and a half million workers, were cases charging "unfair labor practices."

Cases involving union representation numbered 4,334, or 47.4 per cent of the total, and affected 1,188,000 workers. From these figures, the Board found that a shift had taken place in the ratio of unfair labor practice cases to representation cases.

"Until this past year began," Chairman Millis said, "the Board had received about two complaint cases to every one representation case. During the year the proportion became about one-to-one.

"While from this it appears that discharges for union activity, domination of labor organizations and refusals to bargain are relatively giving way to the more constructive issues of representation, the actual number of unfair labor practice cases increased over 1940. The full picture of the 9,151 cases received shows a rise of 22 per cent in unfair labor practice cases and a nearly 100 per cent rise in representation cases.

"That unfair labor practices still exist appears clearly in the fact that the Board closed 4,698 of them during the year, involving more than 1,200,000 workers. Yet the manner of their closing shows an increased ability to obtain settlements without formal procedures and a growing compliance with the Act.

"For example, nine out of ten cases were closed before formal action, and almost all of them—if we exclude cases dismissed or withdrawn for lack of merit—were settled by agreement of the employes, the employer and the Board."

Mother Wants News Of Donald Miller

New York, Feb. 7—Mrs. L. D. Miller, 355 West Troy Street, Ferndale, Mich., has appealed to CIO President Philip Murray to request information about the whereabouts of her son, Donald Miller.

Miller, an official for a few weeks of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, disappeared from his home in Detroit on October 27 and his mother has heard nothing from him since that time.

Anybody knowing of Donald Miller's present location is asked to communicate with Mrs. Miller at once.

Still giving more than we promise

SALUTE the army behind the army!

For every man who fights, there must be many to fabricate his weapons.

In this great, seething combat, the automobile industry is playing an important role, and Studebaker is proud of its assignment in the arming of our United States. A ring of steel is being built around our freedom—and Studebaker men are eagerly helping to build it.

It is as if all our 90 years had been spent in preparation for just this hour.

Studebaker's battalions are inspired as truly as are our soldiers and sailors. The same skill, the same Studebaker plus that has gone into every Studebaker car, will go into every bomber engine, every military truck, every implement of defense turned out by Studebaker factories.

Studebaker quality is traditional. It has stood the nation in good stead down through the years—it is doing so now in this emergency that confronts us. We are still giving more than we promise.

The men of Studebaker, together with their fellow workers throughout industry, are throwing their weight into the balance to make victory sure.

While honoring America's armed forces throughout the world—let's not forget our Soldiers in Overalls.

STUDEBAKER...THE GREAT INDEPENDENT

An Urgent Need

Hundreds of thousands of workers have been thrown off their jobs, because the plants in which they worked are being changed over for war production, because of priorities and for other similar war reasons.

Their need is urgent. Their families face hunger and want. The country's need for their labor is also urgent. They must be retrained for war jobs. Their morale, their health and their vigor must be maintained for the work which lies ahead when the plants reopen.

When the Security Act was passed and state unemployment compensation measures were established, this special kind of war emergency unemployment was not anticipated. No adequate provisions were made for it. Average state benefits are only $10 a week, and many of the workers have exhausted their rights to these benefits or will do so long before they are returned to work.

At the urging of labor, President Roosevelt has therefore asked Congress to appropriate immediately $300,000,000 for increased unemployment benefits. The bill for this purpose (H. R. 6465), however, is being kicked around in committee, behind closed doors, with no immediate prospects of passage, while the workers' suffering grows ever graver.

In fact, a campaign of opposition to it has developed from reactionary employer and state lobbyists, who raise barren issues of "state's rights," while the workers starve.

That is why CIO Pres. Murray has circularized the whole CIO to take immediate action. That is why Secretary Carey has written Congressional leaders that "selfish bureaucratic interests . . . should not stand in the way of a measure so essential to the national defense."

Letters and telegrams should be sent at once, urging immediate passage of the emergency appropriation, to Speaker Sam Rayburn of the House, Majority Leader John McCormack, Chairman Robt. Doughton and other members of the House ways and means committee, and to your Congressman.

Loopholes

"It is still possible for a few thousand individuals to escape their fair share of the tax burden and to pass their share onto the shoulders of the rest of us," said Secretary Morgenthau of the Treasury Dept. in a recent speech.

He quoted Treasury estimates that almost a billion dollars, or one-eighth of the entire income tax receipts in the current fiscal year, had been passed onto the shoulders of other taxpayers due to loopholes in the law, such as tax-exempt securities, community-property tax privileges, separate returns for husband and wife, etc.

An unduly heavy part of the tax burden has long been borne by the poorest people. In fact, 26 per cent of all state, federal and local taxes were paid in 1938 and 1939 by persons with incomes of less than $1,000 a year; and the burden on the lower-paid has since been increased considerably.

The rich, on the other hand, have never paid their fair share. Even in those taxes which are directed against them, there are countless loopholes which their high-priced experts have had no difficulty in discovering.

At the present time Congressional committees are studying new tax legislation to raise the billions of dollars of additional revenue needed for the war! Among the measures they are considering are general sales taxes or wage taxes, which would viciously discriminate against the lower-income and working people, by greatly increasing their proportionate share of the tax burden.

The CIO vigorously opposes such unjust discrimination. It calls instead for the plugging of the many loopholes through which the rich pass much of their tax burden onto the shoulders of the poor. It urges increased taxation of excess profits and upper-bracket incomes, of luxury goods and of surplus wealth generally. In general, it asks a tax program that will stop war profiteering and protect living standards necessary for maximum war production.

Now is the time to urge on Congress a fairer tax system. Once a tax measure is reported on the floor, there is little chance to change its character. That is why the CIO is urging its unions and members to make their demand for a fair tax program known at once to the members of the Senate finance committee and the House ways and means committee.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

WHEN you take your car to a garage, it is usual to pay attention to the recommendations of the mechanic who does the actual work on it.

America's industrial machine is now being given an overhauling for war purposes. But the advice of the men who do the real work is ignored. The managers, the salesmen, the bookkeepers and the like sit around deciding what should be done; while the practical mechanics are told to keep their mouths shut and do what they're told.

One of the results is that some 25 cruisers, 200 destroyers, 10,000 medium tanks, 15,000 light tanks, 10 battleships and 4,000 heavy tanks are lost to our war effort, just as surely as if they were destroyed by the enemy.

Two million tons of steel would be enough to build the above mentioned war equipment, it is estimated. We are short that two million tons on account of an alleged scrap shortage.

The steel workers should know something about their industry, one would assume. At any rate, they know enough to do all the work of actually producing the country's steel.

Their union, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, has been assembling the accumulated knowledge of the country's steel workers with painstaking research and with all the expert help at its command.

About a year ago, the SWOC submitted a carefully prepared program to achieve total production. It was ignored, and as a result the steel industry has been operating far short of capacity.

Now the steel workers, through Chairman Philip Murray of SWOC, are once more trying to inject their practical production advice into the councils of the expert profit-makers, salesmen, dollar-a-year men and the like who are running the show.

They point out, with a mass of factual evidence, that two million tons of steel a year is being lost on account of an unnecessary "shortage" of scrap, created by brokers to drive prices upwards and by companies which are seeking to preserve monopolistic control by resisting expansion.

The SWOC report on scrap iron and steel supplies, which Murray has submitted to Donald Nelson, chief of the War Production Board, is an eye-opener.

It indicts inefficiency of management and lack of industry-wide coordination for the failure to achieve total steel production. It points out that there is no real scrap shortage, but that a "shortage scare" was deliberately promoted in an attempt to break the maximum price ceilings and for other profiteering purposes.

It discloses that scrap is being hoarded by some companies while others cannot produce for lack of it—which situation could be remedied by a sensible system of allocations. It reveals huge untapped sources of scrap, in auto graveyards, on the railroads, etc., which are readily available.

All in all, the SWOC report advances new evidence that essential war production is lagging and victory is delayed, because of failure to enlist labor's expert production knowledge in the planning and administration of the war program.

This same point has been made again and again by CIO unions in every important industry. The men who do the actual work are first to see and feel what is wrong. They have advanced, and will continue to advance, their constructive proposals for increasing production, through production committees in the shops, through their unions on an industry-wide basis and in every other way possible.

Now that a new War Production Board has been established, the CIO executive board has resolved to re-submit the Murray industry council plan and its many production programs for individual industries. It hopes that the authorities, under the new set-up, will have learned enough from the sad experience of the recent past to listen now to labor's practical advice.

In other words, if we are to get enough production to win this war, it's about time that less attention be paid to the few whose chief concern is the profit position of their particular companies, and a whole lot more attention paid to the millions of workers who do the actual job of producing.

New Labor Committee Meets

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—Labor's Victory Board, the new six-man committee representing CIO and AFL, holds its first meeting with President Roosevelt today.

Formation of the board, which was suggested by the President more than a fortnight ago, was approved by the CIO's Executive Board at its meeting in New York on Jan. 24. Representing the CIO are Pres. Philip Murray, Vice-Pres. R. J. Thomas and Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers. AFL representatives are Pres. William Green, Sec.-Treas. George Meany and Dan Tobin, head of the Teamsters Union.

In calling the meeting, the White House released for the first time Pres. Roosevelt's letters to Green and Murray. It said in part:

"In order that Labor's part in the national effort may be most effective, I am asking the AFL and CIO to form a combined Labor War Board to consult with me periodically on all matters concerning Labor's part in the war.

"It is my thought that this board would meet with me and therefore it should be sufficiently small to make this a real 'round table' talk."

Library Local Wins 'First Victory'

Chicago, Feb. 7—After a year's hard work, the Chicago Public Library Employes Union has succeeded in getting $5 to $10 salary increases for all classified library employes and in bringing about promotions for some 150 employes. The union is affiliated with the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers.

"This is the first real victory scored by our union since its inception in 1937", B. Hirsch, chairman of the publicity committee stated. "It is probably the first time in the history of library unionism that a union was solely responsible for a salary increase."

The Board of Directors agreed to promote some 150 assistants as of February 1, and to give a $5 monthly pay increase to some 500 others, from page to sixth grade assistants and branch librarians.

Washington, Feb. 7 — The frankest spokesman for big business in the memory of Washington's oldest inhabitant had his day on Capitol Hill this week—and his testimony left the rest of the lobbyist tribe in a dither as they sipped their scotch and sodas.

James E. Barnes, 67-year-old Washington agent for the Todd Shipyards was the man who caused the 24-hour sensation. He did it simply by telling the Senate Naval Affairs Committee that his firm was piling up "outrageous profits" on government contracts.

Most of the lobbyists earn fat salaries pointing out to a weary public that their firms perpetually have one foot in a bankruptcy court.

50% ON CAPITAL

But Barnes admitted freely that Todd is making profits of 50% a year on its invested capital; that the company's profits on some contracts have been so high that it's making arrangements with the government to return some of the swag; that the company "hasn't any right" to make such super-profits and "you can take taxes right up to the hilt, as far as I am concerned, and as far as my company is concerned."

Todd gets from 150 to 200 million a year from the government, the Senate group was told, and is allowed 10% profits. That runs to about 20 million, he reckoned, which is just about half of Todd's $40,000,000 capital investment.

The company would be perfectly satisfied with profits of only 2 or 3 % or even one-half of one percent, Barnes alleged, expressing a belief in closer government regulation of profits.

"The blame is on you men in Congress if you don't do something about getting it (the profits) back," he warned.

On one small contract, Todd Shipyards made a profit of 62%, Barnes told the committee, while on others the profits have ranged from 5% to 22%.

Haywood, Mrs. Stephenson Cite Women's War Tasks

Washington, Feb. 6.—The responsibilities of women in the Victory Program and the importance of organizing women for joint action to defeat Hitler were the themes of Allan S. Haywood and Faye Stephenson on the National "Beat Hitler" broadcast of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO on February 3.

Allan Haywood, CIO director of organization, said in opening the program in Washington:

"Side by side with the workers in the victory program are the women of America, the housewives, the mothers, the sisters of the men who stand at the bench and the lathe. These women have a double task to perform—the task of allies in the battle of production and the task of soldiers on the home front.

"This war is a people's war. It calls for the highest possible degree of mobilization of all the people of this country. Simple arithmetic will tell you that the women of America—the wives and mothers of our nation—are one of the keystones of victory."

"Millions of women are going to be needed in industry," she said. "The CIO Auxiliaries are not urging women to leave their homes, but are asking them to be ready to answer their country's call when the need arises. We are also asking the government to prepare to meet the increased need for women workers. The time to train women is now, not when the machines are standing idle."

Mrs. Stephenson also stressed the need for a day-care program for children in order to enable women to take defense jobs.

Federal help to increase unemployment compensation benefits was pointed out by Mrs. Stephenson as another immediate defense need.

Her speech concluded with a pledge: ". . . to the women of Britain, the Soviet Union, and China . . . to the women of the conquered countries . . . that we, the women of America, will maintain and build our own organizations and their democratic strength; that we will dedicate that strength to the defeat of Hitler and that we will cherish and guard the dignity of women. . ."

CIO Speeds Drive To Lift Payments For 'War Jobless'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7—A major CIO campaign for immediate improvement of compensation for workers thrown out of jobs by conversion to arms production got under way this week with a call by Pres. Murray to all affiliates for action on the bill now held up in Congress, with CIO delegates coming into the capital to press their Congressmen for a favorable vote, and with a letter to Congress by James B. Carey, secretary of the CIO.

Murray's letter enclosed a copy of the CIO resolution favoring HR 6465, a bill to appropriate $300,000,000 to supplement state compensation systems, and urged all affiliated unions to flood Congress with wires and letters demanding quick passage.

Carey's letter, addressed to the House Ways and Means Committee and the Appropriations sub-Committee, attacked "selfish bureaucratic interests of a handful of state officials" which have stymied passage so far, and urged immediate action in the emergency faced by hundreds of thousands of workers.

"Provision must be made to maintain the essential decencies of existence for these workers until they find work in our expanding victory production program," Carey wrote. "The present state-wide system of unemployment compensation is utterly inadequate to meet this crushing need. The average of only $10.00 a week paid by the state systems is altogether insufficient."

WORKERS SACRIFICE

The Carey letter also pointed out that CIO unions have "willingly sacrificed their interest in order to expedite the conversion of our civilian plants and factories," and that the workers who belong to those unions should not be left to starve on inadequate state unemployment compensation.

CIO representatives were called into Washington by Allan S. Haywood, national CIO director, from New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Michigan, Ohio, and from the national and international unions most affected by conversion. They met at the CIO office to outline action plans and dispersed to see their Congressmen on the hill.

Though administration leaders are backing the bill, it has run into serious delays due to lobbying by state interests, backed by the employers, and has been allowed to gather dust in Congressional pigeon-holes for several weeks already.

In the meantime, hundreds of thousands of jobless workers are getting closer each day to the end of compensation payments, and are reaching the bottom of meager reserves piled up during employment.ment.

'Beat Hitler' Week Proves Big Success

Washington, Feb. 7—Open house at auxiliary council headquarters all week and special events for every day in the week marked national CIO Auxiliary Beat Hitler Week, February 2-9 in Los Angeles and Detroit. An invitation to all service men to attend all events featured both programs.

A broadcast on Sunday, February 1, opened the week in Detroit with Catherine Gelles, Vice-President of the Auxiliary Congress, speaking over WJBK.

Monday was Production Day in both cities with delegations urging necessary defense training courses for women going from the auxiliary councils to the Mayors, the local WPB officials and the defense councils.

NUTRITION LUNCHEON

A nutrition luncheon featured Tuesday in Los Angeles with a Red Cross nutritionist speaking and answering questions. Sugar rationing was the subject of a round table discussion at Detroit auxiliary headquarters on Wednesday.

"Buy a Defense Stamp" day was celebrated on Thursday in both cities, with auxiliary members canvassing for sales.

Movies of the European War and a puppet show ended the week in Detroit. Original skits, "Murray Plan Means Production" and "First Aid Saves a Life" were shown at the rally in Los Angeles on Saturday night at which the Auxiliary Chorus sang "Defense is built upon the unions" and "A stamp a day keeps Hitler away."

Big Role For Labor In Civilian Defense

Los Angeles CIO Names Delegates On Committees

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7—From panels of CIO representatives nominated by the Los Angeles Union Council, local civilian defense authorities this week were selecting members for five subsections of the Los Angeles Civilian Defense Board.

The CIO men, together with representatives similarly chosen from the AFL, will sit on sub-sections on industrial development, production, labor, utilities and transportation, along with men from the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and other civic groups.

The CIO council also nominated Pete Padovan of the Fishermen to the mayor's committee on alien problems, and Regional Director C. D. Lesley of the United Rubber Workers to the Los Angeles general board of the Red Cross.

"At last," commented Philip M. Connelly, secretary of the council, "we have made the authorities in this area understand that the CIO is the agency that will select CIO representatives to the various civilian defense and war agencies. No longer will so-called CIO representatives be chosen by persons outside the CIO."

RESEARCH BUREAU

Creation of a research and legislative department of the council, with a full-time official in charge, will be considered at a special conference of all Los Angeles CIO affiliates, held Feb. 8. Council officers were instructed to make a survey of the possibilties of financial support for such a department. The survey, together with the recommendations of the conference, will be weighed by the council's executive board, which will make the final recommendations.

Research is more important than before in current negotiations, CIO officials pointed out, and a legislative coordinator is necessary to replace the Southern California office of LNPL, which has been closed.

RATIONING BOARDS

The council is demanding CIO representation on each of the 26 local rationing boards, which at present contain no members of organized labor but which are due to be enlarged.

CIO and AFL unions are preparing for a war workers' housing conference, to be held Feb. 15. CIO unions meanwhile are asked to protest against government withdrawal of plans to erect 600 defense homes at Compton.

Help The War—Pay Your Income Tax Now

Leary Named In Colorado

Denver, Colo., Feb. 7—Sec.-Treas. James J. Leary of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers today was appointed to the labor committee of the Colorado Council of Defense.

Accepting the nomination, Leary told the governor that "I feel you are to be congratulated for your recognition that the nation's working men and women have considerable to contribute to the war effort of our country."

Workers' Help Needed If U. S. Is to Win War

New York, Feb. 7—Workers must practice all-out participation in the victory campaign, or else the war may be lost, delegates to the Victory Assembly called by the Office and Professional Workers were told by union and civic leaders here this week.

"No union which does not base its organizing program on the needs of the whole nation, which necessarily includes protecting the interests of the working people, can survive or grow today," UOPWA Pres. Lewis Merrill declared in an address on national unity.

LaGuardia Picks CIO Leaders In Gotham

NEW YORK CITY, Feb. 7—Mayor LaGuardia has appointed 24 CIO and AFL labor representatives to the New York City and the five borough offices of the OCD.

Joseph Curran, president of the Greater New York Industrial Union Council, and Mrs. Bessie Hillman, educational director of the New York Laundry Workers Joint Board, were appointed to the city-wide defense council.

Other CIO appointments, made at the recommendation of the Greater New York Council, included Mrs. Dorothy Bellanca and Paul Arnone of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Daniel Allen, State, County and Municipal Workers; Ruth Young, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers; Meyer Winocur, United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes; James Fitzsimon, Transport Workers Union; Bella Metz, Fur and Leather Workers; Patrick Sullivan, Marine and Shipbuilding Workers; Mrs. Beatrice Abramson, president, Greater New York Council of CIO Auxiliaries.

The AFL Central Trades and Labor Council made a similar number of designations.

CLOSE RELATIONS

The mayor also has invited the CIO council and the AFL central body to designate a civilian defense liaison officer for each who will work out of the mayor's office at City Hall where desks have been set up for this special purpose.

Recently the mayor announced he would appoint labor and consumer representatives to local rationing boards set up in New York City. He has asked the Greater New York Council to recommend CIO representatives for such appointment.

Begin Drive For Ambulances

New York, Feb. 7—Accompanied by best wishes from Governor Lehman, Wendell Willkie, Thomas E. Dewey and other dignitaries, the New York Council of CIO Auxiliaries began its drive for funds to buy ambulances for the war fronts today.

The drive is under the direction of Beatrice Abramson, president of the Auxiliaries Council, and will be featured by a tour of three ambulances through the city. It is part of the general CIO campaign to raise $1,000,000 a month for American and Allied war relief.

By JAMES B. CAREY, Secretary of the CIO

I've seen the huge hangers and the great repair shops. I've heard the training planes roaring overhead day and night.

I've seen the Army's great dependence on American labor to supply the planes to teach these youngsters who will one day fly in defense of America.

I saw all this as one of a joint group of AFL and CIO officers invited to visit Maxwell as guests of Under-Secretary of War Robert E. Patterson. We flew down from Washington in the Under Secretary's great olive-drab Army war plane.

MANY IN PARTY

Others included were R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers; John Green, president of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers; Hugh Lyons, Regional Director of the CIO in New England; Thomas Burns, of the United Rubber Workers; Robert Watt and Frank P. Fenton of the AFL; Eric Petersen, vice president of the International Association of Machinists: William H. Davis, of the War Labor Board; and the writer.

Lieut. Col. A. Robert Ginsburgh, G.S.C., aide to the Under Secretary of War; First Lieut. Donald B. Robinson of the Labor Information Section and Andrew J. Biemiller of the War Production Board escorted the group.

MAXWELL IS HUMMING

On the field were training planes, each with its number and red, white and blue United States Army insignia painted on the side. The entire place hummed with activity. Maxwell is one of the two advanced Army training flight schools in the country.

Maxwell Field is a reception center for incoming flying cadets. About half the thousands of young men at the field are receiving flying instruction and they are all advanced students, American and English. Other thousands are new recruits, waiting to be sent to primary training schools. The new recruits are inducted, equipped, then taught to march. Later they are shipped to primary schools to begin flight training.

Capt. Gerald Crabbe, officer guide for this writer, said it took only three days to make a raw recruit into a "squad soldier"—a soldier who could march in a squad. Flying cadets must learn the principles of drill before they begin flying.

We went through the reception center, the messes, and the huge repair hangars. The Army uses North American trainers at Maxwell, planes manufactured by CIO workers.

LOOKING TO LABOR

Training of some of the cadets at Maxwell is being held up until June for lack of planes. Some plane deliveries are being held up for lack of parts. The Army must have more planes, parts, and equipment. It is looking to labor for the increased aircraft production it must have to train its pilots for fighting.

The Army is doing a fine job, training these young fliers. They get the best of everything, the best training, the best facilities for exercise and recreation, the best food and quarters.

Secretary Patterson had met with us earlier and discussed at great length the production problems the Army faces today in aircraft.

The trip was made under the auspices of the Labor Information Section of the War Department, and was designed to show the men of labor how the weapons of war, made by American labor, are used in the actual field of operations.

News stories, pictures, movies and other forms of information are available at the Labor Information Section, Room 5110, New War Department Building, Washington, D. C.

Maxwell Field's Lesson: 'We Need More Planes'

By R. J. THOMAS

President, United Automobile, Aircraft & Agricultural Implement Workers

Down at Maxwell Field, near Montgomery, Ala., they're turning out pilots on a mass production basis. As rapidly as the Air Corps can obtain the necessary planes and parts, they're sending new cadets into the skies to learn how to out-fight and outmaneuver the flyers of the Axis.

Of course, they could train more men if they had more planes, and that is where the UAW-CIO comes in. That is why I went to Alabama with a group of CIO and AFL leaders—to see how the planes our union members build were being used, and what additional equipment was needed.

BIGGER THAN EXPECTED

When we reached Maxwell Field, we saw something much bigger than we had expected—yet small compared with what will be there next year. We saw thousands of eager, young men drilling, studying, exercising, waiting for the day when they would win their wings. We knew that where there were thousands this year, next year there would be tens of thousands.

What impressed me most, however, was the fact that even now there were men waiting for planes and equipment, and planes laid up in hangars waiting for magnetos and other parts. How much greater will be the Army's need when the President's program gets fully under way!

The reception center at Maxwell Field is on a seven-day week and 24-hour day. At all hours of the day and night, recruits are arriving, and are immediately put through the rigid physical, psychological and aptitude tests which each must pass before being accepted. This is the cream of the crop, entering the station, anxious to get into the air.

WORK IS HARD

But first, they must learn how to drill in close order, like infantrymen; learn how to obey orders on the ground before taking to the air. It takes only three days to turn a raw recruit at Maxwell Field into a "squad soldier." Then, he is taught how to roll around in a Link trainer and other ground-school apparatus, so that he will be able to fly a ship when once he gets into the air. He studies hard, and drills hard, and takes hard exercise.

Everything about Maxwell Field is big. The supply depot holds tens of thousands of different items, ranging from huge airplane motors to upholsterer's tacks.

SAT AT CONTROLS

In one great shed we tried our luck in the tiny Link trainers, which are small model airplanes in which the cadets learn how to fly without leaving the ground. A few of us sat at the controls, and, in some cases, we "crashed." In these models, the cadets learn how to fly blind, how to use the radio controls, and how to keep their balance in tail-spins, barrel rolls, loops and side-slips.

We tried the aptitude tests, which are made as difficult as possible, in order to discover "bugs" in the fine-looking men who try their luck here. Even if a cadet "washes out" in his elementary training course, he may try again in some other capacity than pilot—as observer, navigator, or gunner.

One of two of us climbed up on top of the bombardier equipment, on which the cadets are taught how to sight targets supposedly many thousand feet below. We inspected the ingenious equipment by which those men unfitted to be Army pilots are weeded out before they have ever taken to the air.

The planes zooming and diving over the field, and flying in for a landing—planes flying in formation, or taking off from the ground, one after another—this was something to look at and remember. I wish you all could have been there to see how big the job is going to be to "keep 'em flying!"

Do Your Bit—Buy Defense Bonds & Stamps

CAMP LEE, Va., Feb. 7—A member of the AFL and the CIO are on picket duty here today . . . this time for Uncle Sam.

They are both on guard duty for the 10th Quartermaster Training Regiment, where they are members of Company E. Both of them enlisted in the army several days after the Jap attack on Pearl Harbor.

James F. Madden will be 44 in February. He is a member of the IRT subway unit of the CIO Transport Workers Union. He volunteered during World War I, and again joined Dec. 13 after deciding that "If I'm not too old to work I'm not too old to fight for my country."

John Mathews is 34 and is vice-president of Local 269, United Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steam-fitters (AFL). He has had seven years of military experience with the N. Y. National Guard and enlisted at Newburg, N. Y., Dec. 15.

Pvt. Mathews was employed at his trade by the Standard Oil Co. at Newburg when he decided to throw in his lot toward the defeat of the Axis powers.

"Most of the plumbers are pulling down good dough these days. Some are making as much as $250 a week. Comparing that with a buck private's $21-a-month, well, there just isn't any comparison," he said. "But," he declared, "we have got to win this war. That's why I volunteered."

JOINED UP FAST

When Private Citizen Madden awakened on the evening of Dec. 7, his daughter, Marie, 18, told him that Jap bombers attacked Pearl Harbor. While waiting to report for the midnight shift at the mechanical maintenance department of the IRT system, Madden made up his mind.

"I'm going to join the army," he told daughter Marie.

Army Boys To Pick CIO Steno Queen

New York, Feb. 7—The boys in khaki at Fort Dix, N. J., rather than the office workers of New York, will pick the "Queen of Stenographers" this year.

The CIO United Office & Professional Workers, sponsor of the Annual Stenographers Ball, at which the "Queen" makes her appearance, announced that it was departing from tradition in order to keep in step with the times.

"This year, the Steno Queen will symbolize the American Girl of today in a new role when she is presented as the star of a dramatic pageant entitled 'Women Are Soldiers, Too'," the union announced.

Selection of the Queen will highlight a gay party at the USO Recreation Center at Wrightstown, N. J. About 2,000 boys are expected to attend, and they will be entertained by several hundred of New York's loveliest white-collar girls.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

The Congress of Womens Auxiliaries of the CIO has just completed its first nation-wide project in the "Beat Hitler Week" that ran from Feb. 2 to Feb. 9. I had the privilege of speaking on a coast to coast radio broadcast with the President of the Congress, Mrs. Faye Stephenson, who spoke from Cleveland.

The officers of the Congress of Auxiliaries report that the week was a success, and that good organizational results are expected to result from it and from the other work they are doing.

There can be no argument about the need for organizing the women workers of America as well as the men; the CIO made that clear right from the beginning. It is equally important to organize the women who stay at home, the wives and mothers and sisters of the production workers. They have a tremendously important job to do in keeping the home, in fighting high prices and profiteering, in seeing that morale on the home front is kept up.

The CIO Congress of Womens Auxiliaries was created at the Detroit convention last November. Before that time, of course, there were many auxiliaries affiliated to CIO national and international unions. The Congress gave them a national organization to which all could belong, and through which they can maintain close connections with the national CIO.

Behind the soldier is the production worker. Behind the production worker is the home-maker. The production worker is organized—or if he isn't, the CIO is moving to organize him as quickly as possible. The home-maker must be organized too, and for the same reasons—to strengthen the home front for victory.

FIELD REPORTS

Regional Director August Scholle reports from Michigan on a mass union delegation taken to Lansing to demand more liberal payments for laid-off auto workers. Present unemployment compensation is too low and benefits are for too short a period. More than 350,000 UAW members in the automobile industry in the state will be out of work by the end of the month, because of management bungling and refusal to give up the profits as usual policy of refusing to convert to war production.

Management and its stooges in the state legislature are fighting a proposal to increase the unemployment compensation from $16 a week to $20, though the state has the money in a fund that will reach $140,000,000 by Feb. 15. The money belongs to the workers, since it was paid in by them, and should be returned now that they need it.

SHOE ELECTION WON

The United Shoe Workers of America has turned in a big victory in the election at Haverhill, Mass., where the CIO union got 1,952 votes, the AFL 1,619 and no union 143. The election was held by agreement with some 23 shoe manufacturing firms, and was on a city-wide basis.

The Michigan CIO is also taking to the air to tell the people about its civilian defense program and to expose the sabotage of big business on arms production. Feb. 20 the state CIO will start a three-day conference in Detroit to educate workers in the intricacies of unemployment compensation.

In Philadelphia, the Struthers-Dunn Employes Assn. has seen the error of company union ways and come over to the CIO. First pay-off was a 30 per cent wage increase, won by the CIO union, plus time and a half, paid vacations, etc. From Salt Lake City, Utah, comes a report of a contract with a large retail store. The contract gives a 10 per cent wage increase and other gains.

Salt Lake has also organized a new local of state employes, and is applying for a charter from the State, County and Municipal Workers.

Organizing activity is increasing in Kansas, according to Regional Director Harvey Fremming, who reports that flour and cereal workers in the state are turning to CIO.

From Seattle, Adolph Germer reports a victory for the Intl. Woodworkers of America in a Labor Board election at the Lamm Lumber Co. of Klamath Falls, where the IWA took 108 votes to the AFL's 63. Paul Christopher reports still another from Tennessee, where District 50 of the UMWA got a 100 per cent solid vote—15 for, none against—at the Reilly Tar and Chemical Co. in Chattanooga.

Auto Union Reports On Finances

Detroit, Feb. 7—Total receipts of $1,519,073 are reported to the membership of the CIO United Automobile, Aircraft & Agricultural Implement Workers today by Sec.-Treas. George Addes for the six months ending October 31, 1941.

Expenditures for the same period were $1,336,914, or $169,514 below receipts. With cash on hand at the beginning of the period, there was a net balance for the six months of $609,178, Addes declared.

SHOW INCREASE

Receipts for the half-year are 103.3 per cent above receipts for the corresponding months of 1940, the report showed, and expenditures were 121.9 per cent above the previous figures. Of the receipts, $50,000—the maximum allowed to a single organization—were invested in United States Defense Savings Bonds.

The figures indicated a constantly increasing percentage of the expenditures going to organizing work and the servicing of locals.

GREATER SERVICE

"During this period, out of every dollar forwarded to the international by local unions, over 43 cents was expended in the servicing of local unions or in direct organizational work, as compared to 34.3 cents during the last fiscal year," Addes noted.

"Much has recently been heard from the press and certain of our legislators in Washington regarding the finances of labor unions, and I would remind you that all of the financial transactions of the international union since the inception of the organization have been audited in detail by a firm of certified public accountants."

Oregon Council Parley Supports War Effort

BEND, Ore., Feb. 7—Reporting steady growth throughout the past year, the Oregon Industrial Union Council wound up its annual convention this week with pledges of continued progress in the next 12 months.

In its first wartime session, the state CIO group ratified national CIO pledges of support to the government's war effort. In line with these actions, the Council urged affiliated unions to press for payroll deductions for Defense Savings Bond purchases and pledged one hour's pay a month from each CIO member in the state for the national CIO Allied War Relief Campaign.

BROPHY ADDRESSES GROUP

A featured speaker at the convention was John Brophy, CIO director of industrial union councils, who described recent developments in the national labor situation.

Discussing labor's support of the war, Brophy added:

"It will not suffice to win the war if we lose the peace. Labor must seek representation in the international councils which will write the peace. It must build up its strength at home during the war so that it may be in a position to demand that representation at the end of the emergency.

"Only in this way can we be certain that the treaties which bring an end to the war will constitute a charter of unity, freedom, security and peace for the entire world in coming generations."

LABOR AND CIVILIAN DEFENSE

Brophy praised Dean Landis and other high officials of the Office for Civilian Defense for realizing that civilian defense work must be considerably broader than mere air-raid and fire protection.

OCD responsibility, he added, will cover such serious problems as "adequate housing, medical and health facilities, educational opportunities, production and unemployment," and CIO councils should be on the alert to work closely with the government agency on all such matters.

OTHER SPEAKERS

Other speakers at the meeting included William Dalrymple, Oregon CIO regional director, and Adolph Germer, organization director for the Intl. Woodworkers of America.

In an action of major importance, the Council voted support to striking members of the United Furniture Workers at the Doernbecher Company in Portland. The firm, one of the largest in the state, forced the walkout by refusing to negotiate or arbitrate the union's demands.

COUNCIL OFFICERS

New council officers will be elected by statewide referendum. With John Brost, incumbent president, retiring, the convention nominated Don Helmick and Ben Garske as candidates for president. Neil Griffin of Portland and Ralph Peoples were nominated for secretary-treasurer.

Joint Confab In Minnesota

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 7—A statewide labor conference to discuss plans for winning the war against the Axis powers has been called by Governor Stassen to meet here Feb. 21. Representatives from CIO, AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods and other unaffiliated unions will attend.

Leonard Lageman, State CIO director, stated that "the calling of the representatives of labor into state-wide conference is a big step in the right direction.

"We of the CIO have recognized the necessity of such a conference for a long time and have previously taken the matter up with the Governor. The conference should develop a concrete and definite program through which labor can play its proper and leading role in the prosecution and winning of the war."

ARIZONA MEETING: Representatives of CIO unions in Arizona get together at Phoenix for a discussion of future organizing work in the sunshine state. Leaders estimated some 40,000 workers in the Phoenix area are eligible for CIO membership.

Arizona CIO Leaders Hold First Confab

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 7—Moving to give CIO a greater voice in Arizona industrial affairs, representatives of half a dozen affiliated unions met here last week.

Plans for improving the low living standards of workers throughout the state, and of making organized labor a more potent factor in civilian defense activities were discussed by the union officials.

Chairman of the meeting was James Robinson of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers. Attending were representatives of the UAW-CIO's Aircraft Division, including Asst. Nat'l. Director Walter Smethurst; and the United Cannery, Agricultural, Parking & Allied Workers.

LOW STANDARDS

Evidence of the need for organizing was pointed out by those attending the conference. They told of low wages, both for agricultural and industrial workers, and of severe discrimination against Negro and Mexican people. It was estimated that some 40,000 workers in the Phoenix area are potential members of CIO unions in a number of industries.

The agricultural workers and the UAW aircraft division have had organizers in the area for some time, and a number of the state's largest and wealthiest corporations have been signed up by the metal miners union.

Sweetland Gets CIO Relief Post

New York, Feb. 7 — Monroe Sweetland, formerly a special labor adviser to the OPM Labor Division, has been released to become executive director of the National CIO Committee for American & Allied Relief.

Announcement of the appointment was made by Irving Abramson, head of the committee and New Jersey CIO president.

The committee, formed last November at the CIO convention to clear all donations from CIO unions to the various war relief agencies, has established offices at 420 Lexington Avenue, New York City.

President Frank McGrath of the United Shoe Workers announced that the suit was based on double damages for back pay resulting from law violations by the company over the last few years.

The union has been seeking recognition and a wage increase, plus the check-off, over a long period of time. The company has been attempting to intimidate union members and has refused to act in good faith since 1939, union officials said.

PUBLIC SYMPATHY

Company tactics have been so flagrant that local businessmen, led by the mayor of Portsmouth, have been on the union side of the case and have offered their services as mediators—only to be refused by the company.

"Although not engaged in a defense industry we are perfectly willing to submit the dispute to arbitration in accordance with the agreement arrived at by our national leaders," Shoe Workers President Frank McGrath said.

Appeal to Nelson Against Shutdown

Long Island City, N. Y., Feb. 7—Members of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers here are appealing to Donald Nelson, head of the War Production Board, to save their plant from a shutdown due to refusal of the government to give it further war contracts.

The plant, which employs 80 workers, is capable of producing almost any kind of light metal products and has been working on war orders up to now. "This plant may be small but there are thousands of others like it in this country which are in the same predicament and whose combined capacity could and should make a sizeable contribution to winning the war," the union declared.

Traditions Fly as Yale Signs First CIO Contract

New Haven, Feb. 7—Yale University always a stickler for tradition, this week had to violate one of its oldest.

For the first time in the University's 241-year history, Yale has signed a union agreement—with the CIO Construction Workers Organizing Committee.

The pact covers 675 janitors, maids, waitresses, engineers, watchmen, mechanics and campus cops. It provides $125,000 annual raises, sole bargaining rights, two-week vacations, overtime, sick leave and holidays.

UCWOC Organizer John J. Clark and Yale Personnel Director R. C. Nyman signed the document in the personnel building, a small structure sandwiched between the austere Gothic edifices that dot the campus.

Weekly scales for maids were increased from $18 to $22, with an agreement that they will work the year round. Janitors in the dormitories and classrooms won $4 to $6 weekly increases, with their hours reduced from 50 and 44 to 40. Campus patrolmen won a $2.50 boost and workers in the powerhouse received increases up to $7.

80 DAYS AFTER STRIKE

The agreement came 80 days after a 1-day strike conducted by Yale employes. The walkout, first of its kind, was called after the University had attempted to smash the union with intimidation and threats.

But Yale was not the first eastern university to sign with the CIO affiliate. University of Pennsylvania signed a pact with the UCWOC last December.

Electric, Auto Unions Seek Raises, Security From Big Companies

NEW YORK, Feb. 7—Wage increases of 12½ cents per hour for all employes, and union-security provisions, will be requested in the annual union contract negotiations between the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America and three large electrical manufacturing firms, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co., General Electric Co., and the General Motors Corp. electrical division.

The demands, drawn up in a series of joint conferences just completed among union delegates from the plants of the three firms, are now before the local unions for formal ratification, according to the announcement made at the union's national office here.

Approximately 200,000 workers, distributed over 28 Westinghouse plants, 26 General Electric and eight General Motors plants, are affected.

The general officers of the union—Albert J. Fitzgerald, president; Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer; and James J. Matles, director of organization—cited increased productivity of labor, ability of companies to pay, and increased costs of living as the main reasons for the union's wage demands.

Their statement said:

"The industry is reporting profits still higher than the large profits of a year ago, even after generous and perhaps excessive reserves against taxes and other bookkeeping procedures.

WORKING HARDER

"Our members, most of whom are in war production, are working harder than ever before in order to turn out the goods needed for a final victory by the United States over the Fascist Axis.

"But while our members are working harder than ever before, they find their living standards unjustly and dangerously reduced by the rising burden of taxation and sharp increases in the cost of living. . . .

"We are consequently requesting wage increases which, although they will neither raise workers' standards of living nor give workers a fair share of the results of their own labor, will nevertheless help keep their living standards from falling to levels at which our productive efficiency and morale is seriously impaired.

"The request for union-security clauses is advanced in the knowledge that its acceptance will create conditions in the shops favorable to maintenance of smooth industrial relations."

To Ask $1 Increase From GM

Detroit, Feb. 7—Contract renewal demands by the General Motors Division of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, will include a $1.00 a day wage raise and the union shop, Walter Reuther, GM director for the UAW, announced today. More than 190,000 GM workers are represented by the union.

The demands were recommended to a meeting of the GM Council of the union, which is seeking renewal of the contract on a 60 days notice clause. Other recommendations include, in addition to the $1.00 raise and the union shop, improvements in seniority provisions, substitution of a $100 defense bond for vacation payments, extension of the powers of the impartial umpire to rule on all contract provisions, and establishment of a union plant defense and anti-sabotage committee in all plants.

Opening of GM negotiations marks the third major industry in which CIO unions are negotiating new agreements, the other two being Little Steel and the big corporations in the electrical industry—General Electric, Westinghouse and others.

'Duck' Tax Film Available For Unions

Washington, Feb. 7—Why you should pay your income tax promptly and gladly to win the war—and how to do it—is the subject of a Donald Duck movie, produced by Walt Disney, which is now available for showings in union halls. (See pictures on this page.)

A limited number of 16 millimeter reels of this lively technicolor movie may be obtained by unions, without charge, by writing to Mr. George N. Buffington, Assistant to the Secretary, Treasury Department, Washington, D. C.

Demand Probe of Lynching

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 7—The St. Louis CIO today made public a scorching resolution demanding an immediate investigation by Gov. Donnell into the recent lynching of a Negro in Sikeston.

"The lynching of Cleo Wright," the council said, "violated all principles of decency and democracy. The fact that Wright may very well have been guilty in no way alters the horror of this savage act."

The CIO group demanded that the governor's probe of the affair be conducted "with all vigor and diligence until the perpetrators of the horror be discovered and duly punished under the laws of the state." The council also called upon the Department of Justice's civil liberties division to investigate.

TIME FOR UNITY

"This crime against a member of the Negro race is heightened by the fact that it occurred at a time when all Americans, regardless of race, color or creed, must stand solidly together to resist the Axis aggressors who would dominate the world.

"Such bloody hoodlumism is not alone an act against a solitary individual, but an effort to suppress the democratic desires and rights of the great body of Americans in southeast Missouri, both white and Negro, from organizing into unions of their own choosing."

Seamen's Council Backs Proposals To Aid War On Axis

NEW YORK, Feb. 7—Resolutions on important questions of unity, labor participation in the war effort, all-out production, price control, and other matters concerned with the nation's victory drive featured the meeting of the National Council of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union held here.

On labor unity for victory, the Council declared that since "the trade union movement will be in the forefront of the fight against fascism," all possibilities of united labor action and closer co-operation between the different labor groups should be thoroughly explored.

Labor participation in government is an essential to winning the war, the Council said, pointing out that the government's failure to take labor in as an equal partner "does not enable labor to give of its creative ability, its ingenuity, its strength and its resources," which are so greatly needed in the present war situation.

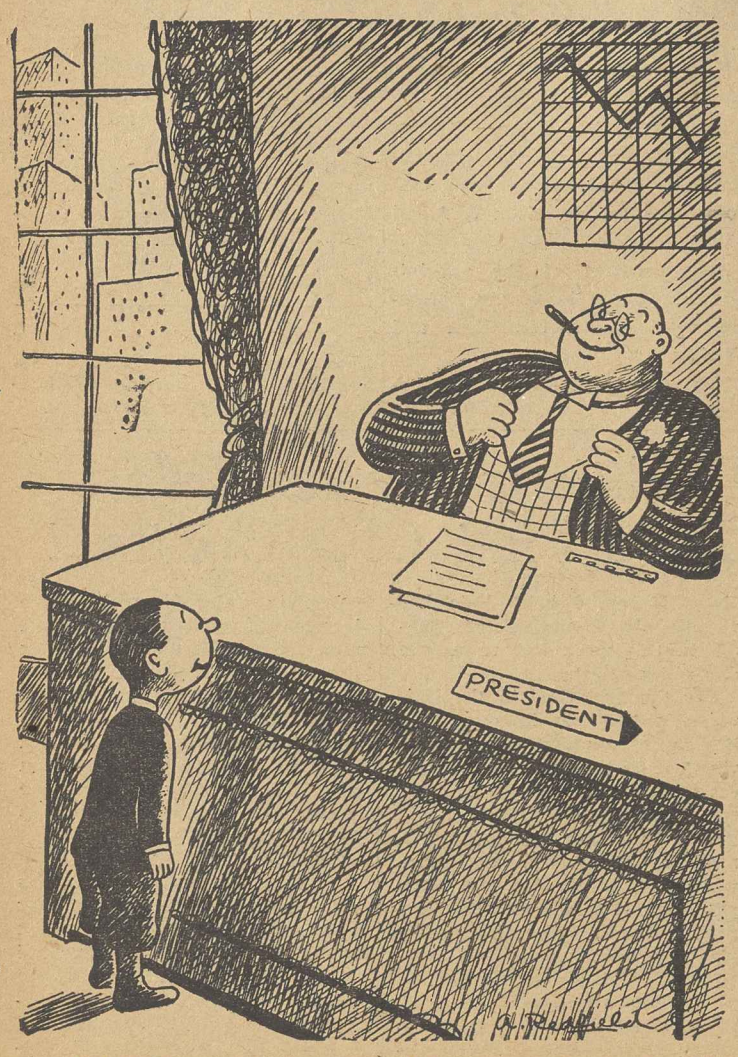
A similar stand was taken on the refusal to utilize labor's production plans, the Council pointing out that the Bridges plan for ship unloading and the NMU proposals for better manning of ships were still neglected by government and industry, despite the fact that they would contribute greatly to war efficiency.

SUPPORT AUXILIARIES

Support for the CIO Auxiliaries and their program of organizing the home front was also voted, as was the full participation of labor in civilian defense and similar home front activities.

The Council sharply attacked reactionary plans in Congress for creating disunity and demoralization among the people, singling out the "economy" schemes of Senator Byrd for killing all WPA and relief and the work of Representative Dies of the un-American Committee for attention.

The Upper Crust



"Well, Tommy, I guess you wish you were in my shoes."

War Labor Board to Rule On Swing-Shift Pay Problems

Detroit, Feb. 7—The United Auto Workers, CIO, has asked the War Labor Board to arbitrate wage issues raised in connection with around the clock or swing-shift operations of plants working on war orders. The union proposed that seven days a week production be started as soon as the companies complete conversion of their plants, and that the Board decision be retroactive.

The request was made by the Defense Employment Committee of the union, which wired to William H. Davis, chairman of the War Labor Board, in part as follows:

"We are anxious that swing shift operations be inaugurated as soon as the automobile companies complete conversion of their plants to defense work. Our members are ready to begin swing shift operations, including Saturday, Sunday and night work, whenever called upon.

"The UAW-CIO proposed on December 8, 1941, that swing shift operations begin at once, and that the attendant wage issues be decided by arbitration. We hope there will be no further delays in adopting our suggestion.

"We believe your Board should assume jurisdiction and that its findings should be applied throughout the automotive industry where no agreement has been worked out."

Comedians Get Serious, Ask Labor's Aid To Fight Smear on Entertainers

NEW YORK, Feb. 14—Three leading figures in the entertainment world this week called upon the CIO and AFL to "help us defeat any attempt to segregate us from the rest of labor's energetic role in the war effort."

The telegrams were sent to CIO Pres. Murray and AFL Pres. Green by Eddie Cantor, Ole Olsen and Chic Johnson as the newspapers' smear campaign against the Office of Civilian Defense social welfare program reached new highs.

"As workers in the theater and patriotic citizens, we deeply resent the attack upon us and our fellow members of the entertainment profession made by Representatives Faddis, Ford, etc., who are quoted as questioning the loyalty of the theatrical people.

HIT DISCRIMINATION

"We also protest discriminatory legislation isolating people in the entertainment industries from their fellow Americans. Such discrimination is not in line with this country's program of national unity.

"The people of the theatre, screen and allied arts have always been in the forefront in their nation's time of need. Many of them are in the armed forces and all of us are either engaged in aiding the country's war effort by buying bonds, raising funds for Army, Navy Relief, USO, entertaining at camps or busy in civilian defense work.

MALICIOUS ATTACK

"Need we remind these politicians that only a week or so before this malicious attack upon the entertainment professions, the U. S. Congress lowered its head in mourning for our dearly beloved Carole Lombard, killed while returning from a government mission.

"We do not wish to be embroiled in a political squabble, but we refuse to be made scapegoats by politicians who in order to gain strength in opposing a few individual appointments, libel a loyal and intensely patriotic profession.

"May we hope that you will lend your prestige and authority in helping us defeat any attempt to segregate us from the rest of labor's energetic role in the war effort and thereby help achieve the unity of all sections of the population which is essential to final victory."

'Eyes Open Mouth Shut'

Washington, Feb. 14—Fighting men, war factory workers and government employes are warned of the enemy's sharp ears in the first of a new series of official posters cautioning against loose talk.

The poster is designed particularly for Army posts, Naval stations, war industry plants and government offices where activities of interest to enemy agents are carried on. The warning is set in commanding red and black type. It says:

"The Enemy is Listening!
He wants to know what you know.
Keep it to yourself."

CIO Affiliates Press For Pay Increases

(See Stories on Inside Pages)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14—Unions of the CIO were mapping wage demands this week in an effort to protect American workers' standard of living from rising price levels.

The Steel Workers Organizing Committee was engaged in War Labor Board conferences with the four Little Steel firms, the union seeking $1 a day wage increases and union security. SWOC officials were pointing to the super-profits being reaped by the companies and the increased cost of living as a basis for their demands.

In Detroit, the United Automobile Workers' GM Council unanimously ratified $1-a-day increase demands, the union shop and establishment of a shop steward system in contract parleys with General Motors starting Feb. 28. The Council heard speeches and discussion of their problems by high officials of the union, and grilled Pres. C. E. Wilson of GM with questions about future employment and production when he appeared before their meeting.

Meanwhile the Aluminum Workers of America was submitting to its locals for ratification one of the first major decisions of the WLB—a recommendation for narrowing by seven cents an hour the wage differential in the southern plants of the Aluminum Co. of America. Company officials accepted the decision under protest.

The union had originally asked for complete abolition of the differential, which ranges from 18 to 20 cents an hour.

Give Time Off To Blood Donors

Washington, Feb. 14—Commerce Department Local 23 of the CIO United Federal Workers has obtained permission from the Dept.'s personnel director for Commerce employes to take off a half day on official leave if they wish to make blood donations.

TAKING DICTATION: Pretty Rose Rosenbaum of New York is taking dictation from the soldiers at Camp Dix, N. J. They voted her Queen of the Stenographers in the annual contest of the CIO United Office & Professional Workers.

Fort Dix Boys Choose Steno Queen

New York, Feb. 14.—The 1942 Queen of Stenographers was selected by five soldier judges of Fort Dix at the USO Clubhouse in Wrightstown, N. J., last night, Feb. 7. Two thousand Dix boys present at the party acclaimed Rose Rosenbaum, petite blonde, who will reign as Queen at the Stenographers' Ball on February 14. The dance is sponsored by the CIO Office Professional Workers.

The Queen is employed by the Alexander Previews. She was chosen at the climax of a unique party during which Fort Dix boys played host to a bevy of New York white collar beauties. Approval was enthusiastically voiced by the soldiers as the new Queen was selected, together with her four ladies-in-waiting. The judges included Sgt. Ted Worner of Yonkers, and Privates John Harold and Frank Beaton of New York, Sol Frish of Atlantic City, and Ed Schlesinger, Yonkers.

Defense Savings Bonds are a triple asset: First, they are a safe investment; second, the more Bonds bought the less the threat of inflation; and third, they supply the funds to buy the weapons to win the war.

Win Textile Pay Raises, Security

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 14—A modified union shop contract was signed here by the CIO Textile Workers Union of America and the Atlanta Woolen Mills.

The agreement provides for a ten per cent increase in wages, a week's vacation with pay, a guaranteed two-hour's pay for employes called to work whether or not they are used, time and a half for work over eight hours in one day or on Sundays and on five stipulated holidays.

Departmental seniority for both production and maintenance employes in promotions, lay-offs and re-employments are also provided.

Minnesota CIO's Special Parley Adopts War Plans

By RAY MUNSON

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 14—Marking many important production achievements by local unions of the State, the CIO Production for Victory Convention here last week-end mapped further plans to guarantee that the mining, packing, logging and machine industries of Minnesota contribute the utmost to the nation's war effort.

The convention voted unanimous support for the unity stand of Pres. Philip Murray and the National CIO Executive Board, and demonstrated the desire to effect unity of action to win the war by urging all CIO unions in the state to elect delegates and participate in the state-wide labor conference being called by Governor Harold Stassen for February 21.

BROPHY A SPEAKER

John Brophy, director of Industrial Union Councils, in an address at the opening session, stressed the increased responsibilities of the labor movement in production and in Civilian Defense in the light of the "momentous happenings of recent months which have altered the entire tempo of our lives."

Eli Oliver, representing the War Production Board's labor division, pledged the all-out effort of the administration to achieve plant conversion to war production as quickly as possible. Abram Flaxer, president of the State, County and Municipal Workers, spoke on war relief and met with delegations from all sections of the state to organize this important activity.

CONVERSION STARTING

Ringing applause greeted the announcement by Leonard Lageman, secretary of the State CIO Council, that conversion of the huge Ford assembly plant in St. Paul will begin within the month and that 7,000 workers will be employed there in war production. He also reported that a new blast furnace and two open hearths are assured for Duluth which will mean doubled production for the big steel plant there.

Lageman pointed out that these accomplishments were the direct results of efforts put forth by the local unions in these plants in conjunction with the local and the State Industrial Union Councils.

FULL TIME PRODUCTION

"Every available machine must be utilized 24 hours a day and seven days a week," Lageman said in his report which was rebroadcast from the convention hall by radio station WCCO.

The executive board adopted a resolution, introduced by President Ben Henry, endorsing the CIO board's position on labor unity and calling upon all affiliates for collective work in all phases of the war effort, including the sale of defense bonds, civilian defense and increased production of war products.

The council also adopted a resolution scoring the Dies Committee and asking appointment by Congress of a body "with responsible and fairminded leadership" and a resolution seeking increased WPA quotas and legislation designed to aid workers unemployed because of the conversion of industrial plants from peacetime to wartime production.

Nebraska, Iowa CIO Asks Parleys

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 14—Endorsing the National CIO Executive Board resolutions on labor unity and the war effort, the Iowa-Nebraska States Industrial Union Council today urged Iowa and Nebraska governors to call conferences of CIO, AFL and railroad union leaders to plan a joint war effort.

The state's council through its executive board, appointed a five-man CIO "war victory committee" to coordinate activities of all affiliates in the CIO's all-out support of the American nation in the war with Germany, Italy and Japan.

PINKSTON HEADS GROUP

Don Pinkston of Sioux City, American Newspaper Guild, was named chairman of the committee, and other members are John Keith, Cedar Rapids, Farm Equipment Workers; Joseph W. Clark, Ottumwa, SWOC; Elmer Warren, Waterloo, SWOC, and Donald Swim, Des Moines, Hosiery Workers.

Plan For Alaska Fisheries Drawn Up By Unions

Seattle, Feb. 12—Practical plans for operation of Alaska fisheries, despite the war, were drawn up and submitted by six CIO and AFL unions in a joint conference held here. Chief point in the plans is the proposal for an industry council modeled on the Murray plan, with representation by labor, industry and government.

The plans also called for pooling of boats, gear and personnel, adequate protection against sabotage and fire, war risk insurance for fishermen, deferments from military service where necessary, and flexible fishing regulations to meet war conditions.

The unions proposed the plan to meet the government's call for a much greater canned salmon pack this year to fill war needs. So far the industry has agreed to meet on specific issues, but has not consented to the industry council proposal. Unions represented were the CIO Fishermen and Allied Workers, the Alaska Fishermen, the Seattle CIO Council, the United Fishermen, the Cannery and Agricultural Workers, the American Communications Assn., and Local 79 of the AFL Machinists.

Similar plans were put forward at a joint meeting of Cannery and Agricultural Workers locals in the salmon packing industry from Seattle, Portland and San Francisco. In addition to the industry council and other points these locals call for a minimum of $175 a month for cannery workers. The locals already have contracts specifying the union hiring hall and other benefits.

Urge Michigan Locals To Seek Annual Wage

DETROIT, Feb. 14—Demands in pending and subsequent negotiations for an annual wage were urged today upon all local unions by August Scholle, CIO regional director in Michigan and Northwestern Ohio.

Scholle said he was urging the annual wage because of the opposition of the Michigan Manufacturers Association to increased unemployment compensation payments.

He charged that John Lovett, manager of the Michigan Manufacturers Association, was lobbying in Lansing against increased benefits, and that members of the association are directly responsible for the current high unemployment.

Their challenge is: "Try to get one penny out of the Unemployment Compensation Fund for the unemployed," Scholle said.

NOT SURPRISING

"This state of affairs is not surprising on any score, save that of big corporation lip service to the national unity and the co-operation with labor asked by President Roosevelt.

"It may be noted that organized labor has unstintingly given its pledges to forego many of its rights in a free government, because there exists a great national peril. Big business has given no pledges, and it apparently does not intend to respond to the requests of the President for a two-sided industrial peace.

"This can be accomplished only by insistence on an adequate annual wage that will tide workers over all unemployment periods.

"It makes no difference whether this arises from seasonal work, normal changeover of plant, or from management's failure to plan as illustrated by three congressional committees. There will have to be an annual wage."

Coast Dockmen Get Raise

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 14—(FP)—By decision of Wayne L. Morse, federal arbitrator, 32,000 members of the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union (CIO) are getting a base wage of $1.10 an hour straight time and $1.65 for overtime.

The original demand was for $1.25 straight time and $1.87½ overtime. The old rates were 90 cents and $1.50, making the new scale 22 per cent higher for straight time and 15 per cent up for overtime.

Morse said the increase was granted partly because of increased living costs and partly "as an incentive to increased production and efficiency during the war."

The hearing lasted four months. The award applies to longshoremen in all Pacific Coast ports except Los Angeles, Anacortes, and Tacoma, Wash., which have been declared affiliated to the International Longshoremen's Association (AFL) as bargaining agent.

2,000 Union Men Guard S. F. Docks

San Francisco, Feb. 14—(FP)—Air raid protection of San Francisco's waterfront will be in the hands of the longshoremen in the CIO Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union.

Nearly 2,000 members will be trained as firefighters and rescue workers, the rest in first aid. "I consider this one of the finest offers of group operation submitted to the Civilian Defense Council," said Chief of Police Charles Dullea, C.D.C. chairman.

Law Suit Hits Lundeberg; Ryan's N. Y. Setup Under Fire

NEW YORK, Feb. 14—The vicious shape-up system, long the bane of rank-and-file longshoremen along the New York waterfront, was under severe criticism this week as a result of the disastrous fire on the S. S. Normandie.

Though opposed by the workers, the shape-up system of hiring has long been supported by President Joseph Ryan of the AFL International Longshoremen's Association. Under the shape-up system, foremen pick the men they want for a job from groups which assemble at the docks each day. Kickbacks, favoritism, boss terrorism and other forms of corruption have resulted from the system of making the foreman king of the docks.

LAX SET-UP

The system came in for criticism when a reporter for the New York paper PM found that any character, whatever his background, could get a job on the docks through the connivance of easy-going union officials and foremen. He charged that the system makes possible the hiring of enemy saboteur agents, who could cause tremendous damage to American shipping.

In addition the paper asserted that the shape-up is wasteful of manpower, since it requires a labor force of several times the number needed for work on any given day.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 14—Charges of racketeering by Harry Lundeberg, head of the AFL Seafarers Intl. Union were made in a suit filed in Superior Court here asking an accounting of the organization's $150,000 funds.

Brought by three rank-and-file members of the union, the suit charged Lundeberg, in addition to misusing the union's funds and pocketing money for himself, hired thugs and goons and violated an agreement to hold a convention within a year after he had been set up in office by the AFL. Named with Lundeberg was Norma Perry, described as his "private secretary and confidential assistant and agent."

FUNDS FOR GOONS

The suit charged that Lundeberg used the union's funds to help three goons fight extradition to Louisiana, where they were wanted by New Orleans police in connection with the brutal murder in 1939 of Philip Carey, an official of the CIO National Maritime Union.

Lundeberg and Perry are the union's "constitution," the plaintiff's asserted, and they resist a convention for fear that they will be removed from office.

Lundeberg appeared as a key witness in the Harry Bridges deportation hearings. His testimony against the CIO longshoremen's leader was accepted at face value by Trial Examiner Sears, but was repudiated as inaccurate and prejudiced by the Immigration Appeals Board decision which upheld Bridges.

Westinghouse Votes CIO, 7-1

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Feb. 14—The 28th Westinghouse Electric plant on the list of those bargaining with the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, was added last week when UE Local 627 won a National Labor Relations Board election at the fluorescent lamp plant here by a score of 393 to 55.

Organization at this Westinghouse plant started from scratch when the plant was put up, and culminated in the election victory. Over 1,200 employees will be employed at the plant when it reaches full production.

Arbiter Gives Back Pay To 141 Workers

Cleveland, Feb. 14—Back pay for time lost in a three-day department shutdown last October will be received this week by 141 members of the CIO United Electrical Radio & Machine Workers at the National Carbon Co. here.

The decision was handed down by the American Arbitration Assn. in the first labor-management dispute to come before that organization in Cleveland. Under the ruling of its impartial umpire, the men received 12 hours' pay apiece.

Basis for the dispute, which was submitted by UE Local 702, was failure of the company to respect a curtailment-of-production clause in the contract under which hours were not to be reduced less than 28 a week.

Because shortage of materials was the cause of the shutdown, the union's victory is unique, in that the union has insisted upon the responsibility of an employer to foresee and concern itself with possible priorities unemployment.

The company manufactures dry batteries and flashlights.

WHY INCREASE WAGES: Here's the clear-cut answer, shown in these two charts appearing in the current issue of the CIO Economic Outlook. Top chart shows a 10 per cent—and still growing—increase in the cost of living in one year. That's equivalent to a 10 per cent wage cut for every American worker. Note that food prices have gone up twice as much.

Lower chart helps explain super-profits of big business. Production of one worker for one hour has zoomed up 15 per cent since 1937—but the cost to industry of that hour's work is just about what it was five years ago. Greater output at the same cost spells profits—and labor wants its share.

Six Good Reasons Cited For Pay Boosts

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12—Economic justification for wage increases and union security demanded by CIO unions exists in sharply rising living costs which have wiped out recent CIO won raises, in inflated profits, increased labor productivity and in the fact that workers' incomes have been consistently below minimum health and efficiency standards, the Economic Outlook declares in its current issue.

The Outlook lists the following points in presenting the cases for wage increases and union security, and in pointing out that present conditions cut down on workers' health and efficiency, thus curtailing production:

1. Living costs are up 12.1 per cent since August, 1939, 9.8 per cent of this in the past year, and are expected to climb another 15 to 20 per cent by the end of 1942. Food prices are up 28.6 per cent since 1929, 29.1 per cent of this since January, 1941. This is especially important, the Outlook says, since the average worker has to spend 34 per cent of his income on food. These rising costs have largely wiped out recent wage increases won by the CIO.

2. Profits are up 16.3 per cent between 1940 and 1941, 77 per cent over 1939. Rises are most marked in the arms industries, five aircraft firms showing a rise of 38.2 per cent in the first nine months of 1941 over the same period in 1940, copper and brass fabricators a rise of 71.5 per cent between 1940 and 1941, iron and steel concerns 36.1 per cent, and similar increases in chemicals, oil, textiles, railroad equipment, etc.

These increases are net—after all conceivable deductions have been made by well known corporation accounting methods. Profits for 1942 are expected to be considerably above even these increases.

3. Labor productivity has greatly increased in recent periods, causing labor costs per unit of production to decline sharply. U. S. figures show that industry's overhead has declined 3.6 per cent since the outbreak of the war.

4. U. S. and CIO studies show that most workers have incomes far below health and efficiency levels, set by the Heller Committee of the University of California at $2,400 for a family of five. A CIO study among workers in high-paying industries shows an average income of $2,000. These inadequate incomes are further reduced by excessive taxation on workers, those in the $1,000 to $3,000 brackets paying out 17 per cent of the total in taxes.

LOSSES FROM ILLNESS

This results in serious losses to production due to sickness mainly caused by inadequate incomes, some 400 million man-days being lost in this way annually. In addition, worker's families are incurring further losses due to wage earners entering the armed forces. Two-thirds of American families are affected,

WLB Hears Little Steel Cases; Auto Union Sets Demands

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14—Demands of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee for wage increases and union security, brought to the fore in negotiations with "Little Steel," are now before the War Labor Board.

Contract negotiations with Bethlehem Steel, Inland Steel, Youngstown Sheet and Tube, and Republic Steel, under way since last September, became deadlocked over the union's demand for a $1-a-day wage increase and union security. Neither of the four companies would make any concessions on these two questions.

Bethlehem Steel's case was first certified to the War Labor Board on February 6. Republic Steel conferences broke up the next day and a few days later the other two cases were given to the board.

175,000 INVOLVED

Immediately involved are approximately 175,000 steel workers in these four companies. Over 500,000 more will be effected in the other 900 steel firms now under contract with the SWOC. Any wage gains or improvements in union status will be sought in the entire industry.

Philip Murray, SWOC chairman, took active part in Bethlehem and Republic conferences in New York City. James F. Dewey, U. S. Department of Labor Conciliator, joined these two conferences when the deadlock ensued. He notified the Department of Labor of the deadlock and the cartifications to the War Labor Board followed.

AGREE ON MANY POINTS

In all four conferences substantial agreement had been reached on virtually all other provisions in the contract. Complete agreement will quickly follow settlement of the two basic issues, Chairman Murray said.

Although the SWOC has approximately 900 companies under contract, the list does not include the four companies involved here. Their refusal to sign union contracts in 1937 precipitated the "Little Steel" strikes at that time.

DETROIT, Feb. 13—Demands for $1 a day increase and the union shop will top the proposals placed before the General Motors Corp. management in coming contract negotiations, the GM Council of the CIO United Automobile Workers voted this week.

Some 160 representatives of 190,000 GM workers in 90 plants gave unanimous approval to the demands, which will be submitted to the company on February 28.

Other union proposals include establishment of a shop steward system, improved grievance machinery, extended powers for the impartial umpire hired jointly by GM and the UAW-CIO, increased pay for second and third shifts, higher rates for tool and die makers, and the granting of a $100 defense bond to each worker in lieu of vacation allowances.

Speakers at the two day meeting of the council included UAW President, R. J. Thomas, Sec.-Treas. George Addes, Director Walter Reuther of the union's GM department and CIO Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood.

PROMISE SUPPORT

All of them promised full support to the GM workers' demands and stressed the need for militant prosecution of the war and extension of democracy on the home front.

Breaking a precedent, the Council heard a talk by C. E. Wilson, head of General Motors. The corporation president, attending his first union meeting, discussed war production in the company's far-flung network of factories.

GM's employment level hit an all-time high in June, 1941, with 235,000 on the payroll, he said, predicting that that figure would again be reached by September of this year and that by June, 1943, employment would go up to 325,000 as the company hit its full stride on war production work.

MANY QUESTIONS

Wilson was subjected to a lively cross-fire of questions about the company's production and personnel levels after his address was completed.

Commenting later on Wilson's

Delays Beset Plan To Aid Idle Men

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14—Congressional delays plus behind the scenes work by employer interests continued to delay action during the week on the $300,000,000 bill to supplement inadequate unemployment compensation for workers thrown out of jobs by conversion of plants to war production.

Chief opposition stems from certain state social security officials acting as a front for the National Association of Manufacturers, who have been raising the cry that the bill as originally written would "Federalize" compensation systems and thus tear down states' rights. Finding ready allies in the polltax Congressmen from the sweatshop belt who fear that $24 a week for the jobless will raise doubts among workers earning 30 cents an hour, these people have been able to stymie the bill so far.

VIGOROUS CAMPAIGN

A vigorous CIO campaign is being carried on for the bill by union representatives who have come here to tell their Congressmen that jobless workers must not be permitted to starve. Sidney Hillman, labor director of the War Production Board, testified for the bill this week, declaring:

"The Federal government has a definite obligation to provide some measure of economic assistance for these displaced workers during the period of temporary unemployment."

In addition, Hillman cited morale and welfare as vital to continued production, pointing out that workers cut off with the present starvation scale of benefits would not be able to take arms jobs when the conversion program is completed and plants start up again.

R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW-CIO, has been in Washington talking to Congressmen about the seriousness of the situation and demanding quick action. The UAW will have close to 500,000 workers out of jobs before conversion is completed.

Optical Union Grows Fast In Buffalo

New York, Feb. 14—Workers in six of the seven wholesale optical shops in Buffalo, N. Y., have signed up 100 per cent with the CIO, the Optical Workers Coordinating Committee announced here this week. The union is conducting a nationwide drive to organize both retail and wholesale concerns.

Sebastian Rebaldo, secretary-treasurer of the Coordinating Committee, said that negotiations will get under way at once to negotiate signed contracts with the six organized shops. Many workers from retail establishments in Buffalo are also joining the union, he reported.

"The workers of Buffalo are determined to better their conditions and have displayed this spirit by joining the Optical Workers Union," a statement issued by the union declared.

Punish Violator

Washington, Feb. 14—Punitive action against the Acme Foundry Co., Chicago, for violation of priority orders has been announced by the Division of Industry Operations, War Production Board.

Electrical Union Sits In On Case

Washington, Feb. 14—The CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers participated this week in War Labor Board conferences here on the question of double-time compensation for Sunday work in plants of the General Motors Corp.

Although the majority of GM employes are organized into the United Automobile Workers, the UE has in its membership some 30,000 workers in GM's electrical division. The question of Sunday wage rates will affect all the firm's employes.

Aid Them Now

At least 2½ to 3½ million workers will be completely displaced as a result of priorities and plant conversion in the next few months, according to CIO estimates.

Already more than 450,000 have lost their jobs in the automobile industry and some 300,000 more in the rubber, glass, aluminum, textile, steel and electrical industries.

Yet the $300,000,000 emergency unemployment compensation measure so urgently needed to tide these workers over until they are reemployed in war work, is still being held up in Congress.

Write or wire at once to your Congressman and Senators urging immediate passage of this measure.

CIO Booming

The recent annual report of the Natl. Labor Relations Board shows CIO far ahead in Board elections, with 335,619 workers voting CIO, as against 181,000 for AFL and 72,000 for local or unaffiliated unions.

Since then CIO organizing work has borne fruit in scores more of important Labor Board elections. In the last few weeks, for instance, there have been the outstanding CIO success at the Vought-Sikorsky airplane plant; the city-wide victory of the United Shoe Workers at Haverhill, Mass.; the overwhelming vote for the Oil Workers Intl. Union at the Texas Co., Port Arthur; the Farm Equipment Workers success at the big Caterpillar plant; a two-to-one vote for the Textile Workers Union at Gaffney, S. C.; and the 323-to-one vote for the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers at Rockwood, Tenn., as well as other election victories.

The tide is running strong for the modern and progressive industrial unionism of the CIO.

Enough of Dies

The American most frequently quoted in Axis short-wave broadcasts directed to this hemisphere is Congressman Martin Dies of the un-American Committee, according to a report of the Federal Communications Commission based on recordings of all broadcasts from Axis-dominated countries.

Furthermore, no one has yet heard a single criticism of him from these enemies of our country and its institutions.

There's a reason. For the Dies Committee has done more than all the Hitler agents in the country to create dissension and to bring our democratic institutions into contempt. It has done this by its constant baseless slandering of all liberal and progressive Americans, including some of the most prominent leaders in our national life.

Labor knows Dies' record only too well. For he has concentrated in particular on smearing the labor unions and their leaders. And he has timed his attacks on unions at such moments when they would do the workers most harm and lend the most aid to anti-union employers.

Has Dies reformed? Not by a long shot. He recently announced that, with the new funds he is seeking, he would like to subpena some 600 or 700 CIO and AFL leaders and possibly 2,000 government officials—for a dose of his famous red-smear treatment.

The CIO executive board has gone on record unanimously to oppose any more funds for the Dies Committee. So will all fair-minded Americans who value national unity and hate Hitler. Another appropriation for Dies is now before the House. Wire your Congressman and urge him to vote against it.

Brotherhood Week

Brotherhood Week, February 15 to 22, is always a timely reminder of American ideals of tolerance and brotherhood as between all the diverse national, racial and religious groups that go to make up our population.

This year the importance of the occasion is greatly magnified. We are at war to defend these ideals and practices against Hitler's brutal doctrines of national enslavement, racial oppression and religious persecution. National unity is vital.

The CIO is founded on the principles honored in Brotherhood Week. It vigorously fights discrimination against Negroes and the foreign-born. The strength of its unions depends upon united action of Jews and gentiles, Negroes and whites, Catholics and Protestants.

Anyone who wilfully spreads dissension and intolerance between these groups is not only a disrupter of labor unions, he is also an enemy of our country playing Hitler's game.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

It all seemed pretty trivial at first. Some middle-aged tory Congressmen took revenge for their own lack of glamor by making cracks about Melvyn Douglas, when he took a job with the Office of Civilian Defense.

Then they picked on a girl dancer named Mayris Chaney, employed by OCD for a physical fitness program. Their attitude lacked chivalry. Their humor was of a rather crude poolroom variety. But the papers liked it and began imitating.

Soon, however, the cloakroom wisecrackers took on the tone of a yelping pack of wolves. Press persiflage grew into persistent persecution of Miss Chaney and a few other minor girl employes. The august halls of Congress resounded for hours with hysterical debate.

The big newspaper chains discovered a "national issue." Their "cute" stories about imaginary "fan-dancers" and the like were followed by ponderous editorials. Cartoonists and columnists joined in the attack.

The whole tory pack was in full cry.

Maybe some of the criticism was justified. Maybe these particular appointments were not the best possible. Certainly the OCD is open to criticism, as are other departments. It is launching a huge important program. Bungling has happened before.

But the present anti-OCD campaign is of such scope, as compared to the trivialities on which it is based, that one can soon see it has ulterior aims.

Consider the type of Congressmen who started it all and have done most of the shouting. Leland Ford of California, Faddis of Pennsylvania, Taber of New York and Cox of Georgia are among the worst labor-baiters in Congress.

Ford awhile back made outright Fascist demands in the House for suppression of the CIO and concentration camps for its leaders. He has hardly made a speech without attacking labor unions.

This same Ford, who throws a fit about a few thousand dollars in civilian defense salaries, has never raised his voice against the squandering of millions on war profiteers. On the contrary, he has actively opposed increased taxation of excess wealth.

Faddis, a ranking member of the military affairs committee, has spent his time there in constant attacks on labor and in whitewashing the defense obstructions and profiteering of industrialists.

In fact, all of the Congressmen responsible for this campaign have an almost 100 per cent record of opposition to all labor and liberal legislation.

What are this tory crowd after? Why so much concerted propaganda in the big-business press?

Civilian defense is of vital importance for winning the war. A properly organized program must include, not only air raid protection, but countless other activities to maintain the health, welfare and morale of the civilian population. Labor as well as church, fraternal and other organizations must participate fully if it is to be successful.

All of this arouses the fears of the tory big-business crowd. Social reform is their bugaboo. They fear the social conscience of the American people may be stirred by civilian defense. They fear that labor may gain too much voice; that consumer protection may benefit the poor at the expense of the rich; that more equality of treatment may result for all classes.

So one of the aims of their present drive is to limit civilian defense to the most obvious air-raid precautions; and to eliminate all social welfare efforts needed to maintain morale.

The same papers that denounce "waste of public funds" through OCD plans to bring more health and brightness to the lives of poorer people, have nothing to say about the far greater wastes of war profiteering and the bungling of dollar-a-year men.

A recent report of the House naval affairs committee cited many examples of unchecked war profiteering; it also criticized labor unions.

A survey of press reaction to this report by James S. Twohey Associates reveals that a great majority of the papers defended business against profiteering charges and laid their major stress on need for union controls.

Among other good Americans who have taken a beating in this anti-OCD campaign are the entertainment workers. Their work is essential to the morale of both the armed and civilian population. They have contributed liberally of their time and energies in bond-raising campaigns, free performances, etc.

Yet when one of their number is employed by OCD, without compensation, to organize such volunteer efforts, he and his profession are made the butt of all the crude ridicule at the command of $10,000-a-year tory Congressman and millionaire publishers.

Murray Sees Council Plan Aiding Unity

Washington, Feb. 14—The CIO's industry council plan would advance national unity by offering a working program for labor peace and full production, CIO President Philip Murray declares in an article entitled "A permanent solution for American's labor problems" which will appear in the February 24 issue of Look Magazine.

"We in the CIO are proud that more than a year ago we advanced a plan for national unity—a practical working plan for labor peace and full production," President Murray writes. "This plan calls for nationwide councils set up for each branch of industry on which would be represented 'the working brains of government, industry and labor'."

NATIONAL BOARD

Over the industry councils would be a national planning board formed out of the conference called by the President of the United States, which would supervise and coordinate the work of all industry councils, and serve as an appeals agency in disputes between industries over allocations of materials and labor.

Not only would this plan make a great contribution toward ending the disunity that has existed in this country, Murray asserts, but it would also resolve the doubts and fears about what is to happen after the war is over.

The industry councils would be responsible for planning postwar production and would make plans to assure full production in each industry when the emergency is over. It is essential that this be done, Murray declares, "if we are to preserve the liberties for which we are fighting."

UNIONS NECESSARY

Stressing the importance of orderly collective bargaining, Murray says that this depends upon mutual respect which "cannot exist if labor is unorganized. The individual worker cannot bargain for himself in mass production industry. Not only his wages and hours but his dignity as a human being depend on organization."

Murray concludes by expressing the hope that "out of the sweat, toil and tears of this war" will come not merely "victory but the possibility of a new and better world."

Signs Pact

New York, Feb. 14—The Harlem Book Co. has signed a union agreement covering its shipping employes, the Book & Magazine Union announced here. The union is affiliated with the United Office & Professional Workers. Terms call for a $21 weekly minimum, a five-day week, two weeks' paid vacation, sick leave with pay, seniority rights and hiring through the union.

Attack Pal of Axis:

Dies Committee's Money Grab Stalled as Threat to Nation

By W. C. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14—Martin Dies, the man who made a political career of labor-baiting, ran into some heavy weather this week.

The Under-Secretary of State, Sumner Welles, shortly after discussions with the President, knocked galley-west an elaborate and completely phony story Dies had told the press of having advance knowledge of the Pearl Harbor disaster, and of not having been permitted to publish it.

The labor movement blasted him as a disrupter, a tool of Hitler, and an enemy of everything honest and progressive in America. And to cap a tough week, the Federal Communications Commission revealed that Dies' speeches are Goebbels' favorite source of material for anti-American propaganda.

Dies' misfortunes began when he tried to pull a fast one in applying for renewal of his un-American Committee. His committee set to expire March 31, Dies asked for renewal this week in order to sneak it over before labor and other progressive opposition could get going. Labor was on the alert, and the fast one did not come off.

The story goes back to the CIO Executive Board meeting last month, where a unanimous resolution blasted Dies' record as "sordid and reprehensible," put the finger on him for a long career of harassing the unions and the progressive features of the New Deal, and accused him of trying to break up unity between America and its allies in the war against Hitler.

Following this lead, hundreds of CIO unions and councils all over the country began pouring wires and letters of protest into the House Rules Committee, where Dies' resolution asking for continuance was being readied for a quick trip to the House floor. Chances looked pretty good, since the Rules Committee is stacked with Dies' friends and fellow polltaxers—men like Smith of Virginia, Cox of Georgia, Starnes of Alabama—and since Dies is on it himself.

COUNTER- BLITZ

The counter-blitz began with testimony from CIO, Railroad Brotherhood, church and civil rights groups who appeared before the committee to tell it what labor and liberals thought of Dies.

Included in the witnesses were representatives from the N. Y. CIO Council, the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, the CIO maritime unions, the Railroad Trainmen, the Federation for Constitutional Liberties, the Connecticut Council on Social and Labor Legislation, the Methodist Federation for Social Service, the League of American Writers, and others.

All the witnesses were unanimous in blasting the Dies Committee, not only on its long anti-labor record but on its active aid to Hitler in promoting suspicion, hysteria and disunity in America and in promoting hatred and fear of our allies in the war, in particular the Soviet Union.

MARTIN DIES
Finds Rough Going

ASKS ABOLITION

Speaking for the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, Russ Nixon, legislative representative, called for abolition of the witch-hunting committee on the ground that its anti-labor work was a danger to morale and consequently to war production.

Bjorne Halling, representing the CIO maritime unions, pointed out that continuation of the committee "can only serve to disrupt further efforts to increase production through the united action of labor and industry." Wm. S. Zeman, appearing for the Connecticut group, made up of CIO and AFL unions, told of damage the Dies Committee had done to morale, to civilian defense and to war relief and defense bond sales by its lies and slanders against labor in that state.

Citing a detailed analysis of the committee prepared by the National Lawyers Guild, Clifford McAvoy of the N. Y. CIO Council charged it with utter failure to investigate both foreign and domestic Fascists and Fascist agents in this country, listing 29 known instances where Dies ignored evidence of Fascist activity brought to his notice.

THROWN FOR LOSS

The Presidential slap at Dies was brought out by Rep. Vito Marcantonio, American Labor Party Congressman from New York, who was the first to question Dies' yarn about Pearl Harbor. Appearing before the Rules Committee in public and executive session, Marcantonio challenged the committee to bring a State Department witness up to testify on whether or not the Department had asked Dies to suppress his evidence.

Following the session, Sumner Welles called Marcantonio to say that the President had authorized him to deny flatly that anyone in the Government had urged suppression of evidence that would have prevented Pearl Harbor.

DELAYS ACTION

This blow served to soften the Rules Committee considerably, and in place of rushing the continuation resolution to the House floor, passage was delayed until February 23 at least, and three hours of debate granted. Previously, the opposition to the Dies Committee has never had more than five minutes to speak.

On the heels of this, the Federal Communications Commission issued a report stating that not only was Dies quoted by the Axis radio as often "as any living American public figure," but also that "his opinions were quoted by the Axis without criticism at any time."

"The remarkable thing," the Commission added with some restraint, "is that Congressman Dies should be presented to Americans by Nazi and Fascist propagandists as an authority whose opinions should be heeded."

Pamphlets On Wages, Labor Unity

Washington, Feb. 14—Two new CIO pamphlets dealing with major issues in the labor movement and in the war came off the press this week, one on the CIO's demand for higher wages, union security and fair taxation and the other on labor unity.

"Fair Wages, Fair Taxes and Union Security—Labor's Way to Victory," is the title of the first one, based on policy laid down by the January meeting of the CIO Executive Board in outlining CIO's position on matters vital to the home front and to war production.

The second pamphlet, "The CIO and Labor Unity," goes in detail into the issue of unity of CIO and AFL discussed at the recent Board meeting. It carries official statements by the Board, speeches of Pres. Murray and other CIO officials, reviews the past unity negotiations with the AFL, and discusses united action already being carried out on the war.

ECONOMIC BASIS

"Labor's Way to Victory" sums up the economic basis for CIO's demands for higher wages, union security and lower taxes on workers, pointing out that morale and efficiency for war production can only be kept up if living and working standards are maintained.

The pamphlet cites living cost figures to show that workers are not getting enough money to buy sufficient food, clothing and shelter to keep up health and welfare, and that consequently production is suffering.

It also points out that living and working standards are maintained by strong unions, and that the CIO's demands for union security through the union shop, etc., are based on the need to protect standards through organization. Taxation on workers, which already takes a big bite of the low incomes, should be reduced in favor of taxes on those most able to pay, the pamphlet adds.

Both pamphlets can be ordered from the Publicity Dept., CIO, 1106 Connecticut Ave., NW, Washington, D. C.

speech, Reuther expressed hope that his attendance at the UAW parley would "mark a better type of relationship between the corporation and the union, a relationship which will lay the basis for effective carrying out of our responsibilities to the nation."

THOMAS RAPS KNUDSEN

UAW President R. J. Thomas lashed out at Lt.-Gen. William Knudsen, former boss of the OPM and before that the head of General Motors. He claimed credit for the UAW in forcing Knudsen out of the nation's highest production post, saying that the union's criticism of Knudsen's subservience to the business as usual interests in the automobile industry were a major factor in the creation of the War Department Board under Donald S. Nelson.

Thomas pointed out that had Reuther's plan for gradual conversion of the automobile plants to war production been carried out, airplane output would now be far ahead of current schedules. It was recalled that some time ago Wilson told a Congressional committee that only 15 per cent of the company's facilities could be used for war work, a figure which has been lifted periodically since the government halted further auto production.

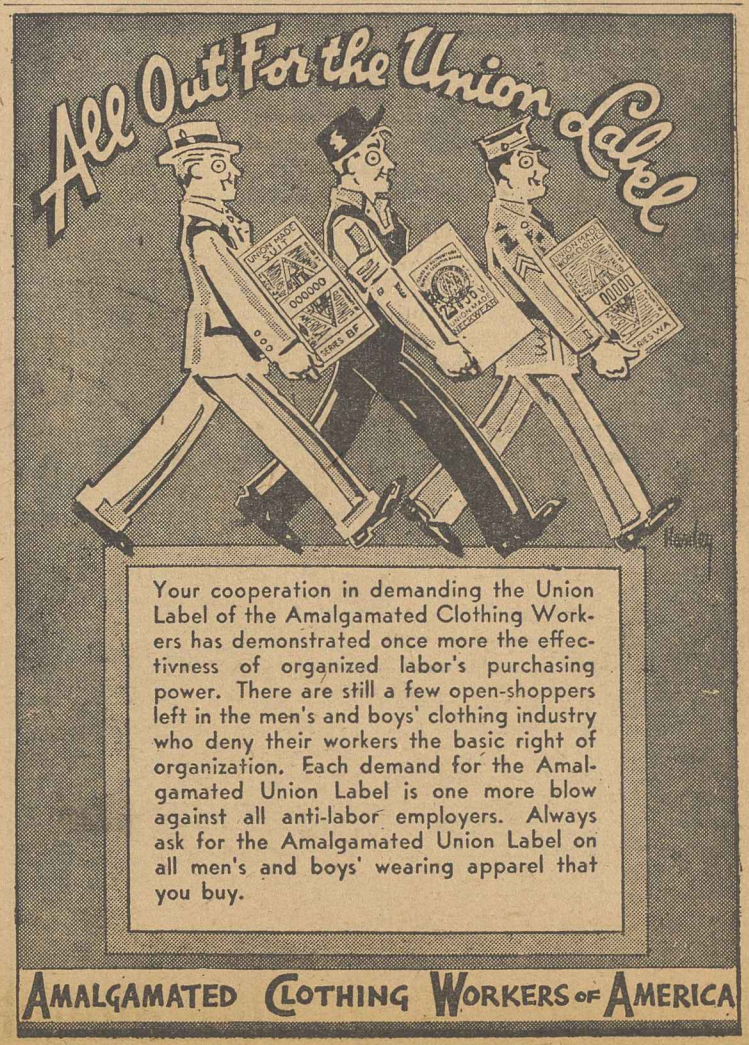
SWING-SHIFT PROBLEM

Addes discussed the swing-shift problem, now being heard by the War Labor Board in Washington. The question involves payment of double time to workers for Sunday employment when the company is working on a 7-day week.

The auto union secretary pointed out that while labor objects to sacrificing its hard won gains while companies make the biggest profits in history, it is willing to arbitrate questions on which no peaceful settlement can be made.

Haywood stressed labor's stake in a democratic victory in the war, and added that there must be equality of sacrifice by all classes in the nation to aid the military effort. He brought greetings to the conclave from CIO President Philip Murray.

John W. Livingston of St. Louis was elected chairman of the GM council and William McGill of Detroit, secretary-treasurer. Reuther was given a vote of confidence for his conduct of the union's GM division.



8,459 Defense Councils Set Up, Landis Reveals

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14—Close to five and a half million people have volunteered for civilian defense and 8,459 local defense councils have been set up throughout the country, James M. Landis, director of the Office of Civilian Defense, said here today. These figures show an increase of more than 20 percent in the number of councils and more than 50 percent in volunteers since December 31, Landis said.

"This calls for the mobilization of all our people to meet the many demands of war," Landis added. "No loyal man and no loyal woman is outside this war effort. They can and must if this nation is to win through as a strong, unified, democratic nation."

The figures cited by Landis were seen as a popular answer to recent mud-slinging by pro-Fascist forces in Congress against the OCD, in which Congressmen long identified with appeasement have been attacking OCD's work and its plans for building civilian morale.

These attacks, in which all the old war-cries about "frills, luxuries," etc., and the even staler line of Red-baiting were dragged out against the civilian defense effort have been making headlines in the daily newspapers for weeks while the work of civilian defense organization goes on.

DIES, TOO

Congressional smears were timed with attempts of the Dies Committee to renew its anti-labor, anti-unity campaigns for another year. Dies, whose request for renewal was put in the hopper this week, is facing a stiff fight from combined labor and progressive opposition, and his Tory friends on both sides of the House have been frantically trying to help him. Dies was quick to seize on this straw and has promised to "investigate" the OCD—as soon as his committee is renewed.

ANSWERS SMEARS

Landis' statement directly answered these smear attacks in declaring: "In its determination to fulfill the grave responsibilities imposed, it (the OCD) cannot and will not be deflected from its task by petty criticism or personal attack. Fair constructive criticism is always the right of a free people. Criticism aimed to undermine and divide leadership is another thing."

CIO Councils Urged To Act

Washington, Feb. 14—CIO city and state councils, if not already represented on civilian defense bodies, should immediately seek such membership, John Brophy, CIO director of industrial union councils declared this week.

Brophy noted that the recent CIO-labor parley had gained a promise for cooperation from the OCD regional offices, and for joint employer-union committees to work out plant protections plans. The CIO councils were urged to set up special civilian defense committees of their own to smooth the work with the local OCD offices.

Settle Strike, Gain Security

Portland, Ore., Feb. 14— Union recognition, wage increases, the union shop and other gains mark the agreement recently won by the United Furniture Workers, CIO, from the Doernbecher Mfg. Co. of this city, according to CIO Regional Director Wm. Dalrymple.

The contract covers more than 1,600 workers. In addition, it carries clauses on seniority, grievance machinery, etc., and submits all points now in dispute to an arbitrator to be chosen by the U. S. Labor Dept.

LABOR OFFICE: This CIO unit of the Detroit chapter of the Red Cross has been set up on the city's east side as the result of work by the UAW-CIO Ladies Auxiliaries. Located in Schiller Hall, near the offices of Local 208 of the auto union, it's a center for production work, lining up of blood donors and classes in first aid for workers and their wives.

BLOOD DONORS: Pres. Oscar Witmer of Local 12, CIO United Federal Workers, is the first man in his local to donate blood to the Red Cross. An employe of the Dept. of Labor in Washington, he's shown giving his pint of blood at the Naval Hospital in the capital city. Local is running a mass donation campaign.

War Labor Board Orders Alcoa Lift Southern Pay

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14—A decision on the prolonged wage dispute between the CIO Aluminum Workers of America and the monopoly-controlled Aluminum Co. of America was handed down this week by the National War Labor Board.

By a vote of seven to four, the Board decided that ALCOA should narrow the differential between its Northern and Southern plants by increasing the wages of beginners in Alcoa, Tenn., and Badin, N. C., by seven cents an hour and making corresponding adjustments for all other employes.

At the same time, the Board decided, by a vote of seven to five that the company should pay bonuses to night shift workers of three cents an hour for the 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. shift and five cents for the 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. shift.

LOCALS TO VOTE

After the decision was announced President N. A. Zonarich of the Aluminum Workers Union said that the terms would be submitted for acceptance or rejection to the local unions concerned at meetings scheduled over the weekend. Company officials in Pittsburgh stated that they would accept the Board's decion "under protest."

The Union had demanded complete abolition of the wage differential between Northern and Southern plants which would have called for an 18 to 20 cents hourly raise in the beginning wage. It also had asked for a flat ten cents an hour bonus for all night shift workers at the New Kensington plant.

MORSE WRITES OPINION

The four labor members of the Board — Thomas Kennedy, R. J. Thomas, George Meany and Robert Watt—joined the three public members—Wayne L. Morse, William H. Davis and Frank P. Graham—in the majority opinion on the North-South differential issue, which was written by Morse.

"It is not to the interests of our wage program," the decision stated, "to take any steps which will lower unreasonably our standards of living . . . This war should not be the source of large financial profits for any American, be he employer, farmer, professional man or worker."

Reasons for Pay Increase

since that proportion requires more than one wage earner.

5. Wage increases are spent by workers on basic needs, CIO studies show. Of an average of $22 a month raise won recently, $20 went for increased food, rent and clothing outlays—most of it taken up by increased prices.

6. Increased wages will not cause inflation, since they can be paid out of increased profits. On the contrary, increased wages are needed to stabilize the national economy and to prevent a postwar collapse similar to that after the last world war.

UNEMPLOYMENT UP

Unemployment for November is estimated at 5,470,000, an increase of 8.6 per cent over October.

CIO on Radio In Michigan

Detroit, Feb. 14—Full support for a labor radio series being broadcast Sunday afternoons at 1 o'clock over city stations of the Mutual network throughout the State is asked by President R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers.

The series, which started February 1, is being presented under the auspices of the Michigan CIO Council and features quarter-hour addresses by prominent CIO officials.

Workers Lend Helping Hand To Red Cross

By MARY POND

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14—Hands across the sea, hands of mercy to men under the American flag and to civilians of many nations who became casualties of World War II are stretched out in ever greater numbers today—from the defense factories, from every American industry and from the homes of working men, as union and auxiliary members swing into action to aid, through the American Red Cross, the men in the armed forces and the victims of battle on the seas and overseas.

Working extra shifts under efficiency programs to speed up the nation's war production, men and women in the unions fill out the remaining waking hours with first aid and home nursing classes, trips to blood donor centers, production of hospital supplies and collection of War Fund donations. Members of the CIO work together with members of the AFL and Brotherhoods to protect security for the nation and to decrease the sufferings of those affected by war.

Side by side, AFL teamster and CIO electrical worker step forward at Red Cross Blood Donor centers to donate their blood to the Army and Navy reserve. And they do it in an organized way, arranging group donations in cities where blood donor centers are located. With only the larger cities in this list, because of the speed with which the blood must reach laboratories for conversion into plasma, the locals in surrounding territories are beginning to take advantage of mobile units sent out from blood donor centers.

SEEK 15,000 DONORS

Street distribution of leaflets urging blood donations is being made in New York by the Industrial Union Council, in cooperation with the National Health Security Council. In Cleveland, 15,000 donors has been set as the goal of the Industrial Union Council, with reports this week showing that a majority of the figure had already been signed up.

Members of the United Federal Workers of America take time out from their full-time work for Uncle Sam to visit the center in Washington, D. C.

SPECIAL CIO UNIT

Red Cross headquarters for union members has been created in Detroit, with the storeroom window reading "East Side, CIO Unit, American Red Cross." Started by the United Automobile Workers' Auxiliary, the headquarters is the scene of first aid and home nursing classes, knitting, sewing and lining up of blood donors.

Activity there and elsewhere has been heightened this week with observance of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries' "Beat Hitler Week," during which Red Cross activities will be promoted to wives, sisters and daughters of union men. Friday has been designated as "Red Cross Day" in the week's program of the Los Angeles Auxiliary Council. Meeting notices from auxiliaries carry every week across the bottom—"Bring your Red Cross Knitting." Collection of books for men in the service, to be delivered to them by the Red Cross, has a standing spot on all agendas.

Active home service is given by women in both unions and auxiliaries, who are enlisting in the voluntary services of the ARC in increasing numbers. Increasing demands for nursery facilities to free mothers, has led to enrollment of others in home nursing classes.

MURRAY ON COMMITTEE

Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, serves on the advisory committee of the War Fund drive and everywhere unions under his leadership give without stint for war relief.

Organized labor in San Francisco has pledged a half day's pay. New York's union men and women have promised $1,000,000 and a 12-man Joint Labor Committee representing AFL, CIO, Brotherhoods and independent unions, coordinates the work of all groups in all phases of Red Cross work.

Seamen, engineer, newspaperman, clerk, waitress, miner and longshoreman organized for common benefit, work for common benefit of the nation through Red Cross channels, knowing the needs of a nation at war and determined to meet that need to the fullest extent of their ability.

Film Office Polls Feb. 25

On that day, the Natl. Labor Relations Board is holding a series of elections to determine if the film company's home office employes wish to be represented by Local 109 of the CIO United Office & Professional Workers.

Polls will be conducted among the staffs of Loew-Metro, Columbia, 20th Century-Fox, Paramount, RKO, Screen Readers and National Screen.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

Three major issues dominated the week in national CIO activity—the Little Steel conference and wage negotiations, the fight on renewing the infamous Dies Committee, and the struggle for adequate unemployment compensation.

The Little Steel case has gone to the War Labor Board, which will have to rule on the Steel Workers Organizing Committee demand for $1.00 a day wage raises and union security. This demand is the key point of CIO's drive for higher production through better living and working conditions. Outlined in a major action of the January CIO Executive Board meeting, this demand for fair wages and union security will be heard from every CIO affiliate whose contracts come up for renewal in the next few months.

All CIO members should get and read the latest CIO pamphlet on this subject—"Fair Wages, Fair Taxation, Union Security—Labor's Way to Victory." It has the arguments you will need in convincing the employer and your neighbors that CIO's drive is a real contribution to the national war effort. Order from the Publicity Dept., CIO headquarters.

DIES LIES

On another Washington front, the CIO led this week in opposing renewal of the Dies smear committee—and found some powerful allies. The President of the United Stats all but called Dies a liar, in knocking down Dies' elaborate and phony story that he had "advance information" that would have prevented the Pearl Harbor disaster, but was prevented by the state department from making it public.

Phil Murray publicly branded Dies as a liar when Dies "charged" that the SWOC kept reds and criminals on its payroll. Yet despite this, Dies has been able to get three renewals for his committee and close to $400,000 (how many bombers would $400,000 build?) of your money from a hysterical and subservient Congress.

COMPENSATION

The bill to supplement inadequate unemployment compensation is still before Congress, where reactionary state officials, supported and egged on by the Natl. Association of Manufacturers are working hard to whittle it down. At best, it calls for $24 a week compensation—hardly a princely sum when the cost of living is jumping higher every week.

Hundreds of thousands of workers are already jobless while plants are converted to war production. Before this is done, millions will be out of work. Conversion is not a matter of days or weeks—it takes months. Conversion unemployment is due simply and solely to the refusal of manufacturers to give up business and profits as usual—they made more profits by refusing to convert, and to hell with the country's defense. Now the business as usual boys are forced to convert—and labor is expected to take the rap in unemployment, poverty and hunger.

Workers in the vigilante town of Helena, Ark., where CIO organizers were beaten a short time ago, have answered the attempted reign of terror by voting six to one for the Cannery and Agricultural Workers in a Labor Board election. Three plants were involved, and a fourth, at nearby Forrest City, has also gone CIO by 43 to 29. That's the most effective kind of answer the vigilantes can receive.

The same union has also won a contract for a group of notoriously underpaid Spanish speaking workers in the tortilla industry in San Francisco. The contract raises pay by 66.33 percent, and also has the closed shop.

Workers at the Mount Vernon, Ill. plant of the International Shoe Co. have voted for the CIO United Shoe Workers by 611 for, 466 against, according to a report by Walter H. Harris, director of the International Shoe Co. drive.

SWOC has won a two to one poll at the Frazer and Jones Co. in Salvay, N. Y., according to Field Representative Rinaldo Cappellini.

Canadian Gold Mine Strikers Discuss Peace Plans

TORONTO, Feb. 14—Determined not to duplicate the attitude of the gold mine operators and endanger Canada's war effort, 3,000 Kirkland Lake miners, members of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union this week discussed with government officials their return to work in an organized group after their two-month strike had almost totally crippled production.

Unions in basic industries such as steel, auto and coal were beginning to threaten economic action because of the failure of the Government to take action to compel the operators to accept a unanimous conciliation board recommendation for union recognition.

Proposals for the return to work of Kirkland miners without loss of seniority or their subjection to reprisals, were discussed at a conference between Prime Minister King, Reid Robinson, president of the MM&SW, and Pat Conroy, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Congress of Labour.

"To our knowledge the Kirkland Lake Mine owners have not given answer to the Minister of Labour on his request of more than two weeks ago that the controversy be placed before the War Labor Board for settlement and thereby have indicated their desire to continue the controversy in spite of any disastrous effect it might have on the war effort," the miners said in a message to King.

Labor News Service Files Charge on AP Monopoly

NEW YORK, Feb. 14—(FP)—Labor editors of the U. S. have lost the first round in a fight against a powerful newspaper monopoly: the Associated Press.

In the face of nation-wide protests from labor, the Associated Press scrapped the Wide World picture mat service on Feb. 6. This service was being used by Federated Press to supply pictures in mat form to more than 100 labor papers.

Abandonment of Wide World mats affected not only the labor press but also a large number of community weeklies, small dailies and foreign language papers. These newspapers now have only two comprehensive mat services to choose from: United Press (Scripps-Howard) and Int. News (Hearst). The Associated Press is a third source, but sale of its services is rigidly limited by membership rules.

FILES CHARGES

A complaint charging the Associated Press with violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act has already been filed with Dept. of Justice officials by Marc Stone, eastern bureau manager of FP. He said government anti-trust officials have shown considerable interest in the case, and are calling in top AP executives for questioning.

Wide World had been built up to a strong position as the fourth competing syndicate by The New York Times, which sold its agency to the Associated Press last summer.

Composed of the leading daily newspapers, AP functions under rules that permit any member to blackball an applicant for its services. Blackballing is customary if the applicant may be regarded as a competitor.

Control of AP is vested in a small clique of leading publishers who once put up funds to buy office equipment. Under their domination the AP has made a reputation for anti-labor bias. Although recognized as the greatest news and picture agency in the world, AP is actually incorporated under New York laws as a hunting and fishing society.

Elimination of the Wide World mat service means that the little newspaper editor may be forced to use fewer pictures, and that publishers launching new papers will have trouble in getting pictures. Mats—costing only a fraction of the price of a photo and an engraving—are the bulwark of the labor paper and thousands of small weeklies and dailies.

EDITORS PROTESTED

First word of the Wide World blackout came in mid-December when customers were notified that because of "plans for reorganization" the newly acquired mat service would be killed. Federated Press reported to its member papers on this new threat to freedom of the press.

From New England to the Pacific coast, labor editors and union leaders telegraphed their protests to the Associated Press. They asked how they could effectively push the battle for production if they were deprived of good pictures—the most potent weapon in a newspaper's arsenal.

AP retreated from its December 31 deadline and promised service to Federated Press until "sometime in the spring." Spring, by AP definition, arrived February 6.

Get on OCD Councils, Locals Told

Pittsburgh, Feb. 14— "Get on Community Defense Councils!"—this is the theme of concerted action by the District 6 office and twenty Western Pennsylvania locals of the United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers of America, CIO, representing 45,000 workers.

UE District 6 and its locals are pushing demands for representation from the central District body and locals in every community, on policy-making defense boards.

"This campaign is one of the most important we have ever undertaken," District Pres. Michael Fitzpatrick declared. "We find defense councils in area after area dominated by business interests. Labor and the UE are either frozen out, or given inadequate representation.

"If this is allowed to continue, we may find that the war for democracy has been turned into a war against democracy on the home front."

UE District 6 officials have written heads of defense councils in every area in Western Pennsylvania where UE locals are concentrated, pointing out the key nature of the UE in defense industry, and the record of the Union in behalf of defense and war activities. The District letter calls for full recognition of the Union in policy-making position on defense councils, and encloses a resolution calling for UE representation, passed by District Council 6 at its most recent meeting.

LOCALS IN ACTION

Meanwhile, locals are following up this action in community after community, and where locals have not swung into action they are being called on to do so by the District. The UERMWA's huge Westinghouse Local 601 in East Pittsburgh, with 17,000 members, has endorsed the District resolution on this matter, and is carrying out the purposes of this resolution. President John Metcalfe heads this local.

Farther down the Westinghouse Valley, Local 610, with 8,000 members in Westinghouse Airbrake and Union Switch and Signal, has called upon local defense boards for representation. In Erie, where UE Local 506 speaks for 9,000 General Electric workers doing ordnance work, the UE is demanding proper representation also.

Conference On Housing

Detroit, Feb. 14—The Michigan CIO Council is sponsoring a three-day conference on factory laws, industrial safety, health hygiene, workmen's compensation and unemployment insurance to be held at the Detroit-Leland Hotel here February 20, 21 and 22.

Cooperating with the conference are the Michigan Dept. of Labor and Industry; the Unemployment Compensation Commission and the Unemployment Compensation Division of the United Automobile Workers.

August Scholle, president of the Michigan CIO Council, will make the introductory address at the Friday morning session.

Slav Labor Group Forms To Aid War

New York, Feb. 14—(FP)—A Slav American Trade Union Committee of Greater New York with Leo Krzycki, vice president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO, acting as honorary president, was formed here at a meeting of labor unionists of Slav descent.

Krzycki pointed out that OPM figures indicate 53% of the workers in the heavy industries vital to war production are of Slav descent. Further, the Slavs have taken heavier punishment from Hitler aggression than any other people.

They can represent, Krzycki said, a driving force of incalculable power in whipping up the war tempo and assuring ultimate Nazi defeat.

'ACTIVE DEVOTION'

"We have access to as yet untapped reservoirs of strength in the American communities of Slav descent," he continued. "Our object will be to give our own country—America—the fullest measure of our active devotion in winning the war for democracy.

"Through this committee the Slav descended Americans of Greater New York will be enabled to put forth a greater effort than at present in assuring a victorious outcome to the present struggle."

Buy Defense Bonds for Victory so that "government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

Little Rock Unions Form CIO Council

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 14—(FP)—A CIO organizing campaign that began from scratch last September reached a milestone with the formation on Feb. 4 of a provisional CIO Council for Greater Little Rock with nine locals of four international unions represented.

Otis G. Nation, representative of the United Cannery Agricultural Packing & Allied Workers, was elected president of the council. Other unions are the United Furniture Workers, United Federal Workers, and Intl. Woodworkers.

CIO achievements in the five months include wining of a hard-fought strike at the Koppers Co. wood-preserving plant in North Little Rock, victory in every NLRB election yet held, contracts signed with four companies, and respectful treatment by the local press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14—An attempt by Detroit real estate interests to exclude Negroes from a Detroit housing project designed originally for them was being fought today by civic, social and church groups, the CIO nationally and locally and the United Automobile Workers Union.

A delegation to Washington that was composed of Negro and white union and civic leaders from Detroit, pointed out to Defense Housing Coordinator Palmer that private real estate interests were behind the carefully planned demonstrations against Negro occupancy, and that the area is not a "white neighborhood" as claimed by the real estate interests.

THOMAS SENDS WIRE

CIO Vice President R. J. Thomas, head of the auto union and chairman of the CIO Housing Committee, wired Federal authorities demanding immediate occupancy for Negroes of the Sojourner Truth Housing Project, which was named in honor of a prominent Negro woman of Civil War days.

Thomas' wire, sent to Palmer and to Baird Snyder, acting boss of the Federal Works Administration, stated:

"Protracted delay in arranging for immediate Negro occupancy of Sojourner Truth Housing Project in Detroit is resulting in unfortunate confusion detrimental to the unity and welfare of the community and the furtherance of the war effort.

"The Congress of Industrial Organizations and United Automobile and Aircraft Workers believe it imperative that you stand on your recent decision that this housing development be allotted to Negroes as originally planned.

WANT FIRM STAND

"Any new reversal of position on this score by the Federal Government would reflect on Federal agencies and impose unwarranted responsibilities on local authorities who look to Washington for a firm decision along the lines indicated."

The delegation was headed by Horace A. White, Negro member of the Detroit Housing Commission and the Michigan State Legislature. It was pointed out that the issue of the Sojourner Truth Housing Project has been used in Detroit to stir up race feeling harmful to a united war effort.

Curb Milk Profiteers, Jersey CIO Asks Henderson

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 14—Requesting the Office of Price Administration to come into the State of New Jersey and "take over," Irving Abramson, New Jersey State CIO President, petitioned the United States Government to "investigate the circumstances surrounding the recent increases in the price of milk."

In a letter to Leon Henderson, administrator of the Office of Price Administration, Abramson also asked that a Federal Marketing Order be made to include the State of New Jersey, and to establish a price ceiling on milk.

CURB PROFITEERS

The labor leader asked Henderson to "curb war profiteering under the shady cloak of legalized milk control," and charged that milk "costing seven or eight cents or even less per quart to produce, costs the consumer 17c per quart.

"There are few things more damaging to the morale of a people engaged in a war than unwarranted increases in the price of staple foods and the subsequent lowering of our living standards.

"Malnutrition and broken spirits will not win this war," Abramson concluded.

Renew Textile Pact, Gain Pay Boost

Jacksonville, Ala., Feb. 14—The Textile Workers Union of America has just negotiated a renewal of its contract with the Profile Mills here, it was announced today by R. R. Lawrence, Southeastern TWUA director.

The new contract, improving on the previous agreement, provides for wage increases of 2½ cents an hour for all workers making 37½ cents an hour and 3 cents for all workers making over 37½ cents per hour, maintenance of union membership, irrevocable checkoff, seniority, and time and a half for work over eight hours a day, on five annual holidays, and on Saturdays and Sundays.

The union and company also agreed on improvements in the procedure of settling grievances and arbitration of all disputes.

40c Minimum

Washington, Feb. 14—A minimum wage of 40 cents an hour in the manufacture of luggage, leather goods and women's handbags was recommended unanimously by the industry committee concerned, the Wage-Hour Administration announced last week.

N. Y. Dairy Farmers Join Mine Union

Utica, N. Y., Feb. 13—(FP).— The general organization committee of the Dairy Farmers Union, representing 22,000 dairy farmers in New York, Pennsylvania and Vermont, has voted to affiliate with District 50 of the United Mine Workers.

District 50 recently entered the rural field by issuing a charter to 5,000 Michigan dairy farmers.

"Membership meetings in the 28 counties covered by the DFU are now in progress and strong sentiment for affiliation is being expressed," the farmers' committee commented. "When these meetings are completed and membership sentiment on the question of affiliation has been tabulated, the committee will meet with John L. Lewis in Washington, when some decisions which could not be made in preliminary conferences will be reached.

BRINGS ALLY

"The present action of the union brings to the side of the dairy farmer a new and powerful ally. It means that the union will no longer be compelled to fight alone."

Basis for affiliation of dairy farmers' groups with the UMW was recently explained by District 50 President O. E. Gasaway. He declared that coal by-products, over which the union has jurisdiction, are used in the manufacture of many plastics and artificial pearl buttons. Casein, a milk derivative, is also used in the manufacture of these products, Gasaway said, and as a result District 50 is enrolling the dairy farmers.

Want Guns.. And Quick

New York, Feb. 14.—Surviving crew members of the Francis E. Powell, torpedoed off the Delaware coast this week, are all set to "put out to sea again," but they want the Government to provide guns and improved lifesaving equipment for all American merchant vessels.

Joseph Curran, NMU president, revealed today that he had received a wire from survivors of the Powell asking that he communicate with "agencies of government" in their behalf. The crew recommends that lifeboats be swung out while at sea and adequate life rafts also be provided.

"We have just witnessed enemy action where most of the crew saved their lives through sheer luck," crew members wired Mr. Curran.

Study Examines Periods Of Unions' Greatest Growth

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14—Union leaders can learn much about favorable times and conditions under which to start organizing drives from studying past records of trade unions, says Horace Davis, research director for the CIO United Shoe Workers, in an article on "The Theory of Union Growth."

The article, reprinted from the Quarterly Journal of Economics, aims to answer the vital question: "What are the conditions, economic and other, which are favorable for the expansion of unionism?"

Two prevalent theories that union growth thrives (1) during times of prosperity and (2) during times of rising prices, Davis finds "too simple."

WHEN DO THEY GROW?

His theory, defined in a preliminary form, is:

"Under conditions of 'liberal capitalism,' when labor has major new grievances and an improving position in the labor market, unions tend to grow.

"When labor has no major new grievances or when its position in the labor market is not improving, conditions for organization are not especially favorable; and when labor is economically weak or losing ground in the labor market, though grievances exist and give rise to organization movements, these movements are not likely to result in a general increase in union membership, which tends to decline."

Of particular interest at the present time, is Davis' analysis of the effect of war on unionism, which, studying the past, he finds "may be anything from abolition of the unions to a major boom."

"In England and the United States, where the call to the colors was more gradual, there was no marked falling off in membership at any time during the First World War," he says. "The later stages of that war brought a steep rise in prices everywhere and the greatest boom in unionism that the world had yet seen.

"The later effect of war however, was in a number of countries, just the reverse of the immediate effect. The social regime had been so weakened that it sought desperate means to stabilize itself and hit on abolition of the unions as one means."

Push War Relief Drive In Jersey

Newark, N. J., Feb. 5—Irving Abramson, chairman of the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief, today announced the extension of the CIO program in New Jersey. With the appointment of Louis Horowitz of Newark as New Jersey State Director, the campaign will get under way immediately.

The National CIO program for war relief calls for the raising of one million dollars a month by the voluntary contributions of CIO labor of one hour's pay a month.

Murray Hits Propaganda Against Union Demands

U.S. Court Ducks On Profits

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21 — Somebody ought to do something about Bethlehem Steel's skyrocketing super-profits—but the Supreme Court isn't the one to do it.

That was the gist of a high court decision this week which turned down the government's 22-year bid to recapture some of the Little Steel corporation's profits in the last war—profits which ran as high as 22 per cent.

Involved in the case were 13 contracts for ships with a total estimated cost of $119,750,000. Under these contracts, Bethlehem raked in profits of $24,000,000—or 22 per cent of the actual costs.

Key to the long legal dispute, which has dragged through the courts for years, was a clause in the government's contract with Bethlehem under which Bethlehem was to get half the difference between the costs as estimated before the ships were constructed, and the actual cost by the time they were launched.

'IT'S TERRIBLE'

Justice Hugo L. Black, who wrote the majority opinion upholding the company's defense position, argued that the high profits were lamentable and outrageous—but that the court couldn't do anything about them. In the words of his decision:

"The profits made in these and other contracts entered into under the same system may justly arouse indignation. But indignation based on the notions of morality of this or any other court cannot be judicially transmuted into a principle of law of greater force than the expressed will of Congress."

Justice Frankfurter, in a one-man dissent, asserted that the "law is not so primitive that it sanctions every injustice except brute force and downright fraud."

Warns Of Effort To Stir Prejudice

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21—The Steel Workers Organizing Committee wants its demands against Little Steel heard in the councils of the War Labor Board—and not pre-judged in the public press—Chairman Philip Murray asserted today.

In a letter to William H. Davis, head of the WLB, the CIO leader said the SWOC wished its arguments for $1 a day wage increases and union security to be decided on their merits, rather than through an advance propaganda drive.

His statement followed a barrage of statements from government and industrial officials against the SWOC demands. Murray cited recent speeches by Price Administrator Leon Henderson; his assistant, J. K. Galbraith, and William Leiserson of the Natl. Labor Relations Board, all of whom have predicted dire results if the workers' effort to meet rising living costs is successful.

Murray also quoted newspaper reports of a compromise solution, supposedly coming from the War Labor Board itself, and of steel corporation statements opposing union security.

Meanwhile, the SWOC announced its intention of seeking NLRB elections to gain sole bargaining rights at U. S. Steel as a preliminary to reopening the Big Steel contract to gain whatever benefits are won at Little Steel.

Cites Ladies' War Tasks

Washington, Feb. 21—Speaking in the name of the 100,000 members of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO, Susan B. Anthony II urged unity of all American women for "winning the war against fascism" at the annual ceremonies at the Capitol this week honoring the birthday of her great aunt, Susan B. Anthony.

"Wars are not won by men alone," Miss Anthony said. "Women, hundreds of thousands of them, organized by Aunt Susan and her co-workers of the 19th century, mobilized to win freedom for the Negro in the Civil War.

Alaska CIO Unions Map War Program

JUNEAU, Alaska, Feb. 21—Formulation of a victory program for all-out participation of Alaskan labor in the war effort, plus organizing and legislative campaigns and reports featured the fourth All-Alaska convention called by the Industrial Union Council here, headed by Henry Benson, president.

The convention opened with greetings from President Murray, which said, in part:

"Alaska is one of the most important outposts of the U. S. in the present war and your initiative in organization for labor's effective participation in the prosecution of the war is heartily to be welcomed.

WAR TO FINISH

"We are engaged in a war to the finish with Hitler and the anti-democratic forces allied with him, and labor must be well organized to promote industrial morale, through obtaining fair wages and the equitable adjustment of grievances; to increase production and generally to mobilize the workers' enthusiastic defense of democracy and their determination to win the war."

Speakers at the convention included Frank Chinella, of the AFL Retail Clerks of Juneau; W. A. Rasmussen of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, who reported on wage-hour law violations in the Territory; Ben Nelson of Cordova, Fred Scheel of the CIO Fishermen, who reported on the fish production plan of the union, and others.

During the month of January 36,200 persons gave a pint apiece in the sixteen existing Centers. Two more Centers are opening during February. The blood is collected by the American Red Cross Blood Donor Services to provide a reserve of plasma for emergency use of the Army and the Navy, and Red Cross officials said much more is needed.

The campaign of the Cleveland Industrial Union Council to sign up 15,000 donors has already resulted in recruiting a majority of the goal. The Greater New York Industrial Union Council, in collaboration with the National Health Security Council, is promoting a blood donor campaign and is making street distribution of leaflets on the service as part of the campaign.

PART OF CONTRACT

The union's blood contribution has become a part of its contract with the company in the case of Local 12165, District 50, United Mine Workers of America, New York. The renewed contract with the Whitehall Pharmacal Company, Inc., carries, in addition to the usual union benefit provisions, a clause allowing time off with pay for employes donating to the reserve through the Red Cross.

Wasted Man-Power

Here's the crime of wasted man-power—the result of business-as-usual policies in the automobile industry and in OPM that junked CIO demands for gradual conversion of the auto industry to war production.

Testifying before a Congressional committee this week, CIO Vice-Pres. R. J. Thomas drew this picture of unemployment in the auto industry.

March 15	210,000	15,000
April 15	185,000	40,000
May 15	155,000	70,000
June 15	115,000	110,000
July 15	70,000	155,000

Buffalo, N. Y.—(FP)—Nearly $30,000 in annual wage increases for about 250 employes of the Jewell Alloy & Malleable Co. have been ratified by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, CIO. Retroactive to Feb. 1, the new minimum is 70 cents an hour.

Living Cost Rise Official; Bosses Admit It

NEW YORK, Feb. 21—(FP)—Even when reckoned by the conservative methods of an employers' research agency, the cost of living is up 12 per cent since the start of the war.

The employers' group found that food costs are 26.4 per cent more than in August, 1939; clothing 14.6 per cent; fuel and light, 7.6 per cent; sundries, 5.8 per cent; and housing, 4.4 per cent.

CIO Wins Election At Montgomery-Ward

CHICAGO, Feb. 21—Chicago employes of Montgomery-Ward & Co. celebrated Lincoln's birthday by voting CIO in an NLRB election of major importance to the nation's retail and wholesale workers.

The election victory in the central headquarters of the huge mail-order firm was hailed as a spur to increased organizing activity not only in Chicago but throughout the entire country where the company's branch outlets are located.

Two polls, in the mail order division and in the retail division, were both won by the CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes of America.

The results:

MAIL ORDER DIVISION

CIO	2,367
Against	1,245

RETAIL DIVISION

Against	13

Pres. Samuel Wolchok of the URWDSEA pointed out that with the union now sole bargaining agent at Montgomery-Ward properties in Chicago, Detroit, Denver and Elkhart, Ind., it can help "wipe out the speed-up, get a fair share of Montgomery Ward's bulging profits for the 65,000 workers who conscientiously toil daily in the company's 600 retail stores and nine giant mail order houses."

Leonard Levy, union representative who has supervised the two-year organizational campaign at the big Chicago plant, said that the election victory will be of "great interest and concern" to the company's employes.

The CIO executive board meeting in New York late in January voted full support to the URWDSEA pre-election campaign, and Pres. Murray, in a statement to the Montgomery-Ward workers, said the poll "presents a splendid opportunity to the workers to better their own conditions, to aid the whole labor cause and to strengthen the war effort for the defeat of Hitlerism."

Increases Won At R. H. Macy

New York, Feb. 21—Wage increases ranging between $2 and $9 a week for the 1,000 drivers and helpers of R. H. Macy & Co., the world's largest department store, were won here by the United Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes.

In addition to the pay hikes, the three-year pact guarantees four weeks' pay for men entering the armed forces, and full seniority accumulation during the period of their military service.

Other provisions call for vacations, triple time for holidays and arbitration on dismissals. Interior delivery workers won the 5-day, 40-hour week for the first time.

End Dispute At Field's Textile Mill

Washington, Feb. 21—Settlement of a dispute between the Textile Workers Union of America and the Marshall Field & Company's plant at Spray, N. C., has been announced by the National War Labor Board.

Main issues in the dispute, which involved 4,000 employes, were the union's demands for a union shop and a wage arbitration clause. Terms of the settlement provide for the inclusion in the contract of a clause stating that all employes who are now members of the union who may become members in the future will be required to remain in good standing with the union during the life of the contract.

A qualifying clause states, "that this provision shall apply only to employes who voluntarily certify in writing that they authorize deduction of union dues," and will "as a condition of employment, maintain their membership in the union in good standing during the life of the contract."

Another Poll In Tennessee

Chattanooga, Tenn., Feb. 21—Employes of the Robert Scholze tannery today celebrated Abraham Lincoln's birthday by voting 175 to 47 for District 50, United Mine Workers of America, in a consent election conducted by the National Labor Relations Board.

Bethel T. Judd, District 50 representative, organized the Scholze tannery workers and led the CIO group in its campaign for certification as the collective bargaining agency over many company-planted hurdles.

NOVEL TACTICS

Bernard Borah, regional director for UMWA's District 50 in the upper South, said his organization was well pleased with the outcome of the election. The company employed some novel tactics to defeat the union during the initial organizing stage.

After organizing a majority of the workers a local union committee revealed this fact to management and asked for recognition. The company replied by having its attorney send letters to all employes the following day, stating that the company did not believe the union's claim of a majority was true.

Stoppage Answers Firings

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 21—(FP)—Protesting the arbitrary firing of a porter and an electrician at the central branch of the YMCA, the Social Service Employes local of the CIO United Office & Professional Workers conducted a 1-hour stoppage.

Besides asking for reinstatement of the two workers, the union demands recognition and a 20% raise. Weekly scales are as low as $13, said Mrs. Dorothy Tate, president of the local. She charged the YMCA with refusing to mediate or arbitrate the dispute.

"The YMCA has been adamant and stubbornly unyielding," Mrs. Tate said. "While union men are dying in the front line trenches to save the right of Americans to enjoy collective bargaining—which doesn't exist in Hitler Germany—the YMCA persistently refuses to countenance the union of its employes.

"It is defying public policy by deliberately avoiding methods of peaceful settlement."

Technicians Win Shell Lab Poll

EMERYVILLE, Calif., Feb. 21—In a major advance towards unionization of West Coast technical workers, the CIO Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians won an election last week at the Shell Development Co.

The company, a subsidiary of the big Shell petroleum interests, has waged a bitter fight against unionization of West Coast technical and research staffs.

The FAECT gained 161 votes among the so-called non-professional employes, to only 84 votes against. In a separate unit election—which the union had opposed in NLRB hearings—Shell professional workers voted 117-87 against the FAECT.

CRITICIZED RULING

During the hearings, International President Lewis Allan Berne ofthe FAECT told Chairman Millis of the NLRB of the union's criticism of "artificial separation between different categories of technicians and the even more important decision to include classifications of employes for which the union did not request collective bargaining . . ."

For several months previous to the election the American Chemical Society, leading national professional society of the chemists, had conducted an unusually bitter campaign against the FAECT, with hints that members of the CIO affiliate were acting in a non-professional manner that might lead to their blacklisting by the Society.

Los Angeles, Feb. 21—Office workers at the Columbia Steel plant at Torrance, near here, voted 65 to 6 for Local 2586, Clerical and Technical Workers, affiliated to the SWOC, in a labor board election last week.

The local was chartered after a successful organizing campaign conducted by Local 1414, SWOC, consisting of the production workers at Columbia Steel. This local has assisted several CIO unions in organizing at Torrance, with the result that it is the first virtually 100 percent CIO city in the entire west.

'Pay Raise Easy For Alcoa'—Union Hits Inflation Talk

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Feb. 21—Claims that the small pay increase granted to workers in two southern plants in the decision of the National War Labor Board would work a "hardship" on the profit swollen Aluminum Company of America and would have inflationary effects were termed "ridiculous" by President N. A. Zonarich of the CIO Aluminum Workers of America in a statement issued here this week.

"The payroll increases which this decision decrees will amount to less than $2,000,000 annually. This will constitute about one-fortieth of the probable profits the company can expect in 1942," he said.

Some 10,000 workers in the company's two southern plants will receive wage increases averaging 8½ cents an hour, an increase of about 13 per cent in the former rate, Pres. Zonarich declared. Newspaper accounts had given a false impression of the increase won, he pointed out, by playing up the seven-cent flat increase made in beginners' rates, and neglecting to mention that proportionate increases were included for other workers.

UP TO 13 PER CENT

The hiring-in rate at plants in Alcoa, Tenn., and Badin, N. C., is 55 cents an hour. The seven-cent increase therefore means an increase of close to 13 per cent, which is the percentage that will be used in computing adjustments to be made on the remaining rates, he said.

Referring to that part of the War Board's decision calling for sacrifices by the workers, Zonarich said: "The War Labor Board in its decision asks for sacrifices. We are willing to make every necessary sacrifice to win the war.

"It is about time the Aluminum Co. of America is asked to make some sacrifices—and this decision asks for very little."

Zonarich's protest was in line with that of the labor members of the panel who protested that while they concurred with the terms set forth in the decision they objected to some of the reasoning as expressed in the decision.

EXPLAINS DECISION

Wayne L. Morse, public member of the board, who wrote the decision, thereupon issued the following statement:

"The labor members of the board concurred with the seven-cent increase in the starting rate recommended for the company's two southern plants but differed in some respects with some of the reasons set forth in the opinion in support of the increase since some of the wage theories were contrary to theirs."

WLB Hears City Workers Demands

Washington, Feb. 21.—Demands of Newark, N. J., city employes for a 15% wage increase today were awaiting action by the Natl. War Labor Board.

Some 1,000 members of Local 277, CIO State, County & Municipal Workers postponed strike action after Sec. of Labor Frances Perkins certified their dispute to the WLB. Previous efforts by the Labor Dept.'s Conciliation Service and the New Jersey State Mediation Board to work out a solution had ended in failure.

The men are employed in the city's garbage collection service, water works, airport, sewage system and street repair divisions.

PRESENTED DEMANDS

Some time ago the local presented its demands to City Commissioner Joseph Byrne. In addition to the wage increase, the union asked for time and a half for overtime, a bonus for night work and bonus and sick leave for so-called "temporary" workers—some of whom have been on the payroll for as long as seven years.

Byrne turned down the union's requests. When the state mediation board failed to settle the dispute, the local voted its strike authorization, with some 700 employes present. After hearing talks by SCMWA Sec.-Treas. Henry Wenning and local officials, the strike vote was taken.

Action was withheld when the local received a wire from the War Labor Board announcing the case would come before it shortly.

1,500 Move To CIO at Wire Firm

New York, Feb. 21—Some fifteen hundred employes of Western Union, nation's largest telegraph system, today moved over in a bloc to the CIO American Communications Assn.

Members of the Independent Communications Guild, they voted unanimously to affiliate with the CIO union, which has been conducting a special drive to organize Western Union's several thousand employes.

ELECTION SOON

The action was believed to spell certain victory for the ACA in a forthcoming election among the company's workers in New York City. An NLRB order for the poll is expected soon. Western Union employes in San Francisco are due to vote soon in another Labor Board poll.

Murray Hits Propaganda Campaign Against Steel Union Wage Demands

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21—CIO Pres. Philip Murray lashed out today at a giant propaganda drive evidently aimed at "trying" the steel union's wage demands in the press before next week's hearings of the War Labor Board.

In a letter to Chairman William H. Davis of the WLB, Murray charged that a pattern is being set "to prejudice the public mind, and if possible the War Labor Board, against the Steel Workers Organizing Committee."

"Certain government and industry officials seem determined," he added, "to prevent the steel workers of this nation from making their maximum contribution to the war effort—through a strong, secure union and the minimum replenishment of seriously depleted living standards—by a premeditated publicity campaign."

Scheduled to go before the Board are the SWOC's demands on the four Little Steel firms—Youngstown, Republic, Bethlehem and Inland—which have never yet signed contracts covering their mills. Some 175,000 workers are affected.

AGREED TO BARGAIN

The four companies agreed to bargain with the SWOC last summer as part of the settlement of long-standing NLRB cases dating back to the Little Steel strike of 1937. The Labor Board found the companies guilty of serious violations of the Wagner Act and directed payment of huge sums in back wages.

RECENT SPEECHES

Murray's letter to Davis cited in some detail the actions of a number of government officials who have been making public statements against the SWOC demands. He named Price Administrator Leon Henderson and his assistant, J. K. Galbraith, both of whom have strongly demanded that the union requests be turned down by the War Labor Board.

Another government official who has spoken critically of the union demands is William Leiserson of the National Labor Relations Board who has predicted the downfall of the WLB if it decides the steel union demands on the merits of the case. Murray also mentioned newspaper reports, supposedly emanating from the WLB, of a possible compromise, and of the steel companies flat footedly stating their opposition to union security.

REVEAL HATRED

"Not only do they revile against the natural aspirations of the steel workers, but they admit that they canvassed the entire steel industry to muster similar opposition. Certainly such conduct smacks of conspiracy!"

TEXT OF LETTER

It was to be expected that the steel industry cases now before the War Labor Board would elicit more than casual attention. Yet a series of strange pre-hearing developments have occurred which lead me to call some of them to your attention.

These developments point to a set pattern designed to prejudice the public mind, and, if possible, the War Labor Board, against the Steel Workers Organizing Committee. Certain government and industry officials seem determined to prevent the steel workers of this nation from making their maximum contribution to the war effort—through a strong, secure union and the minimum replenishment of seriously depleted living standards—by a premeditated publicity campaign.

CITES DEVELOPMENTS

I cite these developments:

(1) The mere certification of the so-called "Little Steel" cases to the War Labor Board brought Mr. Leon Henderson in his official capacity before the Board with a demand—if not a threat—against the nation's steel workers receiving wage increases. He did so without even asking the SWOC to give him the benefit of its viewpoint. He did so with the attitude that his position—and his position alone—must rule the actions of the Board.

(2) Mr. J. K. Galbraith, his assistant, amplified the attitude of the Price Administrator when, in a speech in Chicago, he reached the astounding conclusion that the nation's workers already have too much money; that they should have no more!

NLRB MEMBER TALKS

(3) Just yesterday in New York, Mr. William Leiserson of the National Labor Relations Board, was quoted as saying that if the steel case is decided on its merits the War Labor Board must necessarily fall and as a consequence the union shop question would inevitably go to Congress to be outlawed.

(4) On the basis of a newspaper report, supposedly emanating from the War Labor Board, we find the four steel companies involved in this case, issuing

Unions Aid Red Cross Book Drive

Washington, Feb. 21—CIO and AFL unions and auxiliaries are cooperating in the "Victory Book Campaign" of the Red Cross, designed to supply the armed forces with reading matter. To date over 1,250,000 usable books have been collected, the Red Cross announced.

Books can be left at public libraries and Red Cross branches. Many thousands of soldiers and sailors are union men, and appreciate union literature in their camps.

Technical and other non-fiction books are in great demand, the Red Cross said, as well as fiction. Goal of the campaign is 10,000,000 books.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21—A sharp protest against recent rent increases in housing projects managed by Federal government agencies was expressed by the CIO Housing Committee in a statement issued by R. J. Thomas, chairman.

"Recent increases in rents and other charges in government managed defense housing projects are unjustified, inflationary and damaging to the morale of war production workers," Thomas said.

"These raises—amounting in some places to as much as 50 and 60 per cent—have been imposed completely without negotiation or even consultation with the tenants affected.

TOO EXPENSIVE

"At San Diego, for example, rents and other charges have gone up 60 per cent since January 1 of this year. Ths tenants, most of whom are aircraft workers, are being forced to leave the project and the area as a result.

"At Wichita, Kans., rents in a government project have been raised from an average of $30 a month to an average of $45. This was done despite the protests of the tenants, almost all of whom are aircraft workers receiving an average of 60 cents an hour.

"These unjustified and burdensome increases are a serious blow to the welfare and morale of the workers involved. They amount to sabotage of production, and must be halted at once."

To Ask Election Among 250,000 At Big Steel

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21—The quarter of a million employes of big, sprawling U. S. Steel Corp. will go to the polls sometime in the next few months for the largest elections in National Labor Relations Board history.

The Steel Workers Organizing Committee will ask the elections in order to gain exclusive bargaining rights, it was announced here by Philip Murray, CIO president and chairman of SWOC.

No details have been worked out regarding the polls, he added, but an effort will be made to have them conduct on a consent basis—thereby eliminating protracted NLRB hearings.

At the same time Murray announced that SWOC will be compelled to reopen its contract with United States Steel at some future date in order to win the same objectives now being sought from the four Little Steel companies in hearings before the National War Labor Board. Major demands of the union are $1 a day pay increases and union security.

HELD STAFF MEETING

Decision to seek the NLRB elections at "Big Steel" was reached at a meeting of SWOC staff officials and presidents of all local unions at United States Steel plants, which was held in Washington last week.

The current contract with U. S. Steel recognized the SWOC for its members only. The pact covers such major U. S. Steel subsidiaries as Carnegie-Illinois; American Steel & Wire; Natl. Tube; American Bridge; Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad; Columbia Steel; and several smaller corporations.

SIGNED IN 1937

U. S. Steel made industrial history in March, 1937, when it abandoned its old policy of anti-unionism to sign a contract with the SWOC—the first major corporation to do so.

The contract was renewed a year later on a permanent basis. It was reopened last April, when the union gained a 10-cents-an-hour wage increase and other major improvements in working conditions.

Curtiss–Wright Men Flock Into CIO Union

By ALEXANDER L. CROSBY
Federated Press

PATERSON, N. J., Feb. 21—The company union that Curtiss-Wright Corp. has nurtured for years exploded with a loud bang this week when 10 leading officials resigned to join the CIO United Automobile, Aircraft & Agricultural Implement Workers.

The dramatic exodus from the stooge outfit occurred at a special meeting held in a workers hall in this city. Sixty representatives of the Wright Aeronautical Employes Assn. were assembled when Pres. James B. McCloskey Sr. arose to speak.

"I would rather be an honest rank-and-file member of an honest organization like the CIO than the president of the biggest independent union on earth," he declared.

A veteran employe of the big aircraft engine plant, McCloskey had once been blacklisted and starved for joining the AFL. The LaFollette committee revealed that a paid company spy had joined the AFL machinists some years ago and got himself elected to office, greatly facilitating the company's aim to weed out all active unionists.

OTHERS FOLLOW LEAD

Others who followed McCloskey into the UAW-CIO included the outfit's vice-president, its assistant treasurer and editor, chairmen of two important committees and five members of the executive committee. Only the treasurer and one

Sugar Ration Plan Starts Soon

Under the rationing plan, consumers will get about a pound a week per person, the OPA said. "Sugar rationing will work no hardship on anyone," Dan A. West, director of the OPA's Consumer Division said.

"Many of us never use that much sugar in a week anyway. For others, it's just a matter of wartime duty to pull in our belts and use less sugar than we've been accustomed to."

Clothing Union Asks 15% Raise

NEW YORK, Feb. 21—The CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers announced today it will seek wage increases of from 15 per cent to 20 per cent to meet sky-rocketing increases in the cost of living.

Frank Rosenblum, executive vice-president, and Jacob S. Potofsky, general secretary-treasurer, stated today that negotiations are already under way in the clothing industry, affecting 135,000 workers, and in the shirt industry, affecting 60,000 workers.

In the clothing industry, the union is asking the equivalent of $1 a day increase, effective immediately.

Anti-Labor Conspiracy

The War Labor Board was established, on the basis of an agreement between labor, industry and government, to bring about the peaceable adjustment of labor disputes. It has established orderly and logical procedures for due presentation of both sides to a dispute, before recommendations are made.

Perhaps the most important cases to come before this board are those involving the "Little Steel" companies and the Steel Workers Organizing Committee. Wage demands and union security are the main issues. Hundreds of thousands of workers will be affected.

Yet before the Board has even opened hearings on the case, and before the SWOC has had any opportunity to present its arguments, attempts have been made to prejudice the case by public statements of government officials, by reports from supposedly responsible sources as to alleged compromise proposals—and by the resulting one-sided public discussion of the issues throughout the press.

Needless to say, no compromise proposals have been presented by the Board to the SWOC, before a hearing on the case. Neither Chairman Philip Murray of SWOC nor any of his associates have heard of, still less approved, such alleged compromises. Yet press stories on the subject have been used by the steel companies as a springboard for widespread propaganda to prejudice the union security issue before it comes before the Board.

Propaganda by Leon Henderson of OPA and his associates against wage increases has similarly been spread over the press—with serious prejudice to the SWOC case, which the War Labor Board is supposed shortly to consider with an open mind. And more recently, William Leiserson of the National Labor Relations Board has joined in the public discussion with a speech relating directly to the issues of a case with which his own board is in no way concerned.

Altogether, the CIO wage and union security case has been seriously prejudiced by what might appear to be a concerted propaganda campaign. Private citizens, rightly or wrongly, may be expected to grind their axes whenever they can. But the least that can be expected from responsible government officials is that they should refrain from public attempts to prejudice in advance labor disputes which are before a government tribunal.

The Issue Is Simple

Tax issues can be made so complicated that the ordinary citizen seldom tries to understand them. He just waits till the new taxes sock him, without making full use of his democratic rights to influence the situation before it is too late.

That is precisely why so many complications are introduced by wealthy interests seeking special tax privileges; and why so little effort is made to simplify the issues for the man in the street.

Hearings are shortly to begin in Congress on how to raise seven billion dollars more to win the war. There is no question that the money is needed, and that every patriotic American should be ready to pay his fair share. But unless labor is alert, the lobbyists and political agents of special privilege will so stack the cards that profiteers will escape paying their fair share, while an undue burden will be placed on those least able to pay.

If we cut through all the statistical overgrowth, and the deliberate confusion and secrecy thrown around tax legislation, the real issue can be reduced to these quite simple terms:

(1) Are the chambers of commerce, manufactuers associations and the tory Congressional stooges of rich minorities to have their way?

If so, heavy sales or wage taxes will be levied on the low-income groups who already pay much more than their fair share; while many loopholes will be left for war profiteers and the wealthy generally, to dodge taxation of their surplus riches.

Or (2) is the tax program advocated by the CIO and by other fair-minded and progressive Americans to be adopted?

If so, the extra revenue will be collected from corporation profits; from higher incomes, inheritances and luxuries; and by plugging the many loopholes in the present tax structure. If the CIO program is adopted, our national welfare and war effectiveness will not be impaired by reducing still further the low living standards of our working people by wage-cutting taxation.

That is the issue. It will be largely decided in the closed sessions of the House and Senate committees. The tax bill they will draft is usually not subject to amendment on the floor.

It is therefore immediately urgent that CIO unions and members contact their Congressmen, particularly those that are members of the House ways and means committee. Let them know how labor feels and urge them to adopt a fair tax program that will really help to win the war.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

WITH magnificent impartiality our Congressional tories object to spending any money on both the war unemployed and Donald Duck.

The U. S. Treasury Dept. made the unfortunate mistake of enlisting Donald Duck's aid—at cost—to collect income taxes. If there had been a handsome profit in the film for some company, the anti-Duck crowd would doubtless have approved it along with the rest of the war profiteering.

Similarly, the hundreds of thousands of workers thrown off their jobs by plant conversion and priorities are denied relief by Congress because they are too poor and ask too little.

If stock for greedy coupon-clippers were involved, instead of just food for hungry mouths, the war jobless could get a nice fat subsidy from Jesse Jones, without any squawking on the Hill.

If they owned plants operated for profit, instead of human bodies and skills denied an opportunity to produce, they could obtain all sorts of government money—under the heading of "amortization."

If they could afford to hire a broker to wangle a super-profitable war contract, they could get "untold millions" of public money for the broker and themselves (to use the words of the House military affairs committee investigating such graft).

But unfortunately for themselves, the war unemployed are just plain patriotic American working people. They don't ask for super-profits at their country's expense; nor for brokers' fees or amortization. They just want to be able to work to win the war.

All they ask is barely enough to keep themselves and their families from starvation; and to maintain their strength for all-out production when the plants reopen with war work.

Yet the bill for $300,000,000 in emergency benefits, to tide over the war unemployed while plants are being converted for war production, has been voted down by the House ways and means committee.

The big-business press is constantly trying to create the impression that excess profits taxation makes war profiteering impossible. But huge net profits (after taxes) are still being made, due to many loopholes and to the fact that "excess profits" may be defined as only those in excess of past "average earnings."

This means that a company which made huge profits in pre-war years can continue to do so on war work. Such profits as are in excess of their previous high rate of earnings are classed as excess profits for taxation purposes.

In other words, the corporations expect the government to maintain them at the standard of profiteering to which they are accustomed.

If the unemployed followed a similar principle, they would not be asking the barest minimum for life and health. They would follow capital's example and expect the government to maintain them at their past standard of living.

The major concern of the CIO, on this as on other present-day issues, is the maximum industrial efficiency for winning the war.

The CIO long ago foresaw the stoppages of production and the wastage of human resources that would result from delayed plant conversion for war purposes. Its proposals to avert the present plant closures and unemployment were not adopted.

There is now no use crying over spilt milk. The most important thing is to speed the reopening of the closed plants, and meanwhile to maintain the health, morale and efficiency of the displaced workers—and to retrain them where necessary—so that they may be available for maximum production as soon as needed.

That is why the CIO is so vigorously pushing for appropriation of the $300,000,000 emergency aid asked by President Roosevelt.

The aid measure has been blocked by selfish state bureaucrats, who raise unreal issues of "states' rights"; by profiteering interests which resent public money going to any but themselves; and by congressional tories bent on opposing all progressive social measures.

CIO President Murray has recently swept aside all the false issues raised against the original bill. If objections are raised to its terms as tending to "federalize" social security, etc., he says, then let the $300,000,000 just be appropriated to the President for immediate benefits and for retraining wages for the war unemployed.

In other words, the CIO has no ulterior reform aims in this instance. All it asks is appropriation of the funds as an immediately necessary war measure. And all patriotic Americans should join with it in urging Congress to act without further delay.

Demand Action On Metals

DENVER, Colo., Feb. 21—A director of non-ferrous metal production whose "primary qualifications are courage and disinterestedness" was urged upon Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board by Reid Robinson, president of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and vice-president of the CIO.

The request for the non-ferrous production director was the high point of a heavily documented bill of particulars which Robinson presented to Nelson to support the union's charge of the "brazen refusal of industry to curtail regular production in deference to production of emergency war needs; of refusal to install and maintain equipment to permit war production; of complete indifference—even at this late date—to the need for immediately expanding all vital production facilities to maximum capacity."

PLAN IMPRESSED FDR

Robinson's letter to Nelson traced the history of attempts to increase the output of non-ferrous metals.

The union was particularly irritated by the government's and industry's reluctance to accept its "Production for Victory" plan even after President Roosevelt commented to CIO President Philip Murray, after reading the plan, that "in the present emergency our needs are obviously so great that all groups must pool their knowledge of production problems and must work together to find some means to overcome production difficulties."

The union charged that OPM officials at a meeting on Dec. 18, which was called to consider increased metal production, bluntly admitted they had not even read the union's plan. It charged further that the balance of the meeting "was devoted to an attack upon the leadership of the IUMM&SW and upon the good faith of its proposals, and to demands by certain large producers of copper for a horizontal increase in the price of that commodity."

Joint Parley On Metals In Jersey

Newark, N. J., Feb. 21—The first step toward a joint union program to raise the output of war materials from New Jersey's metal industry will be taken by three major CIO unions whose representatives will meet in Newark this week end.

The New Jersey Metal Council, sponsors of the special production conference at which the program will be launched, announced today that spokesmen for the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, the National Association of Die Casting Workers, and the Greater Newark Industrial Union Council would participate.

James McLeish, president of the UE New Jersey-New York district, will participate in the conference, as will leaders of the three major Die Casting Workers units in this area. Louis Sandry, an employe at the American Smelting and Refining Co. Perth Amboy smelter, and president of the Metal Council, will chair the conference.

PRODUCTION QUESTIONS

According to the sponsors of the production conference the main problems with which Saturday's meeting will be concerned are the increasing of war production through the improvements of wages and working conditions, conversion of non-war plants to war production, and the utilization of all metal-production facilities.

Extension of union organization as a means of promoting the other phases of the production program will also be sought.

Relief Bill Killed; CIO Continues Drive

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21—By a vote of 16 to 8, the House Ways and Means Committee killed the bill (H. R. 6559) to add $300,000,000 to compensation benefits for the war unemployed this week, after watering down the original Administration bill and after turning aside labor demands for an adequate measure.

But the fight for the $300,000,000 aid to workers made jobless by failure of their employers to start war conversion plans sooner will go on, it was learned, as CIO leaders prepared to press their demand made earlier in the week for that amount to be voted for President Roosevelt's use in helping the unemployed.

The killing of the bill—described here as one of the most flagrant pieces of anti-labor appeasement in months—was done on orders of the Natl. Association of Manufacturers and other reactionary groups, who pushed a parade of state compensation officials and six state governors past the Committee, all of them loudly proclaiming that more money for the war unemployed would be the end of state's rights, would pauperize the workers, and land us in a dictatorship.

CIO CAMPAIGN

The anti-appropriation forces were pushed hard on the measure by a concerted CIO campaign for its passage during the past few weeks, which included testimony by Pres. Murray, by Pres. R. J. Thomas of the UAW-CIO, letters and wires to Congressmen from CIO unions all over the country, and delegations from leading CIO Councils and national and international unions to visit the Congressmen in their offices.

Pres. Murray's testimony, which followed an appearance by AFL Pres. William Green, urged that objections of the state's righters and the compensation officialdom would be met by voting the money for President Roosevelt's use, pointing out that the CIO had confidence that the President would administer the fund promptly and efficiently.

"By this act the Congress would relieve itself of the interminable wrangle that now appears to have enveloped the original proposal," he said. "It would reassure the working people of the nation that the Congress will act as promptly to conserve the vital human resources of the nation as it does to appropriate vast sums for the protection of property and for the purchase of manufactured materials.

"We have confidence that the President of the U. S. will administer such a fund promptly and efficiently. We believe that such a gesture on the part of Congress would be one of the most effective strokes for the lifting of workers' morale and for the acceleration of industrial production."

MILLIONS JOBLESS

Warning that war conversion unemployment was a serious blow to morale vital to production and that it would seriously undermine the health of the workers, if they did not receive enough additional aid to make up the low benefit scales, Murray continued:

"Some time ago the CIO estimated that at least 2¼ to 3¼ million workers would be completely displaced as the result of priorities during the first half of this year.

"If these workers are taken care of, given training and provided for during the period the damage will not be irreparable. If, however, they are left without provision for themselves and their families, left in the belief that their government cares nothing for their plight, then the damage will be too great to repair."

THOMAS TESTIMONY

"It would indeed be a short-sighted policy to imperil the productive efficiency of our country's vast investment in machines and plants by allowing its war labor force to lose its strength, morale and full devotion to the cause of democracy.

"Let us not lose billions in future production through failure to provide the millions necessary to maintain human productive power through this period of enforced idleness."

In addition, Thomas pointed out that re-employment prospects for auto workers were very low, citing figures to show that it would be "long months before an opportunity is given them to do their bit in the production program for victory." Citing figures prepared by the union, he declared that at best 250,000 would be re-employed by next September 15.

Maximum benefits in major industrial centers range from $15 to $20 a week, Thomas showed, while the minimum necessary outlay for food alone in Detroit is $12 a week per family. Rising food prices will take a larger and larger share of the meager benefits, leaving nothing for rent, clothing and other needs.

"I am confident that appropriate measures will be taken to guarantee that war production six months or 12 months from now will not be sabotaged and restricted through the dangerous effects of inadequate living standards for American workers in the weeks and months immediately ahead," Thomas said.

U. S. Warns Aliens on Certificates

Washington, Feb. 21.—Aliens of German, Italian and Japanese nationality were warned by the U. S. Justice Dept. this week that they must apply for Certificates of Identification at the nearest post office by Feb. 28.

The rule applies to all aliens of enemy countries 14 and over. Applications must be accompanied by a photo of the applicant, size two by two inches, taken without a hat and printed on thin paper.

Defeat Of Axis 'Job For All'

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 21—The war against Hitler slavery will be won only "if all of us, without exception, exert every fibre in the all-out effort to beat the Axis," Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers and a member of Labor's Victory Board declared in a broadcast over KDKA here.

"The march of fascism is strewn with the blood of the common people of all lands," Emspak said. "Now we in the U. S. are imminently threatened. Our fight is the common fight of all the free peoples left who are struggling to erase this curse from the face of the earth. Our fight is the fight of Britain, China and the Soviet Union."

COMPLETE UNITY

Complete unity of purpose of all groups within our own country must be achieved if we are to outproduce and out-fight the fascist powers, Emspak pointed out. Labor, both in the CIO and the AFL, has already made a real contribution to this, he said, citing the voluntary agreement to lay aside the strike weapon and to submit all disputes to mediation and arbitration.

"This joint action, however, must go beyond and outside the organized labor movement as such," he added. "Leaders in government and industry must come to the realization that organized labor representing the workers of the U. S. must be taken into partnership if we are to prosecute the war successfully and effectively."

PRODUCTION FOR VICTORY

Only in this way can we be sure of the utmost production of tanks and planes, ships and guns to outshoot and out-fly the Axis, Emspak declared, pointing out that "people work with a will and fight with a will if they know what they are fighting for and if they know that their efforts are not being made in vain."

Emspak stressed the working unity now in effect between CIO and AFL, explaining that this form of unity around war needs was of great value, while formal organizational unity at the present time would merely open up a huge number of jurisdictional problems that would actually hamper the victory program.

Texas Cops Assault Oil Union Organizer; CIO In Strong Protest

PORT ARTHUR, Tex., Feb. 21—Police violence against a union organizer in Rep. Martin Dies' home district today brought quick action from the CIO in defense of labor's civil rights.

District Judge W. S. Nichols of Beaumont was scheduled to preside at hearings asked by the Oil Workers Organizing Campaign for a permanent injunction restraining Port Arthur cops from interfering with organizing efforts.

In Washington, meanwhile, CIO Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood demanded that the Department of Justice Civil Liberties Unit undertake a thorough investigation of the attack on the oil union organizer.

CHALLENGE TO DIES

Rep. Dies was called upon to repudiate the incident by Director Edwin S. Smith of the Oil Workers Organizing Campaign.

"I suggest that Martin Dies, whose clamor about un-Americanism fills the public press, should do something to repudiate and condemn the anti-American activities in his home district by the Port Arthur police," Smith declared.

"Such fascist tactics as those employed by the police of Port Arthur are an ominous sign in the midst of our country's war to defend democracy and spread the four freedoms."

THREE COPS INVOLVED

The flogging occurred a week ago when three cops, headed by Chief of Police H. F. Baker badly beat up Organizer F. H. Mitchell of the oil union organizing staff and then detained him in jail for 24 hours without permitting him to contact friends or relatives.

Baker later admitted the attack, though attemping to deny charges made by Mitchell that he had ordered the union official to leave town within 24 hours and "go back where he came from." Mitchell, who is part Indian, was born in Texas.

"We won't stand for drifters stirring up trouble in these war times," Baker said later in an effort to justify his vigilante tactics.

DESCRIBES ATTACK

In a detailed affidavit, Mitchell described how he had been discussing union affairs with a number of Negro employes of the Gulf Oil Refinery in a store in the Negro district of the city.

Three white men, dressed in plain clothes, entered the store and inquired about Mitchell's business.

"Didn't you know we don't like that and are not going to have it, and besides that, what in hell are you doing here with these 'God damn niggers?'" the police officer retorted to Mitchell's reply.

"I told him we had a local union over there," Mitchell continued in his affidavit," and he said "God damn you."

"And then someone hit me from somewhere. I do not know for sure who hit me. He hit me so hard it dazed me for some time. Both upper and lower lips were cut open by my teeth, my nose was injured and I was bleeding very freely.

THROWN INTO CAR

"They kicked me out the door and to my car, kicked me in it, then dragged me out of it, and took me to jail," the affidavit continued.

Mitchell charged that the men at no time identified themselves as police officers, and that when he was brought to jail, they refused to call a doctor.

The beating occurred only a few days after the CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union gained a smashing 1,351 to 67 victory over the AFL in a Labor Board poll at the big Texas Co. refinery here. Organizing activities are being conducted among workers of the big Gulf Oil plant, and an election was held late this week at the Atlantic Refinery.

HAYWOOD'S WIRE

CIO Organization Director Haywood, in his wire to the Dept. of Justice, pointed out that Mitchell was "engaged on legitimate and peaceful activities, and brutally beaten up, detained without charges and ordered to leave town on threat of further physical punishment." He called upon the federal agency to "investigate this matter immediately and offer adequate protection for enjoyment by organizers of their civil rights.

Meanwhile Director Smith of the OWOC announced, after conferring with Regional Director B. J. Schafer, that Mitchell would be kept in Port Arthur.

"The OWOC has been conducting an orderly, democratic drive for union membership in the Port Arthur territory," he said. "Quite evidently, the Port Arthur police are trying not only to disrupt the union's effort to organize oil company's workers, but are using the cowardly tactics of intimidating Negro workers.

"I am seeking full legal protection for the OWOC against repetition of any such outrage by law enforcement officers."

VICTIM: F. H. Mitchell, organizer for the Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, who was badly beaten by police in Port Arthur, Tex. CIO sprang to his defense.

It All Depends Who You Are!

Galveston, Tex., Feb. 21—(FP)— For having a lighted candle in his hotel room during a recent blackout test, a Galveston taxi driver was fined $50 by Judge Lawrence DuMars in corporation court.

The heavy penalty stirred comment among local unionists, who pointed out that the police courteously ignored the brilliant gas flares that illuminate the Texas oil fields from the gulf coast to Dallas.

FLAMES SHOOT HIGH

Flames leap several feet in the air from pipes that carry off natural gas. Each beacon marks an oil well, forming a chain of lights that could guide planes from the gulf to several southern cities. Airports adjoin some of the oil fields.

Opinion in labor circles is that not until the first bomb falls will Humble Oil & Refining Co., owned by Standard Oil of New Jersey, and other operators spend the money necessary to conceal the flames.

virtual edicts on the union shop issue. This newspaper report hinted at a compromise in the steel case on union security. If such a thing is contemplated, be assured the SWOC is no party to it.

REVEAL HATRED

This action by these steel companies unveils their basic anti-union hatred. Not only do they revile against the natural aspirations of the steel workers, but they admit that they canvassed the entire steel industry to muster similar opposition. Certainly, such conduct smacks of conspiracy!

Let me make it clear in conclusion that we do not associate you personally with these strange developments. We are bringing them to your attention because we know of your sincere desire to see that this case, like all other cases, is decided on its merits.

Wright Workers Join CIO

member of the executive committee stood by the company union.

Astounded by the bolt of their officers, the company union delegates dispersed. A flood of membership applications showed that the example carried weight with the 22,000 workers employed at the local Wright plants.

Loren Houser, UAW-CIO representative in charge of the Wright drive, said an NLRB election is being sought and that it will be a race among the company's employes at Paterson, Buffalo, Cincinnati and Columbus for the honor of winning the first CIO union contract.

Union Wants Flag 'Nix,' Says Firm

GOWANDA, N. Y., Feb. 21—Mention union to the Moench Tannery Co. here and the bosses jump.

The company doesn't fly the flag around the premises—so the union offered to buy both flag and flagpole if the company would place it on the plant property. The management firmly refused.

There's a long record of firm refusals in Moench labor history. It took a four-year fight by the union, together with pressure from the NLRB which forced dissolution of a company outfit, before the management finally said "yes" and signed with the CIO.

Exposed As Axis Pal, Gets Big Job

Washington, Feb. 21—Remember George Deatherage?

In case you've forgotten, he's the reactionary gent who promoted the American Nationalist Federation, the Knights of the White Camelias and other fascist-minded groups. He's the gent who admitted to the Dies Committee a couple of years ago that he regarded the New Deal as revolutionary, who admitted close contacts with the German-American Bund, who told of frequent conversations with Nazi consuls to find out how Hitler makes the Nazis tick.

He's the man who wanted to elevate retired, cranky Maj.-Gen. George Van Horn to head a so-called "counter-revolutionary" organization and take over national affairs when the right time comes.

SHIPYARD POST

Well, Mr. Deatherage has a job—as executive engineer for a construction firm building ships valued at 25 million dollars for the U. S. Navy in Norfolk, Va.

That fact was exposed by the newspaper PM this week, along with the fact that Deatherage had apparently won an official FBI OK—though the G-men squirm every time a unionist or liberal gets a government post.

A Navy spokesman indicated that no action will be taken against the one-time spokesman for American fascism.

House To Vote On Dies

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21 — Continued fire on the un-American Dies Committee from CIO unions, councils and other labor and progressive groups featured the week, as the half day's debate granted on the issue of renewal was scheduled for Tuesday or Wednesday of this week.

The drive to get rid of the Texas labor-baiter received a big boost last week when Dies' fantastic story of U. S. Government suppression of evidence that would have prevented Pearl Harbor was punctured in a White House authorized statement from Sumner Welles, Under Secretary of State.

Meanwhile, evidence of Dies' friendship for fascist and pro-Hitler forces in this country continued to pile up, latest revelation dealing with George Deatherage, admitted fascist and head of the Knights of the White Camelia, an anti-labor, anti-Semitic, anti-democratic night-shirt outfit that Dies once pretended to investigate.

HAS BIG JOB

Deatherage, who fully agreed at the time that the Dies Committee should go on, is now employed in an important position in U. S. Navy construction, according to newspaper articles in Washington and New York papers. Despite his pro-Hitler views—openly and boastfully admitted at the Dies hearing—Deatherage continues to hold his strategic job, the Navy Department declaring that "nothing can be done" since Deatherage is a citizen.

State and city CIO councils, as well as national unions and countless local groups, continued to pour in protest messages to Congress, pointing out that the un-American Committee, besides being a cloak for the most vicious anti-labor forces in the country, was doing its utmost to hold up war production and close cooperation between the U. S. and its allies by sowing suspicion and discord wherever it was active.

Latest groups to join the anti-Dies protest drive this week included CIO Councils in Cleveland, Ohio; Worcester, Mass.; the Maryland-D. C. State Council, the Washington State Council, a local of the AFL Jewelry Workers Union,

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

The anti-labor forces in Congress have been putting on one of the most disgraceful spectacles in a long history this week. On one hand, they are marshalling all their forces to defeat the bill to appropriate $300,000,000 for aid to war displaced workers. On the other hand, they have voted fat pensions to themselves.

The propaganda against the $300,000,000 appropriation has reached new low levels. Only this week six governors of states came out against it on the ground that it would "subsidize idleness," destroy states' rights, etc. These arguments are right out of the old Liberty League days, that everyone thought had been exploded long ago. These workers have lost their jobs through no fault of their own. They are good Americans, who want nothing more than to produce for victory. To let them starve now on inadequate unemployment benefits is worse than callous—it is a serious blow to morale and to production.

The CIO, led by Pres. Philip Murray, UAW-CIO Pres. R. J. Thomas, and others, has been carrying on a vigorous drive to get this appropriation through quickly. Every CIO member should write and wire at once to his Congressman, telling him that this appropriation must pass.

Back of the enemies of the appropriation, of course, are the anti-union employers and the sweatshop interests that are afraid more adequate benefits will encourage workers to organize against low wages—particularly in the South. CIO members should respond to this with a flood of demands for passage—and should push CIO organizing drives to see that this demand becomes effective.

Reports

The CIO has just won one of the biggest and most important election victories since the beginning of the year, in the overwhelming majorities turned in for the Retail and Wholesale Employes at the Montgomery Ward NLRB poll. In the mail order division, 2,637 voted for CIO, 1,245 against. In the retail division (Chicago store) 129 wanted CIO, only 13 were opposed. In addition, the CIO union has sole collective bargaining rights already in force in Montgomery Ward branches at Detroit, Denver and Elkhart, Ind.

Another significant election was won by the CIO at the Scholze Tannery in Chattanooga, where District 50 of the United Mine Workers drew 175 votes to 47 against. This election was won despite a vicious and sustained campaign of intimidation by the company. According to Paul Christopher, secretary of the Tennessee IUC, this campaign included threatening letters to all employes and personal threats by foremen, who walked to within the 300 foot line from the polling place urging them to vote against the union.

1,000 to CIO

The Utility Workers Organizing Committee has gained 1,000 new dues paying members at a clip, according to New Jersey Regional Director Pete Mosele, who reports that 1,000 employes of the Central Railroad of New Jersey came over last week. Mosele adds two CIO election victories—59 to nine for the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers in E. Rutherford, N. J., and 55 to four for the Office and Professional Workers in Newark.

The Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians have won by 161 to 84 among non-professional workers at the Shell Development Co. in California. Another election in the same plant among professional workers was lost, due entirely to the fact that the Labor Board insisted on splitting the workers into two units.

From Houston, Tex., Regional Director Maurice Dineen reports winning 7.5 cents per hour more for 325 workers at the Imperial Sugar Co. Director Pugh reports from Virginia that Local 12374 of the UMWA won a Board election at the Electro Metallurgical Co. of Holcomb Rock by a three to one majority.

Gene Derrickson, field representative in Wilmington, Del., has taken leave of absence from the CIO to enlist in the war against Hitler and fascist slavery. Best of luck, Gene—and the boys back home on the production lines will be pulling for you.

White Collar Union Offers Health Plan

NEW YORK, Feb. 21—A program to protect the health of the nation was offered today by the CIO United Office & Professional Workers.

Meeting in the city this week, the UOPWA's general executive board advocated creation of a National War Health Board as essential to the nation's victory program.

Based on the union's three-year experience in health work, the health plan proposes the establishment of a centralized government board composed of representatives from labor groups and government bureaus to act as a clearing house for wartime health needs and serve as an administrative agency to coordinate federal and state war health work.

40% REJECTED

Pointing out that 40% of the country's youth have been rejected for military service because they could not meet the health requirements, the UOPWA plan calls for a government-sponsored program to rehabilitate rejected men and to fit future draftees for service; for the control of venereal disease through a national public health program; for adequate blood banks to be provided through a mass-scale blood donorship in cooperation with the Red Cross.

Four hundred work days a year, now lost through illness, would build five battleships, the report pointed out. To win the battle of production, the nation must have a health program which will provide protection against accidents in factories and furnish adequate medical care for workers and their families in defense areas.

For general public health in wartime, the UOPWA'S War Health plan urges the immunization of the population against epidemic diseases, first aid instruction as a part of all civilian defense work, home medical and nursing care and adequate blood banks for victims of bombings, evacuees and those unable to purchase private medical aid.

SOCIAL WORKERS' HELP

Meanwhile the union's Social Service Employes local, composed of several hundred trained social welfare workers, urged immediate establishment of a functioning Defense Council in New York City.

It recommended setting up of a Health and Welfare Committee, with a full-time, qualified social worker in charge, with advisory groups from labor, consumer and employer interests represented.

Sharecroppers Forced To Join Tory Farm Outfit— To Help Fight Relief!

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 21—Charges that the reactionary American Farm Bureau Federation has a working arrangement with scores of AAA county agents so that federation dues may be checked off from government farm benefit payments, received added confirmation today.

In a letter to Sen. Robert LaFollette, Pres. Harry Koger of the Southern States Cotton Council said he could produce "affidavits from eastern Arkansas sharecroppers who are being forced to join the Farm Bureau against their will.

"Certain landlords present the head of each sharecropper family with a membership card and deduct the annual fee from the sharecropper's portion at settlement time. A usurious rate of interest is sometimes added to the fee."

The Cotton States Council which Koger heads is affiliated with the CIO Cannery & Agricultural Workers. The Farm Bureau Federation's Washington spokesman is Edward O'Neal, who has voiced opposition to labor unions on several recent occasions, and has bitterly attacked the Farm Security Administration, a government agency which extends aid and loans to low income farm families.

RECEIVES THREAT

Koger charged that one Negro sharecropper who dared to refuse his membership card in the reactionary farm outfit, "was cursed and threatened with bodily injury by the landlord's agent."

"Although hundreds of Negro sharecroppers are forced to become members of the Farm Bureau by the above method, they are not permitted to attend meetings, and have no voice," Koger charged.

Gen. Hershey Cites Basis For Deferring Union Leaders

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21—A memorandum covering deferment of labor union officials from military service has been sent out to all local draft boards by Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service Director.

Effective immediately, registrants who are considered key men in the maintenance of harmonious relations between labor and industry may be given consideration for deferment, Hershey indicated.

MEMORANDUM

"1 It is considered in the national interest and essential to the war production program that a harmonious relationship be maintained between labor and industry. To accomplish this purpose, it is desirable that there continue to be duly authorized and competent representatives of government, labor and industry who will, in considering and disposing of questions of mutual interest, expedite the successful prosecution of the war.

"2. Registrants who are key men in the maintenance of such harmonious relations and who are employed for that activity by the government, by industrial organizations, or by local, national, or international labor organizations may be given serious consideration for deferment.

"3. In cases arising under this memorandum, the local (draft) board may require the completion and filing of the Affidavit to Support Claim for Occupational Deferment (DSS Form 42 A) and such other information as the local board considers necessary, and shall proceed to classify the registrant in accordance with the provisions of sections 622.21 to 622.24 of the Selective Service Regulations, Second Edition."

$10,000 BACK PAY: These 14 members of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee looked pleased with the back pay checks—amounting to $10,000—awarded them by the National Labor Relations Board. The NLRB found that these men and seven others had been illegally discharged for union activities two years ago by the Tennison Bros. Co. in Memphis, Tenn. Naturally enough, they're strong union boosters.

Pennsy Publishers Blush As News Guild Bares 'Secret' Talks

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 21—Pennsylvania newspaper publishers, who talked "off the record" at their recent meeting here, wish they hadn't been so frankly anti-union in their remarks.

Acting with less alertness than they would demand from any of their newspaper employes, the publishers "told all" about their state-wide slush fund to bolster the owners of two strike-bound papers and to establish a black-list of members of the CIO American Newspaper Guild.

But a Guild member was sitting right through the meeting taking notices on the speeches, and in its current issue the Guild Reporter, ANG official organ, tells the whole story of the publishers' plot.

TELLS OF PLANS

1. Publisher E. J. Tilton of the Aliquippa, Pa., Gazette, has been paid $600 a month through January to help him resist a Guild strike in the highly unionized steel community.

2. Publisher C. R. Long of the Chester, Pa., Times has been receiving "strike insurance" from his fellow newspaper bosses for fighting a three-month strike of his employes.

3. The industry group applauded an appeal by Tilton for the establishment of a virtual blacklist of union members.

GIVES ADVICE

Bemoaning the fact that two college graduates are active in the Aliquippa strike, Tilton made an impassioned plea to the publishers that "when you hire new employes, check their records. Check them, check them back and back and back."

As a result of the disclosure of proposals for the illegal black list, Guild officials are considering the institution of NLRB charges against Tilton and the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers Assn.

WANT $600 A MONTH

The appeal for funds to support the Aliquippa fight against the Guild came from Manager W. N. Hardy of the newspaper association, who predicted that "six hundred dollars a month will see it through."

A number of publishers showed anger when Hardy made an appeal for pledges of regular monthly pledges to continue the anti-union battle, with some protesting that they had attended the meeting only to discuss bonafide problems facing the industry.

Acting on the objections of many of the publishers, it was agreed that pledges could be signed privately as the men left the meeting, rather than made vocally before the entire group.

JEALOUS OF SUCCESS

During the conclave, the strike-bound publishers paid jealous tribute to the popularity and financial success of Guild community papers which have been appearing regularly in both Chester and Aliquippa since the strikes started last December.

Hardy later accused Guild Organizer Whipple of distributing a "mass of lies" about the publishers' meeting, adding with a flourish that "publishers have never been known to snoop at a union meeting."

'JAM ON FACE'

Surprised by the rashness of Hardy's denial—which contradicts facts known to almost every union newspaperman — Whipple retorted that the Guild is prepared to prove all its charges "in or out of court."

He added:

"Caught with jam all over his face, Hardy now cries, "Stop, snoop!"

Company Union Dead

Milwaukee—Eight years of company unionism came to an end at the J. Greenebaum Tanning Co. this week when a U. S. circuit court upheld an NLRB decision against the firm.

Women Ask Action on Relief Bill

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21 — Action on two bills of immediate importance to labor was taken this week by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO.

Following the lead of the CIO, Mrs. Faye Stephenson, national president of the Auxiliary Congress sent a strong letter to Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee urging immediate action on H.R. 6465, to increase unemployment compensation benefits to workers unemployed because of the conversion of industry to defense needs.

The Auxiliary Congress also expressed strong opposition to continuance of the Dies Committee in another letter made public this week.

PRESENT STATEMENT

A statement on H.R. 6465 was presented to the House Ways and Means Committee by Mrs. Billie Vincent, Vice-President of the Auxiliary Congress in charge of legislation. The statement said in part:

"The whole program of our organization at the present time is to do everything in our power to bring Victory to our country. We want to emphasize therefore, how serious this problem of war displacement unemployment is from the point of view of winning the war."

Pointing out that present unemployment compensation benefits are in many cases not sufficient even to buy food for an adequate minimum diet for a family of four, the statement continued:

"The men and women in these families will be needed in industry once conversion has been accomplished. But they will be in no fit condition to be efficient war production workers if they must starve for several months in preparation.

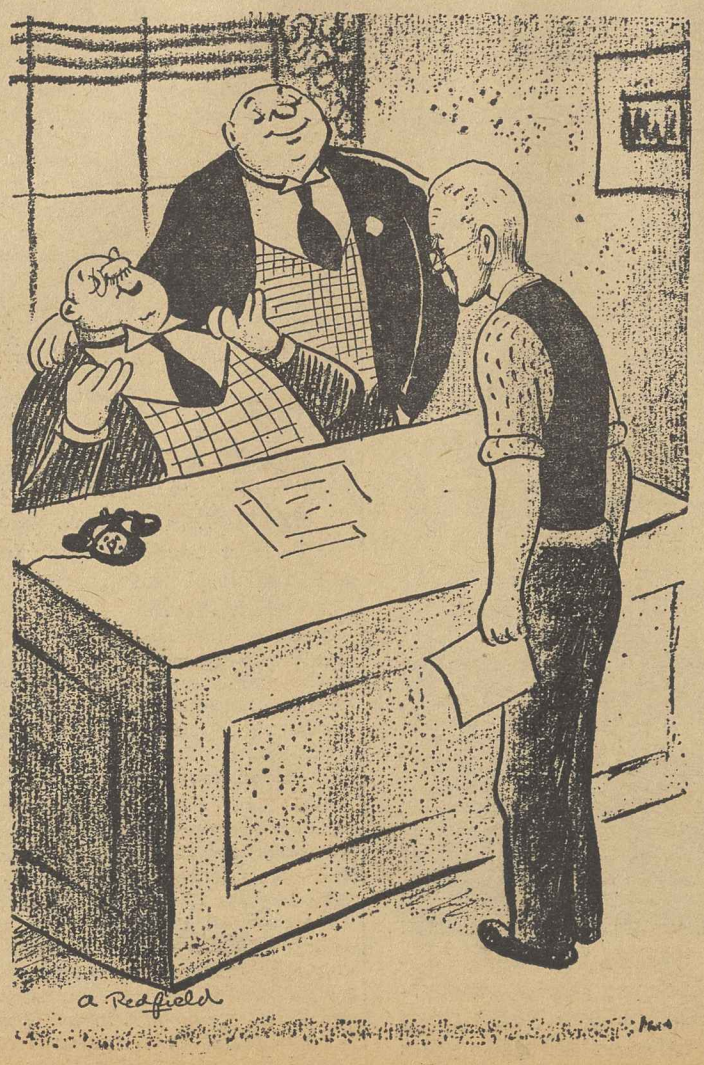
"Unless they get substantial help many of these families will not be able to stay and train for the new war jobs in which they will be needed. Thousands of these workers came to the cities originally from rural communities. If some help is not given them they are going to go back home. That will mean that they will not be able to take defense training courses."

Applaud CIO Ladies' War Aid

Salt Lake City, Feb. 21—Governor Herbert B. Maw of Utah, Senator Elbert D. Thomas, Representatives W. K. Granger and J. W. Robinson, Faye Stephenson, President of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO, Stanley Duffin, State President of the Utah CIO and many other dignitaries sent greetings to Garfield Ladies' Auxiliary No. 59 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers on the occasion of their great "Beat Hitler Week" dance in the Coconut Grove in Salt Lake City, to raise money for the Fort Douglas Reception Center and the Salt Lake Veterans Hospital.

A printed booklet entitled "Home Defense" including all the greetings and expressing the appreciation of the auxiliary for the support they received has been issued by the women.

The Upper Crust



"And don't forget to write an editorial demanding more money for the Dies Committee."

TORIES FIGHT 'EM: Reactionaries in Congress are fighting the Farm Security Administration, whose program of aiding low income farmers gives a helping hand to this impoverished Arkansas sharecropper's family. Millions of "Joads" are benefitting from FSA, but agency's funds are imperilled by the tory attack.

Brophy Describes CIO Position On Discrimination

NEW YORK, Feb. 21—A threat by a national AFL official to lift an AFL local union charter for discriminating against Negro workers, plus a general shotgun blast against the labor movement from Mayor LaGuardia and a spirited defense by John Brophy featured hearings of the Fair Employment Practices Committee held here this week.

The charter-lifting threat came from Frank Fenton, AFL representative, and was directed against a Federal labor union accused of blocking employment of Negroes at a New Jersey Chemical plant. The union, according to the employer's testimony on the stand, had "let management know that they would walk out in a body if any colored girls were hired." In reply, Fenton told the employer that he should not have been intimidated and that the AFL would punish the union involved if necessary.

LaGuardia's charge was made in a general fashion, the Mayor declaring to the press that labor was at fault for Jim Crow practices. The charge was quickly picked up by the newspapers, which used it as a convenient stick to beat labor with—ignoring the fact that the press itself leads in discrimination.

CIO REPLY

Replying for the CIO, John Brophy, Pres. Murray's representative on the committee, pointed out that the Mayor had failed to make any specific accusation and that discrimination, rather than stemming from the unions, was the result of a deliberate employer policy of keeping the workers divided.

Brophy cited the constitution of the CIO and of all its affiliates, pointing out that discrimination is specifically forbidden. "There are neither constitutional nor ritualistic bars to Negro membership in any CIO affiliate," he said. "The Mayor's charges were made in a vague and general manner. Any such charge, to be fair and honest, must exclude the unions of the CIO."

While a minority of AFL unions bar Negroes from membership, the great majority in the labor movement have no such racial barriers, Brophy added, pointing out that those few unions that do practice discrimination are lending ammunition to labor's critics and enemies.

The New York hearing was the third public session held by the Fair Employment Practices Committee, the first two having been held in San Francisco and Chicago. Results are already visible, though the job of breaking down years of employer-fostered Jim Crow is a long one.

U. S. Probes Lynching

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21 — Atty.-Gen. Francis Biddle this week ordered FBI investigation of the brutal lynching of Cleo Wright by a mob of 800 persons at Sikeston, Mo., in the heart of the state's low-wage cotton belt.

The investigation, Biddle announced, is being made to determine the possibility of federal prosecution under the civil rights statutes. They provide a penalty of one year imprisonment, or $1,000 fine, or both for any person "who wilfully subjects, or causes to be subjected, any inhabitant of any state . . . to the deprivation of any rights, privileges or immunities secured or protected by the Constitution and Laws of the U. S. . . ."

Negroes Win Fight for U. S. Homes

Detroit, Feb. 21.—A realtors' scheme to rob Negro workers of their homes in a new Detroit defense housing project ended in failure this week.

Acting on a strong protest from Negro, labor and civil groups here who last week went to Washington to present their case, government housing officials issued a "final order" that the homes would be available to the Negroes, for whom they were constructed. The housing project bore the name of Sojourner Truth, a noted Negro woman of the Civil War period who helped in the fight against slavery.

Aiding the Negroes in their battle against discrimination were the CIO and its affiliated United Automobile Workers. Vice-Pres. R. J. Thomas sent a strong message to defense housing officials demanding that they proceed with original plans for the project.

Shrapnel Pounds on Roof, Guns Roar— And Coast Workers Vow Greater Effort

By E. E. WARD

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 26 — Immediately over the sprawling North American Aircraft plant, 30 searchlight beams mingled in silvery concentration, like huge soda straws crossed in the bowl of night.

Within and around this concentration, 25,000 feet up, Army officials believed enemy planes were flying.

Below, inside the plant, several thousand night shift workers, mostly members of Local 887, United Automobile Workers, stood silent in the glow of blue lights burning in the aisles. They were listening to the running feet of the soldiers on the roof overhead. They were listening to the crack of the small guns on the roof; to the roar of cannon around the plant, which blasted the building as if to blow it down each time they fired.

They heard the "pouf" as the guns let go; then they heard the "boom" as the shrapnel burst thousands of feet above, to make brief orange-colored flowers against the clear sky. But they could not know the meaning of all they heard, and they thought each "boom" was the explosion of a Japanese bomb which had found its mark on the soil of continental America.

In the plant, the thousands of workers, silent as the bomb at first, began to mutter.

No Panic Nor Fear

"Wish I was up on the roof," said one.

"I'm going to enlist tomorrow," said another. "I'm going to fight."

After four hours of nerve-wracking blackout and cannonading, we came out on the all clear signal. Unafraid, angry, determined to defeat the enemy. There had been no panic, no hysteria, no yellow streaks among them.

Ever heard shrapnel on a tin roof? That happened to the night shift workers of Local 9, CIO Shipbuilders Union, at the Bethlehem Shipyards at San Pedro. It doesn't sound like rain, to go out in it would be courting instant death. The men stayed under cover, and vowed to produce more ships to fight the Japs.

A night shift meeting of Local 904, UAW, had just adjourned near the Vultee plant, when the signal came of the first air raid. The workers, unable to go home, joined with the air raid wardens in effecting total blackout and halting all traffic. When the guns at Vultee began firing, these workers took shelter, on the advice of a warden. One woman, believing the bombs were coming, became hysterical, but was calmed by union girls of the Vultee local.

Half the membership of Local 13, San Pedro Longshoreman, spent the night on duty as air raid wardens, and auxiliary firemen and policemen. Special emergency squads of various locals of the Utility Workers Organizing Committee were on the alert all night.

Papers Delayed

Members of the L. A. Newspaper Guild were prevented by the blackout from going out to cover their biggest story. Early morning editions were held on the trucks until the all-clear sounded and deliveries could be made.

Maritime unions reported a rush of all qualified men to take duty with the merchant marine.

Unity, calm, and heightened morale were the results when Los Angeles workers went under fire for the first time.

Tories Try New Blitz On Labor Rights

(See Story on Page Three)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—A sneak blitz attack on the 40-hour week wage standards was scheduled for a vote in the House as The CIO NEWS went to press today, following a quick-moving campaign against general labor rights by the Southern poll-tax crew.

The drive against overtime pay after 40 hours was engineered by Rep. Howard Smith of Virginia, a poll-taxer elected by a small proportion of his constitutents, and was quickly seconded by Rep. Eugene Cox of Georgia, representing even fewer persons than Smith.

Acting quickly to save American labor standards, President Philip Murray of the CIO sent letters to the Republican and Democratic leaders in the House demanding that the Southern reactionaries be halted from carrying through their campaign.

The CIO leader described the Smith proposal as one "to increase swollen profits even further at the expense of labor," adding that the sole effect of its passage would be to deprive workers of appropriate pay for extra work.

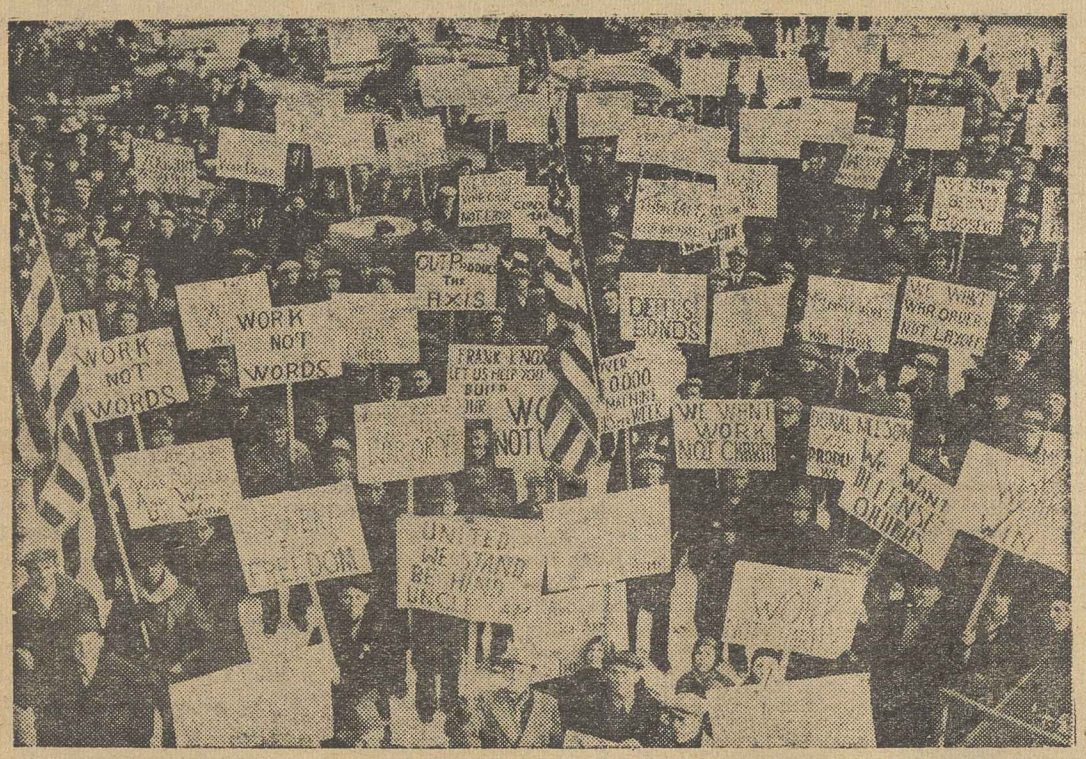
"The fact is that American labor already is working long overtime hours wherever necessary throughout the land—and that no legislation is needed to permit such overtime work," he added.

Earlier Representative McCormack of Massachusetts, House Majority Leader, had branded the proposal as "anti-labor," adding that "its effect is to suspend legislation for labor going back 30 years.

The Smith Amendment attached as a "rider" amendment to the second War Powers Bill, would in effect repeal the Wage-Hour Law and labor sections of numerous other measures, by removing the 40-hour week and the 8-hour day sections and overtime pay for overtime work.

BULLETIN!

The Smith Bill, to bar overtime wages to labor, was defeated in the House. The vote was 226 against the bill, to 62 for it.



'WE WANT WORK': A sea of placards surrounds the giant McCormick Works of the International Harvester Co. in Chicago as thousands of members of the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee protest the lay-off of 1,200 workers. Picket signs demanded that the company get started quickly on its $400,000,000 in war orders.

Urge More Output, Called Fifth Column!

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Feb. 28—A new and wackier argument against increased production was encountered at the Utah Copper Co. near here by the CIO Mine Mill & Smelter Workers.

Howard Lee, union official in charge of the copper drive, reported that his organization is now being accused of "fifth column" activity—for trying to get more production to help beat the Axis!

The slur came from the Independent Association of Mill Workers, a company outfit, which said:

"To speed up production would be but a wacky gesture. . . . Production committees are a fifth column."

That the company union was echoing its master's voice seemed apparent when Louis Buckham, mine superintendent, flatly turned down CIO requests for a meeting with its production committee, using the alibi that "we are experiencing no production difficulties and anticipate none."

Arbitrator Grants Raise

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Feb. 28—Employes of the General Equipment Co. here received a nickel an hour wage increase, while those on the third shift gained an additional 5%, it was announced today.

John F. Kosik, CIO regional subdirector, said the 200 employes—members of Local Industrial Union 1172—gained the increases through arbitration. The company operates another plant under a separate agreement with the CIO in Ashley, Pa., where increases will also be sought.

'McArthur Shift'

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 28.—The "lobster" or "dog-watch" shift from midnight to dawn at Colt's Patent Fire Arms Company, has increased in popularity since CIO union members in the plant re-named the middle-of-the-night work period "the MacArthur shift" in honor of the nation's round-the-clock fighters in the Philippines.

Maj. Gen. C. M. Wesson, chief of Army ordnance, sent a telegram congratulating the workers for their patriotism.

Waste, Delays In Shipyards Under Attack

CAMDEN, N. J., Feb. 28—Waste, inefficiency and mis-management are keeping the nation's critical shipbuilding production program at from 30 per cent to 50 per cent below its potential capacity.

That was the sensational charge made today by Pres. John Green of the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers in a letter to Pres. Roosevelt following detailed reports by members attending a quarterly meeting of the union's general executive board.

"From our direct knowledge we can positively assert that production at this time is falling from 30% to 50% short of what it could be and what it should be," Green told the President.

"Our members have reported to us innumerable examples of large scale waste of manpower in both the shipbuilding and ship repair yards."

ENCOURAGE LOAFING

In some cases, Green continued, "there is even evidence that the management is deliberately encouraging loafing on the job and delay in the completion of government contracts. We realize that this is a serious charge, and we would not make it if we were not prepared to prove it."

To meet the situation, Green called for re-establishment of the shipyard Stabilization Committee created by the OPM more than a year ago, which worked out uniform wage, hour and working condition standards for the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific Coasts.

But since that time, Green asserted, the employers—acting with the approval of Navy Dept. executives—have scrapped the committee "and refused to meet with representatives of labor for the developing of an over-all national program to increase production in the industry.

"For over four months," he said, "we have insisted that the Shipbuilding Stabilization Committee be reconvened to tackle these important problems. The employers, however, have refused to meet, and the Navy and the Maritime Commission show no interest whatsoever in labor's program."

The union official reminded Pres. Roosevelt that labor's best efforts cannot be "dragooned" out of the workers, but must come from genuine cooperation; that morale is being seriously endangered by "the attitude of the employers, who are making excessive and unconscionable profits"; and that the men suspected the companies are far more interested in "accumulating profits" than in full war production.

LITTLE COOPERATION

Widespread failures are resulting from the shipbuilding industry's insistence on gaining maximum production "through issuing edicts rather than through the method of voluntary cooperation," Green declared.

"A very high percentage of time is being lost by men taking days off from work, and the only cure that the employers have been able to devise for this particular evil is to punish the men by giving them more days off."

TWO GENERATIONS: Two generations of the McCloskey family came into the CIO at the same time—and look mighty pleased about it! James G. McCloskey, Sr. (left) was president of the company union at Curtiss-Wright in Paterson, N. J., most of whose officers joined the UAW-CIO. James, Sr. and James, Jr., congratulate each other, while Loren Houser, union official, congratulates them both.

Rap Slow Aluminum Expansion

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Feb. 28—Expansion of aluminum production is proceeding at a "snail-pace" instead of at the all-out rate necessary to supply the country's war needs, President N. A. Zonarich of the CIO Aluminum Workers of America charged this week.

In a letter sent to Donald M. Nelson, director of the War Production Board, President Zonarich protested against the recent priorities rating given to aluminum for aircraft production at the expense of other military needs.

The organized aluminum workers of America, he said, "hope you are not satisfied with allocating aluminum, the material which makes up about 80 per cent of a plane, to aircraft at the possible expense of other military needs.

"This may be necessary as a temporary expedient, but the only real answer to the whole aluminum problem is all-out expansion of the industry so that enough metal will be available for all military requirements.

'MUCH DISTURBED'

"Frankly we are very much disturbed with the snail-pace progress of the aluminum expansion program. Last summer when the Aluminum Workers of America, CIO, issued an exhaustive study on the need for an expansion program, OPM said it would provide only half that total capacity. But even this inadequate OPM program is not yet near completion."

Charging that every kind of obstacle has been placed in the way of increasing facilities for producing aluminum, Zonarich declared that aluminum workers and other groups anxious to help expand aluminum production have never been brought into the picture, as OPM apparently had chosen "to rely on the not disinterested advice of the powerful, monopolistic Aluminum Co. of America.

Win Quaker Oats Poll In Akron

Chicago, Feb. 28—A four-to-one victory for the CIO at the Quaker Oats Co. plant in Akron, Ohio, was announced today by the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers.

Pres. Donald Henderson revealed that 426 workers had voted for the CIO affiliate, with only 82 voting against.

He gave a large share of the credit to active union members in the plant "who steadfastly held their organization together following a 3-1 defeat of their CIO local industrial union last year. The local affiliated with UCAPAWA in November.

The union gained a majority and a contract at the Cedar Rapids, Ia., plant of Quaker Oats last September. Since that time workers in Depew, N. Y., and Memphis, Tenn., have taken similar action.

FORCE REHIRING

Meanwhile the union revealed it had forced the rich and powerful American Tobacco Co. to reinstate Mrs. Rose Melheisen, shop chairman at the Henry Clay Bock plant in Trenton, N. J.

Mrs. Melheisen, a veteran of 10 years' service in the company, was fired the day after her election to the shop post. The reinstatement followed a threat to bring unfair labor practice charges before the NLRB.

Insurance Vote Swept by CIO

Detroit, Feb. 28—Employes of the Maccabees, a national fraternal insurance association, climaxed seven months of CIO organizing by voting this week for the United Office & Professional Workers.

The vote:

UOPWA	103
Against	78

The election was held under the auspices of the Michigan State Board of Labor Mediation.

Jerome Shore, mid-west representative of the union, described the vote "as very impressive in view of the management's deceptive attitude." The insurance firm had distributed a number of pamphlets urging employes to vote against the union.

Settle Short Dispute At Bethlehem Yard

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Feb. 28—Federal conciliators today had arranged for peaceful settlement of a dispute between Local 9 of the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Corp. and the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. here.

The dispute had gained national attention far beyond its importance as part of an apparent attempt by newspaper publishers to magnify every labor dispute in the hope of smearing labor's contributions to the war efforts and its attempts to preserve national industrial peace.

The Conciliation Service worked out an arrangement whereby union members at the shipyard are to vote by secret ballot whether to work two 10-hour shifts a day, or return to three eight-hour shifts as in the past.

LAY OFF WORKERS

Union officials protested the change from the 24-hour work day, charging violation of the contract, disregard by the company of the need for all-out production and lay-off of 117 skilled workers at a time when thousands of war jobless walk the streets.

Federal officials supported the union's stand for three eight-hour shifts, but found Bethlehem adamant in favor of the reduced production schedule. Since the company took its sudden action, members of Local 9 have punched out after working eight hours.

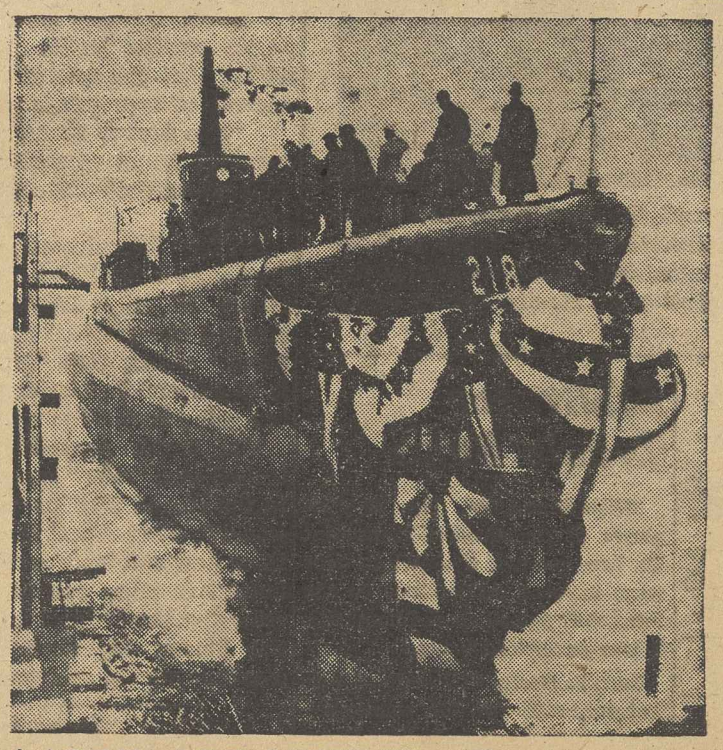
Charge Strike Scare

Washington, Feb. 28—The Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. has been trying to produce a "phony strike scare" at its Los Angeles plant, Sec.-Treas. Philip Van Gelder of the CIO Shipbuilders Union said today.

He said the company's proposals for two 10-hour shifts, rather than three eight-hour shifts, "will result in the lay-off of several hundred men. . . . It also means 20-hour production instead of 24. Why don't the newspapers protest this loss of man-hours due to company policy?"

Discuss Labor, Consumer Issues

Camden, N. J., Feb. 28—Consumer problems, efficiency methods, time studies, credit unions, labor legislation and other topics of interest to workers were discussed at an educational conference held here recently by the South Jersey Joint Board of the Textile Workers Union.



MORE ARE NEEDED: The submarine Albacore slides down the ways at Groton, Conn., latest addition to America's underwater fleet. But Pres. John Green of the CIO Shipyard Union says management inefficiencies are keeping production from 30 per cent to 50 per cent below potential output.

'Wire Tap Against Spies, Not Labor,' Is CIO Plea

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—Wire-tapping must be used "exclusively in the direction of the defeat of the world forces of reaction with which we have come to grips," and must have ample safeguards to prevent attacks on labor, Pres. Murray said today in outlining CIO policy on the question to Congress.

The new CIO policy in regard to wire-tapping was explained in a letter to the House Judiciary Committee, now considering a bill to legalize the practice.

FOUR SAFEGUARDS

He urged four basic safeguards:

1) The suspension of the wire tapping prohibitions should be limited in time to the duration of the war;

2) The suspension should be severely limited in scope to the detection and apprehension of violators of laws designed to promote the national war effort;

SET UP PENALTIES

3) Severe criminal penalties should be provided for any person using the power to tap wires, or any information so secured, for any purpose other than as evidence in connection with a prosecution for one of the described offenses;

4) A specific declaration should be included to prevent the use of the wire tapping power in any manner to destroy or interfere with the rights of organized labor.

USED AGAINST LABOR

Murray also reminded the Committee of the fact that in the past wire tapping has been used against labor, citing the notorious case in which the FBI was caught snooping on private phone conversations of Harry Bridges, California CIO leader.

Referring to the basic policy of the CIO as one that recognizes in all actions "the absolute necessity for bringing about a speedy and complete defeat of the Axis aggressors and the forces they represent," he wrote:

"The same basic policy, however, requires also that we urge upon this Committee certain important precautions in the enactment of any measure along the lines of the Resolution now under consideration. We have been disturbed in the past by the action of those, in public office and out, who have impeded our national war effort by diverting to collateral ends powers which were necessary to and which were conferred for the purpose of advancing our war effort.

"The very recent past has presented notorious instances of this same danger with respect to the tapping of wires. This country has seen the spectacle of a prominent labor leader subjected to the indignity of unlawful eavesdropping and wire tapping by agents of the government sworn to conformity with American law."

N. Y. Unions Greet Red Army

New York, Feb. 28—The Red Army "is the one force in the world today which has exploded the myth of Nazi invincibility," CIO leaders here declared in sending greetings to Soviet Ambassador Maxim Litvinoff on the occasion of the 24th anniversary of the Red Army's founding.

The greeting was sent by Joseph Curran, president of the CIO Council here, to Litvinoff for transmission to the Soviet Union. A similar message declaring that "the success of the Red Army means victory to the democratic armies of the world" was sent by the National Maritime Union.

Murray Hits New Tory Blitz

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27 — Congressman Howard (polltax) Smith's rider to the war powers bill abolishing payment for overtime work is not designed to increase war production but merely to "increase swollen profits even further at the expense of labor," Pres. Murray said today in writing to House Majority Leader John W. MacCormack protesting passage of the Smith proposal.

The proposal was shoved through to debate in the House by the parliamentary trick of attaching it to the war powers bill, thus forcing opponents of the rider to vote the entire bill either up or down. It was accompanied by the usual anti-labor blasts from the polltax appeasement group in the House.

Murray's letter pointed out that Smith's anti-labor proposal came on the heels of Pres. Roosevelt's call to the nation "to a realization of our national needs and to a concerted drive for our ultimate victory," and that it conceals "the basic fact that his proposal presents no issue as to whether American workers will or should work longer hours."

"The fact is that American labor already is working long overtime hours wherever necessary throughout the land—and that no legislation is needed to permit such overtime work," Murray wrote.

INCREASES PROFITS

"What Rep. Smith knows and fails to state is that the sole effect of his proposal would be to deny to American working men and women appropriate payment long guaranteed by statute for those extra hours of work. And the denial of that payment is not proposed for national gain.

"What Congressman Smith knows and fails to make clear is that the sole effect of his proposal would be to increase those swollen profits even further at the direct expense of labor. What Congressman Smith is thus proposing is not greater war production but higher profits through wage cuts.

Murray also blasted Smith's trickery in using the war crisis as a cover for anti-labor schemes, describing is at "duplicity typical of our Nazi and Japanese foes." In concluding the letter, he urged the House to defeat the proposal, in line with Pres. Roosevelt's statement that we "can lose this war only if we slow up our effort, or if we waste our ammunition sniping at each other."

On Ration Board

Washington — Ralph Hetzel, Jr., head of the CIO's Economic Division, has been appointed to the city-wide sugar rationing board in the nation's capital.

Second In a Row

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 28—The CIO Mine Mill & Smelter Workers this week won its second "near-unanimous" vote in Tennessee in less than a month.

On Jan. 23, employes of the Tennessee Products Corp. at Rockwood voted 323 to 1 for the same union.

Murray Receives Award For Service to U. S.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28—The La Salle College Civic and Social Congress announced this week that CIO Pres. Philip Murray had been presented the "De La Salle National Gold Medal" in recognition of his achievements as a spokesman for organized labor.

In announcing the award to Murray, Brother Alfred, president of La Salle College, declared:

"The Award Council, which is composed of men, from business, the professions, government, labor and industry, was greatly impressed by your ability, sincerity and calmness in handling various issues between workers and employers, and by your phenomenal success in organizing hundreds of thousands of workers in the steel industry.

KEY TO PROGRESS

"To the judges of awards, your industry council plan holds the key to industrial peace, social security and economic liberty. Its success in the Doehler Co., Toledo, encourages all who are working for the day when workers and management will control production and distribution for the common good, under the auspices of the national government."

In extending thanks for the medal, Pres. Murray said he "had not been aware of any outstanding services that I have rendered, but rather have been content in the knowledge that our successes are altogether attributable to the cooperative efforts of the several organizations and thousands of members of our Congress of Industrial Organizations, who have given me valiant support."

The awards are made annually "in recognition of distinguished service in promoting civic and industrial peace, social justice and economic security." They are named in honor of De La Salle, a famous Frenchman who helped spread education and knowledge of democratic rights through Europe.

Urge Congress To Oppose Dies

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—The labor and progressive fight to end the unAmerican Dies Committee picked up new strength this week as the House Rules Committee again postponed the half day's debate, which had been promised for an early date.

Writing to all Congressmen, CIO President Murray again urged discontinuance of the red-herring group on the ground that it had consistently sought to interfere with the war effort by harassing government officials, by trying to stir up hatred and suspicion of our allies in the war, by attacking labor unions and by utterly refusing to probe real subversive elements such as the "American Cliveden set," named by President Roosevelt as the center of pro-Axis appeasement forces here.

In Congress, Dies was given a thorough going over by Representative Eliot of Massachusetts and Marcantonio of New York, who broadcast a searching expose of Dies' lame pretense that he had information that would have prevented Pearl Harbor—a yarn that was blasted by the State Department and the Justice Department.

NAVY, TOO

And the Navy Department, finally reacting to outraged public opinion, fired Dies' pal, George Deatherage, from an important Navy construction job. Deatherage, it will be remembered, boasted at Dies Committee hearings of plans to overthrow the government and substitute a fascist regime based on Mein Kampf. Dies, it will also be remembered, never did anything about Deatherage—being too busy hunting alleged reds in the labor movement and in the government.

In his second public statement on the Dies' committee's record of sowing disunity—a record the CIO Executive Board described in January as "one of the most sordid and reprehensible" in the history of Congress, Murray wrote to all Congressmen:

"Unfair and unjustified reflections have been cast by this committee upon responsible executive officials of the Federal government charged with the fulfillment of certain major phases of our war program. Labor unions and other liberal organizations have been harassed and their legitimate activities interfered with by this committee with the sole known purpose of aiding the enemies of labor.

"As against this record the Dies Committee has an almost unblemished record of not having interfered with, nor at the present time doing anything by way of actually investigating such subversive un-American activities as the American Cliveden set, American appeasers and Nazi organizations and agents."

WLB Opens 'Little Steel' Hearings

BY HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—The War Labor Board this week began preliminary hearings on its most important case—this demand of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee for $1-a-day wage increases and union security from the four Little Steel companies.

Outcome of the dispute will affect the 175,000 employes of Republic, Bethlehem, Youngstown and Inland Steel companies.

The hearings opened Feb. 26 before a three-man fact-finding commission of the War Labor Board. The first two sessions, it was indicated, would be concerned with questions of procedure, and discussion of the merits of the union's proposals would not be heard until next week.

THREE-MAN PANEL

The SWOC's $1-a-day demands were formulated at conferences of staff officials and local union leaders, and are largely based on high profits of the companies and the rapidly rising cost of living, which the union says has in large measure wiped out last year's wage increase, and on union security, which SWOC points out is necessary in view of the companies' long record of active opposition to organization of their workers.

SMEAR CAMPAIGN

Meanwhile, a smear campaign campaign against the CIO was in progress in a large portion of the nation's press, attempting to convince the public that the steel union demands for a fair living wage are dangerous to the nation's welfare. A number of speeches by government officials, who were maintaining that the pay raise would upset the economic applecart, last week drew fire from Chairman Murray, who pleaded for a fair, dispassionate hearing of the union's case before the War Labor Board.

The drive against labor gained added momentum in Congress, meanwhile, when the poll tax bloc threatened to hold up further war legislation unless removal of the 40-hour week statutes was voted. The drive is being pressed by Representative Smith (Va.) and Cox (Ga.).

A particularly vicious attack on the CIO came during the week from the Washington Post, which has carried numerous editorials denouncing the SWOC wage proposals. In a front page display, the paper attempted to contrast one or two alleged strikes by the CIO with the valor of MacArthur's defense army in the Philippines.

The bark was worse than the bite, however, for the Post was able to muster only five incidents affecting AFL as well as CIO, and all of only a few hours' duration, to support its hint that labor is lying down on the job.

Two More Wins For Steel Union

Pittsburgh, Feb. 28—Two more election victories were announced today by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

At the American Bridge Co. in Gary, Ind., the SWOC polled 1,030 votes to 66 for a company union and 83 for no union. American Bridge is a subsidiary of U. S. Steel.

LaFollette Reports Due Soon

Washington, Feb. 28—First in a series of long-awaited reports on California by the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, will be presented to the Senate next week by Senator Robert LaFollette of Wisconsin.

The reports are based on investigations and hearings conducted by the committee at various times between 1938 and 1940. The hearings uncovered sensational attempt by big corporations and their affiliated "citizens' organizations" to stop labor unions and to deprive workers of their civil rights.

Figures Can't Lie, But . . .

A lot of fancy juggling with "average" figures is being done these days by the anti-labor press to bolster its arguments against wage increases. It reminds one of the sweatshop boss who said average earnings in his shop were $84 a week, because he got $300 and his three employes $12 apiece.

Workers whose wages have been vanishing more rapidly than before through higher prices will suspect there's a catch in claims about relatively small increases in average living costs. There is.

For instance, government figures show an average increase in food prices of 25% since the war, or of 18.8% in the past year. But staple foods which workers buy most of have increased much more, while luxury foods have increased less. For instance, the price of potatoes has risen 61% in the past year, while grapefruit prices haven't risen at all.

As to clothing, overalls and workshirts have increased 35.6% and 37.6% in price in the past year. Cotton dresses cost 51.7% more. But sport coats have risen less than one per cent.

Or take rents. The average increase in workers' rents in the past year is reported by the Labor Dept. to be less than 1%. But a more detailed survey by the WPA in 58 defense communities shows workers' rent increases from 13% to 109%. In more than one-third of the cities covered, the increase was between 28% and 109%, and in no locality was the increase less than 13%.

Food, clothing and rent make up most of the budget for a wage-earner's family—a much larger proportion, of course, than is the case with higher-income groups. In each case, prices chiefly affecting workers have risen much more than have those affecting wealthier people.

In any case, present union claims for higher wages are not based solely on increased living costs. They are based also on the disproportionate share of increased income going to profits and, even more important, on the fact that basic wages for most workers are far below minimum health, decency and efficiency standards.

The Heller committee of the University of California some time ago established the fact that an average worker's family of five (two adults and three children) must earn more than $2400 a year to be able to spend 35c per person per day for food; $35 a month for rent; and $5 a year for the education of all three children.

This miserable minimum budget provides for only one suit and overcoat in three years for the adults, only 10c a week for smokes, and but one movie in two weeks.

Yet most workers' families in the United States have incomes far below even this minimum health and decency level.

Labor Representation

Director James M. Landis of the Office of Civilian Defense has recently written to all state governors, calling attention to the federal policy of the OCD in regard to labor participation in civilian defense, and urging that labor be given adequate representation in their defense councils.

"Labor's responsibilities require that labor shall be adequately represented in the determination of policy and in the effectuation of the civilian defense program," says the federal policy statement.

The national office of OCD has only the power of recommendation in respect to state and local defense councils. It is therefore up to CIO bodies not only to participate to the fullest extent possible in all civilian defense activities, but also to renew their efforts to obtain adequate representation.

That Man Again

There's one thing that can be said for Congressman Howard Smith. He is consistent. He has consistently opposed all legislation that would benefit labor. He has consistently promoted laws to destroy unions and to lower living standards.

Smith's latest bill is also consistent with his record. It is a bill for the supposed purpose of abolishing the 40-hour week, so that longer hours may be worked during the war. But this cloak of patriotic purpose need fool no one. It is a wage-cutting bill, not a bill for more production.

For actually there are no legal bars to working much more than 40 hours, and longer hours are already in effect in many war industries. All Smith's bill would do would be to abolish overtime rates after 40 hours, and so cut already inadequate weekly wages.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

WHEN a prizefighter trains for an important bout, everything possible is done to make his whole physical and nervous system function perfectly.

If he suffers from stomach-aches or a cold his trainer doesn't say: "Why bring that up now? The main thing for the fight is his fists and his muscles. The rest of him can wait until the fight's over."

The United States is going onto a total war footing as rapidly as possible. The armed forces are receiving, or should receive first attention. But to reach top fighting trim, they must get all the weapons and supplies they need, and they must be backed by a healthy, vigorous and united people.

Yet there are some who say: "We're at war now. Let's forget about anti-Negro discriminations, low-wage exploitation, unjust working conditions and the like, until the war's over."

The CIO has just published a new pamphlet on "The CIO and the Negro Worker." It explains the industrial union principle of organizing all workers without distinction, and of fighting for fair and equal treatment for all alike. It tells of CIO opposition to employment policies that bar Negroes, and to any and all forms of discrimination between workers based on race, creed, color or nationality.

"Why bring that up now?" some of our critics may ask. "Why try to buck age-long prejudices and injustices when we're at war?"

But it's precisely because we are at war that the CIO is now bringing up and re-emphasizing these and other points in its program. It does so to increase our national health and fighting strength.

We are at war to defeat Hitler's hideous policies of national and racial discrimination and oppression. The Japanese practice these same policies in Korea, Manchuria, China, and wherever else they can establish their rule.

Yet at the same time the Jap imperialists are slick enough to make propaganda against the British for the kind of oppressions in which they are themselves the worst offenders. And they are seeking to make similar propaganda among American Negroes, who would be the worst sufferers of all if Hitler and the Japs won.

Even in a strictly military sense, it can be shown that the British have been weakened in Malaya and Burma by policies which their more far-sighted leaders now recognize must be changed in India. In contrast, Soviet military resistance to the Nazis has been immeasurably strengthened by policies of equal treatment as between the many nationalities and races that make up the USSR.

Within the United States, Pres. Roosevelt has recognized that war considerations as well as justice demand an end to anti-Negro discrimination in hiring. CIO policy in this respect has now become the national policy of the United States. A Fair Employment Practices Committee has been set up, with CIO Pres. Philip Murray a leading member, to eliminate such discriminations.

Some AFL craft unions have been gross offenders against the Negro people in this respect. Their narrow job-trust policies have harmed the whole cause of labor, held back organization and led to the development of the CIO as a separate movement. But now the AFL recognizes, at least in principle, that barring of Negroes from membership and jobs must be opposed.

So far as CIO is concerned, its success is largely due to its policy of organizing all workers regardless of race, creed, color or nationality. All of its unions welcome Negroes to membership, and many of them have notable records in abolishing previously existing discriminations against Negroes in their industries.

Before CIO was started there were only 125,000 Negro unionists; now there are more than 500,000, many of them local and national leaders of their respective CIO unions.

The CIO policy of fighting for equal treatment, equal wages and equal opportunity for Negro workers has benefited both white and colored alike, and greatly increased the strength of the whole labor movement.

In addition, the wider program of the CIO calls for effective measures against lynching, for abolition of the undemocratic poll-tax, and for many other progressive social steps to better the lot of the low-paid and exploited, whether Negro or white.

Now that we are at war, the whole CIO program in respect to Negro workers assumes more vital importance than ever before. For it is a program not only for social justice but also for national unity and victory over Hitler's Axis and all the oppressions for which it stands.

CIO Ladies Give Boost To Program

By MARY POND

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 — Typical of organized labor's rally to the call for volunteers in the American Red Cross services are the activities of the Philadelphia Council of Auxiliaries, which has set up a production center in downtown Philadelphia for centralization of Red Cross work by unions, and the Washington Industrial Union Council, whose leaders visited the Blood Donor Center here last week.

Red Cross production centers for union and auxiliary workers have also been set up in Detroit, where the UAWA Auxiliaries already have two open and plan two more; in Rockport, Ill., and South Bend, Ind., also UAWA auxiliary-sponsored; and Boyne, Ia. Available for use by any woman interested in Red Cross work, the centers are the scene of classes in First Aid, Home Nursing and Nutrition, making of surgical bandages, sewing and knitting for the armed forces and for civilian victims of the war, and lining up of volunteer donors to the blood reserve.

HALF A BLOCK LONG

Half a block long, the Phildelphia center is divided into a large room for display and class purposes, with smaller rooms for sewing and rolling bandages. Next week appointed members of the council will start courses in preparation of surgical dressings to qualify them for supervision of groups working at the center.

Space for the project was obtained by Mrs. Roie Levy, president of the council and a member of the mayor's Fair Rent Committee. "Fair rent" for the room was set at $1 a year by the Philadelphia Company, owners of the building.

SHORTAGE: Rubber shortage may affect 1942 beach styles, but this pretty miss doesn't seem worried as she prepares to discard the rubber lastex suit she's wearing for the cotton one she's holding.

Desks and chairs for the center, which is also zone headquarters for air-raid precautions, were loaned by the Philadelphia Electric Company and lumber for the tables on which surgical dressings will be rolled has been donated, as was also the labor to build the tables.

Led by Susan B. Anthony, II, a member of the Washington Council of CIO Auxiliaries, and Henry Rhine, president of the Washington Industrial Union Council, members of the two councils visited Naval Hospital Blood Donor Center.

Similar visits are being made by scores of union groups in the 17 cities where the Red Cross has set up centers to obtain plasma for the Army and Navy Reserve.

Relief Drive Swings Into Full Stride

New York, Feb. 28—Swinging into the huge job of organizing CIO relief activities on a world-wide scale, the CIO War Relief Committee has opened a national office here at 420 Lexington Avenue.

Funds contributed by international and local unions and by city councils will be distributed abroad under arrangements made by the CIO with the British Trades Union Congress, the Soviet Central Council of Trade Unions and the Chinese Association of Labor.

Monroe Sweetland, director of the committee, pointed out that this machinery lays the foundation for a new kind of cooperation among the working people of the nations allied against Hitler.

AIDS SOLIDARITY

"Every dime contributed by CIO members throughout North America will serve a double purpose," he said. "Besides aiding the war effort, the money will establish a bond of international labor solidarity—which in itself will be another blow against Hitlerism."

Among the first donations received were $1,000 from CIO President Murray and $5,000 from the National Maritime Union in memory of union members killed at sea.

The committee is lining up the support of the international unions for the program. Sweetland emphasized that the committee will not only aid war sufferers in Europe and Asia, but also serve CIO members in the armed forces of the U. S. and Canada.

The committee was set up by President Murray in accordance with a recommendation of the Detroit CIO convention for coordination of union war relief activities. Irving Abramson, head of the New Jersey CIO, is chairman and John Brophy, director of industrial union councils, is treasurer.

MANY AGENCIES

"The reason for this committee's existence is easy to see," Sweetland said. "There are some 200 different agencies that are actively soliciting labor unions for money to support foreign relief work.

"Duplicating appeals are inefficient and confusing. With one central agency to serve as a clearing house for war relief, executive boards and individual members can be sure that their donations are hitting the spot."

CREDIT FOR LABOR

Another function of the committee, he explained, is to see that union contributions are credited to labor instead of to employers.

"Thousands upon thousands of CIO members have already contributed to war relief," he pointed out. "But too often their donations are merely lumped with those of their employers, with no credit whatsoever given to the local union. The public is entitled to know what unions are doing."

The committee has working relations with a number of war relief agencies, including the British War Relief, the Russian War Relief and the United China Relief.

Ask House To Oppose Dies Group

the House was a thoroughly documented expose of the reckless charges of "Communist" that the committee has thrown against government employes and others belonging to such organizations as a cooperative bookshop, for signing anti-Dies Committee petitions, and the like. Several of these organizations were headed by such public figures as Chief Justice Hughes, Al Smith, Father Sheehy of New York, Wendell Willkie, and others equally prominent.

NAILS DIES' LIES

Marcantonio's radio broadcast was devoted to knocking Dies' phony yarn about evidence on Pearl Harbor that he was forced by government officials to suppress.

OUSTED: George E. Deatherage, outspoken fascist and admirer of Hitler's methods, who was removed from his job in charge of a 25 million dollar naval project at Norfolk, Va., following wide public protests.

Deatherage, Pro-Fascist, Loses Job

Washington, Feb. 28 — George Deatherage, exposed as a promoter of American fascism, this week lost his high-paying job on a naval construction project at Norfolk, Va.

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, acting on widespread protests, announced that he had "found that Mr. Deatherage is an undesirable person within the meaning of the contract, and as such, will be excluded from the site of Navy work."

It was disclosed two weeks ago by the New York newspaper PM that Deatherage—an outspoken admirer of Hitler's Nazi methods and anti-Semitism—was acting as chief engineer for Doyle & Russell, a construction firm with a $30,000,000 naval contract.

INVOKES CONTRACT

In ordering Deatherage's dismissal, Knox invoked a section of the firm's government contract requiring the company to fire anyone the Navy considers should not be permitted on defense jobs.

Relief Sponsor

Pittsburgh—P. T. Fagan, president of District 5, United Mine Workers, and a CIO alternate member of Labor's Victory Board, has become a sponsor of the Russian War Relief Committee here.

Donations Made Via Red Cross

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—The CIO today extended a helping hand to some 2,200 Americans held as prisoners of war by the Japanese.

Pres. Philip Murray announced that the CIO is sending, through the International Red Cross, a "bundle of necessities" to each of the 2,209 prisoners reported by the Army, Navy and Marine Corps as being in Japanese custody.

Among the men are about 1,200 AFL building trades workers captured during the Japs' surprise attack on American island outposts in the Pacific.

PROUD OF MEN

"The CIO is proud of the brave men, both those in uniform and those in overalls, who valiantly defended our Pacific outposts," Pres. Murray declared.

"The 1,200 construction workers are AFL members. The CIO is proud of these fellow workers who courageously upheld the best traditions of Americanism and of American labor.

"I have today instructed Monroe Sweetland, director of the national CIO Committee for American & Allied War Relief, immediately to make funds available through the International Red Cross to send a bundle of necessities to each of these brave Americans."

New Program Dramatizes U. S. at War

Washington, Feb. 28—Under the title "This Is War," the four major radio networks are carrying a new kind of educational program on war issues to American and world-wide listeners—including those in the enemy-occupied countries.

The program, prepared by Norman Corwin in cooperation with the Office of Facts and Fgures, is a series of 13 dramatic narratives dealing with the nation's war effort, the background of the war, and the meaning of democracy and fascism. It comes on Saturday nights, at 7 p.m., EWT, over all the major networks.

An early feature of the series will be an all-labor program, to be written by Clifford Odets, playwright and movie writer.

Murray Stresses Need For Fair Tax Program

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—A sound tax program based on ability to pay is more than ever necessary to the maximum war effort, Pres. Murray declared here in firing the opening gun of CIO's campaign to lift the already heavy burden on workers and to make the wealthy pay more of their share of the cost of fighting the Axis.

Hearings on the new tax bill are scheduled for the first week in March, Murray pointed out in writing to all CIO affiliates on the subject. This make it necessary for CIO members to be on the alert not only to press for a just system of taxation but also to prevent more burdens on the common people in the form of general sales and wage taxes.

"The only way to see that a sound tax program is enacted is by unceasing vigilance on the part of the working people of the country," Murray warned.

"Tax bills are enacted in the midst of such a cloud of secrecy and speculation that only by the closest attention is it possible to keep track of what is going on."

CIO PROGRAM

The basic issue is "whether the new taxes shall be drawn primarily from the pockets of workers, farmers and other of the low-income group or from corporation profits, the higher incomes, inheritances and luxuries," he said, in outlining the CIO tax program.

This program calls for higher taxes on inflated war profits, for higher income rates laid on the present income tax basis, for steep luxury taxes and for tight closing of wide loopholes that now allow the wealthy and the big corporations to escape their fair share of the revenue burden.

An organized drive to impose wage and sales taxes is now gathering speed in Congress, "aided and abetted by the National Association of Manufacturers, the Chamber of Commerce and other reactionary groups," Murray pointed out, in warning CIO affiliates to get in immediate touch with their Congressmen to impress labor's tax demands on their minds.

HITS SALES, WAGE TAXES

"Such a program would be a most serious mistake," he said in discussing sales and wage tax plans. "It would on the one hand cut into the bare livelihood of the working people of the nation who need all their present income and more to maintain themselves in health and efficiency. On the other hand, it would leave unscathed the excessive profits now being made by industries and by individuals."

Sales and wage taxes, by cutting down workers' incomes, would seriously impair health standards and would inevitably result in lower production at a time when every worker is desperately needed to bring our war effort up to a point where it can match and overtake the Axis.

CIO-AFL Leaders Offer Joint Wage Plans

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—Presentation of a joint CIO-AFL program to keep wages free of arbitrary freezing orders and to set up a unified labor supply agency within the Department of Labor marked the second meeting of the "Labor Victory Board" with President Roosevelt here.

The joint program calls for maintenance of the collective bargaining process of raising wages, pointing out that any freezing plan will place great hardships on the workers and would be a serious blow to morale and consequently to full war production.

WOULD END CONFUSION

The recommendation of a unified labor supply agency would end present confusion, since the problem of recruiting labor for arms industries is now snarled up in a number of conflicting government agencies. Early this year the CIO took the position that the whole question should be put in the hands of the Labor Dept.

The joint program was seen here as labor's united answer to the campaign of propaganda for wage freezing emanating from the newspaper and from certain high government officials. This propaganda was sharply denounced last week by President Murray in a statement accusing "certain government and industry officials" of attempting to pre-judge the demands of the CIO for raises in steel and other industries.

The Labor Victory Board consists of three from the CIO and three from the AFL. CIO representatives are President Murray, Julius Emspak and R. J. Thomas. AFL's men are President William Green, Secretary George Meany and Daniel Tobin.

OCD Asks State Posts For Labor

Washington, Feb. 28—Pointing out that the recent letter from the Office of Civilian Defense to state governors called for full labor participation in defense groups, John Brophy, CIO member of the OCD Labor Advisory Committee, today wrote to all CIO affiliates urging them to see that unions were represented in the civilian defense effort.

The OCD letter, sent out by Director James M. Landis, reminded the governors of the OCD policy statement which recognized the need for full labor participation and urged them to secure such participation by asking labor unions to name their own representatives to the state councils.

PROMPT ACTION

Brophy explained the need for prompt labor action by pointing out that the OCD was without power to order state defense groups to accept labor representatives, and that the job of securing such representation was up to the unions themselves.

"This matter of labor representation on defense councils is extremely important," Brophy wrote. "Councils which have not yet renewed their requests for such representation should undertake to do so immediately, making full use of the letter to governors as indicating the national policy of the OCD."

Brophy also asked all national and international unions and CIO councils to report progress to him regularly.

Film Office Employes Vote CIO

New York, Feb. 28—The CIO scored a major victory today in the home office of Loew's, Inc., big movie company.

White collar employes of the firm voted 324 for the United Office & Professional Workers, to 137 votes for no union.

Polls are scheduled among office staffs of other movie companies in the near future.

CIO Renews Plea for Funds For War Jobless

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—Labor is "profoundly shocked" at the cold-blooded refusal of the Ways and Means Committee in Congress to bring the $300,000,000 relief bill on the floor for debate, Pres. Murray declared here in renewing the CIO plea for a direct appropriation to aid workers thrown out of jobs due to delays in conversion to war production.

The bill, thrown out by the committee last week, would have added the $300,000,000 to unemployment benefits to help tide workers over the long waiting period — a period entirely due to the previous refusal of industry to undertake war production.

"The conversion of our industry to war production is just beginning," Murray said in writing to House leaders. "The dislocations which will arise out of this are due to grow much greater before it is completed. Literally millions of workers and their families will be uprooted because of this conconversion.

"Unless immediate provision is made for their benefit, millions of workers and their families will be without funds to pay for rent, food, and other necessities."

TORY RAMPAGE

The original bill, backed by the Administration and by all labor, was killed after a concerted anti-labor and anti-war effort drive in Congress, inspired by reactionary employer interests and led by the Tory appeasement group in the House. Opponents of the measure relied chiefly on stale propaganda about "states' rights" and the like, alleging that increased benefits (the maximum possible was $24 a week) would "federalize" the state compensation systems. Actually, the fear was that even minimum decency benefits would increase pressure for adequate wages in the sweatshop belts.

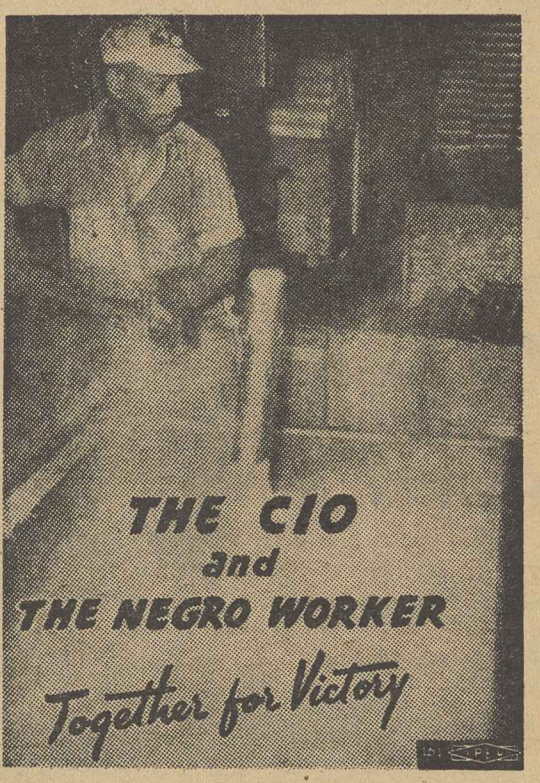
So great was the protest at the Ways and Means Committee for killing the bill that House leaders this week were hinting at a supplementary appropriation for $300,000,000 to be given to WPA to aid displaced workers. Murray's letter, as well as earlier appeals, urged that the sum be turned over to the President for administration.

WIRES FROM UNIONS

CIO affiliates demanding the needed relief poured wires and resolutions into Congress during the week. Included within the past few days were the Maryland-D. C. Council, the St. Louis, Mo., Council, the Tennessee State Council, the Ohio State Council, and many others.

In Congress, Representative Louis C. Rabaut of Michigan put in a bill to appropriate the needed amount and to turn it over to the President. Rabaut and others pointed out that while Michigan was the state hardest hit by conversion unemployment, the problem was nationwide and could not possibly be met on a state or regional basis.

Hot Off the Press!



This is the cover of new CIO pamphlet, "The CIO and the Negro Worker—Together for Victory" just off the press. The pamphlet is a complete revision of an earlier issue, bringing it up to date on war issues involving Negro and white workers.

It points to CIO's record against anti-Negro discrimination, tells of CIO's success in organizing Negro workers, lists CIO drives against job discrimination, polltax, lynching and other employer devices used to prevent unity of Negro and white workers against fascism.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

Newspapers have a variety of tricks when it comes to handling labor news—and most of them add up to anti-labor propaganda. A great deal of the dirty work is done in the headlines—as an issue of the Washington Post, owned by Banker Eugene Meyer, showed this week.

The front page carried two headlines arranged side by side, one reading "Phil Murray's Boys," and the other "MacArthur's Boys." Under the first one was a long story alleging that several strikes were going on throughout the country, while under the other was a story of MacArthur's heroic men proposing to take up a collection among themselves for a bomber.

The purpose of the two headlines was pretty obvious—to show that American workers go on strike against their country while American soldiers fight and die. This was the purpose of the headlines—but the story underneath them doesn't stand up.

One of the strikes turns out to have been called off immediately. The other turns out to be a demand of the CIO workers in a west coast steel plant to have three shift, 24-hour a day operation of the plant rather than two shifts of 10 hours each, which leaves the plant idle for four hours a day. A third turns out to be a protest against intimidation in the plant in which 12 CIO workers were summarily fired while the company dealt with a so-called "independent"—one of those outfits that has "Inc." after its name.

The CIO, together with every other American group, stands in admiration of the heroism of General MacArthur's men on Bataan. Those men, incidentally, are labor's sons—just as labor's sons are fighting and dying everywhere in the world war for freedom.

To use these brave men for newspaper smears against labor seems to me to be one of the lowest tricks yet seen in an industry noted for some pretty low practices.

Unity for Victory

Two affairs I attended this week gave me real satisfaction and marked events of importance to labor and to the war effort. At one, I was privileged to help welcome Irving Potash and John Vafiades of the Fur and Leather Workers back from an unjust prison sentence. Both were sent to jail on charges growing out of anti-trust law violations later thrown out by the court; both actually served time because they helped workers to organize. At the other, I sat in with AFL and Railroad union representatives on a Defense Bond luncheon. All three groups pledged themselves to friendly competition in buying bonds in the New York area.

Reports From the Field

CIO election and contract victories keep rolling in. From New Jersey, Regional Director Mosele reports that the Packinghouse Workers took an election by 155 to 65 from its competitor, which had a "perpetual" closed shop contract. At Newark, N. J., the Steel Workers have followed up a victory over an "independent" with a contract covering 230 workers. Mosele also reports that the organizing drive among the 24,000 workers at the Wright Aeronautical Co. in Paterson, N. J., is going full swing, with hundreds of workers signing UAW-CIO pledge cards each day.

Harry R. Doll, newly appointed sub-regional director in Akron, reports that the Cannery and Agricultural Workers won an election at a big Quaker Oats plant by 426 to 82—better than five to one. The election campaign was directed by William Haber of the CIO union.

Election victories with one opposing vote are rare enough, but when a union piles up two such in a row, that's news. The Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers in Tennessee has done just that, according to a report from Regional Director Paul Christopher. The vote was at the Hoover-Mason Phosphate Co., the score, 104 for Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, one against. The previous vote was in Rockwood, scene of vigilante terror against unions, where the same organization won by 323 to one.

Frank Bonacci, CIO representative in Utah, reports a contract won by the United Retail Clerks, Local 995, covering 100 workers employed in 21 stores. Wages increases of 10 per cent were won.

New York CIO Offers Salvage Plan to Aid War Production

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—Gotham's CIO today offered Mayor F. H. LaGuardia a plan for salvaging scrap materials essential to the nation's war production program.

The plan was devised by James Griesi, an organizer for the State, County and Municipal Workers and formerly an assistant foreman in the New York City Sanitation Dept.

In forwarding the proposal to the Mayor, Sec. Saul Mills of the city CIO council estimated the Griesi Plan should result in the annual reclamation of a minimum of 18,000 tons of paper, rags, glass and metal scrap materials in New York City.

"We are certain that Donald Nelson of the War Production Board and others who are really anxious to have an all-out production program for the defeat of Hitler and his axis partners would be very happy to know that New York City can deliver 18,000 tons of essential scrap within the next year," Mills declared.

SENSIBLE METHODS

The program was described as "sensible, practical . . . and most desirable from the mechanical, economic, hygienic and psychological point of view," he said, in contract with proposals initiated by labor-hating Sanitation Commissioner W. F. Carey, which the CIO characterized as "most impractical and an obvious failure."

The Griesi Plan calls for city-wide popularization of salvage and its importance to the war effort; a radio and poster campaign embracing full cooperation of the Sanitation workers; instructions to housekeepers, building superintendents and shopkeepers on the separation of papers, rags, metals, tin cans and other needed materials in separate bags or containers in each building; and the enlistment of tenant committees and janitors to prevent such materials from going into building incinerators.

DETAILED ADVICE

The plan suggested that the Department of Sanitation make special arrangements for placing the war material scrap collections in special sections of its trucks so that they may be easily separated at the city dumps. Detailed suggestions for handling the scrap at various city incinerators and dumps were included in the CIO proposals.

Present methods developed by Commissioner Carey require large numbers of Sanitation workers to be on the job every Sunday, and force citizens who would cooperate with the city to store large amounts of waste material around their homes.

Md.-D.C.CIO Hits Tory Cliveden Set

Baltimore, Feb. 28—Full support of CIO President Philip Murray's position on labor unity through the six-man Labor's Victory Board was expressed here today by the Md. and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council executive board.

At the same time the Council reaffirmed its pledge of support to President Roosevelt's leadership of the nation in its war against the fascist Axis and added that "we will do our utmost in our own unions to accelerate the day when under your aggressive leadership our country will become strong enough to take the offensive in military combat against all the Axis powers."

RAP CLIVEDEN SET

Representing thousands of defense workers in Maryland and the nation's capital, the Council hailed the President's exposure of "the Cliveden set operating in Washington" and urged "full, frank, honest cooperation on the basis of mutual trust" between the U. S. and the other United Nations.

In other actions, the CIO group deplored "unprincipled attacks" upon the Office of Civilian Defense; urged establishment of a $300,000,000 relief fund for workers displaced during conversion of plants to war production; demanded abolition of the Dies Committee for its harrassment of labor and of the war effort; asked executive clemency for Earl Browder, Communist party leader, on grounds that his punishment "was excessive and harsh," and called upon Gov. O'Connor to establish a Labor's Victory Board in Maryland.

'Know Your Enemy' Tells About Japs

New York, Feb. 28—Under the title, "Know Your Enemy," the Institute of Pacific Relations has issued a brief economic and military survey of Japan, giving accounts of industrial and raw material resources, food supplies, living standards, capital structure, naval and military strength, etc.

The pamphlet, written by Anthony Jenkinson, winds up its factual survey by declaring:

"Japanese imperialism will not easily be destroyed. Nevertheless, the United Nations, allying themselves ever more closely with the peoples of Asia, and taking full advantage of the long-term political and economic factors working in their favor, will assuredly triumph not only over Japan but also over the Axis as a whole."

Name 4 to Shoe Advisory Group

Washington, Feb. 28—Four officials of the CIO United Shoe Workers of America have been appointed to the Shoe Labor Advisory Committee of the War Production Board's Labor Division, it was announced today.

The appointees are Pres. Frank McGrath, Secy.-Treas. James J. Mitchell, Horace B. Davis, research director, and I. Rosenberg of the union's New York Joint Council.

Ask Greater Bond Buying

Camden, N. J., Feb. 28—An appeal of labor and industry to invest more money in U. S. Defense Bonds was made in a radio talk here by Sol Stetin, manager of the South Jersey Board of the CIO Textile Workers Union. The broadcast was the fourth in a series aimed to stimulate buying of U. S. bonds.

"The war cannot be won with words," Stetin said in his talk, nor can it be won alone by our armed forces. Our people here at home must be willing to make the great sacrifice ,along with their sons and brothers in uniform.

"Speaking for the textile workers of this state, I can say that they are willing to do their part. Already they have poured into the coffers of our government thousands of dollars in their purchase of Defense Bonds."

Push Rail Campaign In East

New York, Feb. 28—An organizational campaign among thousands of unorganized railroad workers in the East was announced today by the railroad division of the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee.

Attending a meeting here, UWOC Director Harold Straub said that contrary to public belief a large majority of railroad employes are not members of any labor organizations and that a vast majority of these employes are greatly underpaid.

MANY NEW LOCALS

UWOC locals have been established on a large number of eastern roads, including the Pennsylvania, the New York Central, the B. & O. and others, Straub reported.

It was announced that the Francis M. McMahon, regional director for the UWOC railroad drive, has established offices at 207 Orange Street, New Haven, Conn.

Women's Auxiliaries Hail New Training Program

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—The new War Production Board policy of "immediate extension of defense training to women on a basis of equality with the training of men" approved on February 10, is a step which the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries has been urging as essential to all-out production for victory over the Axis. To the extent that this policy becomes practice, auxiliary women will be able to equip themselves to take their places in war industry.

Rapid increases in employment of women is forecast not only by the War Production Board statement, but also by a Survey of Women in Industry conducted by the National Association of Manufacturers. With the exception of Detroit, every employer's association reports an increase in the number of women workers and further expected increases.

This news underlines the importance of a national program for day-care of children which the CIO Auxiliary Congress has been stressing as essential to full employment of women in war industry. The experience of England shows the urgent need of this program.

WAR TIME NURSERIES

War-time nurseries for which the British Government assumes full financial responsibility is one of the solutions of the problems of day-care of children of working mothers there, according to a study submitted to the Tolan Committee by Alice Mendham, chairman of the Washington, D. C., Emergency Committee for Day-Care of Young Children.

The nurseries are open to children of all women who go out to work. Mothers pay about 30 cents a day for full-time care including three meals.

Lack of adequate housing and of sufficient trained personnel has made it necessary to supplement the nursery program with "daily guardians"—women who will take care of two or three youngsters in their own homes. These women are paid by the English government as well as by the mothers. They are supervised by health inspectors.

"Child-Care Reserves" have been organized to meet the lack of trained nursery teachers. These women are given an intensive two weeks' course, plus fifty hours of practical work and are then paid a small weekly wage.

The Ministry of Labor has declared "the care of children is a national service," and a campaign for girls under 20 and women over 30 to take child-care training has been started. Students are paid and given room and board while studying.

Soaring Profits

It noted that the first 248 companies whose stocks are listed on the Exchange, showed a 30.3 per cent increase in profits for 1941 over 1940.

Here are some of the figures:

Industry	Pct. Rise in Profits
79 Railroads	128.1
37 Oil Firms	92.3
61 Auto Firms	62.7

Bar on Radios, Refrigerators Pleases Union

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—Orders from the War Production Board for curtailment of electric refrigerator and radio civilian production were approved today by the CIO United Electric, Radio and Machine Workers.

The union said the government's instructions to the two industries represent a partial step towards meeting UE suggestions for conversion of plants to war production, retraining of workers, systematic placement of war orders in the various factories, adequate relief for displaced workers and labor representation on the planning boards of the two industries.

Production of refrigerators for civilian use must halt by April 30, while radios for non-war purposes will not be made after April 22. The WPB warned the two industries that they must be completely converted to war production by the end of June under threat that failure may lead to more serious action by the government agency.

WPB REVERSES POLICY

Both orders reverse previous policy of the WPB, which was to permit industry to proceed at its own gain on consumer production and to let conversion "work itself out." The former policy had been bitterly criticized by the UE.

"The industry wanted to go along half-time, making refrigerators, keeping up its civilian profits and protecting its competitive position as long as possible," the UE News, union official organ, charged.

The curtailment order, it added, is only "the first necessary step toward conversion for full-time war production. But it is only a step. The workers of the industry, through the UE, planned for more than a halt. They planned production for war.

"Only constant and unrelenting pressure by the workers themselves will insure that this plan is carried through."

Allis Wage Case Goes To WLB

Pittsburgh, Feb. 28—A major victory for labor was scored before the National War Labor Board last week by the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, when it succeeded in winning agreement to submit a dispute concerning added compensation for workers of the Allis-Chalmers Company, Pittsburgh Works, to open arbitration under the board.

The arbitration agreement closed the first round of a four-month dispute between UERMWA Local 613, and the Allis-Chalmers Company.

BINDING DECISION

Under the agreement reached in Washington, the mediator in the case, now appointed arbitrator, will bring in a decision based on material presented in the mediation hearings. The decision will be binding.

The arbitrator will decide, first, what is the proper subject or arbitration, and, second, what added compensation if any must be paid by the company, if it is found that this matter should be arbitrated.

WLB Orders More Parleys At Smelter

Washington, Feb. 28—Union demands for a dollar a day increase and union security were put over for further negotiation in the decision of the War Labor Board handed down in the Phelps-Dodge case brought by the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, CIO. The Board's decision, unanimously passed, also denied in effect the contention of the union that workers should receive equal seniority for equal work, regardless of race or national origin.

Immediate protest of the Board's action was made by the union's Executive Board in a letter to William H. Davis, WLB chairman, which described the "extraordinary distortions in the decision" and hit sharply at use of AFL contracts to deny CIO demands.

CRUX OF CASE

Crux of the decision, according to the union Board, was in the WLB assertion that "artificial competition" between AFL and CIO would be created by granting CIO demands. "It was not the Smelter Workers which sought the competition," the Board said. "In any event, since when has it become unpatriotic for a union to seek to improve conditions for its members when another union has failed to do so?"

The Board pointed out that the AFL union had only come into the picture after the Smelter Workers began their organizing drive in the company's mills, and that agreements were "negotiated without certification and signed on the eve of negotiations with our union after it had been duly certified," and that they did not grant significant wage improvements."

15c Wage Increase

Washington, Feb. 28—Wage increases of 15 cents an hour were gained for employes of the American Co. at Chicago through a War Labor Board mediation panel decision.

The panel reached agreement on all issues except union security, which will be submitted to the full War Labor Board.

UNION AID: Rose Rosenbaum, recently-elected "Queen of Stenographers" hands over $6,000 in war relief checks to Soviet Citizen Nona Anderson for Russian War Relief, to RAF Pilot Stephen Calder for British War Relief, and to Aviatrix Lee Ya Ching for United China Relief. Representing 12,000 hours of work by members of the CIO United Office & Professional Workers, the checks were contributed to the National CIO Committee for American & Allied War Relief.

Inland Bargemen Join On War Program

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 28—(FP)—Representatives of 5,000 AFL and CIO union members working on the barge lines of midwest rivers have united on a joint program for helping to win the war.

The unions' program has been welcomed by President Chester C. Thompson of the Inland Waterways Corp., largest of the barge lines, which is owned by the U. S. Government.

A statement to the Office of Defense Transportation in Washington was signed by A. E. Phillips, port agent of the CIO National Maritime Union; Lawrence Long, business agent of the International Longshoremen's Assn., AFL; Louis Boehlscher, secretary of the Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn., CIO; and George Antrainer, national district deputy of the National Organization of Masters Mates and Pilots, AFL.

PROPOSE COUNCIL

Captain Antrainer has also proposed the organization of a council of river unions to carry out the plan, settle jurisdictional disputes and provide mutual assistance in negotiations.

Originated by the NMU, the statement to the ODT follows in part:

"We reaffirm our position against strikes, lockouts, jurisdictional disputes or any stoppage of work that might hinder the successful execution of our government's war policy. We further declare ourselves in favor of the following program designed to expedite the river transportation industries and to make the inland waterways a major factor in the transportation of war materials.

WANT RIVER-RAIL RATE

"1. The establishment of a joint river-rail rate by the ICC.

"2. The interchange of barges between the companies in the same manner that the railroads interchange cars.

"3. Common use of terminal and dock facilities by all companies involved."

The Upper Crust

"Take it to the union, Jenkins. We're giving them cookies this year instead of wage increases."

FDR Gets Housing Program

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—A four-point program for housing for arms workers was outlined to President Franklin D. Roosevelt in a letter sent to him by R. J. Thomas, head of the CIO Housing Committee and president of the UAW-CIO.

The CIO program was sent to the White House shortly before the President announced that the numerous and conflicting U. S. housing agencies would be coordinated under one administration.

The CIO program included:

(1) A comprehensive plan integrating federal housing activities under competent direction by persons with a progressive social outlook; (2) re-establishment of the Mutual Home Ownership Division and its full utilization, together with the U. S. Housing Authority in construction and management; (3) immediate construction of the UAW-proposed "Defense City" as endorsed by the President, with tenant participation in planning and management, and (4) a return to the policy of building well-planned, permanent housing committees in planning and management.

PALMER TO BRITAIN

The President also announced that Charles F. Palmer, former head of defense housing, would be sent to Great Britain on an inspection tour. Labor and housing specialists have been sharply critical of Palmer's failure to carry out an adequate housing program for war workers.

Report Lashes Packers' 'Sit-Down'

Washington, Feb. 28—Bitter condemnation of three Chicago meat packing companies for "unjustifiable" refusal to mediate a dispute with the CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee was contained in a report to the War Labor Board today by Walter T. Fisher, a special WLB examiner.

The dispute involves the P. Brennan Co., the Illinois Meat Co., and the Agar Packing & Provision Co. It arose when the company refused to rehire 18 employes after a one-week unauthorized strike last summer and announced willingness to take back after an arbitrator had reviewed the cases. The union asked for immediate reinstatement of the workers, with later dismissal of any whom the arbitrator might recommend.

FORCED SECOND WALKOUT

The company's attitude forced another strike, which ended when the Mediation Board suggested an arbitration procedure. But the company refused to arbitrate and fired another 84 workers. Later it repudiated its contract with the PWOC and forced all employes to sign individual contracts.

Minnesota Farm-Laborites Back Murray Council Plan

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 28—Endorsement of the Murray Industry Council Plan to guarantee war production featured the special state Convention here last week of Minnesota's third party, the Farmer-Labor Association, which placed itself on record for the all-out victory program to defeat the Axis.

Reported out by the labor panel, made up of delegates from CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhood Unions and comprising about one-third of the convention body, the resolution called upon the War Production Board to institute the Murray Plan in all defense industries, and it was adopted by unanimous vote.

Counterposed to the Murray Plan in the labor panel was the "Lather's Program," advanced by Wood, Wire & Metal Lathers' International Union Local No. 190 of Minneapolis, and calling for government ownership and operation of industry. After thorough discussion the Lathers' Program was voted down overwhelmingly, as speakers from AFL and Railroad Brotherhood as well as CIO showed how these demands would destroy the national unity needed to win the war.

Declaring military defeat of the Axis to be the paramount issue of the day, the Farmer-Labor Association reversed its traditional stand in opposition to war.

'We'll Work To Win' CIO Tells Nation

2-1 Victory At Alcoa

Bridgeport, Conn., Mar. 7—The Aluminum Workers of America won a two-to-one victory at a Labor Board election held here among some 4,000 employes of the big plant of the Aluminum Co. of America. The vote was 2,003 for the AWA, 1,203 for a so-called independent "association," and 410 for neither.

The plant manufactures parts for airplanes.

Vote CIO At Baldwin

Philadelphia, March 7—Workers at the Essington plant of the Baldwin Locomotive Company voted 5,403 for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee to 1,030 against, in an election held by the National Labor Relations Board this week.

This is the third consecutive victory won by the SWOC in elections held in various divisions of the plant, and the third largest vote so far polled in this region. The two larger elections held previously were among workers at the Bethlehem Steel Co., won by the SWOC, and the Radio Corp. of America, won by the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

Michael Harris, subregional SWOC director, said the Baldwin election "will mean improved conditions, so far as wages are concerned, and a continuation of the friendly labor relations we have had with Baldwin since Charles Brinley became president."

Insurance Polls Won By Union

Boston, March 7 — The CIO gained sole bargaining rights for some 200 industrial insurance agents of the John Hancock Life Insurance Co. through NLRB elections in four New England cities.

The Industrial Insurance Agents Union, affiliated with the United Office and Professional Workers, won the NLRB polls in Woonsocket and Pawtucket, R. I., and in Attleboro and Lynn, Mass. A fifth election, in Salem, Mass., ended in a 17-17 tie.

Auto Worker Gets $4,800

Pittsburgh, March 7—A check for $4,830.63—believed to be the largest back pay order in the history of the Pennsylvania Labor Relations Board—this week went to a member of Local 521, CIO United Automobile Workers.

The worker, an employe of the Hodson Motor Co. named Earhart, was discharged from his job early in January, 1938, for organizing and union activities.

The company fought the union and the state labor board, according to the union's regional director, Paul Miley, but on February 23 the court upheld the state agency in its decision against the firm.

Earhart, who has been working for the union, has been instrumental in organizing many plants in and around Pittsburgh, Miley said.

Force Ohio Shoe Firm To Meet Union

Portsmouth, Ohio, March 7 (FP) A six-week strike of 3,200 workers has forced the Selby Shoe Co. to recognize the CIO United Shoe Workers and to back down on its refusal to arbitrate union wage demands.

The USWA had sought a general 10% wage boost and an additional 5% increase for the lower-paid workers. Ever since the USWA was certified as bargaining agent in 1939, the company has refused to deal with it and has continued to chisel on wages.

Business Men Cite Worries; Labor Only 6th

Washington, March 7—The answer to the newspapers' smear campaign against labor's wage demands came this week, not from the mouths of babes but from the leaders of American industry themselves.

A poll by the magazine Fortune among "businessmen of management rank" found they rated worries about labor, "including wage rates, unions," as only sixth on their list of major problems.

Leading the list was the question of shortages, priorities, etc. Others, in their order on the list, were relations with government, shortages of personnel, finances, plant conversion.

Murray, In Speech To U.S., Accepts Output Challenge

WASHINGTON, Mar. 6—In a dramatic address tonight to the American people, CIO Pres. Philip Murray pledged the intelligence and energy of the nation's workers to crushing the Axis with a growing flood of deadly armaments.

American workers will cast aside the last remnants of complacency and in the nation's dark hour will strain their every muscle to lift arms output high above present quotas, he said.

Murray praised the Administration for two major steps, which are in line with CIO suggestions during the past 18 months:

1. Joint labor-management councils in every plant to set quotas, sift new ideas and plan maximum production.

2. Production on a 168-hour a week schedule to get maximum returns from both men and machines.

The CIO leader praised the Administration's plan to reward workers who exceed their quotas through special honor medals such as are now given to outstanding military men.

Murray's speech followed a radio talk by Donald Nelson, war production chief, who outlined the government's plans called for by Pres. Roosevelt.

Average Wage

London, March 7—The British worker's average income is estimated at $20 a week, according to the International Transport Workers' Federation here.

Hirohito, Hitler Scabs, Says Private

Camp Lee, Va., March 7—"Hitler and Hirohito are the number one scabs of the world, and the United Nations are the picketing forces which will spell final defeat to those scabs."

That is the way Pvt. David Plenn, member of both the AFL and CIO, looks at the war picture. He is now training with Company C, Eighth Quartermaster Training Regiment at Camp Lee, Va.

"The union man should be more interested in winning this war than any other group in our country," says the former truck driver-welder. "An Axis victory would in plain words mean an end to the forty-hour week, we'd have bowl-of-rice wages—and no unions," he says.

WORKED IN PHILLY

Plenn was once an AFL truck driver in Philadelphia. Until last fall he was employed as a welder at the Cutler Steel Co., of Camden, N. J., and was a member of the CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers there. He has withdrawal cards from both unions.

"I don't mind giving up a good job for army pay. It's no sacrifice, the way I look at it," says he, with a serious voice.

"Everything that is good in our country would be destroyed if those scabs won out. So, you see, we in khaki are not sacrificing. Instead, it's a question of facing cold, hard facts."

Fair Enough

Birmingham Post Strike

HAVING SOMETIMES published letters from common Americans complaining of persecutions suffered at the hands of the licensed brownshirts who operate under the Wagner Act, I think it would be fair and interesting today to publish one expressing the other side of the case. This comes on the letterhead of Local 1950 of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee of the C. I. O., the same group which a few years ago kicked up a local insurrection against constituted government in South Chicago in which the Chicago police, having retired to the very gates of the steel plant, finally stood their ground for a fight in which 11 rioters, shoved into the forefront by professional instigators in the rear, lost their lives. None of the victims was employed by the steel company and the attack was a civil commotion intended to force the actual workers to join the union against their will.

Local 1950 is a Cincinnati group and the letter, dated February 2, is signed in ink, "A. J. Weichold, secretary."

"The Birmingham Post strikers have emerged victorious from their strike for a semblance of living wage and a decent American standard of living."

VIOLATIONS OF FREE SPEECH AND RIGHTS OF LABOR

REPORT

OF THE

COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION AND LABOR

"....Yet Captain Mooney, without consulting the Commissioner, reached his decision to prevent the Memorial Day marchers from approaching the plant before he had any opportunity to observe their conduct and in the absence of any information as to their intentions.

"The police defend this conduct upon their ex post facto conclusion that the objective of the marchers was to force a violent entry into the plant. We have analyzed the defense in detail above and have concluded that it is groundless. We are of the opinion that the sole objective of the marchers was to picket in mass at the plant gate."

"....We conclude that the consequences of the Memorial Day encounter were clearly avoidable by the police."

LaFollette Report Hits Tories' Attack On Labor As Blow At Democracy

BY HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Mar. 7—The Senate Civil Liberties Committee moved into the home stretch of its four-year activities this week with an introductory report lashing out at the oppressive practices of large California employer and "factory farm" organizations.

In its slashing condemnation of the practices of the tory business and farm outfits, the committee warned that denial of civil liberties to workers and farm labor are a menace to the nation in peacetime, but create even greater problems in war.

WAGNER ACT NOT ENOUGH

"Organized conspiracies of employers' associations to flout the law" are weakening respect for democratic government, the committee pointed out.

The facts "strongly suggest that the Natl. Labor Relations Act has not yet proved effective in halting undue interferences with the rights of labor to organize and bargain collectively, perpetrated by organized employers' associations and their artificially generated 'citizens committees' and 'third party' movements.

"No proposal for sweeping labor legislation which does not include a determined effort to meet this challenge can be deemed worthy of consideration."

REACTIONARIES' UTOPIA

"Employment relations in California's industrialized agriculture," the committee charged, "have been left in the unfettered control of employers' groups and associations. The results . . . are almost beyond belief."

Some of those results of the Tories' utopia, the report pointed out, are unemployment, shifting jobs, starvation wages, bad housing, insufficient education, little medical care, high relief burdens, denial of civil liberties, riots, strife and corruption.

"In this respect, California provides a clear demonstration that in an industrial society, the stronger side of the employment relation cannot well be permitted to devise policies and conduct its affairs solely in accord with its own wishes," the committee said.

"Such so-called laissez-faire constitutes too great a danger to the public welfare, too great a drain on the public purse, and too great an injury to the entire fabric of democratic rights."

The importance of California's agricultural labor relations lies in the fact that all U. S. agriculture is heading in the same direction.

"FARM-FACTORY" SYSTEM

California's agricultural labor relations grow out of the factory farm system of production—huge tracts of lands, centralized ownership by a wealthy few, a migrant labor force, great use of machinery, and considerable political influence for the owners.

The course of the "industrial revolution," which long ago left its mark on American industry, "is becoming clearly visible on the land," the committee noted. The day of the "independent farm operator, who with his family and an occasional hired man works his land, is passing," the report added.

"His future is dark, and except for the few who may become large commercial farm operators depending on hired wage labor, the path of the farmer is likely to lead to the role of landless farm laborer or share tenant, with a precarious footing on the land."

During any such process, the lower income farm population must either be given financial relief to stem the tide, or adequate protection for organizing in defense of his civil liberties and economic rights, the LaFollette group indicated.

BIG OWNERS JOIN HANDS

But California's big farm operators, through such organizations as Associated Farmers and its allies, have got together with the employers' associations in the cities to conduct "an astonishingly aggressive" fight against all labor.

Associated Farmers is the chief link between the wealthy farmers who employ large groups of workers to tend their crops, and the great city employer groups, who have used the traditional methods of espionage, terror and force to fight industrial labor.

Working with the Associated Farmers, Inc., were other "so-called farmer groups" whose fight against collective bargaining was braced "by secretive and hitherto undisclosed financial assistance and support from urban industrial employers and their anti-union associations," the committee found.

FLOUT LABOR LAWS

In many sectors of California industry, the report asserts, "the national labor policy has not been honored or observed." The results were easy to see: "continued instability, repeated denials of labor's rights and a constant strain on the maintenance of collective bargaining procedure." Clearly, the committee said, "such employers' conspiracies should be flatly outlawed."

California's problems are the problems of an entire nation's democracy, the LaFollette group concluded. Either we act to preserve our democratic structure or we face "internal decay" or "the tyranny of small groups vested with great power.

"Our objectives for democratic government must continue to further a balanced system of collective bargaining between employers and employes, between those who own or control productive property and those who work it."

Mooney Dead

The veteran unionist, who spent over 22 years in San Quentin Prison on a 1916 frame-up charge, had been in poor health ever since his release from jail. He underwent a series of operations for the ulcers he developed in prison, and went under the surgeon's knife again last week.

Mooney's release from prison by Gov. Culbert Olson followed years of persistent demands for his freedom from workers throughout the world.

Poll Tax Hearings Next Week

WASHINGTON, March 7—A new effort to bring voting privileges to millions of workers and farmers who are disfranchised by the poll tax in eight southern states, gets under way here March 12.

On that day Senate judiciary subcommittee opens hearings on the Pepper anti-poll tax bill (S. 1280), aimed at barring the poll tax as a qualification for voting in all federal elections. Scheduled as a first-day witness is CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

Other witnesses will include a wide range of labor officials and progressives throughout the South, who will flay the poll-tax as an anti-democratic device which keeps the voting power in the hands of small, high-income groups.

MANY WITNESSES

Among those who will appear before the committee hearings are Senator Claude Pepper of Florida, sponsor of the measure; AFL President William Green; Jennings Perry, Nashville, Tenn., newspaper publisher; President Frank Graham of the University of North Carolina; William Mitch, CIO steel and coal union official in Alabama; Yelverton Cowherd, CIO director in Birmingham, Ala., and Miss Lucy Randolph Mason, CIO public relations representative in the South.

The CIO has taken a strong position against the poll tax in its recent conventions, pointing out that it denies millions of Southerners their right to "taxation without representation."

IN EIGHT STATES

The tax is a qualification for voting in Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Texas and Arkansas. In many cases the tax is cumulative, so that failure to pay it one year makes the burden even heavier the next.

In some states, persons who have never paid it and who wish to exercise their voting rights are confronted with bills ranging up to $45 before they can enter a polling booth.

By barring large low-income groups from enjoying their voting rights, the poll tax states have produced a notorious Congressional group who war on all progressive and labor measures.

A $1,900 BARREL: An hour's overtime pay goes into a barrel for the CIO War Relief Committee as 1,800 employes of the Tite-Flex Metal Hose Co., Newark, N. J., make their first donation. Similar scene will be reenacted each month as Local 260, United Automobile Workers, does its extra bit. Local Pres. Carl Thol (wearing smock), left, and Vice-Pres. Percy Proctor of the company look on.

More Unions Pledge Aid To 'Hour's Pay' Relief Plan

NEW YORK, Mar. 7—Four more national CIO unions—the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, Textile Workers Union of America, United Office and Professional Workers and the American Newspaper Guild—have pledged complete support for the CIO War Relief campaign and designated officials to work with the comittee in achieving the CIO War Relief goal of an hour's pay every month from every CIO member.

The pledges were reported to the members of the CIO's National War Relief Committee by National Director Monroe Sweetland at the regular meeting of the committee in New York March 2. Irving Abramson is chairman of the committee, John Brophy Treasurer, Ted Silvey, jr., is Secretary and others members are Saul Mills, John Phillips, August Scholle and Gustave Strebel.

The letter from SWOC Secretary-Treasurer David J. McDonald reported "thorough accord with the committees ideas for collection of funds for relief of the distressed people of Great Britain, China and Russia" and designated Mr. Thomas Murray to work with the committee in formulating a workable plan through which the SWOC may make its contributions.

Evelyn Adler, director of War Activities for UOPWA, forwarded three checks of $2,000 each, to be forwarded to the Russian, Chinese and British war relief through the CIO committee and stated that UOPWA was proceeding at once with the CIO program for an hour's pay a month for the duration.

TWU President Emil Rieve pledged the full cooperation of his union and assigned Lawrence Rogin, TWUA Educational Director, to work with the National Committee.

Sam Eubanks, Executive Vice President of the Newspaper Guild, notified the committee that the Executive Board of the Guild has given formal endorsement to the CIO War Relief program and will arrange to collect an hour's pay from Guild members through local Guilds and forward them to the committee.

'Blood and a Day's Pay Make A Good Union Man'

Detroit, Mich.—"A pint of blood to the Red Cross" and a "day's pay to war relief" are among the requirements for a good union member in war time, as set up by the local unit of the United Office and Professional Workers of America. Those who meet the requirements, based on civilian defense, find their names posted on an Honor Roll in union headquarters.

Cannery Union Sweeps Poll In Arkansas

Chicago, March 7—Signing of an outstanding contract in Arkansas, its first in the state, was announced here at the national headquarters of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers. The agreement, signed with the Arkansas Fertilizer Co., provides a 33⅓% wage increase, paid vacations, full union security, check-off of dues and hiring through the union.

"Unusual and significant feature of the contract," the union stated, "is that June 19, Emancipation Day, is among the seven holidays listed for which time and a half must be paid for holiday work."

Progress made by the union in the South is shown by its record of ten Labor Board elections won since the first of the year.

CIO Backs Farm Aid Program

Washington, Mar. 7—Full support of the Farm Security Administration in maintaining and expanding its work as "a basic war measure" was urged on all CIO affiliates by CIO President Murray in a circular letter this week. The Farm Security agency has been under hot attack from Congressional tories who have been particularly angered by the fact that FSA loans help to pay poll taxes to enable Southern citizens to vote.

"Like many of the more progressive agencies of the New Deal, the Farm Security Administration is now under bitter attack from reactionary forces," Murray wrote, this program is, as President Roosevelt has stated, a basic war measure.

"The working farmers under this program can contribute proportionately a far greater increase in food production than the large industrialized and commercial farmers who depend on the labor of others and are near the limit of expansion now."

SIX-POINT STATEMENT

Murray's letter was accompanied by a six-point statement of "Reasons for the support of the Farm Security Administration by organized labor."

These points emphasized the need for increased food production to combat food shortages, the need for expansion by small farms to meet labor shortages now hampering the large scale farms, the need to provide credit for small farmers who cannot otherwise get it.

Murray Tells Nation: Labor Is Eager To Speed Output of War Materials

Attacks Worry Dies

WASHINGTON, March 7—Martin Dies, whose un-American Committee has been running into stiff opposition in its fight to continue its disruptive work, came to his own defense this week in an hour-long outburst of flag-waving, personal boasting about his own integrity, and lavish promises to expose fascist plots against the U. S.

Dies' outburst was directed at Representative Thomas Eliot of Massachusetts, who had exposed his phony yarn about having information that would have prevented Pearl Harbor, in a speech at the convention of the Massachusetts CIO Council. Throughout his speech, Dies was wildly applauded by the most reactionary members of Congress, fellow-poll-taxers and members of his own committee.

URGE UNIONS ACT

The CIO remained unimpressed, however, and during the week both Allan S. Haywood, Director of Organization, and John Brophy, Director of Industrial Union Councils, sent letters to CIO affiliates repeating Dies' anti-labor record and the CIO charge that he has sought to aid the enemies of democracy by persecuting government officials and harassing our allies in the war. Both letters urged CIO members to double their wires and letters of protest to Congress against continuance of Dies' un-American activities.

A good part of Dies' speech was devoted to an attempt to explain why he had never investigated the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin or Gerald Winrod, the latter a Fascist leader who has been employed in many anti-CIO campaigns.

The remainder of the speech, after subtracting several thousand words on the subject of himself, boiled down to vague statements that the Dies Committee is prepared in the future to bring out lengthy reports on activities of Nazi and Fascist agencies, and to renewed attacks on the CIO.

KKK APPROVES

Evidence that Dies' best friends are the leaders of such organizations as the Ku Klux Klan was seen in a story from the "Daily Oklahoman," which quoted J. W. Reed, Grand Dragon of the state KKK, as saying:

"Tremendous efforts have been made to have the Dies Committee killed. Our imperial wizard, James A. Colescott of Atlanta, appeared before the committee, as the result of our demand that the Klan be investigated, to satisfy other groups, and he reported the Dies Committee is doing a necessary work in an efficient manner."

Accepts Nelson Challenge

(Text of Pres. Murray's Speech, Page Five.)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 6—Led on by ringing words from Pres. Philip Murray, CIO's five million "industrial soldiers" responded this week to Uncle Sam's plea for more production with a promise that "we'll work to win."

In a 15-minute speech tonight over the Blue network, Murray accepted the challenge of Donald Nelson, war production chief, for a terrific speed-up of arms output so essential to a defeat of the Axis military forces.

Speaking directly to the nation's working millions, Murray warned:

"If we lie down on the job, if we shirk, if we listen to the sly preachers of disunity and complacency, if we fail to back up our armed forces with all that is in us, we can go down to defeat, dishonor and the loss of all our liberties—to the complete blackout of civilization which Hitler and the Axis are fighting to bring about."

OUR BIG CHANCE

But, he added, America's production soldiers can turn the dark world military picture into one of victory for democracy.

"If we are true to ourselves and to our country, if we stand loyally behind our President, if we devote our every thought and effort to more and more production, more effective civilian defense and more and more support to our armed forces, we shall turn the tide of battle in these very days and weeks that lie ahead of us, to final and complete victory," the CIO leader said.

"Our destiny is in our hands—the hands of every one of us."

FDR'S ORDER

President Murray's speech came as a fitting climax to the most important week for American labor since Japan's dastardly attack on Pearl Harbor.

The week opened with orders from President Roosevelt to Nelson for immediate stepping up of production. Nelson at once called for two important steps long advocated by the CIO:

1. Joint labor-management plant committees to direct increased output of war equipment.

2. An end to "plant blackouts," with the 168-hour week set as standard for war industries.

In addition, the Production Chief

CIO Copper, Longshore Plans Winning U. S. Approval

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, March 7—The government took two steps this week toward putting CIO production plans into practice, one in the west coast maritime industry and the other in the copper mining industry.

Both steps were somewhat hesitant and did not carry out all the points the CIO unions—the Longshoremen and Warehousemen and the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers—made in their plans, but they were seen as a definite advance in the direction of repeated urgings by Pres. Murray and the entire CIO that labor's blueprints for victory be adopted.

The copper plan also marked a step toward carrying out War Production head Donald Nelson's announced policy of calling on labor for help in planning arms production.

FOLLOWS CIO PROPOSAL

The step toward full copper output was taken in a statement issued by the War Production Board announcing a program "which closely follows the proposals of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers" for continuous operation of mines and for improved working and mining conditions.

The step toward the CIO's plan for the maritime industry, first advanced by Harry Bridges as head of the ILWU, was seen in the report that the U. S. Maritime Commission would set up a joint labor-management committee on the west coast to expedite ship handling. This action, though not officially announced as The CIO NEWS went to press, was learned from Commission sources here.

COPPER PLAN

The WPB's announcement of a copper plan, while it proposed to improve mining conditions and to set up labor committees, omitted two essential points in the union's proposals, which called for labor participation in more than merely an advisory capacity and for reopening of shut-down mines and exploitation of new ones.

The Maritime Commission's move was reported as placing Wayne L. Morse, west coast arbitrator between shipping companies and the unions, in charge of the industry on the west coast, and as creating a four-man committee to work with

Union Head Survives Sea Disaster

Bridgeport, Conn., March 7—Adolph R. Storm, one of the eleven survivors of the Jacob Jones, American destroyer torpedoed and sunk by an Axis submarine off Cape May, N. J., recently, is an outstanding CIO leader in this state, union officials proudly stated today.

Storm is president of Local 237, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, at the Columbia Recording Co. in Bridgeport.

He was a delegate to the Connecticut CIO Convention which was in session on December 7 when Pearl Harbor was bombed. The convention voted unanimously for retaliation against the Axis.

Next day Storm joined the U. S. Navy.

Your Labor and Your Bonds Will Help Us Win

Willkie Lauds CIO Output Proposals

Los Angeles, March 7—"Certain large corporations and influential groups fail to recognize that changes are taking place in social and industrial relations, and refuse to admit the necessity for these changes."

These words were spoken by Wendell Willkie to a committee from the Los Angeles Industrial Union Council, with which he agreed that labor-employer cooperation along the lines of the Murray Industry Council Plan is essential, not only to total war production, but also to peacetime labor relations.

"Fundamentally," said the Republican party leader, "the CIO position is correct both in war and peace. In modern industry, where thousands of men work together in great plants, it is unthinkable that they should be deprived of any organized method of expressing their needs and aspirations."

HITS GM ATTITUDE

Discussing the antagonism of North American Aviation, Inc., toward attempts of Local 887, United Automobile Workers, to secure greater production, Willkie said this attitude of anti-unionism was typical of North American's owner, General Motors.

We'll Work To Win

CIO President Philip Murray expressed the feelings of millions upon millions of American working people in his nationwide broadcast on increasing war production. It was a speech of loyal response to the call of our President and Commander-in-Chief. It warned of the urgent danger confronting all of us. It voiced labor's determination to produce as never before until victory is won.

"Victory depends in large measure on the increased war production we are able to get from our factories and arsenals in the immediate future," said President Roosevelt. He directed Chairman Donald Nelson of the War Production Board "to take every possible step to raise production and to bring home to labor and management alike the supreme importance of war production in this crucial spring."

Production Chief Nelson responded with a concrete program for stepping up our war output. He called for the establishment of joint labor-management committees in every plant; for awards and production quotas to enlist the spirit of American competition in increasing production; and for operation of war plants 168 hours a week.

This program is directly in line with the Industry Council proposals of the CIO, Murray pointed out, and with the plans that the CIO unions have long been advocating for more steel, more aluminum, more copper, more airplanes and more of all the goods and services so sorely needed by our armed forces, and those of our allies, to win the war.

The CIO takes pride in the fact it has led and pioneered in the demand for just such a program. It rejoices in the knowledge that the whole weight of government is now behind this drive. Its members will throw themselves wholeheartedly into the battle for production with new heart, new courage, and new determination.

The men and women of labor are and must be much more than loyal and disciplined followers in this war. "We are and must continue to be leaders in the demand for more production," as Murray points out. For this is labor's war. Labor has most to lose from enslavement to Hitler and the Axis. It has most to gain from a victory in which it can play the leading part.

Nothing must be allowed to stand in the way of more and more production. For if we lie down on this job, we shall be trampled under the iron heel of fascism, like the conquered peoples of Europe and the slave labor of Germany, Italy and Japan. But if we set first things first, if we reach and surpass the production goals which the President has set, if we realize that every day, every hour and every minute counts, everyone of us can play our part to free the world from the horror which now besets it.

That is the spirit of President Murray's speech. That is the spirit of aroused American labor. With all that is in us, we'll work to win.

Votes for Victory

National unity to win the war will be the prime consideration of labor, as of all patriotic Americans, in the 1942 Congressional elections. Candidates will be judged on their record of service to the war effort and on the contribution which they can render to this main end.

In the present Congress there is a bloc of reactionaries which has concentrated on fighting labor, and so provoking disunity and disruption, instead of fighting the Axis.

These are the Congressmen who voted for the recent Smith bill to cut wages by abrogating overtime rates and the labor protections of 17 federal laws. It is the same crowd that has carried on a constant selfish vendetta against all progressive social legislation of benefit to the common people.

Registrations for the spring primaries are already taking place in many states. Labor must begin to mobilize its voting strength without delay. It must see that every eligible labor voter is registered and informed of his Congressman's record.

Labor has a duty to itself and to its country to see that the appeasers of Hitlerism and the labor-baiting promoters of disunity are replaced by true friends of labor, democracy and national unity. It must also see that those members of Congress who have stood the test are returned to office. Let's get ready now to vote for victory.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

COOTIES are a pretty serious matter to the man at the front. They are dangerous disease-carriers as well as a constant annoyance. But the soldier must disregard them at times when he goes over the top. The enemy's steel and shells demand first attention.

War calls for an acute sense of proportion. First things must come first, or there won't be any second or third things. This is as true behind the front as at the front. War production—and more and more of it—must be the first and all-compelling consideration. All else, no matter how important, is secondary to producing enough to win.

CIO President Murray's ringing response to the production goals set by President Roosevelt and the program announced by Production Chief Nelson leaves no doubt as to labor's attitude. He speaks the sentiments of millions of American working people who know their immediate concentration, above all else, must be on working to win the war.

But cooties? Labor has them, too. War profiteers, newspaper liars, anti-union Congressmen, and a whole host more. Disease-carriers? You've said it. Unintentionally perhaps, they spread the poison of disunity and discord with which Hitler weakens his intended victims.

There isn't anything in any war book that says you shouldn't do all you can to get rid of cooties. On the contrary, the soldiers' health and welfare demand they be dealt with whenever possible.

Labor is devoting its first attention to more production to smash the Axis. But that doesn't mean it won't swat the cooties every chance it gets.

Lately the cooties have been ganging up on American labor. They have been taking advantage of the preoccupation of our soldiers of industry with more and more war production.

Surveys of the daily press reveal a shameful and widespread campaign for wage-cutting, under the phoney pretext of "abolishing the 40-hour week." This is coupled with propaganda against wage increases, opposition to adequate benefits for the war unemployed, and calls for anti-labor laws.

The source of this campaign is not far to seek. The National Association of Manufacturers has been putting out distorted figures about a few minor unauthorized strikes of a few hours' duration, and other propaganda to whip up an anti-labor hysteria.

Employer dopesheets have been burbling about "rising anger against labor," about unions being "spoiled and cocky," about demands for legislation to "curb labor."

This campaign found its first expression in Congressman Howard Smith's attempted blitz against overtime pay, which would have destroyed the labor protections of 17 federal laws.

Labor, the administration and many friends of labor in Congress combined to expose the fraudulent claim that this Smith bill was designed to permit longer hours for more war production.

Actually there is no legal limit of working hours to 40. Much longer hours are worked in many war industries, and Secretary Perkins pointed out that "more than two-fifths of the plants in defense industries are operating their equipment for 160 hours a week or more."

The Smith bill would simply have cut the wages of war workers for the purpose of increasing already swollen war profits. It was defeated 226 to 62.

But this defeat of the cootie crowd has not disposed of them. The propaganda on which they feed has not stopped, but is rather increasing again.

Demands for anti-labor legislation are heard again and again in Congress. They come from a selfish minority of poll-tax Congressmen and stooges of the profiteers, who seek to take advantage of labor no matter how much this may hurt our war effort.

The purpose of these demands is clear. They are intended as a threatening club over labor's head every time it enters into wage negotiations that may reduce profits, or seeks fair conditions to promote labor morale and more production.

The stand of the CIO is also clear. It sets our country's welfare first. Its eyes are fixed on the goal of victory. It has pioneered in the demand for all-out war production. It is now responding wholeheartedly to the program of the President and Donald Nelson for stepping up production.

It will not allow its attention to be diverted from this purpose to disruptive internal conflict by all the selfish provocations of the cootie crowd.

But at the same time, labor's very concentration on producing to win the war demands that its health and vigor be maintained, and that it be protected against all who would impede its efforts. So let the cooties beware!

'We'll Work To Win'

Full Text of Pres. Philip Murray's Speech Pledging CIO to Greater War Output

THE PRESIDENT of the United States and Donald Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, have challenged labor and industry to speed up war production immediately, on a greater scale than has ever been attempted in any country in the history of mankind. I am going to accept this challenge tonight on behalf of the five million working men and women who make up the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Our President is now our Commander-in-Chief in a world war which threatens not only our nation's security and our very lives, but all our freedoms, our way of life, and our living standards, as no previous war has ever done. There can be no question of the response of true American working men and women to the demands of our Commander-in-Chief in such a war. It is the wholehearted and enthusiastic response of good soldiers of democracy, who know that everything depends upon united and disciplined support of our great leader.

But I can go much further than this. For I speak for the working people, who have more at stake in this war than perhaps any other section of our population. We are fighting nations whose economy is based on slave labor. In Germany, Italy and Japan there are no labor unions, as we know them. On the contrary, the first aim of any Nazi or Fascist movement is to destroy the labor unions. Labor leaders are stood up against the wall and shot. Workers who seek better conditions in the shop are hounded, beaten, placed in concentration camps or murdered.

Workers or Coolies?

Without union protection and without democracy, the workers are ground down to coolie wage levels and intolerable working conditions. They are treated as voiceless instruments of their dictators, their war lords and their industrialists. In every country conquered by Hitler and his gang, like conditions, or even worse, have been imposed on the working population. A similar fate will certainly be in store for the working people of America, if our fighting strength is not sufficient to crush the military might of the Axis.

We know that this is labor's war. We of labor must be more than loyal followers and patriotic citizens. We are and must continue to be leaders in the demand for more production and for every step that is necessary to win the war.

Certainly the history of the war to date leaves no room for complacency. Hitler has counted on the softness and the complacency of every country he has conquered. The Japanese have taken full advantage of our unpreparedness. Furthermore, the months which lie immediately ahead will be of crucial importance, particularly in the field of industrial production. Our whole country, and every man and woman in it, must be aroused and mobilized for total war, for a tremendous transformation from a peaceful people to a nation of warriors, if we are to turn the tide of battle from defense and retreat to offense and victory.

When I speak of a nation of warriors, I am thinking too of our industrial workers. Modern mechanized warfare calls for some 18 workers in industry for every man at the front. Each fighting man depends for his very life on the workers who produce his munitions, his arms and his supplies. They too must think as soldiers, bending their every effort for more and more production, for one purpose above all others — victory for our armed forces.

'Our Complete Support'

We pledge our complete and wholehearted support to our Commander-in-Chief, President Roosevelt, for the achievement of the production goals which he has set. In doing so, we are mindful that upon the shoulders of labor rests the primary responsibility for achieving these goals. We are also mindful that the experience of other countries has taught us other lessons besides the fate which lies in store for labor if Hitler wins. It has taught us that national unity can be undermined by appeasers and Quislings, whose subtle propaganda can be as dangerous as actual plant sabotage. We are determined that our country shall not suffer the fate of France or Norway, through the disruptive efforts of fifth columnists or self-proclaimed patriots who preach disunity.

At the present time, in particular, we must guard against carping critics of our President and of the program which he has initiated for winning the war. Constructive criticism we must have, to mobilize our full democratic effort. But let the appeasers and the men of faint heart beware of the wrath of America's workers, if their constant carping cloaks a purpose to disunite, to confuse and to sabotage our war effort.

Mr. Donald Nelson, our production chief, has just announced a concrete program for increasing and speeding up war production. We welcome this program most heartily and pledge our enthusiastic cooperation for placing it into execution. In fact, we of the CIO take pride in the knowledge that we have been pioneers and leaders in the demand for just such a program for mobilizing American industry for all-out war production.

The Industry Council Plan which the CIO advanced more than a year ago was designed for just this purpose. So too were the propoals advanced by our unions in all the major industries for early conversion to war production and industry-wide planning. We were the first to put forward concrete proposals for producing more steel, more aluminum, more copper, more airplanes and more of all the other goods and services that are needed for victory.

We take courage and renewed inspiration from the fact that our Production chief is now urging steps which we have long advocated. The joint labor-management plant committees which he proposes are directly in line with our Industry Council proposals, as is the whole spirit of the program which he advances.

Speaking now to the officers and members of our affiliated unions and councils, I call upon you to act without delay in the spirit of the call issued by our President and our War Production Chief. Many of you, I know, have already approached the managements in your respective plants with concrete proposals for joint effort to increase production. In many cases, where such committees have been set up, production has increased from 10 to 50 per cent.

In some cases, it is true, we have encountered reluctance on the part of management. But now that such committee planning for increased production has become the national policy of our government, I am sure that we can count on patriotic employers to join with labor in setting up functioning committees for the promotion of every constructive step to produce more and more. The goals cannot be set too high.

Production Chief Nelson has also advanced proposals for appropriate awards for the soldiers of industry as well as for our soldiers in uniform. This is a splendid idea. So too is his proposal for enlisting the spirit of American competition in achieving ever higher production quotas. I know that our CIO members will enter wholeheartedly into this spirit of patriotic competition.

Perhaps some of my non-labor listeners may be saying to themselves at this point: "All you have said is fine and dandy, but what is all this we read about strikes and about labor trying to take a selfish advantage?"

Let us meet this question squarely and frankly. Let us clear from our minds the fog of propaganda deliberately spread by profiteers, reactionaries and appeasers who are trying to take a selfish advantage over labor in this emergency. If we so examine the facts, we will find labor's position is firm and consistent, that winning the war must be our first consideration, and that nothing must be allowed to interrupt war production.

For Ending Strikes

Labor itself was the first, of its own free will, to advance an effective program for the ending of strikes. No sooner was war declared than both the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor, assembled in conference with representatives of industry and government, solemnly pledged themselves to set aside the strike weapon for the duration of the war. We also advanced proposals, accepted by the President, for the peaceful solution of all labor disputes, through mediation, conciliation and arbitration.

There has not been a single authorized strike in a war industry since that time, and all the efforts of the CIO and its unions have been directed to ending at once such minor incidents as have occurred. These incidents have been few and of the briefest duration, but they have been grossly inflated and misrepresented by selfish propagandists for the purpose of promoting anti-labor legislation. There is no force, not even that of a complete dictator, which can furnish any absolute guarantee that a man will not cease working under conditions which he finds intolerable. The best guarantee that can be given under a free system is the pledge of the workers' own democratically elected representatives and the assurance that collective bargaining will remedy grievances without the need to strike.

The CIO can point to a record of uninterrupted production by millions upon millions of industrial workers; and to the peaceful solution of thousands of grievances and disputes which might otherwise have led to stoppages, had there been no union on the job to prevent them. We are determined to maintain this record.

I am again calling the attention of our unions and our membership to the solemn agreement, to which we have voluntarily subscribed, that "there shall be no strikes or lockouts," and "all disputes shall be settled by peaceful means." This is our commitment to our President and to our country. I call upon all our unions, their officers and their members, to exercise the utmost patience and tolerance in adjusting all disputes. Proper channels are now provided for their peaceful adjustment. Support your country and your unions by seeing that not an hour of production-time is lost from any cause, until we win the war.

Production Chief Nelson has called for a 168-hour working week for the machinery of industry. We are wholeheartedly in favor of working our plant and equipment every hour of the week that it can be utilized. Our unions, in many cases, have been the first to call for 24-hour and seven-day-week production.

But human beings are not machines. Their efficiency depends upon reasonable working hours and adequate rest periods. Practical experience in Great Britain and other countries, under war conditions, has shown a sharp decrease in actual production when excessive hours were worked; and working hours have had to be reduced for the very purpose of increasing production.

In conclusion, I want to stress again and again to labor and to the public that America is today at the parting of the ways. If we lie down on the job, if we shirk, if we listen to the sly preachers of disunity and complacency, if we fail to back up our armed forces with all that is in us, we can go down to defeat, dishonor and the loss of all our liberties—to the complete blackout of civilization which Hitler and the Axis are fighting to bring about.

But if, on the other hand, the American people, and the working people in particular, are true to ourselves and to our country, if we stand loyally behind our President, if we devote our every thought and effort to more and more production, more effective civilian defense, and more and more support to our armed forces, we shall turn the tide of battle in these very days and weeks that lie ahead of us, to final and complete victory. Our destiny is in our hands—the hands of everyone of us.

To labor, and particularly to the members of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, whom I have the honor to represent, I say: Get on the job at once! Heed the call of our Commander-in-Chief and our country! Let our slogan be: WORK, WORK, WORK! PRODUCE, PRODUCE, PRODUCE!

CIO to U.S.: We'll Work To Win

announced a system of honor awards for workers who exceed their production quotas, on the basis that Uncle Sam's industrial soldiers are as important to the country's welfare as the men fighting in the front lines.

'TOTAL WAR'

"This is total war," the President wrote to Nelson. "We are all under fire—soldiers and civilians alike. No one is a spectator, we are all belligerents. To win, we must fight."

Our production this spring and summer—"the critical months of the war"—will be crucial, the Chief Executive soberly predicted. He added that "what has been done so far must be exceeded."

NELSON'S SPEECH

The Commander-in-Chief's directives were expanded by Nelson in a radio speech to the nation.

He reminded labor and industry that the right to collective bargaining, to free enterprise, to worship and to criticize, were being defended on our battlefronts. The fight on the front lines depends largely on the support from the production lines, Nelson pointed out.

"Ours is the greatest production job in history," he told the nation, and we "have but 10 months to go —304 days—in which to strengthen our striking power to a point where victory can come within our grasp."

The national program, Nelson told labor, "is no sly scheme to speed up men and machines for profit's sake," but a death struggle to save democracy.

To bring the need closer home, the government will set up output quota charts in every factory and every department, he said, "so that every man can see what lies ahead each day."

JOINT COUNCILS

Each joint labor-management committee will be asked "to provide machinery whereby each man may submit ideas and suggestions for doing the job better.

"These ideas and suggestions will be studied each week by the committees. Those found sound will be forwarded to Washington.

"Our engineering staff will examine them. Those proved valuable will be made available to other plants. Thus we tap a vast new reservoir of ideas, welding our productive genius into a united effort for victory."

Nelson said he is writing to every war production plant "asking them to set up joint management-labor committees within each of those plants to run this drive, to push production up to and beyond the President's goal."

Sen. Taft's Cousin Gets Shock!

Cincinnati, March 7—The CIO has broken into the industrial domain of the wealthy and influential Taft family of Cincinnati, of which Senator Robert A. Taft is a member.

After a six-month fight, the American Newspaper Guild succeeded in forcing—and winning—an election in the commercial departments of the Cincinnati Times-Star, daily newspaper published by the Tafts and the mouthpiece of the Republican Party in this city.

WON STIFF FIGHT

The Guild won exclusive bargaining representation for more than 150 employes after overcoming a strong paternalistic influence and last minute concessions to employes in the shape of wage increases and better working conditions. Anonymous circulars mailed to employes on the eve of the election, March 4, begged employes in tearful words not to "permit outsiders" to intrude into the happy family of the Times-Star.

Efforts to organize an "independent" union previously had bogged down in the face of the organizing drive managed by John Weilburg, Guild organizer, with the support of Robert Davidson, CIO regional director, and other local CIO leaders.

Copper, Longshore Plans Winning U. S. Approval

him, two from the ILWU and two from the waterfront employers.

The plan came after long agitation by the union led by Harry Bridges, which brought to light extremely inefficient handling of ships carrying war supplies. This inefficiency resulted from employer inability to install adequate machinery and failure to plan the longshore work for full production.

Fantastic stories of ships loading empty beer bottles consigned to Singapore, while war supplies waited on the docks, came to light as the result of the union's work. Even more serious conditions exist on the east coast, where in several instances arms-loaded ships bound for the Soviet Union have had to turn back because cargo was improperly stowed, making the ship unseaworthy.

The burning of the Normandie at her New York pier also revealed that the "shape-up," whereby men are forced to line up by the hundreds for a handful of jobs, was not only a huge waste of man-power but a potential source of sabotage, since almost any person has free access to the docks.

CIO'S HIRING HALLS

This problem does not exist on the west coast, where the CIO union has had the hiring hall system for several years under which the workers are assigned in rotation to the jobs as they come up.

The hope was expressed here that announcement of the west coast production plan by the Commission would result in cleaning up conditions on the east coast waterfront, where the AFL union has made no serious attempt to do away with the shape-up and other serious conditions making for inefficiency and waste.

Canadian Unions, Too, Want Labor-Industry Councils

Toronto, Ont., March 7—Proposals for joint industry-labor councils along lines suggested for the United States by President Philip Murray, were presented this week to Canadian Prime Minister Mackenzie King by the Canadian Congress of Labor, to which Dominion CIO unions are affiliated.

The Congress proposed greater representation on government bodies and industrial councils, full protection of the right to organize and a wage policy which would be determined by negotiations.

"Failure of the government to accept the cooperation offered by the organized workers of Canada contributed to labor unrest and lack of an effective war effort," the Congress group declared.

It asserted that on matters of price legislation "the labor movement has been almost completely ignored . . . at the present time the direction and control of war production is left entirely to industrial or financial executives and government employes, subject only to the control of the ministers involved."

Even while the Congress was appearing before the government to ask greater protection for union members, attacks on labor organizations were continuing in violent form. At Sudbury, Ont., home of the world's largest nickel mine, the International Nickel Corp., two organizers of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers were beaten so badly by goons that they required hospital treatment. Union headquarters were wrecked.

Phony 'Secrets' Bill Gets K.O. From Senate

WASHINGTON, March 7—A phony "war secrets" bill went into the limbo this week, following sharp criticism at Senate Judiciary Committee hearings by representatives of the American Newspaper Guild, CIO.

Proposed by Attorney General Biddle with the laudable intent of keeping governments secrets away from Axis agents, the bill in reality was framed in such a manner as to delight every minor bureaucrat having access to a "confidential" rubber stamp.

Following several days of hearing, the Senate group rejected the bill and said it would study possibilities of drafting a better substitute.

The bill would have placed a cloud over all government activities except official handouts, and would have barred reporters from exposing the seamy activities of some government executives.

Under the proposed laws, newspapermen would have faced possible jail sentences and heavy fines for printing unauthorized newspaper stories.

Kenneth G. Crawford, former head of the Newspaper Guild and now chairman of the Washington Guild's censorship committee, testified that the measure would empower any bureaucrat to stamp as "confidential" documents relating to a scandal in his department.

The Women's Corner

ANNOUNCEMENT of the distribution of sugar rationing cards before the end of March was greeted by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO as an important step towards victory.

Auxiliary women realize that adequate nutrition and high morale are essential to speeding up production in war industry, and that fair distribution of scarce commodities through rationing is essential to maintaining high morale.

They also realize that all industry which is not necessary to supplying essential consumer goods should be converted immediately to war industry. If consumer production is limited to just the amount actually needed by the people, there will be a danger of some people getting more than their fair share. Rationing is the answer to that problem, too.

The Executive Board of the Auxiliary Congress unanimously voted to urge extension of rationing to all goods in which there are shortages or expected shortages. They point out that only through rationing and sale of rationed commodities at a fixed retail price can we assure a fair share of the existing supply to each American.

To date, the Office of Price Administration has not moved to fix retail price ceilings except on radios. No word has been said about fixing the retail price of sugar when rationing begins. Consumers now are paying up to 10 cents a pound for this essential food. At that price there will undoubtedly be some families that won't be able to use all of their sugar coupons.

All auxiliaries are urged by the CIO Congress in the March 2 Washington News Letter to write at once to Leon Henderson urging the extension of rationing and fixing of retail prices.

The Minneapolis auxiliary has also established a Consumers Information Center at CIO Headquarters and is represented on the civilian defense coordinating committee of the CIO and AFL.

Landlord's Eviction Try Flops

Erie, Pa., March 7 (FP)—Landlords cannot evict tenants refusign to pay rent boosts without first going through a court hearing on the tenants' rights under the recently enacted price control law, Judge Elmer L. Evans has ruled.

The decision came in the form of a preliminary injunction against evictions in three cases selected by the fair rent committee. It may prove a test case under the law.

The ruling followed a vigorous campaign against rent profiteering by the Erie County Press, local CIO paper. The rent strike move was initiated at a city-wide tenants' meeting called in January by the Baldwin Tenants Assn., composed of tenants in apartments operated by George Baldwin. Monthly rent increases of $4 to $20 had just been imposed.

"SIT TIGHT"

F. J. Tenbuckle, chairman of the meeting, urged the tenants: "Sign no leases calling for increased rent, pay no increase following April 1, and sit tight."

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

The unAmerican Martin Dies must be getting more than a little nervous about the life of his labor-baiting, Hitler-loving Committee, judging from the tactics he has been following this week.

Nobody but a very nervous man would come out in the public press with a solemn revelation that Japan has had imperialistic designs on America for years. Nobody but a very nervous man would announce that he has indisputable evidence that attacks are being made on President Roosevelt by Axis agents. Nobody but a very nervous man would take an hour's time in Congress on a point of personal privilege to conduct a shouting, screaming attack on another Congressman who had the courage to criticize the Dies committee in a speech to a CIO convention.

All these things the unAmerican Mr. Dies has done this week. And there are good reasons for his being nervous. Labor and progressive forces all over the country have been giving Dies some of the heaviest weather he has ever experienced. The heavy weather should keep up and get heavier, because the Dies renewal will be up before Congress within a few days.

TRANSFERS

Pete Mosele, formerly Regional Director in both Newark, N. J., and New York, N. Y., will concentrate on New York alone as of this week. Thomas Shane, formerly Director in Wilmington, Del., will take over the Newark office, and E. D. Hodson, formerly organizer in Wilmington, will become Director there.

Gene Derrickson, former Wilmington Director, has enlisted in the U. S. Army, and was given a banquet this week by the local CIO. All his friends and fellow workers joined with me in wishing him the best of luck and urging him to knock as many fascists out of business as he can.

REPORTS

Breaking into the wealthy Taft families' little empire in Cincinnati was achieved by the American Newspaper Guild there, according to Regional Director Davidson who reports that the Guild won exclusive bargaining rights for 150 workers on the Taft-owned Cincinnati Times-Star.

Director Davidson also reports signing a contract for the United Shoe Workers in Selby, Ohio, involving more than 2,400 workers, another contract granting a five-cent increase at the Oxford-Miami Paper Co., a Newspaper Guild contract in Lima with increases from 10 to 87 per cent, a renewal of an SWOC contract granting a $500,000 increase to 600 workers, and other gains in the region.

Field Representative Thomas Cummings reports 300 of 500 workers signed up at the Heppenstal Mfg. Co. in Bridgeport, Conn., which persuaded the company to recognize the CIO and to start negotiations for a contract.

The Office and Professional Workers has won another election among movie workers in New York, this time at the offices of Loew's, where 324 workers voted for CIO and 137 for no union.

The Natl. Maritime Union has won a major victory in a tanker election on the west coast, where the NMU took 36 votes to 13 for the Sailors Union of the Pacific in the deck division and 65 to 10 for no union in the engine and stewards divisions. Nine ships are involved, and the victory gives the NMU a good chance to win a contract and to carry further elections in the future.

The Electrical and Radio Workers have won a two to one election in five plants of the Federal Telegraph Co. in Newark, by 551 to 243. Three major elections were won by CIO in Florida, according to Director Cowherd, marking the first real election gains for CIO in that area. The Packinghouse Workers have won their election at South St. Paul, Minn., by 169 to 59.

CORRECTION

According to Walter Harris, director of the Shoe Workers drive, our figures were incorrect on the Mt. Vernon, Ill. election. Corrected figures are: Shoe Workers, 466; against, 142; total eligible, 664; total cast, 611; blank, 2; void, 1.

Labor-Progressive Tie-up Killed Smith 'Sneak' Bill

WASHINGTON, March 7—The sneak attack on labor standards attempted by poll-tax Congressman Howard Smith and supported by the most reactionary Representatives in the House was turned into a rout when the Smith proposal to wipe out restrictions on the work-week was defeated by 226 to 62.

The defeat, which followed an almost equally overwhelming vote in favor of linking the Smith proposal to the war powers bill, was credited to a combination of CIO and administration opposition, plus a sudden realization of the competitive advantages that non-union manufacturers would have gained over employers who bargain collectively.

This advantage, it was pointed out, would have enabled employers in the sweatshop belt to drive wages down to coolie levels, since the workers' only protection, lacking a union contract, has been the wage-hour law. In addition, the experience of England has shown that an over-long work-week results in less production, rather than more, as workers become too tired to operate efficiently.

The upset for the anti-labor gang in the House came on the same day that President Murray wrote to House leaders denouncing the proposal as a threat to full war production as well as an attack on hard-won labor standards.

CONGRESSMEN OPPOSED

Leading members of Congress joined in denouncing the Smith proposal, Rep. McCormack, House Majority Leader, declared: "We are in a war and we do not want to lose our heads. The effect of this amendment is to suspend the efforts of 50 years of legislation which goes as far back as 1892 and affects 17 acts passed since that time."

Rep. Emmanuel Celler of New York pointed out that passage of the amendment "will not aid the war effort," but "will create disturbance, disorder, discord, dissatisfaction." Following him, Rep. McKeough of Illinois added that "I do not believe there is a member of this body who is a better American than 99.99 per cent of those who toil in this country."

SHABBY TREATMENT

"Shabby treatment for labor" was the way Rep. Healey of Massachusetts described the Smith proposal, declaring also that "on the record the loyalty and patriotism of the workers cannot be successfully assailed."

Mrs. Norton of New Jersey, chairman of the House Labor Committee, was equally emphatic, saying: "While we are waging a war for democracy, the author and supporters of this amendment are waging a war in support of industrial slavery, for that is exactly what this means."

Rep. Thomason pointed out that the Smith amendment would simply "place in the pockets of big rich contractors who laready have lump-sum contracts the large amount of money they would save by not having to pay time-and-a-half for overtime."

Rep. Casey of Massachusetts was another who spoke against the Smith bill, as were Reps. Keefe, Wright, Marcantonio, Voorhis, Weiss, Bardley, Fogarty, Dingell, Sacks, Eliot, McGranery, Butler, Robison, Kerr, Clason, Nurdick and McLaughlin.

Win Union Recognition In Lorain

Cleveland, March 7—Recognition of shop stewards and wage protection for workers in case of accidental plant shutdowns were won for employes of the American Stove Co. in nearby Lorain, it was revealed today by William Donovan, district director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

In addition, the union gained sole bargaining rights, time and a half for overtime, increased wages for rising living costs, retention of seniority by men serving in the armed forces and a liberal vacation plan.

Win Run-Off

Port Arthur, Tex.—A run-off election among boilermakers at the Texas Oil Co. refinery here was won by the CIO Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, with 63 votes to 47 for the AFL.

Form Labor-Employer Council At Ohio Aluminum Plant

By TED COX

CLEVELAND, Mar. 7—Tonight I saw the beginning of America's reply to Hitler's butchers in the only kind of language they can understand—tanks, gun, airplanes, pouring from America's high speed production lines and into the tough hands of the fighters now battling on the various fronts of the United Nations.

The specific event appeared to someone passing the door of the main auditorium in the CIO building as just another union meeting. But closer examination showed two unusual factors:

Only one item on the agenda—doubling of aluminum production for planes and other fighting materials.

In addition to the crowd of CIO members and their leaders, there were speakers representing the management of the company—the National Smelting Co. here, engaged primarily in the production of secondary aluminum ingots for plane production.

FOLLOWS MURRAY PLAN

Occasion of this meeting was announcement and membership adoption of a union-management production program modeled along the lines of that proposed by CIO President Philip Murray and the entire CIO for more than a year, but, as yet accepted by only a few war production factories in this country.

Company Vice President Abraham Reuben and Regional Director Alex Balint of the Castings Division, International Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers together announced that beginning immediately a committee of three union representatives would work jointly with a committee of three management representatives to expand production now.

The joint committee will immediately launch a study of every productive operation in the plant. All proposals from rank and file workers and departmental supervision for speeding production, eliminating waste, and increasing efficiency will go before this joint committee.

NAME OBJECTIVES

Objectives were set up in a resolution introduced at this union meeting by Company Vice President Reuben and seconded by CIO leaders and include:

1. To set to work immediately doubling our production of aluminum.

2. To work uninterruptedly and unremittingly until the enemy is defeated.

3. To guard against saboteurs within and without our ranks and to be wary of fifth columnists, whether in high or low places, who disparage your aims, and, either by pretended complacency or the doctrine of despair, attempt to discourage our efforts.

4. To buy bonds till it hurts—the enemy; to set up the necessary machinery at our plant for the continuous purchase of Victory Bonds.

Win Union Shop Pact In Cincy

Cincinnati, March 7—A union shop check-off contract covering 600 workers and giving them a general wage increase of 6.5 per cent was won by the International Fur and Leather Workers Union here.

The plant employs 450 Negro workers and 150 white workers. The average wage at the time organizing was started was 40 cents, and is now 64 cents. Negotiations were conducted by IFLWU Vice-President Fineglass, local Representative Lester Harting and a committee of workers headed by George Grisby.

Tennessee Thugs Face U. S. Indictments

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., March 7—(FP)—FBI agents have broken the Roane County flogging cases and evidence is ready for the federal grand jury in Greenville, Tenn., 71 miles east of here. Fifteen or twenty suppoenas have been served on Roane County residents to testify.

The evidence is expected to show that Oscar Wiles, organizer for the CIO United Mine Workers, and Homer Wilson, organizer for the International Union of Mine Mill and Smelter Workers, were kidnaped and flogged by thugs working under the direction and protection of Roane County police officers and officials of companies the CIO was trying to organize.

Wiles and Wilson were kidnaped after a union meeting in Harriman, Tenn., horribly flogged, tarred and left practically naked in the woods miles from the nearest town.

The Tennessee CIO, under the leadership of Paul Christopher, state director, started a campaign for the federal prosecution of the culprits.

As a result of the effective fight against terrorism, the CIO now has three well-organized unions in Roane County.

Bay State CIO Backs Murray, Lashes Dies

WORCESTER, Mass., Mar. 7—Enthusiastic support for Uncle Sam's war effort, and equally spirited criticism for foes of national unity like labor-baiting Rep. Martin Dies of Texas, featured the fifth annual convention of the Massachusetts Industrial Union Council here last weekend.

In numerous speeches and demonstrations, the 723 delegates made clear their determination to support any measure or policy which would help the nation's drive for victory over the Axis.

Keynoting the spirit of the meeting, Pres. Joseph Salerno declared:

"We come to this convention more united and more determined than ever before that Fascism, Nazism and Japanese aggression must die so that America and the labor movement may live. We will spare nothing to win this war."

"We must make this a people's war," he continued, "but in order to make this a people's war, we must give the working people a stake in this war. Instead our American tories want to destroy labor's gains. . . .

TORIES AID HITLER

"Those employers who do not cooperate and bargain collectively in good faith are helping Hitler. They discredit our form of government. These labor-haters help Hitler by preventing democracy from functioning. Those who interfere with the democratic process are the allies of Hitler in America.

"We must fight these fascists in disguise in our own backyard."

Shortly afterwards, the delegates heard a first-hand report on the reactionary plotting in Congress from Rep. Thomas Eliot, an outstanding progressive, who described the unsuccessful effort of southern tories and their allies to abolish overtime wages for overtime work.

Eliot minced no words as he singled out for special attack "that monstrosity of incompetency known as the Dies Committee."

"Dies has at last published his report" on Japan, the Bay State Congressman pointed out. "He says that he wanted to make it public last September and that the Administration prevented him. That is not true.

"I have received a letter from Atty.-Gen. Biddle saying 'There was never any attempt or suggestion that the Dies Committee was not permitted to reveal the facts last September.'

KEPT IT SECRET

"Thus Dies actually kept whatever knowledge he had secret—secret from the government and secret from the public, until three months after Pearl Harbor. Such a man obviously cannot be trusted to defend us against the Fifth Column."

In a unanimous resolution the convention later urged Eliot to remain in Congress—a bid for him to seek election to the Senate.

President Salerno's report to the delegates showed that the state CIO ranks have increased by one-third to 175,000 during the past year, with almost every union registering notable gains. Largest single local in the state is that of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers at the General Electric Co. in Lynn, which now numbers almost 20,000 members.

Support for Pres. Philip Murray's labor unity plan, which resulted in the creation of a six-man joint CIO-AFL board to meet with President Roosevelt on war labor policies, won strong endorsement from the convention.

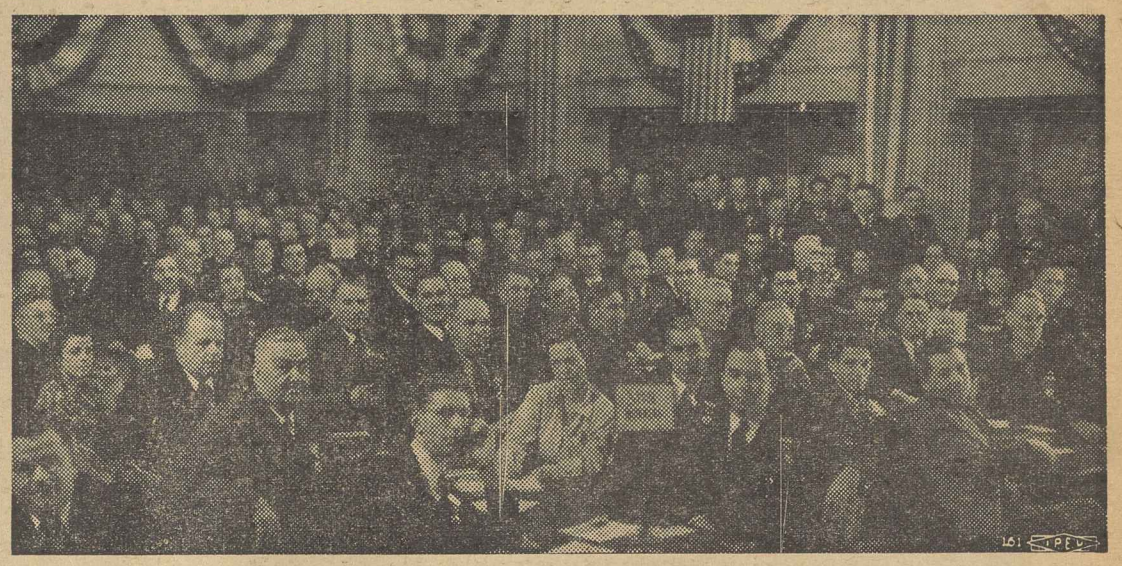
The resolution on war supported the nation's victory effort and urged the government act to create of a second front in Europe, win equal treatment for Negroes, scotch destructive tactics of American appeasers and seek to guarantee greater democracy in the future for oppressed colonial peoples.

In other actions the delegates urged passage of the Pepper anti-poll tax bill; urged workers to contribute an hour's pay to the National CIO War Relief Campaign; hit "business as usual" policies of the Bethlehem Ship Building Corp.; urged President Roosevelt to pardon Earl Browder, Communist leader; asked liberalization of state unemployment compensation funds and allotment by the federal government of $300,000,000 for workers made idle by plant conversion; and pledged support to James Landis, former Harvard Law School dean who now heads the Office of Civilian Defense.

SALERNO RE-ELECTED

Pres. Joseph Salerno, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; 1st Vice-Pres. Salvatore Camelo, United Rubber Workers; and Francis Carmichael, United Mine Workers, legislative agent, were re-elected without opposition. Albert Fitzgerald, head of the Electrical Workers, declined to run for re-election as secretary-treasurer. He was succeeded by J. W. Belanger, Textile Workers Union, as secretary, and by Leo Morrissey of the UE, as treasurer. George Markham, American Newspaper Guild, was elected assistant legislative agent. Nineteen vice-presidents were also named.

Others who addressed the meeting were Gov. Saltonstall; Michael F. Widman, first president of the council and now organization director for District 50, United Mine Workers; Franz Daniel of the clothing workers; and A. H. Myers, regional director of the Labor Board.



BAY STATE CIO: Massachusetts CIO, meeting in convention at Worcester last week-end, pledged full support to the preservation of democratic rights at home and the smashing of fas cism abroad. Lower picture shows some of the 723 delegates in the flag-festooned hall. Abo ve are the newly-elected officers. Pres. Joseph Salerno, re-elected to a third term, is at the speaker's stand.

Use Fishermen for Defense Of Coastal Area, Union Asks

SEATTLE, Wash., March 7—Prompt integration of the fishing fleet into coastal defense is being urged by the CIO International Fishermen & Allied Workers. The recent shelling of the California coast by enemy submarines, says J. F. Jurich, president of the Fishermen's union, shows the need of the practical patrol plan advanced by the union for more vigilant patrol of waters close to U. S. shores.

The California fishing fleet alone, he declares, has more than a thousand vessels, part of the trawler type, averaging 65 to 100 feet in length, and also small power boats, 35 to 60 feet. All Japanese and other enemy aliens have now been eliminated from the fleet under government direction.

"Approximately 3,000 trained fishermen whose loyalty is unquestioned are now available," Jurich declared. "They are practical, all-around seamen with an extensive and minute knowledge of coastal waters. They are rugged, resourceful and dependable.

"The Coast Guard Auxiliary and Reserve Act of 1941 could serve as the basis for setting up the patrol with a special officer assigned from each Naval District to work with the fishermen's organizations in working out details of the Fishermen's Coastal patrol.

"Such organization will at the same time provide the best guarantee for continuation of fishing along coastal waters. To permit the fishing industry to disintegrate at this time would not only jeopardize our war effort by lack of vital fish food but would cripple the industry for many years to come by permitting the trained personnel and fishing fleet to break up.

LONG TRAINING

"Skilled fishermen are the very backbone of the industry. These men cannot be trained hurriedly, no more than any army springs into action overnight. Generally speaking, it requires about five years' training to qualify as a fisherman and many more years to become a first-calss fisherman."

The union urges the establishment of a central agency with a coordinator in charge, and industry regional councils with labor and employer representation covering specific branches of the industry, to handle the immediate problems facing fishermen.

"Establishment of a central agency by executive order," Jurich declared, "would provide the authority for speedy and efficient handling of these problems and for the coordination of all elements involved in production, management, labor and local authorities of the Army, Navy and state agencies.

"The coordinator would be empowered to administer the work and to act on a regional or state basis whenever necessary to achieve the maximum production of food fish to beat the Axis."

CIVILIAN DEFENSE:

Brophy Outlines Labor's OCD Tasks

Buffalo, N. Y., March 7—The workers' education movement should assist in bringing home to workers the need for a well-rounded civilian defense program, John Brophy, CIO director of industrial union councils, told a Workers Education Conference sponsored by the Buffalo YMCA.

After reciting the needs for labor cooperation with OCD on matters such as air-raid protection, plant protection against sabotage, better housing and general community planning, Brophy said:

"It would be unfortunate indeed if the Tory mind, which is having such a field day in Congress at the present time, were to succeed in its efforts to prevent the OCD from concerning itself with matters of community welfare and community production.

"Organized labor strongly supports the federal program of civilian defense along these lines."

Brophy described the recent meeting between government and labor officials on union participation in OCD,

Pledge Support In Michigan

Detroit, March 7—Cooperation of the 500,000 members of the CIO in Michigan with the Office of Civilian Defense was asked in a Sunday broadcast sponsored by the Michigan CIO Council. The appeal was made on the Council's regular weekly radio program.

"Americans must realize this is a real war, and not a push-over," the speaker said. "The CIO is convinced it would be a tragic blunder for Michigan folks to assume that we shall never hear the cry of the air raid siren, the whistle of the bombs, or the roar of the flames that follow bombing."

Back Moving Of Coast Aliens

San Francisco, March 7—California CIO support for "exclusion of aliens of enemy nationality from restricted military and strategic areas" was voiced here at recent hearings of the House Inter-state Migration Committee by Louis Goldblatt, secretary of the state industrial union council.

The CIO official coupled his support for proper defense precautions, however, with a sharp warning against the growing campaign by "the Hearst press and fifth columnists" to "sidetrack the war effort of this nation from an all-out fight against fascism to a war against the so-called 'yellow menace.'"

Golblatt expressed pleasure at seeing the federal government "step in and handle the problem" of safeguarding American territory, and observed that "we haven't seen any state or city officials competent to deal with it. Local authorities have joined the wolf-pack of race-baiters."

"The efforts of the federal government should not be based on making distinctions by race, nationality or citizenship," he added. "We favor a campaign that will detect sabotage no matter what its source and from where there will be no immunity by virtue of wealth, poltical connections or position in society."

Labor Wants 'No Monopoly'

St. Louis, March 7—Labor wants no "monopoly" or special privileges in Civilian Defense, but insists that it be a "truly representative organization in no fashion dominated by any special group or interest," Secretary Luther Slinkard of the St. Loius CIO pointed out in a radio address here.

"The OCD recognizes that labor's role in the war is of vital importance to maximum production, adequate protection and effective volunteer participation," he added.

"Labor's responsibilities require that labor shall be adequately represented in the determination of policy and in the administration of civilian defense."

CIO Wins Vote At Arms Plant

Rock Island, Ill., March 7—An election won by the Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee at the Fairfax ordnance plant here brings the union its third victory in less than three months. The vote was 326 for the FEWOC to 186 for an AFL union, and 50 for neither.

Previous elections were won at the Richmond International Harvester Works and Caterpillar Tractor.

Back Strike In Canada Motor Plant

Detroit, March 7—Strikers at the plant of the Motor Products Company in Windsor, Ontario, have the complete support of the CIO United Automobile Workers, President R. J. Thomas said here this week.

The UAW-CIO's pledge of no strikes during the war does not apply to Canada, Thomas declared, as the Dominion government has not created any "adequate machinery for conciliation and arbitration."

The UAW president pointed out that the Dominion Industrial Disputes Investigation Act is "a completely ineffective instrument" which has been denounced by both CIO and AFL unions in Canada "as a menace to war production."

More than 300 of the 340 workers in the plant are members of the UAW, Thomas said. The local has been trying to negotiate an agreement since last November.

Murray's Plea Wins Big Response From U.S. Workers

(See Stories on Inside Pages)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 14—In a fast-moving follow-up to Pres. Philip Murray's nationwide radio address last week, CIO's millions of workers acted this week to attain quick establishment of joint labor-management production councils in every organized plant in the United States.

Murray's speech was an acceptance of the challenge of Donald Nelson, War Production Board chairman, for the nation to outproduce the Axis. From scores of industrial communities where the tools of war are being shaped came a flood of messages indicating thorough acceptance of Nelson's plea and of President Murray's advice to labor to "Work, Work, Work, Produce, Produce, Produce."

The CIO leader sent letters to every affiliate urging that they take the initiative in getting the production councils formed immediately.

In New York, the United Electrical, Radio & Machinery Workers announced that the committees are already being established in 30 of the company's plants, employing 65,000 workers. In Detroit, the United Automobile Workers have asked the management of General Motors, one of the largest war producers, for formation of the councils.

33-Month NLRB Trial In Last Gasp

By TRAVIS K. HEDRICK

TULSA, Okla., Mar. 14—Books have been closed on the longest case in the history of the National Labor Relations Board, and the Oil Workers International Union, CIO, is expecting a back-pay award of two million dollars against the Mid-Continent Petroleum Corp. after 33 months of testimony.

Growing out of a strike called Dec. 22, 1938, when approximately 600 walked out, the Mid-Continent case has hung up new records in the history of labor relations.

On May 18, 1939, the NLRB began hearings on charges against Mid-Continent. One complaint was that the company had provoked the strike by hiring armed guards to intimidate union men and by condoning many unfair labor practices of company foremen.

With a single exception, involving the testimony of a sick Mid-Continent official, the case was completed Feb. 28, 1942. The record totaled 51,500 pages of testimony, amounting to 12,875,000 words, making a 10-foot stack of bound volumes. There are also 1,179 exhibits for the company and 311 for the NLRB.

In its defense, the company used 708 witnesses, with hundreds called to the stand a second and third time. One witness, Personnel Director George Bush, made eight appearances.

Meanest Trick of Week:

Oil Firm Cuts Pay of Ten As They Fight Plant Fire

Port Arthur, Tex., March 14—The guy who steals candy from babies, or robs blind men of pennies, has a competitor. It's the Atlantic Refining Co. here.

Twenty-three workers were injured in a recent explosion at the company's local plant. Those who weren't injured plunged into the job of trying to control and extinguish a serious fire that followed the blast.

While the men were battling the flames, Atlantic's bookkeeping office was busy reclassifying the jobs of the workers and changing their pay rates.

The bookkeeping gymnastics saved Atlantic a tidy sum of money—it cut the pay of 10 Negro workers from their regular 70 cents an hour rate to just 58 cents, classifying them as firefighters.

Apparently the company figured that physical effort of combatting an oil fire was worth less than the more skilled task of cracking crude oil.

Greetings To MacArthur

The message was sent to the War Department in Washington for transmission to Gen. MacArthur.

Want U. S. To Ration Radio Sets

Washington, Mar. 14—The CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers repeated its proposals for rationing of civilian radios to the War Production Board and the Office of Price Administration this week.

Pointing out that more than 3.5 million families are without radios, and that 800,000 new families each year will be without them now that manufacture has stopped, Russ Nixon, Washington representative of the union, called on OPA head Leon Henderson to start a rationing plan at once.

"It is highly desirable in the interests of civilian defense and morale that we come as near as possible to providing radio reception facilities for every American family," Nixon said in renewing the rationing proposal.

Screen Guild Wins Election

New York, Mar. 14—By a vote of 215 to 43, white collar employes at Columbia Pictures Corporation's home office, warehouse, and exchange designated the Screen Office and Professional Employes Guild, Local 109, UOPWA (CIO) as their collective bargaining agent in the NLRB election held on Feb. 25.

Thousands Honor Mooney For Service to Labor

SAN FRANCISCO, Mar. 14—Tom Mooney, the American worker who had to wait 23 years for justice, was honored in death as he had been in life for his devotion to the workers' cause.

Five thousand San Francisco unionists—from the CIO, the AFL, and the Brotherhoods—paid last tribute to the great labor martyr in moving ceremonies March 8 in the Civic Auditorium.

It was the sort of funeral service that Tom Mooney would have wanted. Labor's Unity for Victory Committee took charge. The state labor commissioner presided. Pres. Harry Bridges of the longshoremen's union and John F. Shelley, head of the AFL city council, voiced the respect of the people they represented for Mooney and his ideal of greater democracy and justice.

Warren K. Billings, framed at the same time as Mooney in 1916, was another speaker.

The service was symbolic of the unity of labor in California, a unity which Tom Mooney worked for during his 23-year stretch behind San Quentin's prison walls.

ARRESTED IN 1916

Mooney went to jail in 1916 because he was a militant organizer of workers. He was freed in 1939 by Gov. Culbert L. Olson because through the long years labor remembered Tom Mooney and continuously demanded his freedom.

After his release, Mooney made a nationwide speaking tour, which was interrupted by the illness he contracted in prison. That illness kept him in bed much of the time since his release, and his death came after another in a long series of operations.

Tom Mooney was framed on a dynamiting charge during Preparedness Day, 1916. Three of his friends were acquitted, but Mooney and Billings were convicted. Billings received a life sentence; Mooney was ordered to the electric chair.

SENTENCE COMMUTED

Pres. Wilson commuted the sentence to life in prison as the details of the frame-up first began to emerge. Quickly the protest against his imprisonment became world-wide, and for 23 years Mooney was a symbol of injustice in a land dedicated to democracy and justice under the law.

One by one the people connected with his trial recanted their stories, or expressed belief that Mooney was innocent. But because of a quirk in California's jurisprudence, he was unable to get a new trial and could only seek redress through involved legal processes.

FRAMED BY STOOL

The man behind the framing of Mooney was Martin Swanson, a former Pinkerton operator, scabherder and dynamite artist who had been placed on the undercover squad of the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. Only seven hours after an explosive-laden suitcase had spread death on Market St., Swanson was in secret conference with Dist. Atty. Charles M. Fickert.

Unknown even to the police, Swanson was put on the city payroll as a special investigator. Pres. Wilson's mediation commission later found that the "utilities undoubtedly sought to 'get' Mooney" and that "it was Swanson who engineered the investigation which resulted in Mooney's prosecution."

EXPOSED BY PAPER

The exposure of the frame-up was first undertaken in April, 1917, by Editor Fremont Older of the San Francisco Bulletin. But despite the exposure, innumerable hearings, and the confessions of perjured witnesses, governor after governor refused to pardon him until Culbert Olson went into office in 1939.

It was an unforgettable scene as Mooney received his freedom in the state capitol on Jan. 7, 1939.

Asking the prisoner to stand, Olson said:

"Tom Mooney, I am not only convinced of your innocence, but I believe your life's purpose has been to help the underprivileged and bring about the solidarity of labor. I now hand you a full and unconditional pardon."

CARRY ON

Let WLB Settle Steel Case, Murray Tells 'Axe-Grinders'

New York, March 14—CIO Pres. Philip Murray lashed out this week at "silly statesmen" who are trying to muddy the waters in the Steel Workers Organizing Committee dispute with Little Steel over higher pay and union security.

Defending the patriotism of the nation's millions of war workers, Murray denounced propaganda seeking to picture the steel union's demands as ruinous or injurious to the nation.

"As the responsible head of a great national union, I should not place myself in the position of attempting to seek for labor any special consideration in this great national emergency," the CIO leader declared.

"I would be a poor and untrustworthy labor leader — I would be a devil at work—if I attempted to impose on America a wage structure that would injure America or injure America's ability to win this war."

RAPS PROPAGANDA

Murray spoke at a communion breakfast of the Association of Catholic Trade Unionists, together with a number of labor and church leaders. His criticism of government officials was directed particularly at Price Administrator Leon Henderson and at William Leiserson of the NLRB, both of whom have attacked the union's demands.

He described Henderson's argument that wages should be held to a stationary level as "highly unfair and based on false reasoning", charging that the price boss failed to consider the rising trend of prices and the debts that workers must pay off.

Leiserson's statements about the Little Steel dispute also came in for criticism, with Murray assailing the NLRB member's suggestion that questions of union shop and higher wages should be left to Congress rather than to the War Labor Board.

CITES NEWSPAPERS

Prominent newspapers have been neglecting the war in their zeal over attacking labor's demands, Murray said.

"There seems to be an organized press seeking openly to attain what is commonly known as the Henderson objective," the CIO leader remarked.

"A distinguished member of the Cabinet said the other day he did not know what Henderson was talking about, and that he was not sure Henderson did either."

Federal Workers Tender Job Plan

WASHINGTON, Mar. 14—A broad plan to achieve full war efficiency and production in the largest war industry in the United States—the Federal Government establishment—was sent last week to President Roosevelt and all ranking Administration officials by the United Federal Workers of America.

The plan called for appointment of a "Donald Nelson"—a Federal Administrator of Personnel—to coordinate the activities of the 1,800,000 workers now on the Government payroll. The Administrator would be aided in an advisory capacity by a Labor-Management Victory Committee, composed of Administration representatives and representatives of the Federal employe unions—on the theory of the Murray Industry Council Plan that thousands of eyes on the job can see more than any administrator.

"No centralized planning exists today," the UFWA stated. "The results are chaos, waste, duplication of effort, needless personnel in some departments and long hours of overtime in understaffed agencies. The confusion gives ammunition to such reactionary groups as the Byrd Committee, which regard the war effort through the small end of a mental telescope and seek to destroy socially-necessary agencies rather than convert their experience to the war program. Business-as-usual, or Business-before-Victory, must be banished within the Government as well as without."

12-POINT PROGRAM

Emphasizing its full support for the steps already taken by President Roosevelt to put the Federal service on a war footing, the union outlined a 12-point program with labor participation. The points included subcontracting of work from the new war agencies to older agencies with facilities already organized to handle it, transfer of employes to the war agencies and utilizing talents and previous training of employes.

The UFWA called for an end to racial discrimination in the Federal service.

Brig. General Philip B. Fleming, Administrator of the Federal Works Agency, wrote the UFWA that he considered its proposal for establishment of an Administrator of Federal Personnel "deserving of serious consideration." Harry B. Mitchell, President of the U. S. Civil Service Commission, is conferring with the union on establishment of a national labor-management Victory Committee.

British Labor Wages Fight For Own 'Murray Plan'

By ARTHUR KINGSBURY
Federated Press

LONDON, Feb. 18 (By Airmail)—The demand that workers should have a say in war production is growing throughout Britain. For some months, Labor Minister Ernest Bevin has made no secret of his belief that industry was failing to use the best brains of its skilled workers and technical experts.

He pressed employers to get together with the workers on a voluntary basis, but had little success. Sir Walter Citrine, secretary of the British Trades Union Congress, who has sharply disagreed with Bevin many times, is in full agreement on this issue.

The employers so far are not playing. The Engineering Employers Federation, their key body, has always fought violently against any encroachment on what it calls "managerial rights". Existing union agreements say that works committees with power to discuss matters of common interest may be set up, but none of the big firms has consented.

BEVIN SEEKS CONFAB

Now Bevin has succeeded in arranging a discussion between the Engineering Employers and the Amalgamated Engineering Union, the chief union concerned. So far, little progress has been made.

Next step will be a meeting between representatives of the Trade Union Congress' general council and the British Employers Confederation, representing all Britain's main industries.

BOSSES ON SPOT

The employers are in a tight spot, for Bevin has big powers in his pocket. Under the essential work order, he can tie workers to their jobs at wages agreed between the unions and the employers, but he can demand return concessions from employers.

So far he has insisted on welfare and canteen facilities for the workers. Now he is threatening to force establishment of a joint production committee in every factory.

This committee would have access to all facts. Its sole job would be to suggest means for improving war output.

Incidentally, it was the outspoken declaration of the Soviet trade union delegation which visited Britain recently that brought the production question into nation-wide discussion. These Russian workers from the beleaguered factories of Moscow and Leningrad, from the Donetz coal mines and the Baku oil wells, captured the imagination of millions of people hitherto unconcerned with industrial problems.

Their blunt warning that production could be speeded up if the skill of the workers was utilized, struck home. Millions of unionists have awakened to the fact that Britain needs her own Stakhanovite movement if war production is to reach the peak point necessary to defeat fascism.

The employers are fighting a rearguard action. They say that even if they agree to joint committees, nonunionists as well as unionists must choose workers' representatives. The unions are fighting for the principle that only unionists should stand or vote in the elections.

Canadian Auto Strikers Demand Govt. Action

WINDSOR, Ont., March 14—Fighting against a government run-around, 300 Motor Products strikers here were looking to Canadian labor for full support this week in the only strike in North America endorsed by the UAW-CIO.

The management has refused to date to reinstate the workers, although requested to do so by the Minister of Labor. The workers said they would only return if the dispute was arbitrated immediately. They have been waiting for the establishment of a conciliation board under Canada's 25-year-old Industrial Disputes Investigation Act since last November.

They walked out when conditions became unbearable and a company-appointed stooge committee told a Government board it didn't want a cost-of-living bonus. The management refused to deal with a committee elected by the workers which was composed solely of UAW members. The company reversed the democratic procedure and named those at the bottom of the poll.

The strikers' position was bolstered this week when the UAW won an overwhelming victory in a Government supervised election at Auto Specialties plant here. The vote was 393 for UAW and 157 for a company union.

President R. J. Thomas of the UAW scotched newspaper interpretations of his quarterly statement as being a rebuke of the Motor Products strikers by declaring that they had "complete support of the UAW-CIO."

"In the United States the union has given a pledge that there will be no strikes for the duration of the war. However, we cannot enter into any such agreement covering Canadian plants at this time. The Dominion Government has not as yet created any adequate machinery for conciliation or arbitration of industrial disputes," he said.

Break for Boys

Washington — (FP) — More than 10,000 Western Union messengers throughout the U. S. will get increased compensation from $10.42 to $20.80 a year for use of their bicycles in the company's service, the wage-hour division announced today.

Murray Talk Acclaimed By Labor

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Mar. 14—A rousing, determined response to CIO Pres. Philip Murray's plea for greater war production swept into the nation's capital this week from the ranks of labor, industry and government.

Shortly after Murray finished his radio speech, March 6, the telegrams began to pour into national CIO headquarters, and by week's end it was clear that his advice to labor—"Work, Work, Work, Produce, Produce, Produce"—had struck a popular chord.

"Our destiny is in our hands—the hands of every one of us," Murray told labor and the nation, and he coupled with it a prediction that "if we devote our every thought and effort to more and more production . . . we shall turn the tide of battle in these very days and weeks that lie ahead of us, to final and complete victory."

AUTO UNION ACTIVE

From the heart of the nation's automotive industry, Pres. R. J. Thomas of the auto workers union voiced warm endorsement of the CIO leader's speech.

"The members of the UAW-CIO can perhaps do more than the members of any other single union in putting the victory production drive over," he declared. "We must show that labor stands foremost in the nation's efforts to win the war."

"Rest assured that the Aluminum Workers of America will do everything possible to cooperate with your program," commented AWA Pres. N. A. Zonarich.

From Pittsburgh, Pres. Patrick Fagan of District 5, United Mine Workers, hailed Murray's call for action. "District 5 is with you and our government 100% in this great American program," he wired the CIO leader.

American seamen will keep our production sailing, Murray was assured by the Natl. Maritime Union through its Vice Pres., Frederick Myers.

"Your speech last night was a real inspiration to all American people," he telegraphed. "American seamen in particular will follow your leadership wholeheartedly by emphasizing more than ever that we will keep them sailing."

WEST COAST PLEDGE

From the West Coast, the San Francisco-Oakland Newspaper Guild sent a pledge that "Pacific coast members promise you renewed effort." "Labor in Philadelphia will carry out your thoughts and recommendations," declared George Craig, CIO regional director. "The workers are standing firm on solid pledge that no strike will hinder the war effort and are accepting your slogan," said Pete Mosele, regional director in New York.

Kenneth Cole, secretary of the Toledo, Ohio, CIO council sent assurances to Pres. Murray "that we subscribe entirely to the thoughts which you expressed, and will do everything possible to carry to a successful conclusion the requests that you enunciated.

"We stand ready to meet the enemy on every front," said Pres. Joseph Curran of the Greater New York CIO, speaking for 500,000 union members. "We will produce, produce, produce for the great offensives the United Nations must now initiate."

There were messages from all sections of the country, and from persons in various walks of life—bank presidents, corporation executives, judges and high government officials. All praised the CIO position.

And as the week drew to its close, unions in hundreds of plants were preparing to fulfill a long-time goal of organized labor — equal representation on joint union-management councils, devoted to improving production for the men at the front and for spreading industrial democracy throughout the nation.

Form Joint Councils At Westinghouse

NEW YORK, Mar. 14—Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., one of the nation's biggest corporations, has already agreed to joint labor-management production councils.

The CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, whose contract covers 65,000 Westinghouse employes in 30 plants, said the councils will be established immediately in order to spur output for the nation's military machine.

All locals in the company's system were notified of the agreement by James Matles, UE director of organization and were asked to meet immediately with plant managers to work out details.

TOP COORDINATION

Local union representatives will coordinate their efforts through the UE's national office, which in turn will operate in conjunction with the corporation's national management as a kind of top coordinating council.

The UE's general executive board first requested establishment of the production councils during its meeting last December.

The Westinghouse agreement was reached during preliminary national contract negotiations. The union said that "in view of the urgency of the situation, and because we already have more than one hundred such war production councils in successful operation in other plants, it was decided by company and union not to delay this step until formal contract negotiations are completed, but to do it now."

War production councils have already been placed in operation at a number of New York area plants under contract with the UE—including Ford Instrument Co., which has twice won the Navy's "E" award, Fairchild Aviation, Mergenthaler Linotype and many others.

Auto Union Asks GM For Councils

Detroit, Mich., Mar. 14 — Full worker participation in a joint labor-management production committee was demanded of the General Motors corporation by the CIO United Automobile Workers of America in a statement issued by George F. Addes, secretary-treasurer of the UAW-CIO.

Addes warned that the "obvious result, if not the intent" of the bonus plan for production suggested by GM would be to "make all production proposals from workers the private property of management" and thus endanger production increasing proposals that might not give "sure evidence of increasing profits."

In this connection Addes said, "some of the most important proposals for increasing production will not necessarily bring greater profits to management.

UAW'S CONTRIBUTION

"The proposals of the UAW for vast increases in the arms production of the auto industry . . . are now recognized as a historic contribution to the Victory program. And these proposals were ridiculed and attacked . . because they endangered the 'business and profits as usual' position of management."

At the same time Walter P. Reuther, director of the union's GM department, requested the corporation to meet with the union and representatives of the War Production Board to set up the joint labor-management defense plant committees proposed by Donald M. Nelson, director of the WPB.

Criticize 32-Hour GM Work Week

Indianapolis, Ind., March 14—Charging that the Chevrolet Body Works here has only 60 per cent of its employes working and that they are on a 32-hour week, a committee of 15 members of Local 226, United Automobile Workers, lodged a protest with Governor Schricker.

Walter Frisbie, secretary-treasurer of the Indiana CIO Council, who accompanied the committee, said that the union protested against this "idleness of men and machines when both are critically needed to produce the materials that will win the war."

Electrical Parleys Recessed

New York, Mar. 14—Negotiations for renewal of union contracts with the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company and the General Electric Company, covering a total of 175,000 employes were recessed here March 12 following preliminary discussions between the managements and representatives of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America.

Scheduled to be resumed at a date "to be determined by the union," the conferences included a general explanation of the union's demand for "union security" clauses, improved benefits for employes who enter the nation's armed services and a general wage increase of 12½ cents an hour.

CIO Pokes New 'Snipe' Proposal

Washington, March 14—"Petty sniping and labor baiting" of the kind in Rep. (Polltax) Vinson's bill to register unions and pry into their affairs is particularly out of place when national unity for all-out war production is needed, Pres. Philip Murray said this week in testimony presented to the House Judiciary Committee here.

The bill, slipped in by the same Georgia polltaxer who tried last year to put over compulsory arbitration and freezing of the open shop, would force unions to publish facts of use to anti-union employers and to publish any other information that the Secretary of Commerce might conceivably call for.

BARES REAL FACTS

Murray's testimony, read to the committee by CIO Sec. James B. Carey, knocked down the false contention that the bill would be a check on "labor racketeering," pointing out that the CIO has never permitted rackets to flourish in its own ranks and that mere publication of financial statements—which are given to members as it is—would do nothing to stop it where it does exist.

Labor is rallying wholeheartedly behind the war effort and is making all-out production possible, Murray declared, adding that government regimentation would produce the same conditions of enslaved labor under which Axis workers suffer.

"The substance of HR 6444 has been regularly recognized in the past as a proposal without justification and as an affirmative attack on labor," he said.

"In the present crisis it is far more; it is an attack on the morale of our people—an attack on the national war effort."

Donald Duck Film Offered

Washington, Mar. 14—By the time you read this, deadline for filing 1941 income tax returns will have passed—but if you still want to be amused and inspired by Mr. Donald Duck, the Treasury Dept. can help you out.

Donald was the hero of a favorite movie of the season, the Walt Disney production of "The New Spirit," which showed how taxes go to pay for more and more production to beat the Axis.

The film was shown in practically every movie house in the land. Now it's available in 16 mm. film, the kind that's used in amateur projectors. If you want to show Donald at your meeting, the Treasury Dept. will be glad to lend you a print.

Let's Go!

The response from every section of the CIO to President Philip Murray's recent broadcast on stepping up war production leaves no doubt that he spoke the mind of the whole membership. "Count on us, we'll work to win," is the unanimous tone of this response.

In every plant throughout the land, the workers are ready and eager to back up our men at the front to the limit; and to enable them and our allies to turn the tide of battle to a great offensive of the free peoples for speedy victory.

A plan of action for organized effort is now available through the joint labor-management committees called for by Production Chief Nelson.

Such Victory Production Committees offer a splendid opportunity to CIO unions and their members to make their full contribution to more and more production. President Murray has urged their establishment in every plant without delay. Here's our chance to take the offensive on the production front. Let's go!

Wages And Production

One of the main essentials for full production is that wage payments should be sufficient to maintain the health, vigor and morale of the workers and their families.

The recent flood of propaganda against wage increases has been designed to conceal the following facts:

(1) That past wage levels have been insufficient to maintain the health and efficiency of most workers. In 1941, 69% of American families received less than the $2,400 estimated necessary to maintain the normal family of five in health; and 34% received less than $1,000.

(2) That rising living costs have made serious cuts in the real wages of American workers, and that this process is constantly growing worse.

(3) That the workers' productivity (output per man-hour) has increased greatly, entitling them to a proportionate increase in compensation.

(4) That profits have increased far more than wages, and are at near-record heights. Corporate profits after taxes in 1941 were 47% above 1940 and nearly double those of 1939—fully sufficient to permit higher wages without increasing prices and the danger of inflation.

Present CIO wage demands therefore will be seen to be essentially reasonable in the light of such facts. More than this, such increases are necessary to maintain productive efficiency and war morale.

On Working Hours

In approving the goal of a 168-hour working week for the machinery of industry, CIO President Murray pointed out that "human being are not machines; their efficiency depends upon reasonable working hours and adequate rest periods."

His contention that production suffers when excessive hours are worked, is borne out by a recent report of the British Chief Inspector of Factories.

In the national crisis following the Dunkirk evacuation and the fall of France in 1940, working hours were increased almost without limit in British factories, and welfare regulations were widely relaxed.

But production did not increase proportionately. On the contrary, the fatigue of the long hours resulted in an actual flagging of production. Before long, working hours had to be reduced again for the very purpose of increasing production.

When unions insist on reasonable working hours, on safety precautions and on other measures to insure the workers' welfare, they are not by any means being selfish or unpatriotic. Quite the contrary, they are performing an essential duty fully consistent with the all-important goal of increasing war production.

Tom Mooney

For more than a generation, Tom Mooney has been a name known to nearly every labor unionist, throughout the world as well as in the United States. He has symbolized to many millions the martyrdom so often inflicted on labor's pioneers and staunchest fighters.

Victim of a vile frame-up by union-smashing bosses, Tom never flinched or crawled or surrendered to labor's enemies, through all the long years of his unjust imprisonment. His final vindication was won largely by the labor movement, to which he remained true until death.

Deep personal sorrow at Tom Mooney's passing will be felt by countless unionists. But his name, and what he stood for, will live long after him. It will always stand for the dauntless and unbroken spirit of a fighting labor movement, against which all the forces of hell shall not prevail.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE MAN who strikes the first blow may suffer a moral disadvantage. But he gets a decided edge in a material sense. Ask Hitler and the Japs. By striking the first blow, in country after country, they have surprised their enemies before they were fully prepared.

In taking the offensive themselves, they have placed the rest of the world on the defensive.

The disadvantages and dangers of the defensive are obvious. A successful defense is magnificent, but it is not a victory.

By supreme effort, the Soviet Union was able to make the turn from the defensive to the offensive. In Britain the demand for offensive war has been rising; and now we are beginning to hear the same cry in the United States.

Military strategists will have to determine the timing of offensive action on the battlefronts. But on the home front, all of us can speed the offensive by producing more and faster. We can also begin right now to build up the spirit of the offensive that is so necessary to victory.

CIO President Murray has already called for a turn to the offensive, on the production front. The whole country must be aroused and mobilized, he says, to transform a peaceful people into a nation of warriors, and "to turn the tide of battle from defense and retreat to offense and victory."

Maximum production within the shortest possible period is essential, Murray declares, "to provide the necessary materials for an early offensive against the Axis powers."

This call comes not a minute too soon. One does not have to look abroad to see the disadvantages of a purely defensive attitude. Just look around you in the United States.

As befitted a peace-desiring people, all our slogans before Pearl Harbor were slogans of "national defense" against the aggressors.

The word "defense" still persists in usage, though it is gradually being replaced in new slogans. But more important, the spirit and attitude of the defensive persist in many quarters, though the need of the hour is for a sharp turn to the offensive.

The defensive attitude induces a certain passivity, at any rate on the home front. "I'm going to wait till they actually bomb us, before I get excited," you'll sometimes hear people say.

Donald Nelson, war production chief, reports that war industries are operating at only 50% of capacity. CIO unions have been making similar complaints for some time. That's something to get excited about right now.

After a year or two of "national defense" our industries are still operating at only half capacity! If we wait till we're hit on our shores and in our homes, before getting excited, we'll hardly know what hit us; we'll be fighting with all the advantages of the offensive on the enemy's side.

Now, therefore, is the time to mobilize all our efforts to hit the enemy first—to snatch the offensive from him.

The Victory Production Committees, now being set up in every plant, cannot be content with the old slogan of all-out production for defense. In the spirit of Murray's call, it must be all that and more—for the launching of the greatest offensive of the freedom-loving peoples that the world has ever seen.

The idea of the Victory Production Committees, now a matter of national policy, is of course nothing new to the CIO. Not only is it in line with the Murray industry council plan, but functioning committees of this character have been established for some time in many plants, on CIO initiative.

They have proved their usefulness. For instance, the Navy Department recently awarded its prized "E" pennant to the Doehler Die Casting Co. and its union workers for "outstanding achievement" in war production.

The production record of this company was a direct result of joint efforts of the Die Casting Workers' union and the management through a Victory Council established some months before.

This is but one example of the many increases in production that have resulted from unions and management getting together to pool their ideas and their efforts to this end. And now such committees are called for in every war plant.

N. J. Plants Found 50% Idle

NEWARK, N. J., Mar. 7—An accusation by the New Jersey CIO that the state's industry is falling down on the job of out-producing the Axis today had brought bitter denials from employers but few facts to offset the charge.

Through Pres. Irving Abramson, the Jersey CIO Council told Donald Nelson, War Production chief, that "a major part of war industry in northern New Jersey is operating only 49% of its productive capacity." His contention was based on a survey of 77 plants in eight war industries.

The 77 plants employ only 98,346 workers, as against a potential employment of 199,297, Abramson charged, a fact which the CIO official ascribed to "the failure, refusal or inability of industry to utilize fully the second and third shifts."

Only 13 of the 77 plants work on Sundays, and only 35 on Saturdays, the survey found.

TRY TO BLAME LABOR

In his letter to Nelson, Abramson protested the "persistent attempts of big business to tie labor to the whipping post," adding that "industry should not be permitted to shield itself from its failure to meet its own responsibilities in this war effort, and its proclivity to subordinate the vital task of winning the war to its greed for big profits."

Two corporations received praise from the CIO for their all-out production endeavors—the Walter Kidde Co. and the Crucible Steel Corp., both of which are operating on a 168-hour week.

FINDS RACE BIAS

Failure to train sufficient workers for the coming year's production schedule, and discrimination against "Negroes, Italians and Jews when the need for planes and guns is pressing," were also cited in the letter. Nelson was urged to send a technical staff into the state to lay the basis for compelling industry to fill up the wide gaps in its production schedule.

Steel Union Offers Tips On Output

Pittsburgh, Mar. 14—Labor's No. 1 job—production for war—can only be carried out effectively through organization and through the execution of a planned production program, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee declares in its newest pamphlet, "Program for Production and Victory," just published here.

The pamphlet stresses labor-management committees to speed production, eliminate waste, reduce costs and improve quality. It also urges union committees to guard against sabotage and to protect plants from other hazards, calls for union activity in preventing and reducing losses through accidents, for a union program of training of workers, and for active civilian defense work outside the mill and shop.

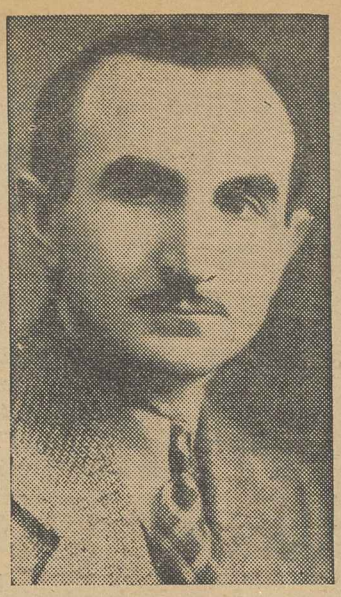
Ford To Pay Highest Rate

Detroit, Mar. 14 (FP)—Best wage rates in the aircraft industry will be paid to members of the CIO United Automobile Workers at Ford's new Willow Run bomber plant now nearing completion near Dearborn, according to UAW Regional Director Richard T. Leonard.

The UAW-CIO contract signed last summer automatically covers new Ford plants with its union-shop, check-off and other clauses.

Absolute minimum for common labor will be 95 cents an hour. Other minimum rates range up to $1.60 an hour.

Average wages in aircraft in the U. S are estimated at 91c, while in non-union plants they are considerably less.



NAMED: Dean Wayne Morse of the Oregon University Law School, who has been named government representative on the West Coast longshore labor-management joint council. The plan, worked out by Harry Bridges of the longshoremen's union, is the first CIO proposal of its kind to be fully accepted by the government.

GM Wasting Rare Metals On Auto Parts

DETROIT, Mar. 14—General Motors is still using large amounts of critically needed war metals for business-as-usual products, the CIO United Automobile Workers asserted today.

Copper, nickel, zinc, aluminum and stainless steel—a veritable "who's who" of the metals Uncle Sam needs for the armed forces—are being used by the motor company to build repair parts for civilian autos, the union said.

Victor Reuther, assistant director of the union's defense employment division, wrote to War Production Chief Donald Nelson that GM has taken advantage of a loophole in the government's ban on "bright work" to turn out 200,000 radiator grilles and 50,000 belt, windshield and division moldings, all of them using up precious metals.

Loophole in the U. S. ban on bright work was its application to new cars only, without mention of replacement parts.

Payoff of the process was the fact that GM, after using the bright metals, went to considerable bother to hide them from the public. At the company's Ternstedt plant, Reuther said, GM "is actually plating, polishing and in some instances actually painting the stainless steel, thus using additional critical materials for non-essential trim work."

He added that the plant's 400 workers weeks ago asked the management to stop wasting the materials, even though knowing that they faced unemployment if their suggestions were accepted.

On the Production Front:

Set Up Joint Councils Pronto, Unions Urged

WASHINGTON, Mar. 14—Joint labor-management "Victory Production Committees" in all plants throughout the nation "to provide the necessary materials for an early offensive against the Axis" were urged on all CIO affiliates by President Philip Murray in a circular letter sent out this week.

The letter was a quick follow-up on Murray's radio speech of the week before, in which he pledged the wholehearted support of the CIO to the call of President Roosevelt and War Production Head Donald Nelson for all-out production and for the establishment of victory committees.

"This program has been one of the basic principles which the CIO and its affiliated organizations have been promoting since the initiation of our war effort," Murray wrote. "Victory for our country and for the United Nations depends on production.

EARLY OFFENSIVE

"President Roosevelt has called upon the nation and all the people to put forward the utmost energy to achieve the maximum production of munitions of war within the shortest possible period. This is essential in order to permit our country to furnish immediately the necessary materials for an early offensive against the Axis powers."

Murray's letter referred to his radio speech pledging CIO support in the victory drive, which he said was now ready in pamphlet form, and asked for wide distribution throughout the CIO "in order that there may be established as soon as possible joint-labor - management Victory Production Committees in all plants throughout the nation."

NELSON SPEAKS AGAIN

At the same time Donald Nelson, returning to the air in a radio follow-up of his own earlier speech, declared that the public is demanding production now for an offensive against the Axis—"ever more planes, tanks, ships and guns to carry the fight directly to the enemy and annihilate Hitler."

Nelson revealed that 20 per cent of all war plants were operating only five days a week, that many plants are operating at only 40 per cent capacity on the second shift, 20 per cent on the third shift, and that "in some cases there is a reluctance to increase the number of shifts."

If these things were corrected, we could increase aircraft engine output by 25 per cent, machine tool output by 43 per cent, etc., he declared, adding "idle tools work for Hitler."

BLAMES LABOR FOES

Cooperation for action between labor, management and government is needed to straighten out these blocks in the victory drive, he said, sharply criticizing those people who try to blame labor for production lags, saying they have "unfounded suspicions that the production drive is some dark and devious method of turning industrial management over to labor."

This cooperation must be accompanied by a new approach to the war effort—an offensive approach—he added, declaring: "We must be animated by a spirit of attack. We have been on the defensive long enough. The attack begins here—here at home—on the production line. . . . We're in a fight. This is war."

HAIL PLAN

One of the earliest signs that the government intends to use labor's production plans was hailed by Reid Robinson, president of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers whose copper production plan was adopted in part by the War Production Board last week, and who wired to Nelson:

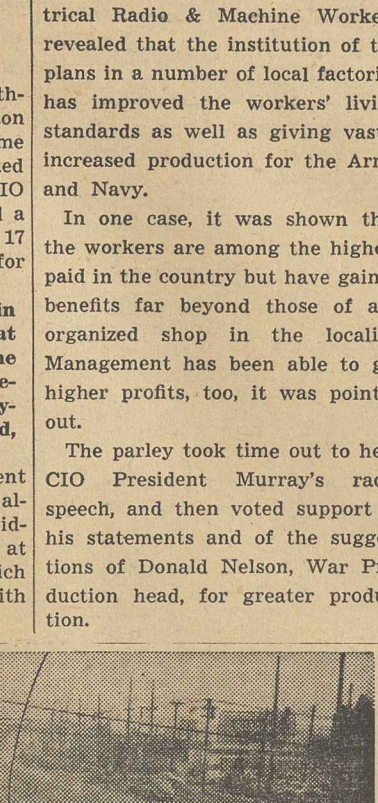
"Our organization can be depended upon to cooperate with you unstintingly to get more of this vital metal out of the ground for the planes, tanks, guns and bullets that will enable the United Nations to destroy the Axis. Your understanding of the value of labor's contribution is one of the surest guarantees of victory."

Pamphlet's Ready

PHILIP MURRAY'S radio speech expressing labor's acceptance of the call for all-out production for victory, heard by millions of Americans over the Blue Network, has been printed in pamphlet form for mass distribution.

The speech, whose keynote was labor's readiness to make every effort to produce the arms needed for a United Nations' offensive against the Hitler Axis, was widely and enthusiastically commented on.

Cover is a two color job, lettering in red and white and the plane, battleship and tank in blue. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO., 1106 Connecticut Ave., NW, Washington, D. C. Price, 2c each, 100 for $1.25, 500 for $5.50, 1,000 for $8.75.



Councils Aid Labor, Newark Workers Told

NEWARK, N. J., Mar. 14—Delegates to the Newark CIO's Victory Conference were told today that joint labor-management production councils "not only are good for you, but they taste fine, too."

Reports by James McLeish and Edward Stewart of the United Electrical Radio & Machine Workers revealed that the institution of the plans in a number of local factories has improved the workers' living standards as well as giving vastly increased production for the Army and Navy.

In one case, it was shown that the workers are among the highest paid in the country but have gained benefits far beyond those of any organized shop in the locality. Management has been able to get higher profits, too, it was pointed out.

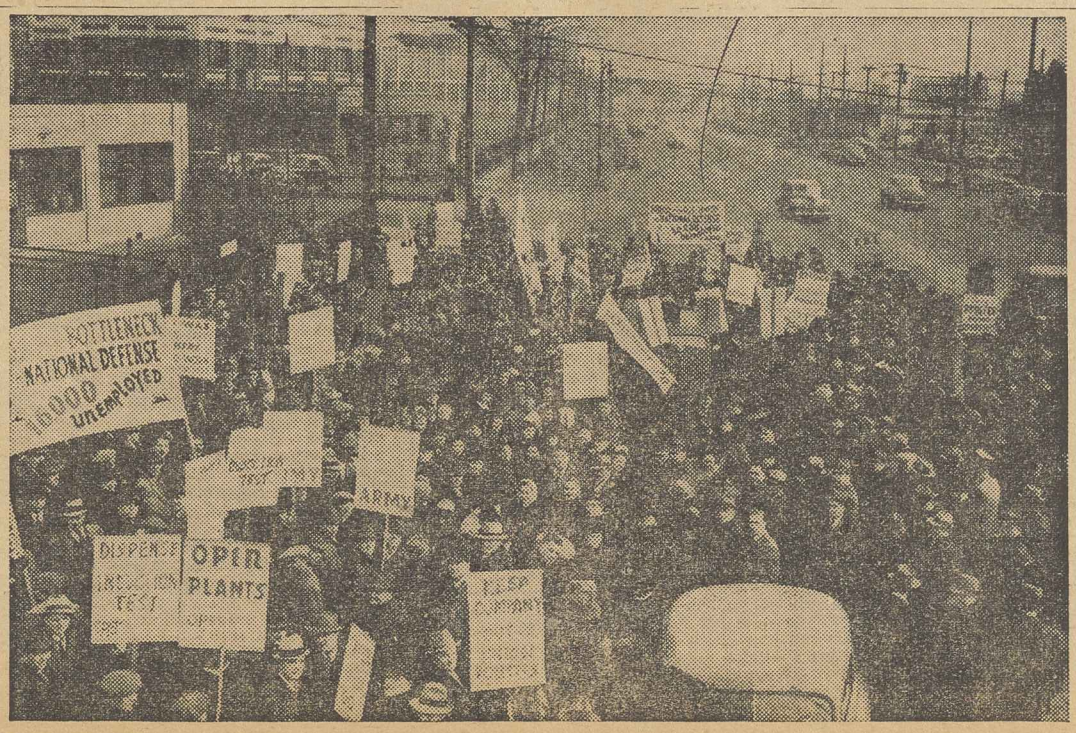
The parley took time out to hear CIO President Murray's radio speech, and then voted support of his statements and of the suggestions of Donald Nelson, War Production head, for greater production.

Textile Workers, Employers Plan Boston Confab

New York City, March 16—Northern manufacturers of fine cotton and rayon textiles, employing some 40,000 workers, have been invited by Emil Rieve, president of the CIO Textile Workers Union to attend a conference in Boston on March 17 to consider the union's request for wage increases.

This will be the first time in the history of the industry that such a conference, involving the consideration of a labor-management problem on an industry-wide basis will have been held, Rieve said.

The TWU's demand for a 10-cent hourly pay increase which has already been submitted to individual employers, will be taken up at the Boston conference to which manufacturers under contract with the union have been invited.



WANT WAR WORK: Hundreds of workers picket the Briggs Manufacturing Co. in Detroit, to protest delay in converting from civilian to war production. CIO United Automobile Workers has led the fight in the industry for quick action on war orders.

Dies' Margin Cut As House Votes To Continue Group

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Mar. 14—Martin Dies and his un-American Committee will be with us again for another year—or nine and a half months, to be exact, for his committee was given a renewal until January 3, 1943, by vote of 331 to 46 in Congress this week.

The debate, originally set to last three hours, was cut down to one hour by the Rules Committee in a trick maneuver carried out at the last minute. It revealed new lows in the reactionary Congressional mind, both in the tone of Dies' stooges defending him and in the refusal of the majority of members to listen to, think about and act on the facts.

It also revealed that the opposition to Dies pro-fascist leanings and his Axis-aiding methods has grown considerably since last year, when only six Congressmen voted against him, and that this opposition had marshalled its facts thoroughly and efficiently—even though they weren't effective in shutting off the Texas soundbox.

THE RECORD

Here are some of the items brought out by the Congressmen who led the fight against Dies—Reps. Marcantonio of N. Y., Eliot of Massachusetts, Sabath of Illinois, Coffee of Washington, Weiss of Pa., Baldwin of N. Y. (a "silk-stocking Republican), Klein of N. Y., Folger of N. C., Eberharter of Pa.:

Dies did nothing whatever to expose or put in jail such Nazi agents as George Sylvester Viereck, Laura Ingalls, George Hill—all caught and put away by the Justice Dept. Dies did nothing to expose such native fascists as William Dudley Pelley, Gerald L. K. Smith, George Deatherage and the leaders of the KKK, the Knights of the White Camelia, the Silver Shirts, etc.—the list is as long as Dr. Goebbels' propaganda arm.

Dies brought out an elaborate "report" on Japanese plans against America that was taken word for word in dozens of passages from a 10-cent published booklet available to everyone. He passed it off as a "secret" document uncovered with great travail. This, brought out by Marcantonio, was on a par with Dies' utterly phony story of having evidence to prevent Pearl Harbor, but being forced by the administration to keep quiet about it.

FASCISTS LIKE HIM

The Dies Committee's best friends are precisely the fascists he has failed to uncover—as proved by praise of it by such men as Pelley, Deatherage, Kuhn, et al—cited during the debate by Rep. Coffee.

On the contrary, the Dies Committee has consistently smeared labor and all progressive groups, has slandered labor leaders, government officials and workers, and has harassed the administration in the conduct of the war by attacking an American ally, the Soviet Union.

Opposition to continuance of the Dies Committee was expressed by labor unions, church groups, educators, ministers, progressive leaders, civic groups, minority groups, and by millions of rank and file people nauseated by its disruptive unAmerican acts.

Winning War Held Labor's No. 1 Task

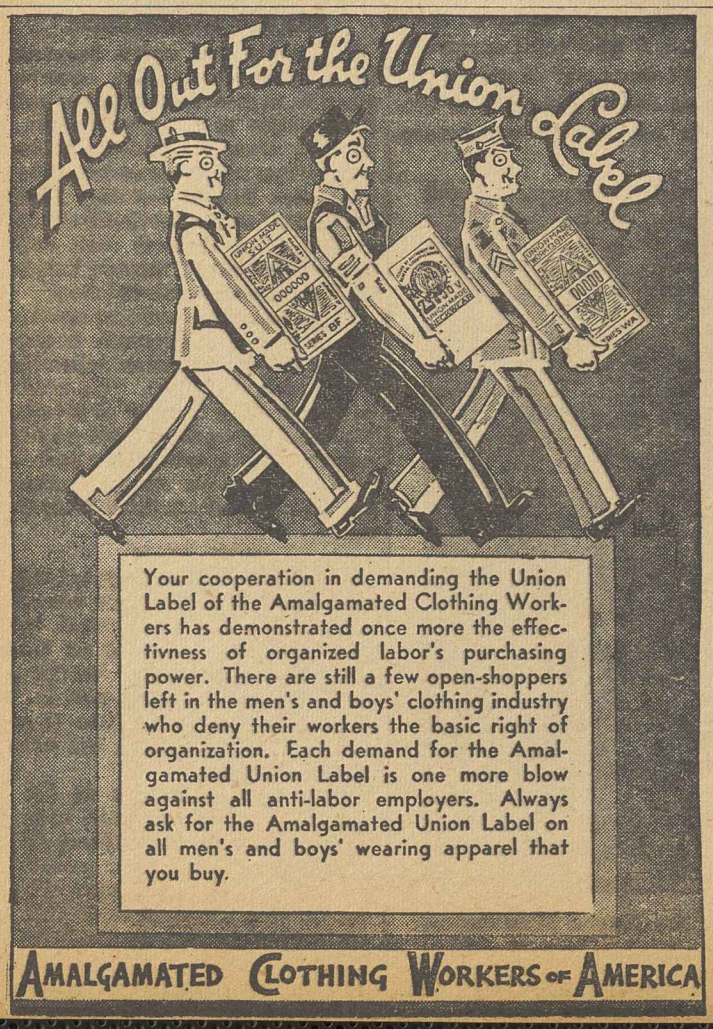
Washington, March 14—American labor's No. 1 objective in the war against Hitlerism is to win, President Philip Murray says in a full length article published in the current American Magazine under the title "What Labor Is Fighting For."

To carry through to victory, American labor must "be allowed to do its full part, with brain as well as hands, in improving productive efficiency, in getting more and better arms to our fighting forces, faster," he adds.

The best way to see that labor's brains and skill are fully used is to put into operation the principles of the Industry Council Plan, which calls for equal representation by labor and management to step up production, Murray declared. Wage and hour questions will be left to collective bargaining.

MORALE PROBLEMS

A portion of Pres. Murray's article is devoted to discussion of a program for economic security and full production after victory, which, he points out, should be seriously considered now as a means of improving morale.



Army To Try Former Dies Stoolpigeon

New York, Mar. 14—Another stoolpigeon alumnus of the Dies Committee has gotten into trouble with the government.

Peter J. Innes, a one-time witness for the unAmerican committee who was expelled from the CIO Natl. Maritime Union for espionage, now faces an army court martial on disorderly conduct, alcoholism and sex charges. He has been stripped of his rank of sergeant in the army's military intelligence and is being held in Fort Jay's military prison.

Innes' job with the Army was to check up on merchant seamen hired aboard army transport ships. NMU spokesmen charged that in carrying out this assignment, he devoted his entire attention to blackballing active unionists and alleged Communists, without showing any concern for possible fascist activities.

War-Jobless Get Icy 'No' In Congress

Washington, Mar. 14—By a seven to five vote, the House Appropriations Committee this week again turned down labor and administration urgings that something be done for the hundreds of thousands of workers thrown out of jobs due to delays in conversion to war production.

The vote came abruptly just as hearings to secure a minimum $100,000,000 fund for WPA projects for the war unemployed were getting under way. It followed an earlier refusal of the Ways and Means Committee to consider letting Congress vote on a $300,000,000 appropriation — a refusal described by Murray as leaving the unemployed "without funds to pay for rent, food and other necessities."

Murray's latest plea pointed out that one million workers have already been displaced by conversion, and asked for at least $150,000,000 in immediate funds to help tide them over. He urged that WPA projects be set up to train for war work, that all relief requirements be waived to speed the aiding of the unemployed, and that prevailing wages be paid.

"For at least four months now, this problem has been brought to the attention of the authorities of the country by labor and by government agencies," Murray declared. "Nothing has been done to provide for these people. Their case is most urgent and we ask that immediate action be taken to provide for them."

The CIO also repeatedly pointed out that failure to provide for displaced workers would be a serious blow at morale and consequently at war production.

Steel Locals Win Increase In New Pact

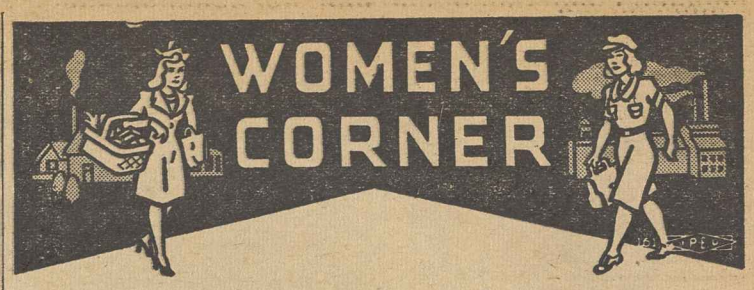
Chicago, Mar. 14—Wage increases of 15c an hour—and in some instances of 30c—were won for several hundred employes of the American Can Co. by Locals 1478 and 2041 of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Francis J. DeLaurie, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Industrial Union Council, said the agreement followed a discussion of issues involved before a panel of the War Labor Board.

Of the 15c increase, 13½ cents will be retroactive to Feb. 23. Harry Harper, SWOC official, predicted that increases running up to 30c will be given out when the jobs of 26 workers are reclassified.

On China Relief

New York, March 14—CIO Pres. Philip Murray has been elected to the national board of the United China Relief. The organization is raising $7,000,000 to aid the Chinese people, whose land has long been ravished by the Japanese invaders.



THE IMPORTANCE of a healthy people to the victory of our country in the war has lead the CIO auxiliaries to take part in the fight against increases in milk prices to consumers. Good health is essential to winning this people's war, and milk, according to nutritionists, is essential to a healthful diet.

The city auxiliary councils in New York, Philadelphia, Washington, D. C., and Los Angeles have been represented at milk hearing and have presented testimony to show that increased milk prices mean that workers' families have to buy less milk.

Both in New York and in Philadelphia petitions opposing milk price increases were circulated widely by auxiliary members and presented to the Milk Control Boards. A house to house canvass in one section of Washington revealed that every family interviewed would have to cut its milk order in case of a price increase.

Up 2c a Quart

Since August, 1941, prices for store milk in cartons in Washington have increased from 2 quarts for 19 cents to 2 quarts for 23 cents. A new increase to producers now under consideration would probably mean a further consumer increase of 2 cents a quart.

New York has had two price increases in the last year raising the price of store milk in bottles from 11 to 13 cents a quart. An additional 3-cent increase is now being considered. The New York auxiliary council was represented at the hearings by its chairman, Beatrice Abramson, who pointed out that even relatively well paid workers will be unable to maintain their present standards of milk consumption if this increase goes through.

Check Price Rise

The work of the Philadelphia Auxiliary Council in arousing their own members and interesting other consumer groups resulted in postponement of a milk price increase from October, 1941 to January, 1942. Post cards and stationery were provided at auxiliary meetings and each member sat down on the spot to write personal letters to the officials concerned. A constant stream of letters to the editor brought good publicity in the Philadelphia papers.

Milk Control Board hearings had to be moved to larger quarters because of the crowds attending. Lillian Koltnow, of the Federal Workers Auxiliary testified for the Philadelphia council.

The auxiliary council was one of three consumer groups called to Harrisburg for a special hearing before the state attorney general. He refused to recommend an increase on the conflicting testimony presented, but seven days before Christmas the price increase was granted effective January 1. It was the second increase in a year and brought the store carton price from 11 to 13 cents a quart.

Philadelphia auxiliaries are now urging rescinding of the increase because of the cut in distributors costs which cooperation with the governments tire and gasoline conservation program will bring about.

All Over the U. S.

These are not isolated examples. From Jacksonville, Fla., to Seattle, Wash., milk price increases are being considered and CIO auxiliaries are fighting them.

Auxiliaries have also been active in supporting penny milk programs for children. They point out that in England all nursing and expectant mothers and all children under five are entitled to twice the usual milk ration at half price.

Morale of Thousands Hurt By Auto Shutdowns

DETROIT, March 14—Sharp reductions in food, shelter and clothing for 200,000 unemployed auto workers were reported today by UAW-CIO President R. J. Thomas on the basis of results of a survey conducted among 10,000 union members by the research department of the UAW-CIO.

"Over 79 per cent of our members reporting indicate that unemployment during the conversion period has meant drastic reductions in their living standards.

"Already the slender savings and credit resources of auto workers have been exhausted," Thomas stated.

"Over 21 families out of a hundred report that they will have to give up housekeeping or face eviction in the immediate future. 36 out of 100 face the loss of articles purchased on the installment plan.

"Many of our unemployed members tell us that their position is made doubly difficult by the loss of income from employed sons who have entered the armed forces of the United States Government," he continued.

"The most frequently voiced demand of unemployed auto workers was for jobs to make 'arms for Gen. MacArthur and his boys'," Thomas said.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

The President of the United States and Donald Nelson, War Production head, have called on labor and industry for all-out production to take the offensive against the Hitler Axis. President Murray has welcomed this call in the name of the entire CIO.

As President Murray pointed out, Nelson's call for labor-management Victory Production Committees is in line with every CIO proposal to step up production. Now President Murray has called on all CIO affiliates to set up such committees in every industry where we are organized.

This will be done, because no one knows better than the workers of American industry just what would happen if Hitler were to win. And as President Murray pointed out in his letter to CIO affiliates, American workers realize we must take the offensive to assure victory. Our thinking has been on defensive lines too long. We must switch to the offensive—and the first step is top production.

A Union Record

Below is an example of the recent record of one CIO Union, the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers. It summarizes the union's gains during the week ending March 9.

The UE negotiated $750,000 in raises for employes of the Morse Twist Drill & Machine Co., at Bridgeport, Conn.

Five plants of the Federal Telegraph Co. in the Newark, N. J., area voted by more than two to one majority for the UE in an NLRB election.

The first union contract in the history of the Ohio Brass Co. (plants at Barberton, O., and Mansfield, O.) was signed by the UE. Raises of 10 cents per hours are included.

The UE and the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company agreed to set up War Production Councils in 30 plants of the Westinghouse Co. Employes of Grayson Heat Control Co., Los Angeles, Calif., voted by more than three to one for the UE in an NLRB election.

The UE announced that negotiations during February resulted in increases totaling $1,769,600 for 9,049 employes in 14 plants. New contracts covering 5,054 employes in 10 plants were signed. Employes of Merkel Products Co., Buffalo, N. Y., voted by a twelve to one majority for the UE in an NLRB election. The UE was certified by a NLRB card-check for the Westinghouse Electric warehouse employes in Newark, N. J.

Reports

The Die Casters union has won two elections; one at the Lake City Malleable Iron Co. in Cleveland, by 150 to 53, the other at the Chicago Metal Hose Co., by 203 to 48.

The five year struggle of the militant CIO union at the P. Lorillard Co. in Middletown, O., has ended in a contract giving the union (affiliated with the Cannery and Agricultural Workers) a check-off and a six cent increase.

The Oil Workers' Organizing campaign has won three important election victories recently; one at the Columbia Carbon Co. in Borger, Tex., by 82 to 70, a second at the James B. Barry Sons Refinery in Oil City, Pa., by 49 to 24, and at the Southport Petroleum Co., Texas City, Tex., by 105 to 21.

The Cannery and Agricultural Workers have won a contract in the Salt River Valley area of California, giving 64 workers the union shop and other benefits. Fullerton Fuller reports a closed shop, check-off contract between the CIO and the 15 beauty parlors operated by the Melquist firm in Chicago.

NAM'S Strike 'Facts' Are Bared As Phony

WASHINGTON, Mar. 14—It's not often that a newspaper correspondent bothers to look behind the phony anti-labor propaganda and statistics of the National Association of Manufacturers—and it's even more infrequent for his paper to print the story, when he does.

But it happened this week. The Christian Science Monitor, a conservative daily paper published in Boston and having national circulation, gave prominent display to an article by Richard Strout of its Washington staff that analyzed the NAM's most recent blast against unions. Strout's conclusion: "The NAM figures gave a mis-leading impression."

The article was based on an NAM release—which gained page one prominence in the nation's press—claiming that labor had reverted to a "strikes as usual" policy.

The NAM's statement was based on an increase in the number of man hours lost in strikes during February, which showed a four-fold rise over January.

Strout went behind these figures, learned from the Navy that in February war industry walkouts were only 9.2 per cent of the pre-war average, while in January they were a mere 2 per cent of average.

"It is hardly fair to say that labor has reverted to a 'strikes as usual' policy when it is only 9 per cent of the former norm," Strout wrote," even though the trend is now up."

"We have noticed time and again that when counter-arguments regarding some specific strike situation are offered by labor, they do not get much newspaper play.

"If this sort of thing is carried too far, it becomes dangerous in a democracy."

Poll Tax Evil Hit As Hearings Start

WASHINGTON, Mar. 14—(FP)—Congressional machinery to abolish the poll tax in the eight southern states where it still exists, was set in motion here March 12.

Hearings before a senate judiciary subcommittee, headed by Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), were begun on a measure introduced by Sen. Claude C. Pepper (D., Fla.) which would forbid the requirement of a poll tax as a condition for voting in a federal election.

The first day's hearings presented a number of distinguished southerners who represented hosts of poor whites and Negroes in the south who have been deprived of the right to vote through the poll tax system.

Silliman Evans, publisher of the Nashville Tennessean and the Chicago Sun, told of the effects of the poll tax in Tennessee, and particularly the practice of buying up blocks of poll tax receipts.

CITES NAZIS

In Shelby County (Memphis), Tenn., dominated by Boss Ed Crump, Evans told the committee there was a smaller proportion of "no" votes than there was in the last "election" in Nazi Germany.

Jennings Perry, editor of the Nashville Tennessean and chairman of the Natl. Anti-Poll Tax Committee, disclosed that Tennessee has 100,000 more men registered for service in the armed forces than she has voters.

Lucy Randolph Mason, descendant of a famous Virginia family and southern public relations representative of the CIO, charged that the poll tax is a "deliberate device to keep power in the hands of a few people.

"Elected representatives forget people who do not participate in the elections," she said.

BOUGHT IN BLOCKS

Representing the Southern Electoral Reform League. Morse A. Plunkett, whose forebearers were immigrants to Virginia in 1635, declared that "advocacy of the poll tax and a sincere belief in political democracy are irreconcilable." He cited attempts to get the poll tax abolished in Virginia where, he charged, a politician can buy up a block of 4,000 poll tax receipts and, if he gets caught, pays only a $5 fine.

Skepticism on the part of Senators O'Mahoney and Warren Austin (R, Vt.), the only two members of the subcommittee present, as to the prevalence of the practice of buying up blocks of poll tax receipts was dispelled by Mrs. Joe Kelly Stockton from Prentiss County, Tenn.

Mrs. Stockton described how her husband had, one year, decided to buy up 150 poll tax receipts and give them to the poor so that they could vote.

Mrs. Sherwood Anderson, wife of the famous novelist and representing the YWCA, said she voted in Virginia several years before learning that a poll tax was required. Her tax was paid by the "machine," she said.

Continue Farm Aid, CIO Urges

Washington, March 14—A full appropriation for the Farm Security Administration, now under attack from the appeasement-economy bloc in Congress was urged on House Majority Leader John W. McCormack in a letter sent to him this week by CIO President Philip Murray.

Murray's letter, following a circular to all CIO affiliates sent last week, pointed out that farm production must be expanded for victory, and that this expansion must come in great part from the smaller farms of the type aided by the Farm Security agency.

The letter was also a reply to an attack on the CIO position by Edward A. O'Neal, head of the Farm Bureau Federation, who had accused Murray of "attacking our present farming system in a recent message to CIO unions." This attack was based on a distortion of the CIO policy, which, as Murray pointed out has always considered "the bond of friendship between organized labor and organized farmers" of primary importance.

"I said, and I repeat," Murray wrote, "that if agricultural production is to be expanded sufficiently for victory, the expansion must come from the independent farmer who operates the family-sized farm, and that such farmers receive their principal assistance from the Farm Security Administration."

TWUA Wins Field Pact For 5,000

New York City, Mar. 4.—Settlement of the dispute between the CIO Textile Workers Union and the Marshall Field Co., covering nine of the company's textile mills in North Carolina employing about 5,000 workers, was announced here by George Baldanzi, TWUA executive vice-president.

This is the case on which the War Labor Board issued the "Marshall Field formula" on the question of union security.

HAS CHECK-OFF

The new agreement also provides check-off of union dues and a week's paid vacation or a cash bonus, the alternative to be decided by negotiation and upon the urgency of production.

The "Marshall Field formula" provides that all members shall remain members in good standing as a condition of employment and that new employes may "individually and voluntarily" certify that they authorized dues deductions and will remain members in good standing as a condition of employment.

We'll Work to Win

Nuts To Hitler

LOS ANGELES, Mar. 17—Employes of the Diamond walnut plants have shelled out for the Red Cross, using as their slogan, "Nuts to Hitler."

With huge Red Cross flags flying from the plants, 794 members of the CIO Cannery & Agricultural Workers worked an extra day, and gave their time-and-a-half pay to the relief agency.

All pay for the day's work from both production and supervisory employes, totaling about $5,000, will go to the War Emergency Campaign Fund. Only nine employes missed work for the day.

Stone Union Wins Raises

Barre, Vt., Mar. 14—The United Stone & Allied Products Workers of America announced here that a contract has been signed between the Marble Cliff Quarry company and Branch 23 of the union, near Columbus, O.

The agreement provides a ten per cent wage increase retroactive to Jan. 1, and additional 2½-cent hourly pay boosts on April 1, July 1 and October 1. If the cost of living should increase faster during the year than the wage increase provided, the company agrees to make up the difference.

John C. Lawson, international secretary-treasurer of the union also reported that an agreement granting a three-cent hourly increase was reached with the Riverton Lime & Stone Co., Riverton, Va.

Ask Parleys

New York City, Mar. 14—A request that negotiations for a contract start immediately has been sent to Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc. by the Screen Office & Professional Employes Guild.

The union, an affiliate of the CIO United Office & Professional Workers, was chosen as bargaining agent at Labor Board elections held last month.

Negroes Thank CIO for Aid In Detroit Housing Dispute

DETROIT, Mar. 14—Labor's support for Negro families whom the Ku Klux Klan and other reactionary groups have tried to bar from the Sojourner Truth federal housing project here, today won all-out praise from Paul Robeson, great concert singer.

A riot occurred at the project 10 days ago when the Negro families attempted to move their belongings from their squalid high-rent slum homes into the new federal development, named in honor of a Civil War Negro woman leader. Police arrested 109 persons, 107 of them Negroes, but made no apparent effort to stop the burning of a fiery cross by the Ku Kluxers.

Atty-Gen. Francis Biddle has already ordered a federal grand jury probe of the affair to determine if a conspiracy exists against the Negroes occupancy of the homes.

THOMAS' COMMENT

Meanwhile, Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Automobile Workers reiterated his stand in favor of Negro occupancy of the housing project, originally planned by the government.

At the same time the union leader asserted that "I believe Ku Klux Klan and Nazi-minded individuals, on the other hand, are involved in some of the opposition to Negro occupancy."

Thomas said he was offering U. S. Atty. J. C. Lehr "eye-witness evidence of direct incitation to violence by at least one leader of the group that is opposing Negro occupancy."

Thomas pointed out that "particularly during this war we must have the cooperation of all races. Neither the Negro nor any other racial strain in our American life, whether it be Polish, Italian or any other minority, should be denied the rights of democracy for which our nation's fighting men are now shedding their blood.

"Any selfish, un-American group which attempts to deny such rights must be held to complete accountability under the law."

ROBESON HAILS LABOR

Robeson, after completing a magnificent song recital under the auspices of the United Automobile Workers Ford local, discussed the issues involved before a Sojourner Truth citizens' committee meeting.

"The big thing in this housing dispute," he told a cheering audience, "is that labor here is firmly on our side."

In a moving, persuasive address, Robeson urged Negro support of the war, but warned that racial hatred and oppression such as that being stirred up by the Klan, can only injure national unity and the war effort.

WAR FOR FREEDOM

"This war is for freedom, and particularly for the freedom of the colored races," he declared. "Don't think that because the Japanese are colored, that they are leading the fight for freedom.

"A small ruthless minority in Japan persecutes all the rest of the Japanese and all the other colored races they can reach.

"Don't think that the Japanese propaganda isn't using this Sojourner Truth issue against the United Nations. That is why it's important to settle this issue right."

ON DOTTED LINE: A five-week strike at the Selby Shoe Co., Portsmouth, Ohio, ended in victory for the United Shoe Workers of America, CIO. Radio Audiences Told of CIO Aims

Washington, Mar. 14—Hitler would welcome nothing more than a halt to organizing and other union activies for the duration, Allan S. Haywood, national CIO director, said here in a radio speech over the American Forum of the Air on the question "Should Union Activities be Restricted for the Duration?"

"This is labor's war," Haywood said in the opening portion of the debate. "Wherever labor organizes, it organizes for victory. When labor asks wage increases, it is because workers need the food and warmth and clothing that fair wages will buy to produce at top efficiency and at maximum productive hours.

"For American labor to stop organizing, to stop its drive for all-out production and for fair wages, would be the worst service we could render to our country and to our allies. This would be helping Hitler, for all-out production for a United Nation's offensive is what Hitler fears most."

Co-debaters with Haywood on the forum were Eldridge Haynes, publisher of "Modern Industry," a management periodical, Frank Fenton, organization director of the AFL and Raymond Smethurst, general counsel of the Natl. Association of Manufacturers.

Washington, Mar. 14—Labor will deliver the goods needed to take the offensive against Hitler—"and if they are not delivered on time and in sufficient quantity, it's labor that will demand to know the reason why," James B. Carey, secretary of the CIO, said in a radio interview over local station WWDC and New York station WMCA this week.

For this reason, labor welcomes the government's announced policy of encouraging labor-management production committees, Carey said. "We in the CIO are particularly pleased to know that it is now a matter of national policy that joint labor management committees should be set up to increase production," he said, "for the CIO has been pushing for the adoption of just such a program for a year or more."

WAGES

Asked about the question of wage increases, Carey pointed out that rising living costs, inflated profits, and the generally inadequate wage level make raises necessary, to enable workers to buy sufficient food and other necessities to keep going at top efficiency.

Voice For Labor Will Aid U. S. Victory, Lawyers Agree

WASHINGTON, Mar. 14—Labor's part in production for an anti-Axis offensive "can best be assured by a strong, organized labor movement," the Executive Board of the National Lawyers Guild declared in the main report adopted at the recent meeting here.

To ensure full production, collective bargaining must be maintained and extended, wage raise demands must be settled to make up for rising living costs and other inroads on workers' standards, health and safety conditions must be improved, joint production committees set up, and the transition to full war production from peacetime work smoothed, the report added.

Speaking at the meeting, set up as a conference on production problems, Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, stressed the need to carry on labor organizing and other work as a basic part of maintaining national unity and morale for victory.

"Labor has already made great contributions, not only in stepping up output but in laying aside the right to strike for the duration so as not to interfere with full operation of plants. At the same time, employers must not be permitted to use this waiver as a cloak for anti-union moves," he added.

Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer of the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers stressed the need for combatting reactionary attempts to cripple unions as a major step toward all-out war production. "It must be shown and hammered home that this is a war against fascism," he said. "It is a war against forces which have as their first objective the destruction of labor unions and serfdom for the workers."

Help Keep Morale High ---Carey

New York, Mar. 14—"Keep the Home Front Strong" is the slogan of the Greater New York Fund and it apltly describes why providing for the health and welfare of the needy assumes greater importance than ever in war-times, CIO Secretary James B. Carey declared here, in a speech delivered on behalf of Pres. Philip Murray.

Carey spoke in the Commodore Hotel here the evening of March 12 in the absence of Pres. Murray who was detained in Washington by the "Little Steel" hearings.

DECENT CONDITIONS

Murray explained that labor "knows how much the morale and productive efficiency of workers depend upon fair wages and decent living and working conditions," adding that "in the same way the war morale of our whole civilian population depends upon proper provision being made for the health and welfare of its neediest sections."

"In this drive, as in all the other activities which it supports, the CIO believes that winning the war must be our first consideration. The poverty, exploitation and oppression which we are organized to fight, would be intensified a hundred fold if the Axis should win," the New Yorkers were told.

The CIO leader told of the organization's wholehearted response to Pres. Roosevelt's recent call for stepping up of production and for the establishment of joint labor-management committees in the hope of seeing enough production to make possible the launching of a great offensive soon.

Thomas Calls For Billion Housing Fund

New York, Mar. 14.—Only a bold government policy of home-building and a good kick in the pants to real estate interests that want to interfere with the program, can solve the nation's growing housing problem, the Natl. Public Housing Conference was told today by R. J. Thomas, chairman of the CIO Housing Committee and head of the auto union.

Reciting in minute detail the run-around which private real estate groups have given to attempted housing programs, Thomas hailed the integration of the government's housing agencies in the new Natl. Housing Agency as one step forward.

But, he added, the government should immediately follow a policy in line with CIO suggestions for permanent, well-planned communities; Mutual Home Ownership projects, through which workers can eventually own their own homes; elimination of reliance upon private enterprise; and a new billion dollar appropriation for additional construction.

The UAW leader hailed Pres. Roosevelt's action chucking C. F. (Chuck) Palmer out of his job as Defense Housing Coordinator. Palmer, he said, "was a very nice man, but as a former real estate operator, he seemed interested only in preserving the privileges and rights of the real estate interests."

Soldiers' Votes Win For Union

NEW YORK, Mar. 14—The votes of two soldiers brought victory to the CIO United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes in a poll at New York units of the Times Square stores, big eastern auto accessory chain.

The ballot count was tied with 53 votes for and 53 votes against the union; two ballots were in the mail from U. S. Army camps. Both draftees voted for the union.

Murray Calls Parley To Spur Councils

(See Stories on Inside Pages)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 21—Several hundred CIO union officials were Washington-bound today for an emergency conference called by Pres. Philip Murray to spur the work of joint management-labor production councils and to fight off Rep. Howard Smith's new attack on American workers.

The conference, to which international unions, local industrial unions and city and state councils have been invited to send representatives, will be called to order March 23. The CIO Executive Board will meet at the Hotel LaFayette here the next day.

Murray's call to action came in the midst of another of the anti-labor diatribes that have given Congress and the newspapers considerable satisfaction during the past year. Smith's new bill would wipe out the union shop in all existing contracts and forbid overtime wages for workers employed more than 40 hours a week.

Meanwhile other members of the Congressional tory bloc, apparently anxious to pass any or all anti-labor legislation, were demanding action on long-buried bills to hamstring organized workers. To support their fight, the nation's newspapers were desperately seeking to give substance to a mythical public protest against a non-existent strike wave.

Union leaders and high government officials—among them President Roosevelt—expressed complete satisfaction at presently harmonious industrial relations. From various sections of the country came reports of quick action to form the production councils requested by President Roosevelt and Donald Nelson and approved by both CIO and AFL.

Big Circulation Drive To Build The CIO News Announced By Murray

WASHINGTON, March 21—CIO President Philip Murray today announced the launching of a special circulation drive to bring The CIO NEWS regularly to every active member of the CIO. At the same time he announced that The CIO NEWS will be sent hereafter to members of Local Industrial Unions, as part of the return on per capita paid to the national CIO.

Harry Gantt has been appointed as special circulation representative of The CIO NEWS for the campaign, to approach unions and councils directly in obtaining subscriptions. Gantt is widely known throughout the CIO as advertising representative of The CIO NEWS.

Cites Paper's Value

Announcing the drive in letters to all unions, councils and regional directors, President Murray declared:

"The CIO NEWS performs a function for our whole movement which no other publication can perform.

"It is the chief means of communication between the national CIO and our unions, representatives and members, besides being the main outlet for getting our message before labor and the public.

"It is an invaluable aid in building morale and national unity for winning the war, publicizing our plans and efforts for more war production and showing how labor's constructive aims can promote victory.

"It is our only medium for unified national campaigning on organizational and legislative issues affecting all our unions.

"It promotes greater unity and mutual understanding among CIO unions, publicizing the achievements of each union to other affiliated unions, and enlisting the support of all for the campaigns and struggles of each."

Urges Unions To Subscribe

President Murray told CIO unions which do not already subscribe for their membership to The CIO NEWS, that he considered it "of importance both to your union and to the CIO that The CIO NEWS should be read regularly at least by all your officers, organizers, local union officials, shop stewards, educational committeemen and other leading members."

He urged the placing of group subscriptions by unions and asked full cooperation with Editor Len De Caux and Circulation Representative Harry Gantt in all possible steps to increase the circulation of The CIO NEWS.

The action in sending The CIO NEWS to members of Local Industrial Unions directly affiliated to the national CIO was taken pursuant to authorization voted by the Pittsburgh CIO convention. The papers will be shipped in bundle form to Locals, though special arrangements can be made by Locals for individual mailing to members at their homes.

Shipyard Snubs Bonds

Brooklyn, N. Y., March 21—Bethlehem Steel is staging a "sit-down" against selling United States Defense Savings Bonds to its workers, it was charged here by Leo Handler, secretary of Local 13, Intl. Union of Marine and Shipworkers of America (CIO).

Handler said the local had planned a drive to buy $100,000 worth of the Bonds by ship yard workers through the payroll deduction plan and that the membership was patriotically behind the proposal. When the Bethlehem management was approached on the question however, the union met an absolute and flat refusal by the company.

Not only did the Bethlehem Steel officials spurn the bond purchase deduction proposal, but they denied the union permission to solicit purchases among its members in the yard.

Seek 25% Lift In War Output

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 21—Immediate action to increase production 25 per cent in Western Pennsylvania's vital war industries through union-management production councils in every plant has been set under way by District 6, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

Urge Factory Canteens Be Set Up

Washington, March 21—Because many workers are not eating the proper foods due to their rush in getting to work from distant points, Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt this week approved a recommendation to establish canteens in industrial plants.

The recommendation was originally presented to McNutt by Dr. Frank G. Boudreau, chairman of the Committee on Nutrition in Industry, National Research Council. The committee has just completed a survey of nutrition facilities in war industries.

"The practice of serving food between meals to workers," McNutt pointed out, "has given good results and is strongly recommended." He stated further that the British learned from experience that the improvement of diet to workers is followed by an increased output "without a conscious increased effort."

Publishers Seek $$$ For U. S. Bond Ads

By MARC STONE

NEW YORK, Mar. 21—(FP)—Since Dec. 7, millions of Americans have emptied their pockets standing in line at postoffices and banks wating their turn to purchase defense bonds and stamps. That was their answer to Pearl Harbor.

Less than four weeks later, U. S. publishers formed another line outside the U. S. Treasury in Washington. Hat in hand they want to be paid for cooperating in the defense bond drive.

Couched in more subtle language than this, the call for paid advertisements by the government was first voiced in Editor and Publisher, newspaper trade magazine, on January 3. Since then more than 100 publishers have taken up the cry for paid advertising space for the bonds.

Only two or three have written in opposition to the plan, which would have the government spend millions of dollars to purchase advertising space to promote the sale of bonds and stamps, the trade paper said.

LABOR PRESS SUPPORTS

(The attitude of the commercial daily press is in strong contrast with that of labor papers, which have given generously of their space to furthering the bond drive. Treasury Dept. officials have spoken frequently of the large amount of news stories and advertising material about U. S. bonds in the labor papers.

(A Treasury Dept. spokesman in New York commented that "no other group of people in the U. S. is doing more than labor" to support the bond campaign.)

Calling attention to the Treasury Department's request for publishers to donate space to the payroll allotment plan for defense savings, Editor & Publisher declared itself in complete accord with the idea.

WANT U. S. CASH

"Where we part from the Treasury Department's thinking," the magazine goes on, however, "is at the point where Unce Sam calls for a donation of a publication's stock-in-trade—its advertising space.

"Respectfully but emphatically, we must deny the right of the Treasury Department or any other branch of government to submit an advertising plate to a publisher with a request that he print it as a patriotic duty, free of charge," the weekly continues.

But the boys who write the editorials denouncing labor, overtime pay union shop clauses and the 40-hour week are not interested in money. It's the principle of the thing.

PUBLISHERS' ARGUMENT

Listen to Editor & Publisher:

"To the conscientious publisher, it is not a matter of the few dollars involved in the publication of a particular 24-inch advertisement; what does matter is the principle that advertising is as much an instrumentality of war as steel, or copper, or rubber, or cotton, and should be paid for as such."

Editor & Publisher has followed up its original suggestion with an energetic campaign through successive issues using both its editorial and news columns to push the idea.

Choice bit among letters from publishers approving the suggestion was the following from the publisher of the Martinsville (Va.) Bulletin: "I'll volunteer to go to Washington and sit down with the federal budget and guarantee to pluck out of appropriations already made for the WPA, the NYA, the CCC or any other of the multitude of non-defense appropriations the $28,345,068.96 needed to run 40-inch ads five times a week for a year in every daily and weekly in the country."

Overtime Pay Won at GM

Detroit, March 21—Overtime pay for General Motors employes who work on Sundays and holidays was upheld this week in a report of the union-company umpire.

G. Allan Dash, Jr., the umpire, upheld claims of the CIO United Automobile Workers that wealthy, profit-making GM must pay the extra wages for the Sunday and holiday work "performed on a swing-shift basis on war production."

His decision quoted on GM's contract with the UAW-CIO and pointed out that the agreement is clear on the question involved.

WITHIN CONTRACT

Answering GM suggestions for a broad interpretation of certain "excepted" operations, Dash said any such action would constitute rewriting the agreement—a field over which he has no jurisdiction. The arbitrator is paid by the company and the union, and the questions on which he is allowed to rule are strictly outlined in the contract.

Dispute over the question of extra pay broke out when GM took its first major steps towards war production a few months ago. The question was referred to the War Labor Board, which sent it back to the umpire.

Ask Dime Increase In Textile

BOSTON, March 21—Arguments supporting the CIO Textile Workers Union's case for a 10-cent hourly increase in the New England cotton and rayon textile industry were submitted to a joint labor-industry conference held here this week.

The conference, first of its kind in the history of collective bargaining in the textile industry, was called at the invitation of TWU President Emil Rieve. The union stated that cotton and rayon textile workers in New England are receiving sub-standard wages, the majority earning less than $20 a week even when they work a full 40-hour week.

LOW WAGE LEVEL

Actual weekly earnings of this group are $10.30 less than the average for all industries, the union declared, and are from $6 to $8 below the minimum subsistence level, although the year 1941 has been one of the most prosperous since the early 20's for the northern rayon and cotton industry.

The wage increase demanded would have very little effect upon prices, the union argued, as continuous production and huge orders of single constructions of cloth will still further reduce the unit cost of production which declined 33 per cent between 1929 and 1939 in spite of wage increases.

NO INFLATION

Neither will the pay raise result in inflation, the union stated, as shown by figures in the heavy industries, where price increases have been the slightest and wage increases the largest.

"Price increases have generally preceded wage increases," the union declared.

Scripps-Howard Peddles Anti-Labor Editorials; Companies Snap 'Em Up

By ALEXANDER L. CROSBY

NEW YORK, Mar. 21—(FP)—Striking evidence of the tieup between daily newspapers and employers in making war against labor rather than against the Axis was provided this week by the New York World-Telegram, key paper in the Scripps-Howard chain.

On March 5 the World-Telegram topped its front page with an 8-column editorial that labor readers considered a powerful blow against national unity. Headed "Wake Up, America—it's Late!" the editorial charged that labor was blocking 7-day war production and revived the old myth that France fell because of a pampered working class.

Citing WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson's appeal for maximum production, the editorial said it could not be achieved so long as 16 obstacles remained. Seven of these were ascribed to labor, four to government, three to maintenance of such social services as aid to the unemployed, one to the farm bloc and one to enemy espionage.

Employers were blamed for absolutely nothing.

Because of the phony attack on labor and the complete whitewashing of employers, the editorial was written to order for corporations anxious to take a swipe at unions without running afoul of the Wagner Act. And how they jumped for it!

200,000 REPRINTS

Lee Wood, executive editor of the Roy Howard paper, is known to have told one small employer that the World-Telegram had given 200,000 reprints to employers throughout the metropolitan area for distribution to their workers.

"We have had requests from all over," Woods said. "That editorial probably had the widest circulation of any we have ever published. Bundles of 25 to 7,500 copies have gone out. The Fifth Ave. Coach Co. and Gimbel's department store got plenty. One manufacturer in Bridgeport, Conn., is reprinting the editorial in his house organ."

At the big Gimbel Bros. store, the World-Telegram's reprints were distributed together with a letter from Pres. Bernard F. Gimbel to his brother, Managing Director Frederic A. Gimbel. "I feel sure this forceful editorial will impress you and every reader as strongly as it does me," Bernard wrote to Fred on March 9.

'NOT AGAINST LABOR'

Asked for his reasons for handing out the anti-labor blast from the city's most anti-labor daily, Bernard Gimbel told Federated Press:

"I didn't think it was directed at labor. I had no idea about that. I just thought it was so good that I sent it to each of the store hands. Whether the World-Telegram charged me for the copies, I don't know."

At Bloomingdale's another large department store, the same editorial was recommended to the employes by Sidney Reisman, general merchandise manager. He suggested that it would be a fine idea for department store workers to adopt the 7-day week!

GE Criticized

New York, March 21—Action of the General Electric Co. in reprinting in its own house organ the Scripps-Howard editorial attacking labor was attacked this week by the CIO Electrical Workers in a full-page editorial printed in the UE News.

"We do not think the General Electric Co. has any business in the camp of Roy Howard, or any legitimate reason to spread his propaganda," the union paper said.

"Our job is to build the unity that the appeasers would destroy."

Locals Back Fishermen's Council Plan

Seattle, Wash., March 21—The Industry Council plan of the CIO International Fishermen and Allied Workers was approved unanimously at a meeting of all Puget Sound affiliates of the union held recently at Anacortes, Wash.

Speakers stressed the importance of greater cooperation between labor and industry to solve the mutual problems such as the securing of early agreements and the maintaining of sufficient key men, both fishermen and cannery workers so that production would not be retarded.

The meeting also pledged full cooperation of all groups in securing old netting for the Navy, which needs large quantities for camouflage purposes.

Jersey Publisher Cited By Court

Newark, N. J., March 21—(FP)—S. I. Newhouse, the little Hitler of the newspaper industry, lost another battle in his perpetual war against labor when the U. S. circuit court in Philadelphia held him in contempt for failure to reinstate Agnes Fahy, former president of the Newark Newspaper Guild, CIO.

Miss Fahy was fired from the Newark Star-Ledger (then the Ledger) on Sept. 22, 1937, for guild activity. The court ordered her reinstatement with back pay on May 2, 1941. This time the three judges set a deadline for compliance.

Stone Union Wins Another

Hamilton, Ohio, March 21—Branch 49, United Stone and Allied Products Workers of America, (CIO) won wage increases of ten cents an hour plus a bonus for workers in the American Materials Corp. plant here, it was announced by John C. Lawson, International secretary-treasurer.

Tories Try 'Knife In Back' Stunt As Labor Pushes Output Plans

Many Councils Already Functioning

WASHINGTON, March 21—Industrial America today was blue-printing ever greater anti-Axis war production, with plans for joint labor-management councils receiving widespread approval and quick action.

Following quickly after suggestions by President Roosevelt, War Production Chief Donald Nelson and CIO President Murray, the councils were being set up in hundreds of plants throughout the country.

WPB scheduled a series of three regional meetings to acquaint both labor and management with details of the set-up, under which plant committees will sift suggestions for increasing the production of essential war material.

CONFERENCE TO ACT

The CIO conference in Washington this week is expected to devote much attention to the problem of making the committees fully effective, while John Brophy, director of industrial union councils, urged city and state CIO groups to help coordinate work of the committees in their communities.

The Steel Workers Organiznig Committee, through Chairman Murray, moved quickly to spur production in the nation's No. 1 basic industry.

"The SWOC is prepared, at any date and place designated, to have available committees to meet with the representatives of the central management of each of the companies to formulate an immediate program for obtaining maximum production at these steel plants," Murray said.

UNION PLEDGED

He reminded the companies that the steel union "has given its pledge to the nation that it will do all is humanly possible to accomplish the task that has been set forth by the President of the United States."

In New York, the General Electric Co., nation's largest electrical equipment manufacturer, announced that together with the CIO Electrical & Radio Workers, it will establish the joint committees immediately. Following a course already set by Westinghouse, GE said that departmental committees would consider all problems of increased production.

To allow these groups complete attention on the main production job, they will have no responsibility on questions of wages, hours or other collective bargaining problems, it was announced, with these tasks remaining in the province of existing union machinery.

TELL PROBLEM

At the first of WPB's regional meetings, held in New York City, numerous union representatives told of the problems existing in their plants.

They told of the great need for coordinating plans, so that ideas worked out in one plant may be quickly spread to others in the same industry. A union representative from the Ford Instrument Co. said that a "suggestion box" for workers had brought in 176 ideas on quicker production, many of which had led to speedier output.

In Buffalo, N. Y., CIO officials attending a Victory Production Committee session mapped plans for increasing war output in the upstate area. The question of "beating divans into gunstocks" was discussed at a meeting in Manhattan of the CIO furniture workers, with plans advanced for turning small shops into war producers.

The United Federal Workers, in a series of suggestions to the WPB, urged the government participate in joint councils in Navy Yards and arsenals, as well as other federally owned factories.

We'll Work To Win

CONFERENCE: Representatives of industry and labor mulled over production problems at this joint conference in New York, staged under War Production Board auspices. Thirty others are being held throughout the nation as part of "We'll Work to Win" program to speed arms output.

Strong Smell of Fish To 'Public Protest' Against Labor Rights

WASHINGTON, March 21—Remember the howl about "CIO goon squads" and high-pressuring on Congressmen when labor's protest stopped one of the earlier versions of "Poll Tax" Smith's attack on unions last year?

To listen to it, you'd think that American labor and the CIO in particular had a vast organized pressure machine that could be turned on by a flip of a switch to bulldoze honest statesmen into voting against their country.

Now take a look at this, speaking of pressure campaigns organized behind the current Smith bill to outlaw union security and overtime pay for overtime work:

Speaking in the House this week, Rep. Rizley of Oklahoma waves a "petition" against the 40-hour week signed by 4,842 citizens of Enid, Okla. The petition, of course, was written and circulated by some individual—and must have been circulated in some organized manner.

Now look at the Rand-McNally Atlas, and you find that Enid has 26,399 inhabitants. Take the standard family average of five people, and you have the signature of practically every adult family head in the town on a petition calling for drastic anti-union legislation. It looks fishy!

Or take Sen. W. Lee O'Daniel of Texas, who uses up a column of fine print in the Record to file a similar petition signed by several hundred air raid wardens in Dallas—obviously acting on the "suggestion" of a higher-up in command.

Remember, this is supposed to represent a "spontaneous uprising" by the outraged people of the United States.

Heres' How Smith Bill Hits You--

Washington, March 21—Real purpose of the Smith bill, hidden behind all the clamor about strikes in war production industry and refusal of workers to work more than 40 hours a week is seen in a brief study of the bill itself, which provides:

1. That no union contract shall be lawful if it provides union security—i.e., if it includes the closed shop, union shop, preferential shop or any other similar formula that unions use to protect their members in dealings with employers.

2. That no union contract providing more than regular rates of pay for overtime work shall be considered lawful.

Despite all the clamor about the 40-hour week, the bill simply cuts off overtime pay for overtime work—since there are no laws in the country prohibiting work over that amount of time. All that union contracts do is require extra pay for overtime work.

U. S. Halts Waste Of Metals by GM

Washington, March 21—Acting on complaints of the CIO United Automobile Workers, the federal government this week tightened up loopholes in its metal-saving orders. The War Production Board banned use of precious metals like zinc, copper, aluminum and chrome for automobile replacement parts.

The UAW-CIO pointed out that while General Motors Ternstedt Division was using up the metals for "luxury production," output at the GM Allison aircraft engine plant was menaced by a critical shortage of the same materials.

U. S. Probing Texas Cop for Part in Beating

Washington, March 21—The Federal Bureau of Investigation is probing the activities of Police Chief Arthur Baker of Port Arthur, Tex., who led a gang of cops in the recent brutal beating of an official of the Oil Workers organizing campaign.

Edwin S. Smith, director of the campaign, said he had been informed by the Dept. of Justice that the probe is already under way. The investigation was demanded by Smith and Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization.

Unions End Strikes, Labor Tells FDR

WASHINGTON, March 21—Labor's Victory Board met again with President Roosevelt on Tuesday, discussing among other things the anti-labor drive in Congress.

"It was agreed that labor's voluntary action to eliminate strikes was a more satisfactory answer to the question of uninterrupted production than resort to restrictive legislative actions," CIO Pres. Philip Murray told reporters as the group left the White House.

"The President is in agreement that the performance of labor in production is exceptional and, of course, satisfactory.

"The President expressed complete satisfaction with the spirit manifested by both the CIO and the AFL in eliminating jurisdictional questions that might cause strikes in certain industries."

FEW DISPUTES

AFL Pres. Wm. Green emphasized the fact that there are no strikes in war industries and that jurisdictional differences have been reduced to a minimum. He called attention to labor's agreement to settle all disputes peacefully.

"It was agreed," he said, "that the 40-hour week should be recognized as standard, with time-and-a-half for overtime. The question of whether double time should be paid on Sundays or on the seventh day of work was discussed. There is, of course, no limitation on working more than 40 hours, and continuous operations of plants for 24 hours a day is sought."

R. J. Thomas of the UAW-CIO and Julius Emspak of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers accompanied Murray, and Daniel Tobin and George Meany were the other AFL representatives attending the conference.

Murray Calls Special CIO Conference

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, March 21—Reaction's "spring drive against labor's part in the victory program," led off by the Smith bill to outlaw union security and abolish overtime pay, met with a heavy counter-attack from CIO this week, backed by outspoken Administration comment against the proposal.

Pres. Philip Murray announced the calling of a special conference of representatives from all CIO national and international unions Monday, March 23, and a special meeting of the CIO Executive Board for the following Tuesday. Six delegates from each union, plus two from each CIO council and one from each local industrial union, were urged as minimum attendance in Murray's call.

Two other major moves by President Murray marked the CIO counter-drive, while President Roosevelt, House Speaker Rayburn, Senator Thomas of Utah and other Congressional leaders joined in condemning the anti-labor bill as an attack on national unity and on the war effort.

Writing to all CIO affiliates, Murray described the Smith bill and others like it as a "menace to the military security of our country and of the United Nations" in its obvious attempt to smash unions now putting all their strength into victory production.

'WORK OF AXIS'

"The spring drive against labor's part in the victory program has begun in Congress," Murray wrote, "with Rep. Howard Smith presenting a bill to cancel all union contracts that provide for union security and overtime pay for overtime work. There is no doubt that Smith and his allies are doing the work of the Axis in pushing such a bill at this time."

President Murray also asked "full opportunity to be heard in testimony" against the bill, "with adequate time to prepare in advance."

Hark! Hark! The Dogs Do Bark!

A Treacherous Stab

It is shameful that American labor should have to defend itself from Congressional attack when the great production-for-victory drive demands its whole attention.

But a selfish tory and appeaser clique have chosen to push their own private war against labor in the midst of their country's life - and - death struggle against the Axis.

In the last war, the anti-union crowd postponed their wage-cutting open-shop drive until after the Armistice.

But today we find a well-financed propaganda campaign launched for union-smashing and wage-cutting while labor is girding for its supreme war production effort.

Its latest expression is the new Smith bill—a bill to break labor morale by dictating the open shop and slashing the wages of all war workers.

This treacherous stab in the back must be fended off. Quick action is necessary to avert disruptive internal conflict and to preserve national unity.

President Roosevelt has condemned this conspiracy. He has exposed the lies about non-existent strikes and non-existent limitations on working hours. He has asked an end to such Congressional assaults on labor, in the interests of united effort for more production to win the war.

Let's choke the chuckles in Hitler's throat. Let's knock the Smith bill on the head by making Congress aware of how the American people really feel. Wire or write at once to your representatives. Urge them to vote against the Smith bill and all other union-smashing, wage-cutting threats to labor's all-out production effort.

Taxes for Victory

Every fair-minded American will agree that the heavy tax burden to pay for this war should be so distributed as to prevent profiteering, to fall chiefly on those best able to pay, and to protect living standards necessary to maintain war production at a maximum.

Those are the principles on which the CIO based its program for increased taxation of high profits; for increased income taxes without lowering present exemptions; for closing of loopholes whereby the wealthy escape paying their fair share; for increased estate and gift taxes; for excise taxes on luxury goods; and for no general sales taxes or flat wage taxes.

CIO President Philip Murray describes the tax program which the U. S. Treasury has presented to Congress as "sound in principle and worthy of support," because it is based in general upon the above-mentioned principles.

The Treasury program, however, does not go far enough in excess profits taxation, considering the huge war profits now being made. Profits in 1941 increased at least 30%, despite substantially higher taxes. Under the Treasury proposals, the credit for "average earnings" still allows many concerns to maintain excessive profits.

But the Treasury program does oppose the lowering of personal income tax exemptions to hit the underpaid. It does call for joint income tax returns to make wealthy couples pay more. It does close a number of present loopholes.

Above all, it strongly opposes general sales taxation, which is the favored proposal of the profiteers lobby to make the poor carry most of the tax burden which the rich should bear. The National Association of Manufacturers, for instance, is pushing for a federal sales tax of as much as 8%.

American working people will gladly pay their share for the war, Murray points out, but they will not "stand for proposals which seek to lay upon the lower income groups, already overtaxed, the whole financial burden of the war effort."

A big drive is on by selfish interests to protect profiteering by soaking the poor through sales taxes and the like. "If such proposals are to be defeated," Murray says, "labor and the other common people must make their voices heard overwhelmingly in the Congress."

Fight for Democracy

We are fighting a world war to defend democracy. One of the best ways to strengthen our home front is to practice what we preach and fight to defend.

That is why CIO spokesmen are making their voices heard in the Senate hearings on the Pepper bill to abolish the poll tax.

Now is the time to show the world that when we say democracy we mean democracy—the right of all citizens to vote, not just a well-to-do minority, as in the poll-tax states. Let's show Hitler we don't want any part of his system in these United States.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

ON THE CREST of a synthetic wave of manufactured demand for a crackdown on labor, Congressman Howard Smith surfboards into the news again—with another bill to disrupt war production.

This bill would slash the wages of all war workers by abolishing overtime pay rates; would launch an open-shop drive against unions by outlawing all forms of union security; and would destroy the labor protections of a dozen federal laws.

To this brazen call for a class war by employers against the working people, Smith adds a squeaky "profit-limit" note.

The 6% limit proposed on war contracts would not stop profiteering. A concern with many contracts could make many times 6% on investment.

General Motors, for instance, has $3,758,000,000 in war contracts. Under Smith's bill, its profits would be "limited" to 6% of this amount, or some $225,480,000—representing about a 20% profit on investment.

Compare this return with the 2½% which is all a worker can get when he invests his hard-earned savings in a defense bond or a savings account.

Smith's demand for war against the Axis is backed by the usual polltax clique and other Congressmen who claim they are responding to urgent "public demand."

This "public demand" consists of a concerted campaign in the big-business press and a manufactured "flood" of letters and wires to Congress, most of them in the same language.

It is a campaign based on a number of bold lies, following the Goebbels technique. And it is not unlikely that actual Hitler agents had a part in promoting this dissension-breeding propaganda.

Lie No. 1 is that war production is being hampered by strikes.

Actually there is not a single strike in a war industry. Organized labor voluntarily laid aside the strike weapon immediately upon the outbreak of war. Both CIO and AFL are successfully devoting their efforts to preventing strikes.

As a result, the number of man-days lost through strikes was reduced by 95% in January, 1942, as compared with January, 1941. It amounted only to three one-hundredths of one per cent of total man-days worked.

Lie No. 2 is that present working hours are limited to 40 a week.

Actually the 40-hour week is now rare in war industries. The average is 46 hours or more, according to the Labor Department, and many war plants have 48, 50, 55 and 60-hour shifts.

The Smith bill would not lengthen working hours. It would merely cut sharply the wages of millions of workers—in face of soaring living costs—by abolishing overtime rates.

Lie No. 3 is that labor causes are chiefly responsible for lagging war production.

Actually organized labor, and particularly the CIO, is the chief stimulator of increased production. It is the most active force demanding an end to the real causes of insufficient production.

A recent Labor Department survey reveals that of 600 corporations questioned, only two even claimed that overtime rates were a reason for not working longer hours.

Donald Nelson, head of the War Production Board, reports that the main reasons for present less-than-capacity production are lack of war contracts and shortage of materials, parts or equipment.

To such reasons may be added the selfish influence of dollar-a-year men who have resisted early plant conversion and other plans for expanding production which might injure profit interests.

The resignation of Robt. R. Guthrie from the War Production Board, on account of industry opposition within the WPB setup to prompt conversion of radio, refrigerator and other plants to war production, may lead to exposure of one of the major causes of delayed war output.

Hitler and Goebbels must be chuckling.

While American labor is bending every effort to the greatest production drive in history, Smith and his cronies are seizing the opportunity to promote a wholesale open-shop, wage-cutting drive.

They are backed by a big-business press, purveying the same sort of lies that Goebbels used in Germany and has long been exporting—lies designed to appeal to the selfish interests of the rich and to turn the middle classes against labor.

It is high time the American people served warning on these disrupters of national unity, who are playing the enemy's game—either to shut up, cease their disruptions and let us get on with the war, or suffer the consequences from an aroused electorate at the next elections.

Murray Hits Sales Tax:

Treasury Tax Proposals Win CIO Support

WASHINGTON, Mar. 21—Taxes for victory must be levied in a way that will ensure "maximum national effort in the prosecution of the war," Pres. Philip Murray said this week in outlining a six-point tax program to all CIO affiliates.

The CIO program backed the U. S. Treasury Department's proposals made earlier to Congress as "sound in principle" and sharply condemned the National Association of Manufacturers and other reactionary groups for promoting sales and wage taxes.

The Treasury proposals provide for "increased taxes and I believe that every American worker will gladly pay his share, but American workers will not stand for proposals which seek to lay upon the lower income groups, already overtaxed, the whole financial burden of the war effort," Murray said in his letter to CIO unions.

"Let there be no mistake about it," he warned, "every reactionary force in the nation will be devoting its maximum effort for the passage of such vicious taxes. If such proposals are to be defeated, labor and the other common people of the nation must make their voices heard overwhelmingly in Congress."

WAGE CUTS

NAM and other schemes for a general sales tax of eight percent on all goods workers buy would mean a wage cut not only of eight percent but of eight percent "plus the accumulated price increases resulting from such a tax," Murray added.

If the new tax law is sound and fair, "it can be the means to keep the nation's economy operating effectively and to protect the production effort," Murray said. "It can on the other hand be used, as some want it to be used, as a device for slashing wages, for striking at the low income groups, for protecting the swollen profits of big corporations, and for hindering the production effort."

CIO PROGRAM

The CIO program, based on maximum revenue to help beat Hitler and on protection of the American people's living standards, calls for sharply increased excess profits and corporation taxes, for higher taxes on wealthy incomes, for closing present loopholes, and for avoidance of sales or flat wage taxes.

Increased income taxes were called for based on present exemption levels of $750 for single persons and $1,500 for married couples, plus increased rates and lowered exemptions on estate and gift taxes and higher excise taxes on luxury goods.

OPPOSE SALES TAX

Opposition to sales and flat wage taxes also came from the Treasury Dept., whose experts pointed out that any really sizable revenue to be raised from a sales tax would require taxing food and clothing as well as every other article the people buy.

Appearing at hearings before the House Ways and Means Committee, Prof. Wm. Withers of Queens College, N. Y., also condemned the NAM and similar sales tax proposals as unwise.

CIO Parley Called By Murray

in a letter to Rep. Carl Vinson, head of the House Naval Affairs Committee and one of the leaders in the anti-labor campaign.

Strong opposition to the Smith bill and similar measures was indicated by President Roosevelt in a White House press conference which followed a meeting with CIO and AFL leaders. Although direct quotes from the President's press conferences are not permitted, extended newspaper stories showed that he was firmly against repressive labor legislation now current in Congress.

President Roosevelt said that there was no strike problem at the present time; that labor was doing its part of the victory production job wholeheartedly; that almost all arms workers are working considerably more than 40 hours a week; and that obstacles to greater production came from materials shortages, not from strikes or refusals to work more than 40 hours.

The President hit sharply at newspaper propaganda on the production situation, pointing to one paper that gave page-one play to a strike of 15 metal polishers as an example of deliberate exaggeration.

Commenting on an individual who wrote that strikes were obviously to blame for military reserves, he said that by the same reasoning we should be in Berlin today, were it not for the common cold which causes far more manday losses than any other factor.

RAYBURN TOO

House Speaker Rayburn, though less emphatic than the President, also opposed the sweatshop proposals in a press conference, citing statistics to show that on March 17, 1942, only 100 workers were on strike, out of 7.5 million on war work. Rayburn also blamed industrial conditions for production lags, saying:

"Last Sunday it came over the radio that in one state some war industries were running only 49 per cent of capacity, the clear inference being that it was on account of labor disputes. At that time there was not a man on strike in that state. It is a shortage of materials, not a shortage of management or labor."

THOMAS SPEECH

Speaking in extended debate in the Senate on the subject, Senator Thomas of Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, went into great detail in praise of labor's war effort and in explaining the actual status of labor's production drive. Thomas was joined by Senators Barkley, Ellender and Mead in the course of the discussion.

"The labor record of the people of the U. S. has been beyond belief," Thomas said. The Senator singled out tanker seamen for special praise, pointing out that "the men who man our tankers today are acting in accordance with the labor laws of the U. S., they are hired from the hiring halls, they are just as loyal, just as patriotic as any others . . . and they are dying in greater numbers, probably, than any other group."

Text of Murray Letter Assailing Smith Bill

WASHINGTON, March 21—Full text of President Murray's letter to all CIO affiliates and Regional Directors warning them of the reactionary drive in Congress against labor and the victory production program, represented by Congressman Howard Smith's bill to outlaw union security and overtime pay contracts:

"The spring drive against labor's part in the victory program has begun in Congress, with Representative Howard Smith presenting a bill to cancel all union contracts that provide for union security and overtime pay for overtime work.

"There is no doubt that Smith and his allies are doing the work of the Axis in pushing such a bill at this time. American labor has repeatedly made clear its eagerness to do everything possible for maximum war production to enable the United Nations to take the offensive.

"Following out our program set forth months ago, labor and management are moving to set up joint victory production committees throughout industry. The President of the United States and the head of the War Production Board have called on us, and we have accepted the call, to bend every effort in that program.

"Representative Smith's bill seeks to nullify these efforts by destroying at one blow the whole structure of collective bargaining built up over many years of effort and cooperation. Leaders in public affairs, led by President Roosevelt, have joined in condemning such a conspiracy against labor's welfare and against the victory program. American labor must rouse itself today to fight off this conspiracy as it has never been aroused before.

LABOR'S ALARM

"Already many thousands of letters have reached me voicing labor's alarm at this threat to our nation's security. This alarm must be made articulate to Congress, so that they may know that American labor is concerned and aroused. I urge all CIO affiliates and members to take such necessary steps at once.

"It is my intention to call a national emergency conference of CIO representatives in Washington as early as possible to map out our campaign. In the meantime, we must not lose a moment in countering the passage of the Smith measure.

"A great deal more than labor's rights is at stake. The Smith bill and proposals like it menace the military security of our country and of the United Nations."

Dixie Waits Major Talk By Murray

Charlotte, N. C., March 21—Philip Murray, president of the CIO, will be the principal speaker at a big Southern textile workers rally in the City Armory here at 2:30 p.m. March 29.

Pres. Murray will come to Charlotte for his second appearance in the South since taking office as the CIO president and spokesman of 5,000,000 organized American workers. His first speaking engagement in Dixie was in Chattanooga, Tenn., during the dedication of Chicamauga dam.

BOARD MEETING

With thousands of textile workers expected to attend the rally from Textile Workers Union of America locals throughout the Carolinas, Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama, the TWUA will hold its spring executive board meeting beginning the same day.

Pres. Emil Rieve of the TWUA said the entire Southern staff of the union would be called here for the Murray address and that Gov. J. M. Broughton of North Carolina, Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University of North Carolina and a number of others of like prominence have been asked to attend.

'Right You Are', Nelson Tells Jersey CIO As Tories Fume

WASHINGTON, March 21—Production in New Jersey's war industries hovers around the 50 per cent level, as charged by the CIO, War Production Chief Donald Nelson acknowledged today.

Four principal factors are responsible, Nelson wrote to Jersey's Senator J. W. Barbour in commenting on statements by President Irving Abramson of the State CIO.

Significantly, the question of overtime pay for work of more than 40 hours a week is not considered by employers to influence the situation, it appeared from the Nelson statement, despite the furious Congressional propaganda barrage against overtime pay.

After noting Abramson's charges that production has a long way to climb to attain full efficiency, Nelson cited five principal reasons for the 50 per cent use of factory production:

1. Shortage of materials, parts or equipment.
2. Lack of war contracts.
3. Shortage of skilled labor.
4. Various technical difficulties.
5. Racial discrimination.

Nelson said the WPB studies in other states have shown that the question of U. S. war contracts is the most frequently-stated reason for low production levels, and expressed hope that new "government procurement methods" will smash that bottleneck.

MAKING OWN SURVEY

"We are now making a plant-to-plant check on operations in New Jersey," the WPB administrator declared. "As far as possible we shall try to work out some means of insuring 24-hour-a-day production in every plant making war goods where the productive capacity is limited."

Nelson admitted the prevalence of racial discrimination against minority groups, another point cited by Abramson as both hurting production and destroying morale.

"It is unfortunately true that our records show a considerable degree of racial discrimination in industries in New Jersey," Nelson said. "Our Labor Division has been working on this problem and is able to report some improvement."

CIO SURVEY

Abramson's charges were made in a report sent to Nelson early this month after a detailed study of industrial capacity in a number of selected factories made by the state CIO.

The study found 77 plants employ only 99,000 workers, as against a potential of 199,297. Only 13 of the 77 plants work on Sundays, the CIO discovered, and only 35 on Saturdays.

Nelson's confirmation of the CIO charges was ab low to the reactionary state chamber of commerce, which had issued a blanket denial of the allegations and deplored the CIO criticism as shaking morale "by statements that are not substantiated by thorough technical analysis and knowledge of the actual facts."

WE'LL WORK TO WIN!

CIO President Philip Murray's recent radio speech expressing labor's acceptance of the call for all-out production for an offensive and for victory, heard by millions of Americans over the Blue Network, has been printed in pamphlet form for mass distribution.

Keynote of the speech is labor's readiness to "Work, Work, Work—Produce, Produce, Produce" for a United Nations drive to crush the Hitler Axis.

Democracy for the South:

Poll Tax Must Go For Sake of Nation, Senate Group Told

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Mar. 21—Can the United States effectively lead a world-wide fight for democracy while it still bars the vote to millions of its own citizens?

That was the paramount question discussed this week at Senate Judiciary Subcommittee poll tax hearings by a number of prominent Southern progressives. Their answer was a vigorous, emphatic "no", coupled with demands for passage of the Pepper Bill (S. 1280) to end the voting tax in eight southern states.

Representatives of labor organizations, the press and civic groups, they told a tale of corruption, autocracy and reaction, all stemming out of the semi-feudal system by which men and women are forced to pay for what the Constitution states to be a right—the right of citizens of the United States to vote for their governmental leaders.

The poll tax affects every American citizen, these spokesmen for the south told the Judiciary Committee hearings. For restrictions on voters have brought into Congress too many job-secure political representatives of a small number of big farmers, big bankers and big corporation owners.

SEN. CLAUDE PEPPER
Sponsors Anti-Poll Tax Bill

POLL TAXER AT WORK

And in Washington the spokesmen of the "economic elite" wield power far beyond their numbers. While the hearings were in session at the House Office Building, Howard Smith of Virginia—a typical poll tax reactionary—was offering Congress a new bill to hamstring all labor. Northerners and southerners suffer alike from the poll tax, both Rep. Smith and the committee witnesses made clear.

The poll tax still exists in Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Texas, Tennessee and Arkansas. In each of these states the tax varies from $1 to $2; and in some it's retroactive. If you miss paying it one year, you have to pay an accumulated tax the next.

HOW IT WORKS

Here's the way the poll tax operates in Georgia, as it was described by Miss Lucy Randolph Mason, public relations director of the CIO in the South and herself the descendant of an old Virginia family:

"Well, suppose I am very poor, and I did not get to pay my poll tax this year, and figure I'll try to catch up next year. Next year I have $2.07 to pay for the last year, and then if I do not catch up, I have $3.07 to pay. Suppose that lapses again, the third year I have to pay $5.14.

"In other words, it quickly gets to the point where, if I am poor, I cannot pay at all, and it creates a condition where I cannot pay. That is what comes of what they say is 'just a dollar' poll tax.

"The situation is extremely dangerous, because these unrepresented people, these voteless people, are exploited. They are unable to right their wrongs, and that is a most dangerous thing to the American system."

COLD STATISTICS

William Mitch, CIO head in Alabama and president of the state district of the United Mine Workers, offered the committee some telling statistics.

Referring to the 1940 elections, he showed how the poll tax sweeps aside vast sections of the southern population. Iowa and Alabama, for instance, have nearly equal populations; but Iowa cast 1,209,000 votes, and Alabama only 206,000.

The population of agricultural Kansas is roughly equal to that of either Mississippi or of Arkansas. But Kansas cast almost four times as many votes as the two poll tax states put together.

Illinois, which has 29 men in Congress, cast more votes than all the poll tax states together—but they have 94 votes in Congress!

Pointing to the significance of these figures, Mitch declared:

"Labor knows that it is the poor man, whether white or black, that has suffered under this anti-American and undemocratic survival of feudalism."

The poll tax is not only reactionary—it's corrupt, as well, the Senate group was told by Bernard Borah, a Tennessee official of District 50, United Mine Workers. He told how office-seeking politicians buy blocks of poll tax receipts and distribute them to the persons they know "will vote right."

One type of corruption breeds another, and in Memphis, where the powerful Crump machine bases its power both on control of the polls and the poll taxes, strange faces aren't desired around the election booths.

ASSAULT AT POLLS

William Berry, a local representative of the CIO Cannery Workers in Memphis told this story:

"During the state election primary, myself and about five others went to the polls to vote. We were accosted by watchers, or whatever they were, around at the stockyard polls. In this particular instance, the fellows threatened and actually snatched pencils and things out of our hands and tried to make us vote like they wanted us to do.

"We wanted to do our own marking, and they got hostile and ran us away.

"At least two fellows in that party had their poll tax paid. It had been paid by the company they worked for, and they were told to go to the polls and vote.

"If they didn't vote like the superintendent told them to, they would lose their jobs."

The poll tax stands as a barrier to effective union organizing, Harry Koger of the Cannery Workers declared.

In Arkansas, he testified, "the officials are elected by the top-ranking farmers, by plantation owners. That makes it absolutely impossible for the sharecroppers and the farm laborers to have any representation.

"They have practically no voice in the running of their government, from their precinct or county on up to the national government."

CIO organizers were run out of Helena, Ark., by a vigilante mob last September, Koger recalled.

"We appealed to the officers for protection, but they positively refused to furnish it," he added. "Of course we know why it is, because the working people there have very little or nothing to say as to who their county officers will be."

WHAT TO DO?

How can the poll tax be removed? It's well nigh impossible to do it in the states themselves, because the small gangs of reactionaries who control most of the government machinery won't permit it.

These men, obviously, don't intend to vote themselves out of office by removing the poll tax. In Alabama, according to CIO Regional Director Yelverton Cowherd, it will take a special amendment to the state constitution to bring about any such change.

Nobody has the slightest hope of that, he indicated in a prediction that the tax will be removed only by federal action.

The Pepper Bill, which is endorsed by all branches of labor and by scores of progressive organizations, may get bottled up in the Senate Judiciary Committee if friends of democracy aren't alert. Why not write to members of the subcommittee which has been holding the hearings and urge quick action on the bill?

Send your cards or letters to Senators J. C. O'Mahoney, Wyoming; Abe Murdock, Utah; George Norris, Nebraska; W. R. Austin, Vermont; and Tom Connally of Texas. Every call for action will be an investment in democracy for millions of voteless southerners and for you, too.

WOMEN'S CORNER

By ELEANOR FOWLER,
Secretary-Treasurer, Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries

THOUSANDS of signatures to a statement urging Leon Henderson to extend rationing and to fix retail prices is the goal of a drive launched by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO in a letter to all affiliates.

"Our nation's victory program is impeded by profiteering and hoarding," the letter points out, "because they weaken the strength and morale of the worker on whom the battle of production depends, by constantly raising prices beyond the reach of his income, even where raises in wages have been won. They weaken the government's war program by putting in the pockets of the profiteers money which should go into the war savings bonds so the government can buy more ships and planes."

Plea to OPA

The statement, addressed to Leon Henderson, which will be circulated in each community by auxiliary women all over the country, reads as follows:

"As an American housewife, I want to help my country win the war. I know that there are many things I will not be able to buy because my country needs the materials for war. I am happy to do without these things. I have pledged to waste nothing and to take care of what I have.

"I also know that the health and morale of my family is important to winning the war. I cannot do my part to keep up that health and morale if every day my cost of living rises; if selfish people with money can buy up and hoard not only their share, but mine, of goods that are short.

"I know that you have the power to set a fair price on the things I buy. I know that you can ration things in addition to tires and sugar and so make it possible for my family to get its share.

"I therefore urge you, Mr. Henderson, to insure my family its fair share of goods by rationing all scarce goods and by setting prices above which my merchant may not charge me."

An increase over the December price of more than 1c on five pounds of sugar is profiteering pure and simple, Leon Henderson wrote to an auxiliary member in Philadelphia. Yet, the Auxiliary Congress points out, sugar prices have risen 1, 2 and even 3c on a pound in various cities. A fixed retail price is the only answer to such wholesale profiteering.

WPB Boosts Women For

Washington, March 21—War contractors were told this week to "consider the employment of women with an open mind, and recognize that there is, as always, a training job to do," in a bulletin released by Sidney Hillman, Labor Director of the War Production Board.

The bulletin, prepared by the Training-Within-Industry Branch of the WPB, suggests methods for fitting women workers into the war labor force as rapidly as possible.

"Employing a woman for any job that she can do, or can learn to do, will release a man either for work not suitable for women or for active armed service," the bulletin states.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

President Murray has correctly described the current Smith bill to outlaw union contracts as "the spring drive against labor's part in the victory production program," and has called on all CIO affiliates and members to resist the bill as an aid to the Axis.

Congressman Smith and his ultra-reactionary allies are more determined to beat down labor than they are to fight Hitler. Such bills at this time are more than ever a menace to the labor movement and to the nation—they threaten our entire security and the military security of the United Nations.

The American labor movement, led by the CIO, has stopped Smith and his polltax gang before. We can do it again, but only if everybody gets busy at once and stays busy until the job is done.

The Smith bill is aimed at one target—labor's victory production drive. The CIO has condemned it. President Roosevelt has condemned it. All labor and all people who want to win the war must join together in defeating it.

Reports Describe Successes

From Alameda, California, comes word of a 159-to-1 election victory won by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee at the Boyle Mfg. Co. Nobody knows what the one anti-CIO voter may be thinking about.

The Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers have won two elections in the Philadelphia area, according to Regional Director George Craig. One was in the West Tool Co., where the vote was 174 for CIO, 27 for no union, and the other at the Empire Ordnance Co., where the count was 408 for CIO, 52 for AFL.

From Chicago Regional Director Fullerton Fulton reports that he has been appointed to the Illinois War Labor Standards Board, which will control application of the one day in seven rest law and the eight hours work for women law in war industries.

Peter Campbell, regional director in Louisville, Ky., reports a contract won by the Natl. Maritime Union increasing wages 18 per cent for 600 workers, winning the union shop and other important gains.

Shoe Workers Get Pact

Five thousand shoe workers in Haverhill, Mass., employed in a dozen factories have won a contract with the closed shop, substantial increases and an impartial arbitrator with a full time technical assistant. Joe Kovner of this office helped United Shoe Workers Representative Harry Cappel in winning the agreement.

Wage rises of nine cents an hour, two weeks' severance pay for workers joining the armed forces, and other improvements were negotiated by the Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers with the Electro-Dynamic Co., a subsidiary of the Electric Boat Co., at Bayonne, N. J.

Employes of Sonotone Corporation, Elmsford, N. Y., chose the UE in a Labor Board election by a seven to four majority.

Immediate seven-cent wage rises, with five cents more on Aug. 5, are included in the union contract renewed by the UE and the Parker Kalon Co., New York.

UE Local 825, a small arms local in St. Louis, Mo., is sponsoring a weekly radio broadcast over Station WTMV each Monday night at 6:30 p. m.

LATE NEWS: The UERMW has won another New Jersey election, this time at the Montclair plant of the George Rutledge Co. The vote was 258 to 6. The SWOC in California also reports another win at the U. S. Steel Corp in Alameda, where the score was 368 to 11.

CIO Marine Plan OK'd; East Coast Shape-Up Racket May Face Skids

Washington, March 21—Official announcement of the appointment of Wayne L. Morse, west coast labor arbitrator, to be head of the Pacific Coast Maritime Industrial Board climaxed a four-month drive by the Intl. Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union for adoption of its victory production plan for quicker shiploading.

The plan, one of the first CIO production blueprints to be adopted, was bitterly opposed by Joe Ryan, czar of the Intl. Longshoremen's Assn. on the east coast. This opposition, ILWU officials said, came from Ryan's "fear that a government agency might be forced, in the interest of efficiency, to eliminate the shape-up and other practices fostered by him to maintain his power."

SHAPE-UP IN DANGER

The shape-up, which forces hundreds of men to line up on the docks for the few jobs available, has been under fire of the unions for years, and has been particularly sharply attacked since the burning of the Normandie, because it could allow saboteurs easy access to the docks. One of the first gains made by the ILWU on the west coast was its abolition and the institution of the union hiring hall.

Shiploading conditions on the east coast are marked by extreme delays and gross inefficiency in stowing cargo that has forced several arms ships to turn back from voyages in order to avoid capsizing, CIO maritime union officials revealed here.

Appointed

Chicago, March 21—Miss Mary Smith, secretary of Local 25, Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, has been named organizing chairman of the Red Cross union unit recently formed here.

Big Role Seen For Councils On Production Problems

DONATE BLOOD: Jean Dickinson, opera star, signs the Red Cross blood donor pledge while President Joseph Selly of the American Communications Association, CIO, waits his turn at union-sponsored rally in New York to spur war aid.

By JOHN BROPHY

Director of Industrial Union Councils

Since Pres. Philip Murray first announced the Industry Council Plan, in 1940, the government has been obliged by the necessities of the times to accept a number of the fundamental recommendations which that plan contained. As time goes on, we shall see these proposals adopted more and more completely, because there is no other way of doing the war production job.

The extent to which the labor-management production committees ordered by President Roosevelt and Donald Nelson fulfill the expectations of the government and of the unions will depend in large measure upon the unions themselves.

JOB FOR COUNCILS

Industrial union councils have an important role to play in this preliminary work of setting up the new plant production committees. They will bear in mind, of course, that the job in each plant is primarily the responsibility of the local union union and its parent international. Councils will not interfere with measures taken by the international unions in this field, nor attempt to dictate to their locals.

Every modern industrial community, however, is a unit, in which the various plants and other industrial facilities are highly interdependent.

COMMUNITY PROBLEM

For example, in a given community a number of members of one CIO union, engaged, let us say, in manufacturing clocks, may lose their jobs because priorities have shut off essential materials. In another plant, the production of automobile parts may give way to the manufacture of precision instruments for airplanes.

The workers in the clock factory are experienced in making parts similar to those used in the planes, and it is not only feasible but highly desirable that the airplane equipment manufacturer subcontract the work of producing these parts to the clock concern.

The city industrial union council is the proper agency to bring the unions in the two plants together so that appropriate suggestions can be made to the management of both concerns and to the appropriate government officials.

RESPONSIBILITIES

In many respects our city and county councils will have serious responsibilities in these matters. It is desirable that suitable committees or officials be designated to assume those responsibilities. It will be their duty to coordinate the production planning activities of all CIO locals on a community level, with due regard for the commitments of those locals to their internationals.

Space prevents an elaboration at this time on the many duties which should be assumed by such Central Production Committees attached to CIO councils.

They should concern themselves, among other things, with the making of suitable surveys and analyses of productive facilities, in terms of plants, machinery, equipment, and men. They should see that these facilities are utilized more and more effectively in the war effort, with full participation and supervision by organized labor itself.

Further analysis of these problems will be undertaken in these columns in succeeding issues.

Lorillard Signs, Ends Long Fight

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio, March 21—Union Leader pipe tobacco and Beech-Nut chewing tobacco have gone CIO with a check-off after a five-year struggle between the P. Lorillard Company and the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America.

The contract, signed early this month, calls for solid seniority, grievance procedure and wage increases as well as a provision for the "Union Agency" plan which says, in effect, that since all workers are being serviced by the union, each should pay his share of the cost.

Dues payments are checked off for members of the union and for non-members as well—the latter charge being considered in the nature of a service charge because the union represents them as well.

A general wage-increase of six cents an hour is provided, with individual adjustments ranging as high as 11 cents.

Donald Henderson, president of UCAPAWA, said that the labor movement was "proud of the members of Local 55 who refused to be licked by either bayonets, long delays in the courts or by anti-union pressure in the shop and community for five long years."

Women Win Equal Wages

Minneapolis, Minn., March 21—Equal pay for women doing work equal to that of men employes is an outstanding feature of a contract signed between the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers and the Moline Power Implement Co. here. Guthrie, On Stand, Bares $1-Year Influence in WPB

WASHINGTON, Mar. 21—Support for Robert R. Guthrie, former head of the Textile branch of the War Production Board who resigned in protest at "business-as-usual" policies of many industrial representatives in the WPB, was expressed by the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers in a letter from its Washington representative, Russ Nixon, to WPB Chief Donald Nelson.

The union also urged reinstatement of Guthrie, warning that "short of this, the faith we have in the Board's determination to do a job of all-out production will be sorely shaken."

Pointing out that the UERMW together with the rest of the CIO, has consistently demanded quick conversion of industry to war production, the letter added that opposition to these plans "has stemmed from the same persons within the Board who are responsible for the resignation of Mr. Guthrie."

THREE PROBES

Meantime, three separate inquiries were ordered started into the Guthrie resignation, one by the Truman Committee in the Senate, another by the House Military Affairs Committee and the third within the WPB itself.

Guthrie's letter of resignation earlier in the week criticized failure to achieve all-out conversion to war production. He had been known on the Board for his strong position on the need to over-ride "business-as-usual" in the interests of victory.

GUTHRIE TESTIFIES

Appearing before an unsympathetic sub-committee of the House Military Affairs Committee, Guthrie told of his experiences in the jungles of the dollar-a-year men's hangout.

He described his discovery that the radio industry was using for home radios about half the aluminum it had used in the peak months of 1941, enough aluminum to build three bombers a month.

Guthrie directed that the supply of the precious metal for the month of March be shut off entirely to the radio industry. His order was not approved.

He charged that Thomas Evans, head of an electric refrigerator trade association, had been handled with kid gloves by a number of high WPB officials, among them Philip Reed, former boss of General Electric. Evans was lobbying for greater refrigerator production, and was stopped only by strong protests from Price Administrator Leon Henderson.

CALLED ON CARPET

Guthrie said he was called on the carpet by Reed, head of WPB's Bureau of Industry Branches, who accused him of being "suspicious" of big business.

"He explained," Guthrie said, "that I should consider the fact that a man was here at $1 a year as proof of his patriotism."

Guthrie, a Paducah, Ky., department store official and a director of the White Sewing Machine Co., resigned all his corporate positions when he came to Washington.

Suit Makers Win Dime Increase

New York, March 21—A general wage increase of 10 cents an hour for 135,000 men's clothing workers in all parts of the nation has been tentatively accepted by negotiators for the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and the United States Clothing Manufacturers Association.

Adding $25,000,000 to the industry's annual payroll, the new schedule will be added to a wage increase totaling $18,000,000 annually won by the Amalgamted on May 15.

The new increase represents a compromise between the union's demand and the association's offer and will give the workers an increase of $3.60 for the standard work week of 36 hours.

Chief spokesmen for the ACW were Frank Rosenblum, executive vice-president and Jacob S. Potofsky, general secretary-treasurer. They said that 50,000 of the men's clothing workers affected worked in New York city and surrounding communities in New York and New Jersey.

Federal Union Demands FBI End 'Persecutions'

Washington, March 21—The time is long overdue for the FBI to stop harassing unionists and progressives in the Government service and concentrate on investigating Fascist influences and other elements disrupting the war effort.

This was the essence of a statement submitted today by the United Workers of America to the Senate Appropriations subcommittee considering the amount to be granted the FBI for the coming fiscal year.

The CIO union urged the subcommittee to impose the following limitations on the FBI:

1. A clear definition of subversive activity, such as "sabotage, espionage, or any other wilful activity intended to obstruct the war effort."
2. A specific prohibition against the use of FBI investigatory powers to destroy or interfere with the rights of Government workers to organize into trade unions and hold membership in recognized and lawful organizations.
3. A provision that any person found to be subversive by the FBI shall, before final decision is made, be granted a hearing, in accordance with recognized judicial practice, with the right of representation by union or attorney.

The United Federal Workers is seeking establishment of an impartial appeals board to hear all such cases.

WLB Grants Check-Off, Hedges on Security In Roller Bearing Case

WASHINGTON, March 21—A decision granting check-off of union dues but refusing a union-shop demand, though stating it might be considered later, has been handed down by the National War Labor Board in the settlement of the dispute between the United Automobile Workers and the Bower Roller Bearing Co., Detroit.

"In view of the fact that the company had itself established and for several years had followed the practice of deducting union dues of employes, members of an unaffiliated labor organization," the Board declared, "the panel recommended that the company should continue a similar type of arrangement with the United Automobile Workers and that it deduct and turn over to the union the monthly dues of the present members of the union who voluntarily agreed in writing to such deduction. The dues of employes who voluntarily join the union in the future shall likewise be deducted."

STATE REASONING

In rejecting the UAW's demand for a union shop, the recommendation of the three-men panel accepted by the Board stated:

"The undersigned are not prepared to recommend to the Board that they order the company to grant the union's demand for a union shop. These are the first contractual negotiations into which this union has entered with the Bower Company.

"There is no evidence before us of the presence of any other labor organization competing with this union for membership in the plant. The possibility referred to by the union that new employes may be less favorable to the union than those already in employment and may be influenced against the union by a paternalistic policy of the company, is a hypothetical danger whose reality the Panel is in no position to judge.

"It is a danger, moreover, which is faced by every union during its early organizing stage. If events prove this danger to be real, an opportunity to renew the demand will arise when negotiations begin for a new contract next year."

Washington CIO Hails Murray Stand On War, Unity

OLYMPIA, Wash., March 21—Washington State's CIO Council wound up a two-day annual convention here after voicing strong support for Pres. Roosevelt's war policies and giving a blanket endorsement to CIO Pres. Philip Murray's Industry Council Plan.

Declaring that "production of tanks, guns, ships and munitions must be doubled and redoubled and redoubled again to smash the Axis powers and safeguard American democracy," the 200 delegates voiced strong approval of a number of measures to strengthen Uncle Sam's military might in the important Pacific Northwest.

One demand of the convention, for the immediate construction of a new highway to connect the U. S. with Alaska, was followed shortly afterwards with a government announcement that the project was being started at once. There has been considerable demand for such a road from leading military officials, who hold it vital to defense of Alaska.

Pacific Northwest unions have long been advocating such a road as an "economic lifeline" to the Alaskan territory.

In other resolutions the convention approved evacuation of enemy aliens from the coast line area to internal sections of the country, but recommended that all possible aid be given them in settling down, gaining a livelihood and preventing their exploitation.

BACK MURRAY STAND

The convention lashed out at the Dies Committee, opposed sales tax plans, urged increased funds for the state welfare department, voiced support of Pres. Murray's labor unity proposals and demanded a voice for labor on all production committees and civilian defense councils.

Jack Bell, of the Mine Mill & Smelter Workers in Tacoma, was elected president of the council. H. I. Tucker of the Intl. Woodworkers was reelected secretary-treasurer and S. J. Brozovich of the United Mine Workers was returned to office as vice-president, both without opposition.

Klan Head Backs Dies Committee

Washington, March 21—"The Klu Klux Klan urges that the Dies Committee be continued . . ."

That was the order of J. A. Colescott, imperial wizard of the KKK, in a recent letter to all State Heads and King Kleagles. The letter was published in the Klan's official newspaper, The Fiery Cross. It was reprinted in the Congressional Record, March 18, following its disclosure by Congressman Adolph J. Sabath, of Illinois.

"The Dies Committee investigating un-American activities for the past few years, has accomplished great results," the KKK leader wrote. He then urged the nightshirters to collar their local Congressman in an effort to gain financial support for Dies.

Labor Poems, Articles Collected in New Book

WASHINGTON, March 21—Poems and articles written for Mid-West Labor, weekly CIO paper published in Duluth, Minn., have been reprinted in book form under the title "We're the People." The material, written by Irene Paull, appeared in Mid-West Labor under the pen name, "Calamity Jane."

"From week to week in the four and a half years since publication of Mid-West Labor began," says the foreword by the Mid-West Labor staff, "Irene Paull has pounded out her colorful report of labor's struggles and victories—events in which she has been an active participant."

In addition to reprints from the CIO weekly, the book contains a number of workers' ballads from lumber camps, mines and other scenes of working class life, expressing the hopes, hates, fears and pride of wage earners and jobless men. One which shows the bitterness and scorn felt for the scab, begins:

But I never yet scabbed on a man.
Yes, I'm an outcast, a tramp and a bum,
I'm shiftless and dirty to boot,
I don't care a rap for your smile or your frown,
Not a jot for your praise or your hoot;
I live like a beast, so you say in your scorn,
I'm a flaw in society's plan.
And you're right—I'm all these, and some more to boot.

CIO Waives Double-Time To Aid U. S. War Effort

CIO PLEDGES FULL AID: Two scenes at the special CIO conference in Washington last week, as the CIO promised all-out aid to the war effort, agreed to sacrifice double time for Sunday and holiday work, and in turn demanded 168-hour-a-week production by American industry. At left: Donald Nelson, War Production Board chairman, talks things over with Pres. Murray just before he addressed the meeting. At right: Delegates cheer Pres. Murray's recital of CIO accomplishments in support of the war.

Smith Slavery Bill Under Barrage From Labor, Gov't

WASHINGTON, March 28—Here's the score in the week's counter-attack against the Smith bill that would outlaw union security and overtime pay for overtime work—under the mask of improving war production. Note the line-up against it, and then note that everyone of these leaders and organizations agrees that the bill would be the best present Hitler could have.

President Roosevelt: told his press conference for the third time that the bill was unnecessary and would hurt the war effort, denounced the press and radio campaign for the bill as "6th column" work.

Donald Nelson: told the CIO conference and the public that the Smith bill would "cause a disturbance that may interfere with production and we cannot have that at this time." Nelson gave the same message to the Senate sub-committee on appropriations.

The CIO: blasted the bill at its meeting with 500 delegates present, renewed pledges of all-out production, no strikes, gave up double time on Sundays.

Philip Murray: told two Congress committees that the bill would "weaken the national war effort" by stabbing labor at its time of greatest concentration on work and production for victory.

William Green: told a House committee that the bill would "do a great deal of harm to America's war effort" by slapping loyal workers in the face.

Labor Secretary Perkins: told a Senate committee the facts on the work week, on strikes, that union security helps production, that the bill would hurt production by disrupting normal union procedures.

Wage-Hour Chief L. M. Walling: told the public that "we are not fighting the war on a 40-hour week," cited hours in shipbuilding, machine tools, etc., as well over 50 on average.

Under Secretary of War Patterson: told the House Naval Committee that outlawing the closed shop and the union shop would be "unwise," that labor relations are better left to voluntary principles.

Senator Thomas of Utah: blasted the radio-newspaper-mob campaign for the bill in a speech to the Senate, linked it to the Chamber of Commerce.

This is admittedly a partial list, and The CIO NEWS has no intention of slighting many Congressmen and other individuals and organizations that have helped expose the real purpose behind the drive for the Smith bill—to divide the nation and weaken the victory drive.

Murray to Speak Twice This Week

Washington, March 28—CIO President Philip Murray has two major speeches scheduled for the next week.

On Sunday, March 29, he goes to Charlotte, N. C., to address a big organization meeting of the Textile Workers' Union of America, which has been conducting an intensive unionization campaign in the area. Thousands of workers are scheduled to hear the CIO president and other Southern union officials.

Three days later, on April 1, President Murray will go into the heart of the southern West Virginia coal fields to address a huge Miners' Day rally at Welch, W. Va., Murray will speak at 2 P. M. to a crowd of several thousand members of District 17 of the United Mine Workers of America, of which he is the national vice president.

The Press Objects!

New York, Mar. 28—(FP)—When Lieut. Gen. William S. Knudsen pleaded for anti-strike legislation at the convention of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers last December, it was front page news for The New York Times ("All the news that's fit to print"); but when he came out in favor of the 40-hour week March 23, it was only worth a single paragraph story at the bottom of a column on page 12.

The Herald Tribune, also accustomed to carrying Knudsen's statements on page 1, found room for a 4-paragraph item not too prominently displayed on page 11.

Union Leaders Demand Industry Speed Operations

(See Stories on Inside Pages)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 28—The CIO this week made another major contribution to the nation's war program, when the Executive Board recommended elimination of overtime or double time pay rates covering Saturday, Sunday or holiday work, where these do not represent the sixth or seventh working days in a work week.

The action came at meetings of a special CIO emergency conference in Washington, which was followed a day later by a meeting of CIO's Executive Board. The request was placed before the union representatives by Pres. Philip Murray, following conferences by CIO leaders with President Roosevelt and War Production Chief Donald Nelson.

In other actions during the two-day conclaves, the CIO demanded that management as well as labor make sacrifices to further the nation's war program, and challenged industry to rush production immediately to a 24-hour day, seven-day week schedule.

Both the emergency conference and the Board meeting heard detailed reports from Pres. Murray of his stewardship of the organization during the trying war period. He reported that joint action with the AFL, through labor's victory committee, had been highly successful and predicted that the workers of the nation would receive further benefits as a result of the labor unity move.

A lengthy legislative report, which called for the defeat of current anti-labor legislation and passage of bills to outlaw the poll tax in the eight southern states, was adopted by the union delegates.

Electrical Union Grows By 30,000

New York, Mar. 28—The General Executive Board of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America heard today from James J. Matles, director of organization, that in the quarter ending January, 1942, the union added more than 30,000 members.

The rate of growth is such as to add, if the rate is maintained, not fewer than 125,000 additional members to this union, under whose collective bargaining agreements approximately 400,000 employes in the nation's electrical and machine manufacturing industry now work.

Matles' report to his Executive Board showed how the union was able to make this progress by carrying the message of national unity for victory over the Fascist Axis to hitherto unorganized workers.

ASK OFFENSIVE

The Board officially communicated on behalf of the 400,000 workers covered by the union's agreements to President Roosevelt urging "an offensive war by the United States and its allies."

The communication to the White House said, in part: "You, as Commander-in-Chief, are aware of the weighty reasons why the territories under the control of our enemies, Germany, Japan and Italy, must be invaded." "Be assured," the wire concluded, "that every working man and woman will cheer such an offensive and will make their enthusiasm evident in the most concrete and practical ways."

NLRB Order Kills Plane Fake Union

Washington, Mar. 28—An order directing the Curtiss-Wright Corp., Buffalo, N. Y., to get rid of a company stooge union known as "The Aircraft" as collective bargaining agency for any of its employes in the company's two Buffalo plants was announced by the National Labor Relations Board this week.

The Board found that before the National Labor Relations Act became effective on July 5, 1935, the company controlled and dominated the Aircraft, interfering with its administration and giving it financial and other support, and that the effective date of the Act "bright no changes in the established relationship between" the company and the Aircraft.

Charges against the company were filed by the CIO United Automobile Workers on August 14, 1941 and public hearings were held by the Board from September 8 to October 21 before Trial Examiner Howard Myers.

In its decision the Board declared that supervisory employes who were members of the Aircraft boosted the company union and reviled the CIO union, solicited members for the Aircraft, and distributed insignia and literature on company time and property.

Five Unions Pledge Huge Bond Sales To Replace Ships

WASHINGTON, March 28—Presidents of five CIO international unions this week joined with Secretary James Carey in pledging to Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox that their 1,210,000 members would invest $111,000,000 in Defense Savings Bonds during 1942 for the purchase of four warships and ten Liberty Fleet merchant ships.

Adopting as their slogan, "Bonds Float Ships," the unions established as their goal sufficient bond dollars, raised through the payroll savings plan, to pay for a battleship, a small aircraft carrier, a light cruiser, a submarine and ten merchant cargo vessels.

"SHIPS BRING VICTORY"

On making the pledge to Secretary Knox, Carey said, "Mr. Secretary, we know that ships bring victory, and we assure you that this pledge is just a starter toward the aid we will give the Navy every day until the war is won."

In addition to Carey the union leaders who met with Secretary Knox were: John Green, president of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America; Emil Rieve, president of the Textile Workers' Union of America; R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers of America, and N. A. Zonarich, president of the Aluminum Workers of America. Samuel Wolchok, president of the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes of America, was scheduled to appear at the ceremony, but was unfortunately unable to attend.

SIZABLE PLEDGES

The bond totals pledged by the unions were as follows: Auto workers, $50,000,000 for a battleship; textile workers, $25,000,000 for a small aircraft carrier; retail clerks, $15,000,000 for a light cruiser; shipyard workers, $15,000,000 for ten Liberty Fleet merchant ships; aluminum workers, $6,000,000 for a submarine.

John Green, head of the shipyard workers and well known in the Navy Department, introduced each of his fellow CIO leaders to Secretary Knox. "Our union members, 120,000 of them, are building the ships of victory in yards on every coast," Green assured Secretary Knox.

"We'll build them, our fellow CIO members will buy them, and the Navy will fight them," he added.

Samuel Wolchok, leader of the retail clerks, who was unable to attend, pledged earlier in the day in a telegram to Secretary of the Treasury Henry Mongenthau that the 100,000 members of his union would buy $15,000,000 worth of bonds for the purchase of a light cruiser. "We will do everything in our power to maintain the democratic way of life," Wolchok said.

Harvester Case Goes To Full WLB

Washington, Mar. 28—The War Labor Board panel which heard the International Harvester case involving 25,000 workers in eight of the company's plants split 3-to-2 in handing down its recommendation this week. The two labor representatives dissented to the majority opinion calling for 4½ cents per hour increase and rejecting union security.

The case was brought before the Board by the joint action of the CIO Farm Equipment Workers with locals in five plants involved, the CIO United Automobile Workers in one plant and the AFL in two plants.

The two labor members of the panel, John Brophy of the CIO, and Richard E. Gray of the AFL, recommended a 12½ cent hourly increase and a union shop. The two opinions will go to the full Board for final action.

Optical Workers Win Pact

New York City, Mar. 28—Determined efforts of Local 208, United Optical Workers, to avoid a strike at the Universal Camera Corp., even though the company repeatedly refused to negotiate a contract after the union had carried two elections, have finally won a victory for the union.

The firm which manufactures binoculars for the U. S. and British governments, has signed a contract providing more than $70,000 in pay increases for 500 employes. The local is affiliated with the CIO Optical Workers Coordinating Committee.

WIN VACATIONS

Other terms give paid vacations and holidays, seniority rights, and maintenance of membership. Sebastian Rebaldo, secretary-treasurer of the Committee, who negotiated the contract, said that the union intends to sign up other New York City plants doing the same type of work.

A union contract covering 250 workers of the Zylo-Ware Corp., Long Island City, has also been signed, Rebaldo said. Terms include pay increases amounting to $32,000, vacations with pay and time and a half for overtime.

The CIO Optical Workers have thriving locals in Buffalo, Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit and St. Louis which expect to double their membership before the end of 1942, Rebaldo declared.

Outlook:

War Idle's Standards Hard Hit

WASHINGTON, March 28—Serious cuts in living standards among workers thrown out of jobs due to failure to plan for war conversion of industry are reported in the current issue of Economic Outlook.

Quoting a study of unemployed workers in the automobile industry, the Outlook said that 79 per cent were "undergoing a very serious cut of living standards." Of these, 24 per cent were depending on an employed member of the family, the rest cutting down on food, doing without purchases of clothing, going into debt, being evicted and the like. Another percentage was reported to be cashing-in defense bonds and insurance.

Unemployment in January rose to 7,041,000 from the December level of 5,624,000, due largely to conversion unemployment, and despite a rise in the production level from 167 in December to 171 in January.

MANPOWER

Mobilization of manpower for war industries "calls for unified, efficient and representative administration," the Outlook said, urging a new set-up under one director with "administrative responsibility for all government agencies dealing with the problem." This must be done "in the closest conjunction with organized labor and with affected industries."

The Outlook cited Britain's experience in securing wage increases through collective bargaining as well as through government agencies, pointing out that wages have increased up to 27 per cent since 1939 and that a general increase of $1.00 a week was secured in 1941 by eight million workers.

This refutes the contention that wage increases here, now being sought particularly in the steel industry, would cause inflation, the Outlook said, since Britain is close to full employment, must import almost all its food through a blockade, and has not yet suffered inflation, though wage increases have been won.

Labor in Norway

New York City, Mar. 28—All efforts to line up the Norwegian labor movement behind the Quisling government have so far failed, the office of the Intl. Transport Workers Federation here states. In the meantime steady progress is being made in the organization of underground trade unions in factories and plants where systematic slow-down tactics are gaining strength.

Union Leaders Accept U.S. Plea On Double Time, Hit Tory Smears

Axis Hand Seen in 'Hate' Propaganda

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, March 28—The current press - radio - mob drive to smash labor's victory program via the Smith bill ran into stiff battle this week as the CIO, the AFL, President Roosevelt, CIO Pres. Murray and other public leaders and organizations brought its origins and motives to light.

The CIO put the finger on the mainspring behind the drive in a unanimous resolution adopted by 500 delegates at the full-dress conference held here this week, which said:

"The evidence shows that this campaign has its source in a conspiracy against labor and the war effort originating in Oklahoma and Texas, in which a number of people and organizations have been led into the use of their names for pro-Axis expressions and activities.

"The existence of this conspiracy reveals the effective undercover work of Axis agents operating in this country against our military security and against the security of the United Nations. The security of our country and of our allies demands an immediate investigations of this conspiracy with the purpose of bringing its originators to light."

6th COLUMN

President Roosevelt hit out at the conspiracy for the third time at his regular White House press conference when he described newspaper and radio attempts to smash national unity as the work of a "6th column" whose assignment is to spread the poison cooked up by the 5th column.

In Congress, Senator Thomas of Utah delivered a long speech tracing the campaign to the Chamber of Commerce, which he accused as "elements in our country, as in all others, which like to think of coercion, of forcing somebody, of demanding that there be a law" despite the fact that strikes have ceased through voluntary action of labor.

WIDE CAMPAIGN

According to information from CIO members on the spot, the drive got its start in Oklahoma and Texas, where newspapers, radio, bulletin boards, meetings and petitions were promoted by interests identified with the oil industry and with other reactionary employer groups.

In one Oklahoma city, booths were set up on the streets, free stenographers supplied, and thousands of cards with standardized anti-labor and anti-40 hour week slogans supplied to the citizens. Even school children were roped in on the phoney letter writing campaign.

Many thousands of dollars have already been spent on the drive, as can be seen from the hundreds of full-page newspaper ads that have appeared not only in the south but in northern cities (including the nation's capital) as well.

The smear drive also enlisted the talents of one of the nation's best-paid radio commentators—H. V. Kaltenborn of the National Broad-

Ask $42 Base Pay in Army

WASHINGTON, March 28—A monthly wage of $42 for army privates, a comparable increase for all other ranks, and adequate allowances for soldiers' dependents was asked in a resolution passed by the CIO executive board.

IN PUBLIC EYE: The nation was looking toward the CIO at its two-day special meetings in Washington this week. Evidence of that was the presence of five movie newsreel camera crews at the parley. Here they're preparing to take pictures of the crowd.

CIO's Position:

Our Goal: Victory Our Task: Produce

WASHINGTON, March 28—Here's the text of the CIO's resolution on production—all-out production to beat the Axis—that was one of the principal actions taken at the Special Conference of union representatives in Washington March 23:

There is but one task for the people of the nation. It is to crush the Axis powers through a decisive victory on the part of the United Nations. The production of all vital armaments in the United States is essential for such victory. The American workers have become soldiers in the great American army now dedicated to the single goal of final victory.

American labor understands the full meaning of this present war. It involves the question of survival or destruction not merely of our institutions but of life itself. For this reason the workers of the United States do not enter this conflict in a half-hearted manner or with conditions or compromise. For the workers it is a total war.

The CIO, on behalf of its millions of members, has given a pledge that the workers shall give every ounce of energy and strength in this battle of production. The CIO has given a pledge that regardless of the reason or cause there shall be no stoppage or interruption of work.

This pledge has been and will continue to be fulfilled. The workers of the nation do not intend to permit a single hour or a single moment to be lost. The wheels of machinery must be kept turning full time every day in the week.

Convention Action

The CIO, at its Detroit convention in November, 1941, recognized the job which confronted American labor. In its resolution covering the problem of production, the convention unanimously agreed that:

"The CIO has offered as its contribution the full and complete prosecution of the national defense program of unlimited production of those materials needed to implement our foreign policy and crush Hitlerism, the Murray Industry Council Plan, as one attuned to the needs of our national situation.

This Plan will guarantee production of armaments in needed quantities and on time by attaining the highest possible productive efficiency of American industry through the full and complete cooperation of industry, organized labor and government. Through Industry Councils which would establish regional and plant committees, the resources and brains of all would be dedicated to our single task of maximum production."

Donald Nelson, Chairman of the War Production Board, has called upon labor and industry to establish joint plant production committees in the effort to increase production. The CIO pledges its complete and whole-hearted support. We shall work for the immediate creation in every plant throughout the country of a joint labor-management production committee which will dedicate itself to the task of increasing production. Labor does not participate in this effort with any ulterior motive. The sole task to which labor's attention will be addressed through the joint production committees will be production.

Reasons for Delay

Difficulties in achieving maximum production cannot fairly or justly be placed at the door of labor. Unfortunately, too many concerns have continued to produce civilian supplies where the plants and materials should have been used for the production of armaments. Conversion of plants from peace-time to war-time production has not been accomplished as fully or as quickly as our needs demand. The adoption by the War Labor Board of the Murray Industry Council Plan would be a tremendous step forward in the elimination of all "business as usual" activities and the guaranteeing of maximum production.

The present attempt of Congressman Smith and certain sinister groups to stampede Congress into the enactment of repressive labor legislation constitutes a direct attack upon our war program. The Smith bill would eliminate all statutory

Board Urges Higher Pay For Workers

Washington, Mar. 28 — All-out production for victory calls for wage increases to maintain workers' health and efficiency and for union security to protect working and living standards, the CIO emergency conference declared in one of its major resolutions here this week.

"Wages earned by workers are their sole means of providing for themselves and their families the necessities of life and health," the resolution said. "Production cannot reach its maximum if workers receive insufficient wages to secure for themselves and their families the things needed for good health, full efficiency and high morale.

"Most American wage scales are below the level necessary to do this. Most workers' families, for example, get less than one-half the income per person that it costs to keep a soldier in the army."

Pointing out that rapidly rising living costs and taxation have already eaten into living standards at an alarming rate, the resolution calls for "fair and equitable wage increases" secured through the "processes of collective bargaining and through the agencies which have been set up by common agreement to assist in reaching wage settlements for the war period."

UNION SECURITY

These conditions are only obtainable through union security, the resolution continued, which is also needed to enable unions and workers to "devote all their time to speeding the war effort."

"Promptly and patriotically when this nation was forced into war," the resolution continues, "labor voluntarily agreed to set aside the instrument of the strike for the duration . . . Labor gave its full assent to the policy laid down by the President of the U. S. that every issue which arose between labor and management and which could not otherwise be settled should be a proper matter for submission to and determination by the National War Labor Board."

Murray Hails Labor's Aid To War

WASHINGTON, March 28—CIO gave its answer to the foes of labor this week.

Demonstrating its complete support of the war effort—and its desire to remove any hindrances in the way of that effort—the CIO Executive Board recommended to all affiliated unions that they abolish overtime or double time pay standards for Saturdays, Sundays or holidays during work weeks.

At the same time representatives of CIO's five million workers challenged every employer to work his plant three shifts a day, seven days a week, as "a national duty."

The unanimous recommendation to remove the premium payments from all existing contracts came at a meeting of the CIO Executive Board, which followed by a day a special CIO conference attended by some 500 representatives of international unions, local industrial unions and state and city councils.

HEAR MURRAY REPORT

The conference heard a detailed report from Pres. Philip Murray on the activities of the organization and of the work of the six-man AFL-CIO joint labor committee which has been meeting with Pres. Roosevelt at frequent intervals during recent months.

Murray introduced War Production Chief Donald Nelson to the emergency conference. Nelson outlined briefly his request for elimination of the premium pay and discussed at greater length the role of labor in the war effort.

"Only one thing interests me—production," Nelson said. "I will not be a part of any attempt to use our need for increased production as a cloak to put something over on labor."

Telling the CIO representatives that he wanted to talk "frankly" about the production problem, Nelson said that "we're going to see to it that nobody pushes you around—but we're going to see to it that labor doesn't push anyone around, either.

"There's a small number of short-sighted employer at one end of the line; there's a small number of short-sighted labor folks at the other end of the line; I don't propose to see either group taking any advantages of this situation."

PROMISE ACTION

Pres. Murray then promised quick action on the premium pay issue, affecting Saturdays, Sundays or holidays falling in the middle of regular work weeks.

The conference heard numerous speakers from union groups describe their experiences in the bat-

CIO's Answer

"Affirmative and aggressive" were the words used by President Murray to describe the reactions of the CIO delegates attending the emergency conference in Washington to the scandalous anti-labor campaign with which they dealt.

The Smith bill—ripe and rotten fruit of this campaign—is designed to slash the wages of all war workers, to destroy their unions and to impose slave labor conditions.

In the face of such a threat, the delegates might have been excused for devoting their whole attention to defending themselves against this attack.

But instead, the record will show that every resolution and every speech was inspired by a positive, affirmative and aggressive determination to make more production to win the war the first consideration.

That does not mean that American labor is lying down to be trampled upon by the traitorous gang of Axis agents and appeasers, and the union-busting bosses and labor-baiting Congressmen who consciously or unconsciously play their game.

On the contrary, it means that by virtue of the very fact that all-out production for victory is its main goal, American labor will fight aggressively and militantly against all attempts to cripple war production by lowering the workers' living standards and destroying their freedom and their morale.

Let your representatives in Congress know that labor is determined to let nothing stand in the way of its victory goal; and that its support will be forthcoming only for those Congressmen who join with it in removing from the path such dangerous obstructions to our war effort as the Smith bill.

A Challenge

The membership of the Congress of Industrial Organizations is willing to make every sacrifice that is necessary for victory.

It has demonstrated this by its voluntary action in setting aside the strike weapon for the duration of the war—labor's strongest weapon for improving its conditions.

Further evidence was given by the unanimous vote of the CIO executive board to recommend sacrifice of premium payments on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, where these days are not the sixth and seventh working days.

But these sacrifices are made for one purpose only—to insure maximum uninterrupted production to win the war. The CIO and its members will insist on this result being achieved.

That is why the CIO executive board at the same time threw down a challenge to American industry, to operate all war plants 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Wages for Victory

U. S. Treasury figures just released show that in 1941 more than 52% of American families and single consumers had annual incomes below $1,500, and more than a third (34%) had incomes of less than $1,000. Sixty-seven percent got less than $2,000.

$1,500 is less than the minimum needed by a manual worker with two small children for a bare maintenance of health standard of living; and $1,000 is less than the minimum for a bare subsistence level. $2,200 is the minimum needed for a modest health and decency standard.

Yet in face of these facts, there are still those who talk of lowering wages in the same breath as of reducing scandalously high war profits.

The CIO bases its case for raising wages on the necessity for giving workers sufficient income to do the best possible job for the war effort. It points out that most American wages are below the level necessary for health, full efficiency and morale.

"Most workers' families," says the statement adopted by the recent CIO emergency conference, "get less than one-half the income per person that it costs to keep a soldier in the army."

Present low wages are being cut more and more by rising living costs. Family incomes are cut further when working members are drafted; and by increased taxation.

When CIO fights the drive to cut wages by ending overtime rates after 40 hours, when it asks wage increases, it is being neither selfish nor unpatriotic. On the contrary, it is demanding one of the first essentials for maximum war production.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

WASHINGTON hysterics are periodical but peculiar. These curious epidemics recur on Capitol Hill particularly in election years. They are especially dangerous in wartime.

The symptoms of hysteria are described in a Red Cross textbook as follows:

"In an hysterical attack the face does not change color. If an attempt is made to pull open the eyelids, the patient will resist and close them more tightly.

"The person always falls on some soft spot, like a sofa or an easy chair. An hysterical attack seldom occurs unless there is an audience present."

The above symptoms apply pretty exactly to the calculated hysterics indulged in by labor-baiting Congressmen, except that some of them do tend to get red in the face.

Washington hysterics are made not born. They are designed to take advantage of doubtful Congressmen who are out of touch with their voters.

A hysteria campaign must be well financed and carefully planned. It takes advantage of some genuine uneasiness in the public mind. Then, at a given signal, press, radio, full-page ads and dozens of other publicity devices are all turned on at the same time, with a single slogan and a single purpose.

As the form telegrams, postcards, etc., pour in on Congress, the anti-labor members get up one after another and go through their hysteria routines.

The whole performance is designed to convince uncertain Congressmen that "the public" is hysterically demanding action against labor.

In the present instance, the American public is genuinely worked up about the war. Anything that obstructs a maximum war effort is certain to incur real public wrath.

For their own selfish purposes, union-busting industrialists, sweatshop employers, wealthy newspaper publishers and many shady outfits playing the Nazi game have combined to finance and organize an hysteria campaign directed against the working people.

"The 40-hour week, strikes and union selfishness are to blame for war obstructions"—that is their slogan.

While all the wheels of this hysteria campaign were in motion, the CIO emergency conference met in Washington. The delegates demonstrated by their actions how that largest section of the American public, the working people, really feel.

They made maximum production for victory their first consideration.

They renewed and re-emphasized labor's pledges of no strikes during the war.

They voluntarily surrendered the principle of special overtime rates on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, where these days do not represent the sixth or seventh working days.

They demanded 24-hour, seven-day operation of all war plants.

They exposed the lies about a non-existent 40-hour week and non-existent strikes obstructing production, and pointed to the real obstructions.

Public wrath is rising in America—and we mean labor's wrath.

The working people are toiling long hours, at insufficient wages, to win the war. They are giving their sweat, their blood, their lives and the lives of their young men in the armed forces for victory. They are making their sacrifices willingly. But as their determination grows, so too will their wrath against:

Millionaire publishers fighting labor instead of the Axis, filling their columns with lying propaganda against the working people of their own country;

Sweatshop bosses seeking to destroy labor protective laws for their own profit;

Polltax and labor-baiting Congressmen going through their hysteria routines for their usual reactionary, anti-democratic purposes;

And all other fifth and sixth columnists playing Hitler's game of stirring up internal dissension and disunity.

But the real American public, with labor in the lead, as the CIO conference demonstrated, will not allow itself to be diverted by such people from its main purpose—all-out effort for victory.

With its eyes set on this goal, it warns all obstructionists to get out of the way or suffer the consequences.

Basic Test Of Bills Is Effect On War, CIO Board Advises

WASHINGTON, Mar. 28—Any bills brought up in Congress at this time must be looked at by workers with one basic thought in mind—their relation to the war, whether they contribute to victory or defeat in the war with the Axis.

"This is the test which is uppermost in the minds of all Americans," says the legislative report to the CIO Executive Board meeting held here this week and, judged by this test, the bills dealing specifically with labor fail and must be defeated.

The report deals in detail with four of these proposed bills—two of them by the notorious Howard Smith of Virginia (H.R. 6790 and 6792), its Senate twin (S. 2365) by Sen. Reed, and H.R. 6444 by Rep. Carl Vinson of Georgia.

POLL TAX MEASURE

By more than coincidence, both Smith and Vinson come from poll tax states, where workers and farmers are not allowed to vote without paying tribute to political bosses, and the report, in noting this, devotes a section to describing the current anti-poll tax bill (S. 1280) presented by Sen. Pepper of Florida.

Though not yet offered in the form of a detailed bill, the Federal tax program now up before the House Ways and Means Committee is examined in the report, which also notes that Martin Dies has a legislative matter up in the House in the pending appropriation bill for his committee.

PRO-AXIS BILLS

The most serious threats to the war effort and to a United Nations' offensive lie in the Smith and Reed bills, the report notes, pointing out that their authors' scheme to wreck the labor movement would sabotage labor's war production drive, would split national unity, and would smash the carefully built up system of collective bargaining on which victory production depends.

In simple terms, the Smith-Reed bills would outlaw all union contracts, present and future, that provide union security in any form and that provide for extra payment for overtime work. They would wipe out the functions of War Labor Board set up on CIO-AFL urging by President Roosevelt, would in effect abolish the Wagner Act and would destroy a generation of labor progress.

Both of these measures were timed with a phoney "grass-roots" campaign that has had big money and Axis inspiration behind it, designed to stampede the country and Congress into viciously anti-labor laws that would hold up production rather than promote it, as the sinister forces behind the campaign claim.

LIES REFUTED

The report cites testimony and statements of union leaders and government officials from President Roosevelt and Donald Nelson down to show "the obvious falsity" of the claim that overtime payment for overtime work and union security are cutting war production.

It also cites the CIO and AFL pledge to lay aside the strike weapon for the duration as further evidence of labor's realization that this total war must be fought with total production.

"Neither the 40-hour week nor the union security provisions are in any way impeding the war production program," it says, "bottlenecks in the war victory program result entirely from shortages of materials and from the failure of certain businesses to convert from a peace to a war-time basis."

Passage of such bills, the report concludes, "would be of inestimable aid to the Axis powers" by destroying carefully built up collective bargaining systems and substituting chaos.

VINSON BILL

Discussing the Vinson bill that calls for registration of unions and publication of all their records, the report notes that it represents a "revival of petty sniping and labor-baiting" that could hardly come at a worse time. "In its effort to harass unions and to divert the attention of employers and unions alike from their common interest in winning the war, it renders a disservice to the national interest."

Thurman Arnold, who let loose with a totally uncalled-for blast at the labor movement in the midst of the struggle against the Smith bill, comes in for a spanking in the report, which urges him to work out instead on the huge corporations "which have throttled maximum production in certain industries through alliance and compacts with corporations of the Axis powers."

AID FOR JOBLESS

The report also notes the history of CIO and AFL's attempt to get an appropriation out of Congress to care for the war unemployed, pointing out that the problem is becoming more and more acute and that skilled workers are leaving their homes as a result, to be scattered over the country.

In its final section, the report briefly reviews the anti-victory activities of the Dies Committee, and urges that his request for a new appropriation be cut severely to diminish his sabotage activities.

In conclusion, the report urges renewed activity on all legislative matters affecting labor's part in the war effort, calls for joint CIO and AFL campaigns wherever necessary, and reminds CIO unions that their members must tell Congress what they think and what they want by way of legislation to promote victory.

Board Urges Manpower Agency

Washington, March 28—Declaring that the needs of the victory program call for "effective utilization of the nation's manpower" to make full production possible, the CIO Executive Board meeting here unanimously called for a unified system of labor mobilization under one government agency and with adequate labor and industry representation.

The resolution called for establishment of a manpower agency to be placed within the Department of Labor and to be administered by a Director of Manpower.

It urged that determination of all policy relating to manpower by a Manpower Policy Board made up of twelve persons, four representing organized labor, four industry and one representative each for the Army, Navy and Selective Service System under the chairmanship of a Director of Manpower.

Sacrifice Double Time To Aid War

Washington, Mar. 28—The CIO will voluntarily give up premium pay for work on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays where those days fall within the 40-hour week, following a resolution recommending this step to all affiliates unanimously passed at the CIO Executive Board meeting here.

The resolution said in part, after reviewing labor's stand on all-out work for victory production:

"To those who seek to use the war emergency as a cloak for negating labor's rights and crushing labor's organizations, the CIO answer has been and will continue to be its record of constant struggle for increased war production, its determination that no diversion turn the American nation from the single goal of production for victory.

WILL AID WORK

"The leaders of the American people responsible for the nation's productive efforts have suggested that contractural provisions for premium payments for work performed on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays where those days fall within the forty hour work week has not been conducive to the greatest productive efforts of industry. The response of the CIO to that suggestion must be made in the light of the same single touchstone which has guided all its policies—the necessity for maximum war production."

Aid Sought For War Idle

Washington, March 28—Declaring that hundreds of thousands of workers are being thrown out of jobs through no fault of their own due to the failure of industry to make planned conversion of war work, the CIO executive board called upon the Administration and Congress "to make immediate provision for these workers" in the form of special unemployment benefits or of special war projects.

Endorse Murray Stand on Output

Pittsburgh, March 28—Delegates representing 45,000 workers in the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America in western Pennsylvania, voted 100 per cent endorsement of CIO President Murray's recent speech, "We'll Work to Win," at a meeting of District Council 6 of the UE last Sunday in Pittsburgh.

The delegates voted to distribute copies of Murray's address to every local union officer and shop stewards in the district.

St. Louis CIO Raps Poll Tax

St. Louis, Mo., March 28—Support for the Anti-Poll Tax Bill pending in Congress was urged in a resolution passed by the CIO Council here.

CIO Confabs Review Pledge To Aid War, Speed Output

tle for production on the home front.

After hearing an exhortation by Pres. Murray to "work and produce, produce and work," the conference adopted a resolution pointing out that the defeat of the Axis is the "one task for the people of this nation."

RECALLS PLEDGE

Recalling CIO's voluntary surrender of the right to strike for the duration of the conflict, the resolution said:

"This pledge has been and will continue to be fulfilled. The workers of the nation do not intend to permit a single hour or a single moment to be lost. The wheels of machinery must be kept turning full time every day in the week."

It charged that "the present attempt of Rep. Smith and certain sinister groups to stampede Congress into the enactment of repressive labor legislation constitutes a direct attack upon our war program."

In his opening address to the conference, Pres. Murray referred bitterly to the "widespread hatreds" which have been expressed in Congress and in the press against labor and labor standards.

COMMON STAND

Recalling that labor has abandoned the strike weapon, Murray lauded the efforts of the joint AFL-CIO committee in reaching a common position on such matters as wages, manpower, compensation for war idle and other current problems.

The CIO leader said he had no apologies to offer for the work of the committee, whose activities have been directed to protecting labor—and as a result, the morale of the nation—during the war.

He lashed out at government officials who have sought to thwart labor's efforts to win wage improvements and union security, and expressed hope that the War Labor Board would act favorably on union demands.

The CIO board, at a meeting crammed with activity, adopted an important legislative program and passed resolutions calling for fair taxation, effective price control and rationing, establishing of a manpower agency within the Department of Labor, approval of the combined CIO-AFL victory committee and condemnation of racial discrimination in industry.

CIO Demands 'Fair Tax Program'

Washington, Mar. 28—A tax program that will draw more heavily on the income of the rich and not force workers and farmers to lower their living standards to pay their share is called for in the CIO executive board's tax resolution.

Urging Congress "to enact a federal tax measure based on the principle that heavier taxes should not be laid on the income that workers' and farmers' families need to maintain themselves in health and efficiency," the CIO tax program opposes any general sales or flat wage tax and asks:

Increased taxation upon corporate and business profits and the wiping out of swollen war profits.

Increased individual income taxes based on the present exemptions of $1,500 for family heads and $750 for single persons.

Closing of loopholes in individual and corporate income taxes.

Excise taxes on certain luxury goods.

UMW Request Goes to CIO Heads for Study

Washington, Mar. 28—A request from the United Mine Workers of America for determination on a means of settling a claimed loan to the CIO of $1,665,000, has been referred to the CIO's eight executive officers for further study.

The action was taken by the Executive Board following receipt of a letter from the United Mine Workers a few weeks ago.

Murray Testifies:

Push War Drive, Don't Stab Labor, House Group Told

WASHINGTON, Mar. 28—Congress must decide whether or not American labor, now putting everything it has into the war, shall have a knife struck in its back by those "who seek to drive wedges between groups, to revive old antagonisms, to weaken our national war effort," President Murray told the House Naval Affairs Committee in testimony on the Smith bill here this week.

Murray was followed by similar testimony from Pres. Green of the AFL, who asked Congress "not to slap America's loyal workers in the face by approving this bill" which, he said, "would do a great deal of harm to America's war effort."

Murray's testimony was an eloquent plea for maximum national unity to meet the war crisis and a sharp warning that the attempted smashing of the labor movement through the Smith bill would be a long step toward Hitlerization of the workers in this country and this would help the Axis in the war.

"Hitler started his regimentation of Germany by an attack upon the unions," he said. "Hitler would like nothing better than to see this nation adopt his attitude towards the unions."

EARLIER TESTIMONY

Murray's appearance at the House Naval Committee, where the Smith bill was sent for approval, followed an earlier appearance before a Senate sub-committee where he discussed the same measure and others like it.

"This nation cannot win the war if we are divided among ourselves," he told the Senate. "What good can there be for the nation in the prospect of bitter internal war? Internal strife in this nation would be food and drink for our enemies. Let us have real national unity. Let us have it here and now. Labor, I pledge you, will do more than its share."

TELLS LABOR'S RECORD

In both appearances Murray cited labor's record of hard work and sacrifice for victory in answer to those who "impugn the patriotism of the noblest body of workers in the world."

In addition to its voluntary waiver of the right to strike for the duration, he said, labor is putting in long, hard hours, is facing dangers to life and health no less than those soldiers face in the rapidly rising accident rate, and is asking only this in return—that labor be permitted to work for victory without harassment and back-stabbing.

Murray referred feelingly to the seamen, members of the CIO National Maritime Union, over 300 of whose union men have already been killed at their work.

Answering questions from committee members, he told of talking to a group of 22 NMU men, each one of whom has had three ships torpedoed under him, and each one of whom is waiting for another ship to go to sea again.

WAGE CUTS

"The Army, the Navy, the War Production Board and the President have told you that this bill is not needed to increase the number of hours of work," he said. "They have told you that American workers are now working far longer than the 40 hours upon which so much attack has been levelled. What possible reason is there left for the urging of this bill by those who have offered it?

"The simple fact is that this bill is aimed not at all at increasing the hours of production but at reducing the wages which workers receive for the work they do."

Protest Smith Bill

New York City, Mar. 28—A vigorous protest against the Smith Bill was wired this week to the House Naval Affairs Committee and Military Affairs Committee by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers on behalf of 300,000 members.

'Grass Roots' Fertilized By Tories

Washington, March 28—The current propaganda drive to push the anti-labor, anti-production Smith bill over on a stampeded Congress was laid at the door of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce by Senator Thomas of Utah in a speech to the Senate this week.

Thomas described the drive as an attempt to wreck labor relations that have resulted in greater unity and greater production than would otherwise be possible, declaring: "The source is not the farm, not the laboring men who are working by themselves, but a marble hall in the city of Washington."

QUOTES LETTER

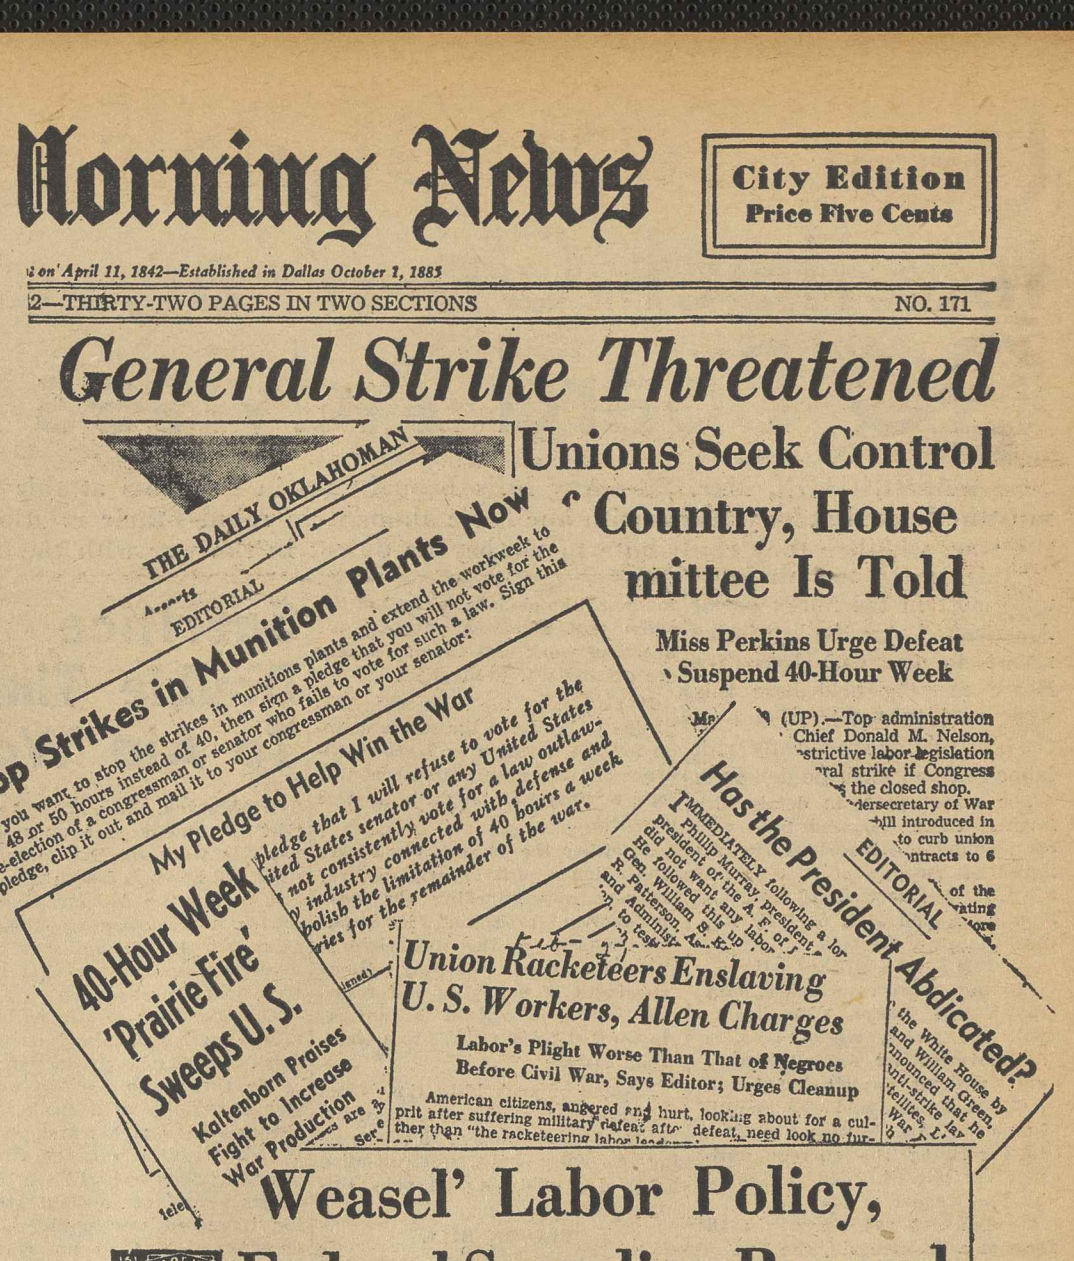
Thomas quoted from a circular letter sent out by the Chamber which called on its affiliates to "become aggressive in bringing widespread expressions of opinion to Congress on desirable legislation" and which said in a burst of unintentional candor, "purposely, no analysis of proposals before Congress now is submitted herewith, as this might be confusing."

"Just write—condemning anything," Thomas said. "It does not make any difference what is condemned. Is not that a glorious way to unite our country? Anything to condemn Congress, to put the individual Congressman on the spot."

Smith Bill Called Sabotage

Denver, March 18—Deliberate sabotage of national unity for victory was charged to promoters of the Smith bill in a statement by Reid Robinson, president of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and a vice-president of the CIO.

"The Smith bill is a provocative attack on American labor," Robinson wired to President Roosevelt and to Rep. Carl Vinson.



MASS OF LIES: Texas and Oklahoma newspapers are spewing forth a mass of lies about American labor as part of a campaign to smash all unions under the guise of "saving the country." Sen. Elbert Thomas of the Senate Labor Committee charges part of the campaign sprang from U. S. Chamber of Commerce officials.

'Grass Roots' Sponsors Blaze As Workers Take Over Meeting

By TRAVIS K. HEDRICK

HOUSTON, Tex., March 28—CIO dander nearly eradicated the phoney "grass-roots" anti-labor rally in the Houston Coliseum, March 24.

Ballyhooed by press and radio as the outpouring of an aroused American public against trade unions and the "maladministration" of the war effort in Washington, the meeting's heralded 20,000 dwindled to a mere 8,000.

Although repeated efforts were made by telephone and wire to obtain time for labor's joint reply on the program, sponsors of the rally turned a cold shoulder and Houston labor answered by appearing several thousand strong. Repeated demands of labor and the pro-Roosevelt Democrats here to obtain a list of speakers and texts of resolutions to be introduced likewise were unavailing.

Labor was not surprised then when the program opened with Raymond Elledge, attorney for the Republic Oil Company, presiding. Elledge promptly drew a round of "boos" when he ushered John Thad Scott, Jr., a pro-Roosevelt democrat, from the platform as Scott sought to introduce a resolution pledging allegiance to "our country and voice our confidence in Franklin D. Roosevelt as commander-in-chief of our armed forces . . . and as the President of our free people, in his decisions regarding national war policies on the home front."

Shipworkers, grime-covered and wearing fiber safety hats of blue, green and yellow, sat in a group and booed lustily along with scattered groups of oil workers, seamen and steel mill workers, and bricklayers and painters of the AFL.

STANDARD OIL STOOGE

The principal talk was by Maj. John H. Crocker, who represented the Humble (Standard) Oil Company union in a recent NLRB case and whose corporate clients include the Hughes Tool Company, in which another "independent" union holds the bargaining rights of the workers.

What was supposed to be a sobnote was introduced when Mrs. Frank G. Dyer, "prominent Houston clubwoman," took the platform. Mrs. Dyer told about trusting infants and lonely wives watching dismayed as labor grabbed for "pie," while soldier and sailor husbands and fathers worked for $21 a month. The chair neglected to state that Mrs. Dyer is the wife of one of Houston's most successful insurance company attorneys.

ATTACKS UNIONISTS

When the booes drowned out the speakers, Chairman Elledge chided the shipworkers, saying to the audience that they "are the CIO beef squad." More booes bounced back at him.

After nearly three hours of anti-labor, anti-New Deal hysteria, the workers marched to the platform and in the confusion that followed the radio microphone and those for the public address system were removed from the platform.

TORIES GET ANSWER

At this demonstration, with the audience on its feet, Chairman Elledge agreed to permit a "labor speaker" to have the floor. Sewall Meyer, attorney for AFL unions here, then delivered a clear answer, quoting Donald Nelson, Lieut. Gen. Knudsen and President Roosevelt on opposition to removing the 40-hour week.

Some of the crowd left when the workers gained the floor. But more than three quarters remained to cheer and applaud their overthrow of gag rule and the passage of a resolution indorsing President Roosevelt.

"PEOPLE'S VOICE:" This is the form telegram widely circulated by reactionary groups in Oklahoma. They give an idea of how spontaneous the tories' "grass roots" anti-labor protest really is.

Unions' Output Drive Answers Tories

Waive Extra Pay If Firms Give Savings to Govt.

NEW YORK, March 28—The CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers today proposed to the "Big Three" of the industry that money saved by the companies through straight-time pay for Saturdays and Sundays be donated to Uncle Sam in order to help the country's war effort.

The proposal was made to General Electric, Westinghouse and General Motors, Electrical Division, whose contracts are now in the process of negotiation for renewal. It was signed by Pres. Albert Fitzgerald, Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak and Organization Director James Matles.

The statement of union policy received widespread publicity when the union took full-page advertisements in New York and Washington papers to get its message before the general public.

'FOR DURATION'

Pointing out that the offer would hold good "for the duration of the war against fascism, and only for that period," the union said it was prepared to waive double time payments for Sunday and holidays, and time-and-a-half for Saturdays.

"Inasmuch as the companies have negotiated their contracts up to 1945 with the government on the basis of paying this time-and-a-half and double time that we are giving up," the statement added, "we require that each month the given company shall pay to Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, the sum of money saved as a result of this offer, such money to be the contribution by the union members to help our government pay the companies for whom we work for war products which we make."

Wheeling Steel-Union Plan Praised As Industry Model

PITTSBURGH, March 28—A formal "Productioon Drive Committee" arrangement, that may be used as a pattern in other steel plants in the Pittsburgh district, has been set up under an agreement reached March 17 between the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and Wheeling Steel Corp.

A top "Production Drive Committee" is operating under the agreement at the Wheeling general office which will supervise and direct similar committees in 72 separate departments of 10 Wheeling Steel plants, it was announced by Clinton S. Golden, northeastern regional director, who signed the agreement, along with Paul Rusen, sub-district director in Wheeling.

PACT NOT AFFECTED

Wheeling Steel Corp. has operated under signed contract with the SWOC since April, 1937, but the agreement to establish "Production Drive Committees" in no way affects the basic contract.

Purpose of the committees, according to the agreement, is to "perform an assigned part of the war effort in accordance with expressed wishes of the Government."

"This Production Drive Committee arrangement is created for the sole purpose of intensifying the war production effort of Wheeling Steel Corp. and its employes, and shall in no way change, alter or abridge existing rights, responsibilities, duties or obligations of the SWOC and its members, or of Wheeling Steel Corp. and its owners, management and employes," the agreement declares.

PUT IN WRITING

Mr. Golden pointed out that the arrangement at Wheeling Steel is the first case thus far reported to the union where there has been a clear procedure outlined and reduced to writing.

"This agreement will be sent to our SWOC sub-district directors in this area to be used for reference purpose in discussions with other steel managements," he said.

'Let's Go' Says CIO In Buffalo

Buffalo, N. Y., Mar. 28—Every CIO local in Buffalo was scheduled to be present at the War Production Board's joint labor-management conference here this week.

Sparking the union drive for greater war production is the city CIO's Victory Production Committee, composed of representatives from leading unions in the city. Chairman of the committee is Hugh Thompson, CIO regional director.

The committee has enlisted the support of every affiliate in the area behind a program of support for the CIO all-out production program.

NOT AN HOUR LOST

To a meeting of union organizers, Thompson recalled Pres. Philip Murray's warning that not an hour should be lost from production.

The organizers' formal statement pointed out that the CIO has temporarily given up its right to strike, not for the sake of "good publicity" but with "only one purpose: to make our country more effective than its enemies in Europe and Asia; to save the life and liberty of our nation; and to guarantee freedom to continue the good struggle we started, after the war is over, and improvement of living standards is more the order of the day."

The statement concluded that labor expects all other groups in the population to be similarly resolute in their support of the war.

WPB Parleys Speed Joint Council Set-Ups

WASHINGTON, March 28—War Production Board conferences were being held in 31 industrial centers this week for the purpose of helping management and labor establish smoothly-functioning joint production committees.

General program for the committees was outlined early this month by War Production Board Chairman Donald Nelson. The suggestion has been widely applauded by CIO as one step towards meeting labor demands for an Industry Council Plan.

In Detroit, where labor and management have been at loggerheads for months on questions of converting industry to war production, a few clashes marked the meeting, but it ended with a unanimous vote pledged to "unqualified and wholehearted support" of the production drive.

EXPLAINS UAW GOALS

Walter Reuther, director of the GM division of the UAW-CIO, answered charges by Charles E. Wilson, company president, that the joint groups would be used to "muscle in or attempt to take over" managerial functions. He said the union had no such intentions.

Federated Press, labor news service, reported similar experiences in other cities. Paced by hesitant and, in some cases, unwilling employers, conferences were marked by the enthusiatic response of both CIO and AFL unions, many of which tossed valuable suggestions for speeding production into the hopper.

TORIES' BOYCOTT

In Birmingham, industry at first flatly refused to participate, but backed down previous to the March 24 meeting. Leading the fight against management participation was Executive Secretary J. Handley Wright of the Associated Industries of Alabama.

The Pittsburgh meeting was marred slightly by lack of full employer participation, but, like the meetings in other sections of the country, the enthusiasm of AFL and CIO unionists could not be squelched. Cheers broke out on a number of occasions.

At the Milwaukee meeting a delegate offered a resolution supporting the production drive. Since resolutions were out of order, the entire 350 delegates rose and cheered.

On several occasions delegates complained that their employers tried to set up the joint labor-management committees without consulting the unions.

PRESS CRITICAL

Meanwhile the appeasement-minded Scripps-Howard newspapers continued to encourage reluctant employers. In what appeared to be a deliberate effort to sabotage the conferences, a Scripps-Howard writer, E. A. Evans, belittled their possible results.

Bosses Strike!

Now maybe it's time for Uncle Sam to get a similar promise from management.

Last week, for instance, an army officer supervising operations at the Feltex ordnance plant in Rock Island, Ill., fired the plant manager for incompetence. The manager got mad, collected his foremen and called a "strike."

MEN ON JOBS

The Defense Committee of he CIO Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee — which recently won an election at the plant —went through the factory calling for the men to stay on the job. But they didn't need telling.

"We pledged all-out production," the workers declared, "and no phoney bosses are going to keep us from it with a sabotage strike."

Result: the plant manager stayed fired. Foremen who walked out were given the gate. Several CIO members were made foremen. The latter are not hiding th fact that they'd like to see everyone in the union.

And production is running full speed ahead.

Up Goes Arms Output!

By E. E. WARD

Los Aangeles, Mar. 28—Memo to Donald Nelson:

Vimcar Steel Sash Co., employing 200 workers under union shop contract with Local 1421, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, got an army contract calling for production of 250 bomb cases per day.

Production was proceeding at this rate when army officers demanded an increase to 600 cases per day, due to unexpected emergency. There was no space in the plant for more men or machines. The company called in union leaders and explained the problem.

In joint meetings of management, union officials, and workers, production was boosted to 450 per day. Then came the Nelson broadcasts, appealing for even greater production. In the night somebody sneaked through the plant and chalked the figures "550" on the walls and machines.

The next day production hit 800, and has hovered around that figure ever since.

In two weeks, through cooperation of labor and management, the Vimcar unit of Local 1421, UE, more than tripled production.

How about one of your citations for merit, Mr. Nelson?

CIO's Position:

and collective bargaining provisions for the payment of time and one-half in excess of 40 hours of work, and render illegal all collective bargaining provisions relating to union security.

The alleged justification for such legislation has been destroyed by the statements made by the President of the United States, Donald Nelson, and representatives of the Army and Navy Departments of the United States. They have stated that there are no strikes at the present time affecting war production, that the requirement for payment of overtime in excess of 40 hours per week does not in any way adversely affect war production, and finally that such repressive legislation as the Smith bill would cripple war production.

Legislation of this kind should receive the universal condemnation of every American interested in achieving maximum production. It is a deliberate blow at the morale of the American workers designed to destroy the unity of the American people in the Victory Program.

Need for National Unity

National unity is not served by those who continue to harass any one group, be it labor or management. Such harassment can only serve our enemies. We must not permit the appeasers and dissident individuals or groups, wherever they may be, to create national confusion and destroy our national unity by legislation such as the Smith bill. Congress must be made aware of the demand of the entire nation that such repressive legislation must be defeated.

The President of the United States has categorically stated that the United Nations must take the offensive against the Axis powers. The workers of the nation are in complete support of this fundamental policy. We promise the Commander-in-Chief of our Army and Navy that the herculean efforts of the workers will produce the tanks, airplanes, guns and ships necessary for an immediate offensive against the Axis powers to achieve Victory in 1942.

In the words of President Murray, our slogan shall be:

Work, Work, Work,
Produce, Produce, Produce.

Toledo Workers Give Hour's Pay For Defense

Toledo, March 28—A plan to help finance Toledo's civilian defense program was proposed today among the 1,800 employes of the Doehler Die Casting Co.

The plan, submitted by Local 6, National Association of Die Casting Workers, CIO, at a joint meeting with company officials and civic representatives, will be presented to the workers for a referendum vote and provides that Monday, April 6, be designated as Civilian Defense Day at the Doehler plant, whereby each employe will denote his time and labor for the first hour of each shift, the funds to be turned over to the city's defense program.

Speaking for the company, A. G. Gutmueller, vice president and manager, and Robert Kitzman, plant superintendent, announced that the Doehler firm will match the funds contributed by the workers. It was unofficially estimated that the total donation would amount to between $4,000 and $5,000.

Murray, Green, McNutt To Speak in Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH, March 28—CIO Pres. Philip Murray and Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, are to address a great United for Victory Rally at the Syria Mosque in Pittsburgh, Tuesday, April 7, under joint CIO and AFL auspices.

Pres. William Green of the American Federation of Labor is expected to speak also, if he can arrange his schedule so as to be able to attend.

Arrangements are being made to broadcast these important speeches over a national radio hook-up, the time and network to be announced later.

Victory Meeting On West Coast

San Francisco, March 28—Representatives of 50,000 CIO members in the San Francisco area met at a "Produce for Victory" rally in the Golden Gate City this week and pledged their aid, "as an army of production soldiers," towards winning the war.

The meeting received messages from CIO President Murray and from national, state and local public officials.

Washington, Mar. 28—A protest against delay in appropriating "the much needed $70,000,000 for housing of war workers in the District of Columbia" was issued here this week by the Washington CIO Council.

Murray Praises Work Of Joint Labor Group

WASHINGTON, March 28—Questions affecting the welfare of the country's wage-earners were taken up directly with President Roosevelt on the four occasions when he met with the joint CIO-AFL Labor Victory Committee, CIO President Philip Murray told the 500 CIO union representatives who attended the conference here.

The agreement on wage standards reached by the committee, Murray said, was presented to the President as representing "labor's viewpoint" and a plan designed to protect labor interests in mobilizing industrial manpower was also turned over to him "for his consideration when he creates his industrial manpower organization."

HELPS WORKERS

A burst of applause greeted Murray's statement that "the joint AFL-CIO Committee in its work of collaboration is lending every possible comfort to our people in both organizations toward the development of joint war programs designed to help America prosecute a successful war."

Endorsement of Murray's report on the Victory Committee was given by the CIO Executive Board at its meeting the next day in a resolution commending "the President of the United States and the AFL and CIO members of the Combined Labor Victory Committee for their activities and program" and expressing "full support for their continued work and collaboration."

The resolution also recommended that the committee "intensify and extend the joint action between the AFL and the CIO on all issues affecting the war program."

URGE GREATER VOICE

It urged the various Federal agencies and departments to afford "increasing labor representation and participation in order that the resources of the workers of the nation shall be fully utilized in support of our national war program."

Formation of joint AFL-CIO local committees throughout the nation was urged to rally the nation "behind a national unity program which will unleash the energies of all Americans for prosecuting the war on the most aggressive basis until final victory for the United Nations is achieved."

Win Pact At Scene Of Flogging

Rockwood, Tenn., Mar. 28—Roane County, scene of anti-labor flogging episodes last autumn, saw something new this week—the signing of a CIO contract with the Tennessee Products Corp.

The pact was won by the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, who swept an election at the plant by a near-unanimous vote a few weeks ago.

C. L. Pegues, union international representative, said the agreement lifted wages, provided the check-off and union shop, and established grievance and seniority systems.

The Rockwood plant produces ferro-manganese iron.

casting Co.—who kicked off in the first week with a long and violently anti-labor radio script trying to blame the workers for allegedly holding up the production line.

BOOMERANG

Like all such campaigns, the Smith bill propaganda offensive began to boomerang when organized labor and the common people generally woke up to what their enemies and the enemies of the nation were cooking.

Following President Murray's warning and the CIO meeting, thousands of genuine letters and protests began pouring into Congress to offset the phoney barrage. Congressmen themselves have also begun to protest the attempt to rig "public opinion" and to stampede them into anti-production action.

This was coupled with realization of the fact that pro-Axis elements were lurking in the background.

Roosevelt Reminds Labor Of Great Stake in War

WASHINGTON, March 28—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's letter to CIO President Philip Murray read to the Special Legislative Conference on March 23:

My dear Mr. Murray:

In recent years the workers in America's great industries have gained new privileges and reaffirmed old rights. Today all of those rights and privileges are being tested by fire. If we lose this war, they and all the rest of our American liberties will be lost. Only victory can protect our freedom; if the freedom of any of us is lost, the freedom of all is lost.

With rights and privileges go responsibilities. We are learning in the hard days of war what is sometimes overlooked in the easy days of peace: that liberty and freedom belong only to men and women who earn them, and that none of the values which make life in America worth living can be retained except by people who will give everything and do anything to keep them.

This has especial point for organized labor—for its leaders and for the men and women in the ranks. Our free workers can give to victory far more than the Axis taskmasters can ever wring from the unwilling muscles of the regimented toilers of Europe and Japan. By the freedom they enjoy and the privileges they have won, American workers dare do no less than meet the new challenge of old slavery with courage, with energy and with a determination that nothing shall interrupt our Country's march to victory over the Nazis and Japs.

Very sincerely yours,

s/ FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Toledo CIO Forms Group To Aid Plant Councils

TOLEDO, March 28—Formation of a seven-man central coordinating committee to assist and correlate the work of joint labor-management production groups was announced here by the Toledo Industrial Union Council.

The action, which followed an address by John Brophy, CIO director of industrial union councils at a TIUC meeting, was believed to be the first of its kind in the country.

Purpose of the committee, the council resolution said, "is to assure the establishment and functioning of plant and local councils of management and labor for the purpose of obtaining production, advancing the sale of defense bonds and stamps through payroll deduction, and furthering the civilian defense program."

LOCAL PROBLEMS

In his address to the city CIO group, Brophy pointed out that there are many production problems of a state or municipal nature, which cannot be solved by individual international unions.

"Their locals in a given area will inevitably seek and must find means of joint action on the problems," he pointed out. He cited the activity of the New Jersey Industrial Union Council in making a production survey throughout the state and offering suggestions approved by War Production Chief Donald Nelson; and of the Beaver County, Pa., CIO council in surveying idle plant capacity almost 18 months ago.

The councils' production committees should not only make studies of the production problems, Brophy said, but should be prepared "to mobilize sufficient pressure in the community to get its suggestions carried out."

MANY GROUPS READY

The assistance of university and school officials, of merchants and professional men, and of farm groups can be enlisted by labor to help swing production figures to new highs, the council was told.

Brophy said that his office stood ready to assist all city and state councils in helping formulate plans for these committees, and urged the local groups to communicate with the national office about their production problems.

CIO Greets MacArthur, Australian Workers

WASHINGTON, March 2—Greetings to General Douglas MacArthur and to the Australian workers in the "great struggle for freedom and humanity" were sent by unanimous vote of the CIO Executive Board meeting here.

Text of the cables sent by Pres. Philip Murray and Secretary James B. Carey to General MacArthur and to Pres. A. E. Monk of the Australian Council of Trade Unions follows:

TO GENERAL MAC ARTHUR

Executive Board of Congress of Industrial Organizations by unanimous vote directed me to convey to you and your valiant men our support in this great struggle for freedom and humanity. The millions of members of our organization working in the mines, mills and factories that comprise our arsenal of democracy are proud to be associated in this great fight. We, with you, are confident of ultimate victory over the forces of the Fascist Axis.

TO AUSTRALIAN WORKERS

Executive Board of Congress of Industrial Organizations has voted unanimously to send warm fraternal greetings to Australian labor in this hour of our common peril and our common effort to defeat the brutal imperialism of Japan and the Axis.

The five million members of the CIO feel a particularly close bond of kinship and fellowship with the Australian workers now that our sons and brothers are fighting side by side with your gallant troops.

CIO has made production for victory its chief objective and will leave nothing undone to further our common fight for freedom and democracy until final and complete victory is won.

Expose Worries Publishers

Washington, March 28—The CIO NEWS' expose of the newspaper publishers' grab for advertising money in return for publicity about defense savings bonds bore quick fruit this week.

The Washington News, local Scripps-Howard paper, printed a long editorial criticizing the publishers for attempting to extort Uncle Sam's money to help the people's war against fascism.

Pious in tone, the editorial reminded publishers that they could scarcely endorse movements like the recent "Bundles for Congress" publicity stunt while their own hands were stretching towards the U. S. Treasury.

The CIO NEWS story was acclaimed by Treasury Department officials, it was understood, who have long been fearful that the publishers' grab for several million dollars' worth of advertising appropriations might be successful.

Terror Fails, CIO Wins

West Helena, Ark., Mar. 28—(FP)—Despite a long campaign of terrorism and denial of civil rights, the Intl. Woodworkers (CIO) won an NLRB election at the Chicago Mill & Lumber Co. The IWA received 384 votes to 271 for the United Bro. of Carpenters & Joiners (AFL).

Chicago Mill, one of the largest lumber companies in southeast Arkansas, employs more than 1,100 workers, many of them Negroes. Observers believed that many of the 514 men who were eligible to participate in the election but who failed to cast their votes were Negroes who feared reprisals.

SURVIVORS: These American seamen are lucky—they were rescued in mid-Caribbean seven days after their tanker ship was destroyed by an Axis sub. Natl. Maritime Union reports over 300 American seamen have already lost their lives on the high seas.

No News of This In Daily Papers—

San Francisco, March 28—Freedom of the press note:

Last month State Labor Commissioner Herbert Carrasco notified all California newspapers that hearings would be conducted in San Francisco and Los Angeles to determine if newsboys selling papers in the middle of streets or distributing them on bicycles are subject to danger from traffic.

A day before the hearings, San Francisco and Oakland publishers—acting in behalf of the state's newspaper owners—sought and received a temporary order restraining the Labor Department from holding the hearing. Now Carrasco must show cause in court why the the injunction shouldn't be permanent.

Not a line about the story appeared in any of the newspapers.

United for VICTORY

Pictured is a typical conference of company and union officials discussing and solving their problems together.

The management of The Doehler Die Casting Company and the National Association of Die Casting Workers, CIO, a union representing all of the wage earners in the Doehler plants, send this message to you—TOGETHER.

For we have learned how to do things, and we have learned how to get along TOGETHER.

And so, as we look back on the history of the Doehler Die Casting Co., we are proud of the fact that not one single hour was lost by any employee through strikes or other labor disturbances in any of our plants. For we have never found any problem so difficult that it could not be solved, by sitting around the table and talking it over—TOGETHER.

Today, as we all face the biggest job of our lives, the job of beating Hitler and the Japs, today when our Army and Navy are calling on us to produce the weapons with which to do the job, WE ARE READY. We are well prepared, we are well equipped and we are well organized to do our part—TOGETHER.

We are proud of our skilled engineers and mechanics who have already produced the dies and tools for the manufacture of more than 2,000 complicated and intricate parts that are being used in every branch of our Army and our Navy. We are proud of our progressive management who have made it possible for us to accomplish all this—TOGETHER.

To the Secretary of the Navy, for his recognition of our efforts, by bestowing upon us the U. S. Navy's highest award for excellence and efficiency, the Bureau of Ordnance flag and the "E" pennant, we express our sincere thanks. To the officers and personnel of the Navy we give our pledge that we shall cherish these insignia and that we will try to live up to the traditions of the Navy "E"—TOGETHER.

WE WILL WIN THIS WAR—TOGETHER

The personnel of the Doehler Die Casting Co., both labor and management, is cooperating 100% with the U S. Government in the purchase of U. S. Defense Bonds and Stamps, using the payroll allotment plan.

The Company's Pledge

We recognize the difficulty of the task that lies ahead of us. We know that we must have a united nation to win this war. We know that unity of purpose amongst the men who work in our factories is the keystone of our National unity. We pledge ourselves to the continuance of our policy of cooperation between the men who work in our plants and the men who manage the affairs of our Company.

We pledge our continued efforts to maintain the principals of Industrial Democracy in our plants. We will cooperate with progressive and patriotic labor leadership to insure the rights of free speech, free assembly and the other basic rights of an American citizen, within our plants. We guarantee to every employee the right to vote on all matters affecting his industrial welfare.

We pledge our continued effort to do everything within our power to maintain the best working conditions and the highest living standards for the men and women who are working in our plants.

We pledge to our employees the maintenance of existing standards and while they are establishing new production records that they shall receive their fair share of the benefits of this increased production.

The Union's Pledge

This land of liberty is in danger. We are at war. Whereas yesterday our primary purpose as a labor union was the constant improvement in our standard of living, today that purpose, although as firm as ever, is secondary to our desire to exterminate the enemy.

Today's war is a war of machines. Our fighting forces and the industrial worker share the front line of battle. Free men fight best. Free workmen produce best. American labor would rather do back-breaking work forging the weapons of freedom than have our backs broken by the weight of foreign tyranny. It is our solemn duty to produce more than ever. Every man and woman in our ranks will give their utmost effort of body and brain. WE PLEDGE THAT WE WILL ESTABLISH ALL TIME PRODUCTION RECORDS.

With the defeat of the Axis as our goal, we will not permit any interference with an all out production program. This means that "Strikes As Usual" are out. A struck plant is of the same use as a bombed plant. For the duration we voluntarily lay aside our strike weapon.

We are ready to make all sacrifice, including our lives, for the defense and victory of democracy. This war is every American's war and we gladly assume our responsibility.

COMPLETE AND FINAL VICTORY CAN BE THE ONLY ANSWER.

'THE CIO SAYS....'

Here are some of the statements and resolutions passed by representatives of CIO's affiliated unions at the Special Conference in Washington March 23, and at the Executive Board meeting the next day.

Premium Pay for Sunday Overtime

The resolutions adopted by the Emergency Conference of the CIO called by President Murray have reaffirmed the determination of the CIO and its members to push the productive efforts of this country to the utmost limits for the production of the planes, guns, tanks and ships needed for victory over the Axis. The CIO has stopped at no sacrifice and has spared no effort in its fight toward that end. It has carried on its fight for more and ever more war production in the face of great opposition and in the face of carping critics of labor who have sought to destroy the effectiveness of labor as a force for victory in the present war.

To those who seek to use the war emergency as a cloak for negating labor's rights and crushing labor's organizations, the CIO answer has been and will continue to be its record of constant struggle for increased war production, its determination that no diversion turn the American nation from the single goal of production for victory.

The leaders of the American people responsible for the nation's production efforts have suggested that contractual provisions for premium payments for work performed on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays where those days fall within the forty-hour work week has not been conducive to the greatest productive efforts of industry.

The response of the CIO to that suggestion must be made in the light of the same single touchstone which has guided all its policies—the necessity for maximum war production.

NATION'S PRIME NEED

The policy of premium payments for work performed on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays in peace time has been based on the desirability of discouraging such work in favor of spreading employment. The prime need of the nation in the present war emergency is not so much the spread of employment as the most effective organization of industrial processes for quick production. The CIO in this as in all matters is prepared to make all sacrifices which in the judgment of competent authorities acting without anti-labor bias and without the motivation of personal gain are necessary for war production.

The Executive Board of the CIO therefore recommends to its affiliated organizations that during the period of the war emergency in their contractual relations with employers engaged in war production there be no insistence upon provisions for premium payments for work performed on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays where that work is performed within the limits of the 40-hour work week.

This policy is recommended as a basis for promoting continuous operation of war production industries. It does not affect the basic truth that the furtherance of the national productive effort still requires the customary premium payments for work in excess of eight hours in any one day and for the sixth and seventh days' work in excess of 40 hours in a work

CIO'S POSITI

Every member of the CIO u... ...nds and supports the organization's determina...on to take the lead before the nation in sacrificing where sacrifice will further the war effort. In making this sacrifice the working men of the nation will have thrown down a challenge to American industry. The war effort requires that every American factory which can contribute to that effort work 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

By announcing their willingness to sacrifice any premium payments for work performed on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays despite the legal right to that payment, American workingmen make clear the national duty of every employer to work his plant three shifts a day, seven days a week.

Price Control And Rationing

WHEREAS, 1) The cost of the goods which workers must buy for their families has increased greatly during the past year and the average cost of the food has risen nearly 25 percent and it is clear that these prices will continue to rise rapidly during the coming year unless immediately controlled, and

2) Shortages are occurring in many of these necessities bought by workers and as a result workers will be unable to buy such necessities, and

3) In order to maintain health and efficiency for the war effort, it is essential that workers and their families receive enough goods to maintain themselves and their families in good health, full efficiency and high morale therefore be it

RESOLVED, 1) That the CIO call upon the Price Administrator immediately to establish effective price control to prevent continued increases in the cost of living and to stop wage cuts by further price rises, and

2) That further the CIO call upon the Price Administrator to set up immediately fair and equitable systems of rationing for all goods of which there is a shortage, such rationing to be carried out by agencies on which labor is properly represented.

Wage Standards And Union Security

American workers now hold the fate of the United Nations in their hands, for upon the output of this nation's labor and industry depends the victory.

Labor has already pledged to the President of the United States and to the people of the nation every ounce of effort in the war production program. The workers are man for man out-producing the workers of any other nation in the world.

They are giving of their sweat, blood and toil to the war effort. And they are doing it gladly. Right now in the nation no other group of people is giving more or sacrificing more to bring victory than American workers.

1. The wages earned by workers are their sole means to provide for themselves and their families the necessities of life and health. Production cannot reach its maximum if workers receive insufficient wages to secure for themselves and their families the things needed for good health, full efficiency and high morale.

Most American wages are below the level necessary to do this. Most workers' families, for example get less than one-half the income per person than it costs to keep a soldier in the Army.

RISING PRICES

Workers' wages are now being slashed by a rise in the price of the things they buy, in the past year, and continuing rapidly to rise. They are beset by loss of income when working members of the family are drafted. They are faced with increased taxation of great magnitude, when already they are bearing a disproportionate share of taxes.

Labor's wage policy is now based upon the necessity for wage increases to provide for workers the income required to enable them and their families to do the best possible job for the war effort. It is based upon the need of workers' families to meet the rising costs of living and rising taxation. It is based upon the just sharing of increased productivity. It is based upon obtaining for workers a fair share of the industrial income they help produce.

Therefore, this conference reaffirms the principle that fair and equitable wage increases must be provided now for American workers. This must be done through the processes of collective bargaining and through the agencies which have been set up by common agreement to assist in reaching wage settlements for the war period.

2. Organized labor has pledged that it would cooperate with management to increase war output. In order that that pledge may be redeemed, it is essential that organized labor be given assurance that its unions are secure.

If the unions are to turn all their energies to the problem of increased production, if their leaders are to devote all their time to speeding the war effort the union must know that its status is fully recognized and guaranteed.

We here affirm our conviction therefore that provisions for union security in labor agreements are essential to the war effort and to the effective participation of organized labor therein.

3. Promptly and patriotically when this nation was forced into war, labor voluntarily agreed to set aside the instrument of strike for the duration. Labor agreed that it would settle all differences with industry without stoppage, first through the medium of collective bargaining conferences with employers, and then if necessary through the Conciliation Service and the National War Labor Board.

Labor gave its full assent to the policy laid down by the President of the United States that every issue which arose between labor and management and which could not otherwise be settled should be a proper matter for submission to and determination by the National War Labor Board.

Therefore, any legislative action affecting strikes or labor conditions is absolutely unnecessary since full and adequate machinery voluntarily accepted is available to settle all such questions.

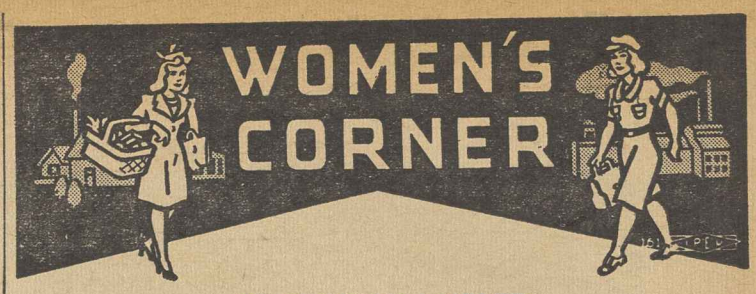
Unemployed

WHEREAS, 1) Hundreds of thousands of workers are being thrown out of jobs through no fault of their own due to the failure of industry to make planned conversion to war work, and

2) Reactionary committees of the Congress have prevented Congressional action on administration proposals for special unemployment benefits and for special work projects, and

3) War production will be seriously hampered by the injury to the morale and welfare of these workers, therefore be it

RESOLVED, that this Executive Board again call upon the Administration and upon Congress to make immediate provision for those workers who are thrown out of their jobs through war conversion, such provision to take the form of special unemployment benefits or of special war projects.



By ELEANOR FOWLER

ADOPTION OF A "Children's Charter in Wartime," stressing the need for special protection for children in danger zones and defense areas as essential to morale and therefore to victory was the outcome of the meeting of the Children's Bureau Commission on Children in Wartime, held March 16-18.

Representatives of the CIO Auxiliaries participated in all the sessions and stressed the importance to maximum war production of meeting the problem of day care for children.

If fathers who work on night shift are to get rest enough to do an efficient job, some provision must be made for care of children outside the home. If women with children are to be efficient industrial workers—and many of them have already gone to work or to training school—they must be certain their children are well cared for.

Volunteers

The Auxiliary spokesmen also emphasized the importance of supplementing professional services, especially in the fields of health, nursery school and recreation, with trained volunteers to meet the wartime emergency. WPA reported using thousands of volunteers trained in courses on day care of children in expanding their nursery facilities.

In addition to nursery schools for low income groups, they now have "Child Development Group Units" which give all-day care for children in defense areas and for which parents pay according to income.

An amendment to Title V of the Social Security Act to provide additional government funds to meet the war time needs for child care was urged in a final resolution adopted by the Commission.

Wholehearted cooperation of all agencies concerned with the welfare of children was stressed as absolutely essential to meeting the war emergency. The importance of involving community groups including labor unions and auxiliaries as well as government agencies in studying and planning to meet community child care problems was brought out.

Detroit Confab

The Detroit conference on child care called by the Detroit Defense Council on March 20, at which Helen Goldman of the United Automobile Workers Auxiliaries was invited to speak, is a good example of real community planning. More than 25 Detroit organizations participated in the meeting.

CIO Statements on Issues of the Day

Tax Program

WHEREAS, 1) Labor fully supports an effective federal tax program to pay for war production, and

2) New taxes now being proposed will affect all people of the nation, and

3) An effective production program can be fully realized only under a fair and just tax program, and

4) Certain reactionary interests are attempting to have a heavy sales tax placed upon the people of the country, therefore be it

RESOLVED, that the CIO Executive Board call upon Congress,

1) To enact a federal tax measure based on ability to pay and upon the principle that heavier taxes should not be laid on the income that workers' and farmers' families need to maintain themselves in health and efficiency, such tax program to include the following measures for collecting the necessary federal revenue:

a. Increased taxation upon corporate and business profits and the wiping out of swollen war profits by effective excessive profit taxes.

b. Increased individual income taxes based on exemptions not lower than the $1500 for family heads and $750 for single persons now in effect.

c. The closing of loopholes in individual and corporate income taxes.

d. Increased rates and lowered exemptions on estate and gift taxes.

e. Excise taxes on certain luxury goods.

2) To support the general principles laid down by the Secretary of the Treasury in his proposals to the Congress for a tax program, which are substantially in line with those set forth by the CIO, and

3) To reject any general sales tax or any flat wage tax for a general revenue.

Discrimination

WHEREAS, 1) The need for war materials is so great and so immediate that the rejection of the services of able men and women by industry because of prejudice against them for reasons of race, creed, and color is an inexcusable risk to national security, and

2) Prejudice and discrimination in our industrial life, against the Negro particularly, has long been a shameful blot on our national record which becomes less and less tolerable as citizens are called upon to make equal sacrifice in the defense of the country, and

3) The President's Committee of Fair Employment Practice, of which representatives of organized labor are members has already shown in a number of hearings held in various parts of the country that while many corporations working on government war contracts give lip service to the national policy of non-discrimination, in practice they find many subtle ways of evading their obligation to deal fairly and impartially among workers and among seekers for jobs, and

4) The experience of many CIO organizations shows that discrimination for racial reasons, particularly against Negroes, is widespread throughout our war industries, and constitutes a condition which cannot be tolerated indefinitely by a free nation fighting for the rights of plain people everywhere in the world; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, 1) That the CIO condemns the practices followed by some employers which prevent the full utilization of our productive man-power in the war effort as a result of the discriminatory exclusion of workers from war production plants by reason of race, creed, or color, and calls upon progressive business management everywhere to direct its attention constructively to this problem, with a view to fostering harmonious relationships among workers of different nationalities, religions, and races within their plants, and the elimination of the discriminatory procedures now so widely practiced by managerial personnel and

2) That the CIO reaffirms its traditional stand against discrimination on grounds against race, creed, or color in American industry, and urges its affiliates to bend every effort to help in the elimination of prejudices and discriminatory practices in their respective fields.

Joint Labor Committee

WHEREAS, 1) The President of the United States has extended the opportunity to labor, through the establishment of the Combined Labor Victory Committee, to participate with him in all phases of the war program;

2) The AFL and the CIO through their joint collaboration on the Combined Labor Victory Committee have formulated a program which will intensify the efforts of the workers of the nation in achieving maximum production, protect the interests of labor and rally the entire unified nation behind the President of the United States; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED that this national CIO conference hereby

1) Commends the President of the United States and the AFL and CIO members of the Combined Labor Victory Committee for their activities and program and expresses its full support for their continued work and collaboration; and

2) Recommends to the Combined Labor Victory Committee that it intensify and extend the joint action between the AFL and the CIO on all issues affecting the war program, and that it urge the various federal agencies and departments to afford increasing labor representation and participation in order that the resources of the workers of the nation shall be fully utilized in support of our national war program; and

3) Urges the immediate formation of joint AFL-CIO local committees throughout the nation to carry into effect the policies of the Combined Labor Victory Committee, in order that all the people throughout the nation may be rallied behind a national unity program which will unleash the energies of all Americans for prosecuting the war on the most aggressive basis until final victory for the United Nations is achieved.

Soldiers' Pay

WHEREAS, 1) Soldiers are now paid much less than their great responsibility and personal sacrifices warrants, and

2) Many men are now being drafted or are now enlisting who have dependents needing assistance, now

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, 1) That the CIO call upon the Congress for the immediate enactment of measures, (a) increasing the wages now being paid to soldiers such as the bill favorably reported by the Senate Military Affairs Committee providing for a $42 monthly wage for army privates and a comparable increase for all other ranks, and

2) Providing adequate allowances for dependents of soldiers.

War Manpower

WHEREAS, 1) Organized labor has pledged its full and complete support to the war production program, and

2) The effective utilization of the nation's manpower is one of the most important aspects of the production program, and

3) There are over 25 government agencies dealing with the problem of manpower in one way or another and those activities are not effectively coordinated, and

4) There is no government agency with the responsibility for determining a thorough going and an effective manpower program, therefore be it

RESOLVED, that the Executive Board of the CIO calls for,

1) The establishment of a manpower agency to be placed within the Department of Labor and to be administered by a Director of Manpower.

2) The determination of all policy relating to manpower by a Manpower Policy Board made up of twelve persons four representing organized labor, four industry and one representative each for the Army, Navy and Selective Service System under the chairmanship of a Director of Manpower.

3) The establishment of all activities relating to manpower such as training, placement and the like under the direction of the agency, and

4) The provision of effective representation of labor and industry at all levels of manpower administration.

Smear Campaign Against Unions

The current campaign against labor and the victory production program has been carefully planned and organized to stimulate a state of hysteria and panic in Congress and in the press.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Donald Nelson, our President Philip Murray, the AFL and other leaders and organizations have publicly condemned this campaign as an effort to confuse and mislead the American people and to disrupt the national unity in the war effort.

The evidence shows that this campaign has its source in a conspiracy against labor and the war effort originating in Oklahoma and Texas, in which a number of people and organizations have been led into the use of their names for pro-Axis expressions and activities.

AXIS AGENTS AT WORK

The existence of this conspiracy reveals the effective undercover work of Axis agents operating in this country against our military security and against the security of the United Nations.

The security of our country and of our allies demands an immediate investigation of this conspiracy with the purpose of bringing its originators to light.

Such an investigation would expose the activities of Axis agents and their friends and allies among anti-labor and appeasement groups, in Congress and elsewhere. It would put an end to organized pressure campaigns that seek to disrupt our unity and to hamper the war effort. It would demonstrate to Congress that the people demand the concentration of all our national energy on the offensive against Hitler, and an end to subversive plots against national unity.

Therefore, this national conference of the CIO goes on record commending Senators Thomas and Truman for their statements calling for an immediate and thorough investigation of this conspiracy against the national war effort.

Federal Union Nails Congressman's Lies About U.S. Workers

WASHINGTON, March 28—Of all the misleading statements circulated about the 40-hour week, none reveals "such a profound ignorance of facts" as the remarks about Government employes made in the House this week by Representative William Whittington of Mississippi, the CIO United Federal Workers declared in a letter to the Congressman, released here.

Quoting Whittington as saying that "the people of the country should know that the eight-hour day and the 40-hour week do not obtain in the legislative branch of the government," and that with the exception of legislative employes, all U. S. workers in Washington are paid time and one-half for all hours in excess of 40, the union replied:

"ASTONISHED"

"We were astonished to see your remarks in the Congressional Record. They illustrate what President Roosevelt meant when he referred to the 'amazing state of public misinformation' about labor that is being created in this country.

"The fact is that the bulk of civil service employes in Washington receive no pay for overtime, much less time and one-half. The 40-hour week does not obtain among Government employes generally. Before the war emergency, the basic work week was 39 hours in Washington.

"Now it has been raised to 44 hours in non-war agencies and a minimum of 48 hours in all war agencies, and many thousands of employes are working up to 60 hours. The employes still get the same pay they got while working 39 hours, although living costs in Washington are more than 20 per cent higher."

Standard Oil Fined As U.S. Bares Axis Tie

WASHINGTON, Mar. 28—The federal government has caught Standard Oil with its synthetic rubber pants down.

As a result, Standard must kick up $50,000 in fines, release patents on ersatz rubber at no cost to other U. S. manufacturers, and seek to find excuses for its 10-year honeymoon with I. G. Farbenindustrie, Nazi-controlled German chemical trust.

Dept. of Justice officials charged that Germany's military machine had received all the benefits of the two-way corporation romance. I. G. Farbenindustrie received regular reports on Standard's research developments in the manufacture of synthetic rubber.

Standard was supposed to get in return all that Germany's chemists had discovered about the process. But the Nazi corporation never seemed able to get "Hitler's permission" to release the material to the American firm.

Blushing prettily at this expose, Standard executives agreed to a consent decree in federal court in New York City under which six Standard subsidiaries and three top officials must each pay $5,000 fines and release what patents it has to its competitors. It is estimated that the loss in royalties will cost the company about $6,000,000 a year.

In an attempt to "save face," Standard issued a long statement protesting its innocence and asserting it had agreed to the consent decree only because the company felt it should devote all its energy to prosecution of the war effort!

ARNOLD TESTIFIES

Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, who appeared before the Senate's defense investigating committee, charged that representatives of Standard Oil and the German firm met in Holland after the war started in 1939 to bring the 1929 agreement up to date.

Frank Howard, Standard vice-president, reported after that meeting that "we did our best" to work out an agreement "which would operate through the term of the war, whether or not the United States came in. . . ."

While Standard was turning over its information about butyl, a cheap rubber substitute, to the Germans, it refused to give a representative of the U. S. Navy information about it, Arnold charged.

At the same time, IGF was declining to turn over its patents and formulae for buna, another substitute "because the Hitler government did not wish this rubber exploited here, for military reasons," Arnold added.

He said Standard's actions were motivated not by affection for Germany, but grew out of its desire to protect a monopoly position.

Gotham CIO Quintets In Tourney This Weekend

NEW YORK, March 28—Beeeeeeepp—The referee stops blowing his whistle and waving his arms frantically, points to one player and screams—"No, no, you can't do that—holding before the shot—one shot—foul on number 22." . . .

All this and more will take place at the basketball tournament March 28-29 among all the CIO locals in Greater New York. You want to know how all this came about?

The Sports, Health and Recreation Committee, which was organized to see what the sports could contribute to the smashing of Hitler and his lackeys, adopted as the keynote for its program a mass recreational program which will better prepare the workers to do their part in this life and death struggle.

150 TEAMS INVOLVED

To inaugurate this program the committee decided to run a tournament which would involve at least 150 teams, local union teams and shop teams. The tournament will run all day Saturday and Sunday and all teams will be able to play when it is most convenient for them.

Prizes will consist of two trophies, one of which will go to the best shop teams and the other to the best varsity team. The union championship team of the tournament is scheduled to play the championship team of the National Association of Die Casting Workers from Cleveland.

Form Council

San Francisco, Mar. 28—Local 326 of the Oil Workers Union and the Union Oil Co. have signed an agreement setting up a joint labor-management victory production committee. The committee has three representatives from the union, three from the company and one from government.

Brophy Cites Labor Aid To U. S. Unity

New York, Mar. 28—Labor has taken major steps towards knitting a firm national unity, a regional conference of the Council Against Intolerance in America was told this week by John Brophy, CIO director of industrial union councils.

Unity in labor ranks, and united action with employers towards gaining increased production are only two aspects of the progress, he pointed out.

"There is still another kind of unity within the ranks of the workers which the CIO has brought to American industry," he continued.

"It is the kind of unity with which the Council Against Intolerance should be much concerned: unity among races.

"I think you should know that CIO unions, I believe without exception, receive all workers into membership, regardless of race, creed or color. For the first time the Negro is being given an opportunity to belong to genuine labor organizations everywhere in this country, and in many sections where until a few years ago he was rigorously excluded from membership.

"This policy is firmly established as part of the fundamental creed of the CIO. It marks a long step forward toward the achievement of real racial tolerance in this country."

CIO Backs Navy Relief Campaign

Washington, Mar. 28—"Hearty sympathy with the aims and aspirations of the Navy Relief Socieety" were expressed this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, who simultaneously appointed a committee of seven to represent CIO in the relief organization's coming campaign.

Appointed to the committee were these union officials:

David J. McDonald, steel workers; R. J. Thomas, auto workers; S. H. Dalrymple, rubber workers; and Irving Abramson, John Brophy and Monroe Sweetland, respectively chairman, secretary and director of the CIO American and Allied War Relief Committee.

Aids Relief Drive

New York, March 28—Alfred E. Smith, former New York Governor and Democratic candidate for President in 1928, has become a member of the Board of Russian War Relief.

"I feel that suffering and want, such as that which has inevitably followed the ravages of war in Russia, lays an inescapable duty upon every Christian," Smith commented.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

A real champion can always repeat. Following two victories in the shoe industry in the Middlewest last week, the CIO won another one in Manchester, N. H., at a plant of the International Shoe Company by a vote of 209 against 119. CIO representative, Director Walter Harris, is in charge of this drive. Other elections are to take place in plants of this company in the immediate future.

Regional Director Pieper in New Orleans reports another victory in a plant of the Colonial Sugar Company there with a vote of 351 to 229. He also signed a contract with the Godchaux Sugar Company covering approximately 1000 workers, securing maintenance of membership clause and a seven cents per hour increase in pay. This added on to a three cents increase recently granted. He also reports the signing of a contract with the Celotex Corporation involving 2300 workers with a seven cents per hour increase and many other beneficial provisions.

ILWU reports three victories this week; one in Norfolk, Va., among coal trimmers on the docks with a vote of 81 to 41; in Chicago, at the Peoples Iron and Metal Company with a vote of 28-0; in Cleveland, Ohio, at the Kelly Co., with a vote of 36-20.

Company Union Out

The company union at the Curtiss-Wright Company plants in Buffalo received a body blow in the decision handed down by the NLRB this week. The Board found that the company had dominated this so-called union and had contributed financially and otherwise to it; that the company had promised wage increases to the employes if they would join this outfit; permitted its agents to solicit members and distribute literature on company time and property, while denying to the bona-fide UAW-CIO, Aircraft Division, any rights whatever.

The Board ordered the company to cease and desist such practices and to cease from recognizing this company union as the exclusive bargaining unit and ordered them to discontinue the so-called contract signed with them on Dec. 24, 1941. This exposes the whole scheme and will result in complete organization of these workers by the CIO.

Smith Bill Drive

The poll-tax Congressmen are supported in their efforts to destroy organized labor by the Southern States Industrial Council of Employers, known for their vicious opposition to bona-fide labor unions. This is the group that mailed letters to all papers throughout the South and are behind the movement to stir up hatred and division. They are the sponsors of the telegraphic, letter, and mass-meeting campaign to bring pressure to bear on Congress to repeal the 40-hour law.

This same group who are opposed to the President of the U. S., and the nation's war effort, attempted to put on a pressure rally in Houston, Texas, but their pre-arranged plans were thwarted by organized labor in Houston rallying and taking over the meeting and exposing the artificial nature of this "mass demonstration."

As President Murray has stated and as every CIO union throughout the nation is demonstrating, labor is supporting the President in the all-out victory effort. General MacArthur and his gallant men and the United Nations can depend upon the patriotism of American labor to do the job of producing to maximum capacity. The organization of workers into bona-fide unions is the best guarantee of maximum production and winning the war.

Glass Union 'Loses' Case In Papers-- But Wins At WLB

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

WASHINGTON, March 28—Contrary to accounts carried in the press, the CIO Federation of Glass, Ceramic & Silica Sand Workers did not surrender the union shop in the settlement of the dispute with the Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Libbey-Owens-Ford glass companies reached before a panel of the National War Labor Board here this week.

President I. L. DeShetler and Secretary-Treasurer Peter Vidmar of the Glass Workers said that not only was the union shop understanding covered in the 1941 agreement with the companies retained, but it was also extended to the Crystal City, Mo., plant of Pittsburgh Plate Glass.

NICKEL INCREASE

They declared that this extension was one of the principal gains won by the union in the settlement of the case, together with a general wage increase of five cents an hour, and provisions for further increases based on future rises in the cost of living.

In a statement issued while attending the CIO Executive Board meeting held here, the Glass Workers officials said:

"The union shop understanding covered by section 1-d of the 1941 agreement which was extended to the Crystal City, Mo. plant of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. was one of the principal gains in this case. Section 1-d reads: 'The Company will continue to cooperate with the union to the best interests of both parties,' and is the union shop understanding.

"In application the company has discharged those who would not pay dues or who would not join the union. The Federation's brief presented to the War Labor Board contained a record of its application as the union shop in all plants but the one in Crystal City, where about 200 workers would not join the union following the decision handed down by the Supreme Court in May 1941, upholding an employer-wide bargaining unit.

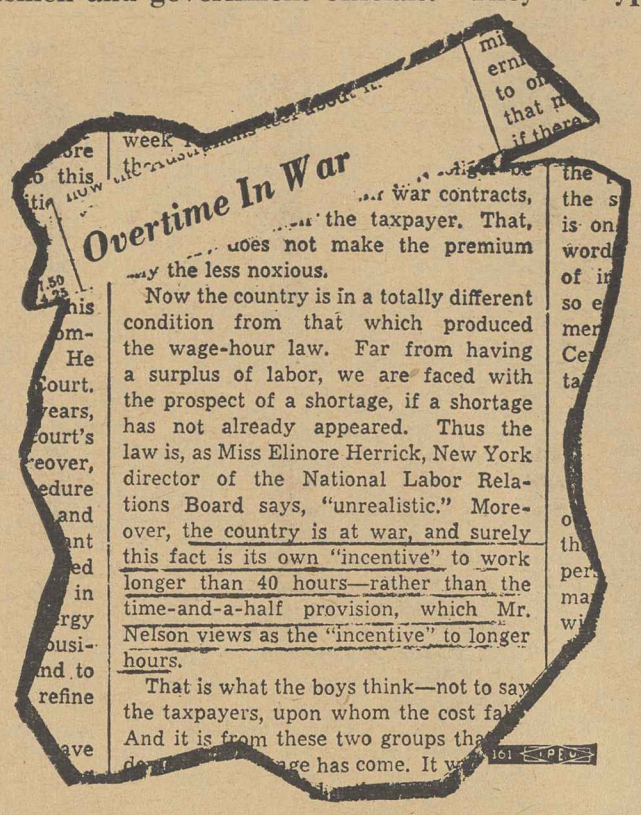
"The 1941 agreement provided for extension of the full agreement, but Pittsburgh Plate would not extend section 1-d to the Crystal City plant. Since the War Labor Board panel's memo agreement provides for extension of the union shop understanding to Crystal City, it is a great victory for the Federation."

LIFTS AVERAGE

The Glass union officials said that the five-cent wage increase granted would bring the average pay of workers covered by the contract to $1.08½ an hour.

Newspapers' Double Standard: Editorials 'Bear Down On Labor, Go Light On Industry'

These two editorials appeared recently in the columns of the Washington Post, the breakfast-table bible for scores of Congressmen and government officials. They are typical of hundreds which attack labor, praise industry.



Overtime In War

...r war contracts, ... the taxpayer. That, ... does not make the premium ...y the less noxious.

Now the country is in a totally different condition from that which produced the wage-hour law. Far from having a surplus of labor, we are faced with the prospect of a shortage, if a shortage has not already appeared. Thus the law is, as Miss Elinore Herrick, New York director of the National Labor Relations Board says, "unrealistic." Moreover, the country is at war, and surely this fact is its own "incentive" to work longer than 40 hours—rather than the time-and-a-half provision, which Mr. Nelson views as the "incentive" to longer hours.

Editorial at the left (March 20) scoffs at need for overtime pay for workers after 40 hours a week, claims that labor needs no incentive beyond the war effort to produce. There's no mention of the increased living costs facing American workers.

Editorial at the right (March 28) warns Congress against limiting profits, on the basis that industry needs a special incentive to produce for the war.

This is one example of how the press has been openly and covertly attacking labor, siding with profit-makers.

"A moment's reflection will show the disastrous consequences of a profit ceiling. It would make for inefficient industrial management. For if all profits above a fixed maximum were to be taken by the tax collector, the incentive to avoid waste would be impaired, if not destroyed. Hear That Silence?

'X' Marks Spot Where Build-Up Broke Down

Detroit, April 4—Genevieve Samp, built up by the Chicago Tribune and other labor-baiters as a Joan of Arc victimized by a CIO union because she insisted on stepping up defense production in her plant, has let her new-found friends down.

Miss Samp, a member of Local 270, United Automobile Workers, CIO, and a packager at the National Stamping Company, Detroit, was accused several weeks ago of disturbing the peace in the plant—a charge which she frankly admitted in several public statements. She said she had made insulting remarks to non-citizens and that she had lost her temper. As a result of these incidents, several fellow members brought her up on charges before a trial committee of the local union.

100% WRONG

Pearson and Allen, columnists, stated in a radio broadcast that Miss Samp had been discharged on the union's request because she produced too much war materials. She was never discharged and she did not work in any production capacity whatever. Nevertheless, she was taken up by the anti-labor press as a victim of an "unpatriotic" union.

Today, in a signed statement, Miss Samp said:

"I have never at any time stated that the workers in the plant have objected to increasing production. Such a statement would not have been true. The workers in the plant, like myself, are in support of the effort to increase the output of war materials and are doing everything in their power to do it.

100% WRONG AGAIN

"I do not know where Pearson and Allen got their information, but I do know that it is untrue. Anyone who says that the members of my union are not doing everything they can to increase production of war materials is either ignorant or an enemy of unions."

Labor Foes Trimmed In Senate

(See Stories On Inside Pages)

WASHINGTON, Apr. 4—Legislation to hamstring labor, the proclaimed desire of the nation's reactionary groups, took a terrible shellacking in the Senate this week.

An amendment incorporating most of the features of Rep. Howard Smith's "slavery" bill was introduced in the Senate by Lee (Pass the Biscuits) O'Daniel, of Texas. Only four Senators, including O'Daniel, were interested, and the proposal was roundly defeated.

CIO officials warned, however, that Sen. Tom Connally's bill to freeze wage and working condition standards would come up for debate and vote after the Easter recess, and reminded unions throughout the country to continue their opposition to the anti-labor bills.

Give Ambulance To Red Cross

New York, April 4—An ambulance unit was presented to the Red Cross by the Industrial Insurance Agents Union, affiliated to the CIO Office and Professional Workers, in a brief ceremony here.

Check for the funds collected among union members was turned over to the Red Cross by nine-year-old Barbara Ann Whitman, daughter of Union President Roy Whitman.

Endorse Stand On Pay Waiver

New York, April 4—A proposal of the CIO electrical union's national officers that the union will waive premium payments for Saturday, Sunday and holiday work if the Westinghouse Electric Co. will donate the money saved to the government, has won approval of representatives of the firm's 70,000 employes.

The offer, made earlier to the General Electric Co., was presented to Westinghouse this week during the course of contract negotiations.

CIO Wins Western Union Election By 2-1 Margin

By CHARLES SILBERMAN

NEW YORK, April 4—Employes of the Western Union Telegraph Company in the "Telegraph Capital of the World" voted by more than two-to-one for the American Communications Association, CIO, in a Labor Board poll held here March 26, 27, 28. The vote by units:

	CIO	AFL	Neither
Metropolitan	2,266	1,066	117
Western Union Cables	178	8	27
Repair Shop	155	2	5
Warehouse	59	9	18
Home Office	87	89	135
Newark Commercial	2	75	4

Approximately 7,000 employes were eligible to vote in the six election units set up by the Board. Other organization on the ballot was the American Federation of Labor.

Pres. Joseph P. Selly of ACA hailed the election results as a victory not only for the ACA but for the entire CIO, and announced the launching of a nation-wide organizing drive to bring the benefits of CIO organization to the remaining unorganized Western Union workers.

SUPPORTED CIO

"Western Union workers voted not only on the record of accomplishments and program of the ACA, but also expressed their support of the record and prestige of the CIO, its affiliated organizations, and its national officers," Selly declared.

The choice of ACA as collective bargaining agent culminated five year of organizing effort during which the ACA caused the disestablishment of one of the oldest and most powerful company-unions in the country.

The drive received the full support of CIO President Philip Murray whose public utterances and writings exerted a powerful influence among the Western Union employes. The final weeks of the campaign were marked by the all-out financial and physical support of the Greater New York Industrial Union Council and its affiliates. Commenting on the election, ACA President Selly said.

STRENGTHENS UNION

"The addition of seven thousand Western Union employes to the organized ranks of the American Communications Association, CIO, will strengthen the constructive role which our organization has been playing in the successful prosecution of the war.

"We propose to enter into collective bargaining negotiations with the Western Union Telegraph Company to secure a fair and equitable contract which will guarantee industrial stability, uninterrupted production and a proper and justified improvement in wages and working conditions. We will ask the company to negotiate with us as soon as the technical requirements of Labor Board certifications are completed.

Wire Union Convenes Soon In Atlanta

Atlanta, Ga., April 4.—Speakers scheduled to address the sixth national convention of the CIO American Communications Association, which opens at the Ansley Hotel here on April 13, include James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission; Allan Haywood, CIO director of organization; Joseph Curran, president, National Maritime Union and Charles Gilman of the Georgia CIO Council.

The ACA has been one of three CIO unions most active in the South in recent years, with a southern membership surpassed in size only by the Textile Workers Union and the United Mine Workers.

Officials of the union say that this convention is expected to be the largest and most important since the ACA was formed. Some 8,000 new members were brought into the union recently when the ACA won a Labor Board election held among employes of the Western Union Telegraph Co. in New York.

Third Movie Poll Shows CIO Strength

New York, Apr. 4—Screen Office and Professional Employes Guild, affiliated with the CIO Office & Professional Workers, was designated as collective bargaining agent by the white collar workers in the home offices of 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation and Movietone News, Inc., in an NLRB election held this week.

The vote was 196 to 96 for SOPEG. 347 persons were eligible to vote.

This is the third straight victory for SOPEG within a month. The NLRB's decision on an election at RKO-Radio Pictures is still pending.

The union has requested recognition at National Screen Service, to cover approximately 215 employes, and it is anticipated that negotiations will open within the next few days at Loew's, Inc., and Columbia Pictures Corporation.

250,000 Set for Polls At U. S. Steel

Pittsburgh, April 4.—Plans for the largest Labor Board elections ever held, involving a quarter of a million workers in U. S. Steel plants, are virtually completed, the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee announced here this week.

The union has filed petitions with the National Labor Relations Board asking that elections be conducted in more than 50 U. S. Steel plants in Alabama, California, Illinois, Indiana, Massachusetts, Minnesota Ohio, Pennsylvania, Texas, Utah and West Virginia.

"The SWOC and U. S. Steel are putting finishing touches to a formal stipulation which both will sign agreeing to consent elections," the union stated. "This eliminates the necessity of formal Labor Board hearings and will expedite the actual elections."

SWOC WON THREE

In three elections already held in U. S. Steel subsidiary plants, the SWOC scored landslide victories. At the Boyle Manufacturing Co., Alameda, Calif., the SWOC won an election by a vote of 159 to 1, and at the Los Angeles plant of the same company, won by a vote of 389 to 11. Workers at the Gary, Ind., plant of American Bridge voted 1,030 for the SWOC to 66 for an employes association at an election held in February.

Asks Increases For City Workers

New York, April 4—Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, this week appealed to Gotham's Mayor LaGuardia to increase the salaries of low-paid city workers to help them "make both ends meet in the difficult days ahead."

Haywood asked the mayor to establish a $1,200 a year minimum for city employes and to grant a $180 pay raise to all employes earning less than $3,000 a year.

He said that some 20,000 New York City employes get less than $1,200, and that 70,000 are below the $2,400 level.

Seamen Hit 'Needless' Loss of Lives

Washington, April 4 — Needless loss of life on America's most dangerous production line—the merchant marine—was charged by officials of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union before Congress this week and backed up by scores of affidavits from survivors of a dozen torpedoings.

The charges were made by NMU Pres. Joe Curran and Vice-Presidents Blackie Myers and Howard McKenzie, who appeared before an executive session of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee to expose criminal neglect on the part of shipowners who fail to provide adequate lifeboats, rafts and life-preservers, who ignore basic safety rules and who flout Navy orders that would cut down sinkings by Nazi subs off the coast.

At the same time, the NMU leaders presented a four-point program to cut loss in life that calls for a centralized U. S. shipping authority to wipe out the present chaos among a half dozen agencies, the setting up of safety committees by crew men on each ship, organization of a coastal auxiliary patrol, and provision of adequate life-saving suits, lifeboats and rafts.

The program also calls for a speedup in ship arming to give American ships a chance to fight back rather than simply offering target practice for the subs.

AFFIDAVITS

According to the supporting affidavits, many of which were cited in the current issue of the NMU's paper, The Pilot, the most elementary rules of wartime safety are blandly neglected on many ships.

One affidavit from a seaman on the torpedoed Ceiba shows that no lifeboat drills at all were held during a 19-day trip. Life-rafts on the Gulftrade were lashed to the rigging where they could not be reached when the torpedo struck. The Republic did not have enough lifebelts to go around the crew.

According to a survivor of the Allan Jackson, many of the 23 men lost when she was hit could have been saved if the boats had been carried swung over the side rather than stowed in the peacetime fashion. Still another ship took 15 minutes to launch one boat.

Most callous of all the shipowners was described by a seaman whose affidavit said: "The coal that was put aboard in Jacksonville was of such poor quality that it was impossible to keep ahead of steam. . . . At best the ship was running at one third speed.

"The bilges were loading up with water and as the pumps would not work with the engine going at such low speed it was necessary to stop the engine in order to run the bilge pump. The engine was stopped with the ship being tossed around like a cork and all the cargo loose and slapping around in the holds."

PERFECT TARGETS

Another line, the Mystic Co., runs its ships with only part of their boilers cut in—to save an extra fireman's wages. Several were cited for travelling at nights with running lights on.

Steel Workers Announce Convention for May 19; To Adopt Constitution

PITTSBURGH, April 4—The third international convention of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee will be held in Cleveland. O., May 19-22.

The convention is called for the purpose of adopting a constitution; providing for the election of officers; adopting a wage policy to provide a basis for negotiating future wage agreements, and to make plans for the future which will lead to the complete organizing of the entire steel industry in the United States and Canada.

In the official "call" sent out by Philip Murray, SWOC chairman, and David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer, it was noted that "this will be one of the most important and historic conventions ever held, coming in the early days of a great war against oppression and dictatorship."

"It will bring together the leaders of a democratic labor union which is devoted to the principles of all-out victory production and support of our Commander-In-Chief's war program for defeat of the Axis powers," the "call" said.

Local unions will elect delegates. Each delegate shall have one vote for each 100 members or less and one additional vote for each 100 members or less and one additional vote for each 100 members or majority fraction thereof, but no delegate shall have more than 10 votes.

WILL ESTABLISH UNION

Previous SWOC conventions were held in Pittsburgh in 1937 and Chicago 1940.

At the present time the SWOC is functioning as an organizing committee, with rules and methods of procedure to guide it. The forthcoming convention will establish the union as a constitutional organization.

The SWOC was formed in June of 1936. Since then close to 95 percent of the steel manufacturing, fabricating and processing industry has been organized and brought under contract. This figure includes the four "Little Steel" companies of Bethlehem, Inland, Republic and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

Contracts with these companies have been virtually agreed upon, with the exception of provisions for a $1-a-day wage increase and union security. These latter two provisions are now being heard by a panel of the National War Labor Board in Washington.

Special Auto Confab To Mull War Issues

DETROIT, April 4—A special national conference of 1,200 delegates from locals of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, will meet here Tuesday and Wednesday, April 7 and 8, to consider numerous special problems created by the war.

The conference was called on decision of the UAW international executive board taken during a special meeting of the board held March 28th in Cleveland.

R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW-CIO, after the meeting wrote Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, as follows:

"The UAW-CIO gave thorough and respectful consideration to your proposal that labor waive its contractual rights to double pay for work performed on Sundays and holidays, when those days come within a forty-hour week.

FULL SUPPORT

"As you are aware, our organization has always given full support to every step calculated to advance our nation's war effort. Our membership and officers wholeheartedly share the consideration that victory over the enemies of our nation must be our paramount objective.

"The discussions of our international executive board today developed several proposals through which this objective may be made certain of attainment. In order to give full and democratic consideration to these proposals, as well as to your proposal relating to Sunday work, the board has decided to call a special national conference of its local unions."

Gen. MacArthur, Australian Labor Leader Greet CIO

WASHINGTON, April 4—CIO messages of encouragement and support to Gen. Douglas MacArthur and the AEF in Australia, and to the island dominion's organized workers, brought quick "thank you" replies this week.

From Pres. Albert Monk,

Australasian Council of Trade Unions:

"Workers and whole people of Australia gratified at your pledge of 100% war production to assist Australia and all countries fighting for liberty and defeat of Axis aggression.

"We will fight with your armed forces in this country till the last, and contest every inch of ground against the Japanese.

"Full appreciative of the close bond established between workers of America and Australia."

ALBERT MONK

From Gen. MacArthur:

"Appreciate deeply your message, which has just reached me. Labor has played its magnificent part in every great war our Republic has fought, and that it will do so again and prove the indestructible backbone that will determine the present vital struggle—is my firm conviction.

"I have complete trust in the mighty effort that I feel sure you will put forth."

GENERAL MacARTHUR

5,000 Welcome Pres. Murray In N. Carolina

CHARLOTTE, N. C., April 4—CIO President Philip Murray was enthusiastically welcomed by some 5,000 Southerners at a mass meeting here last Sunday, under the sponsorship of the Textile Workers Union of America.

Textile workers from many surrounding mill towns poured into Charlotte for the occasion, as well as delegations from other industries and states as far distant as Alabama. They sat side by side with political leaders and prominent citizens from every walk of Southern life, to cheer the CIO message of union organization and all-out effort for victory.

"No group in America is more devoted to the maintenance of our democratic institutions and the winning of the war than American labor," Murray told the gathering.

HAILS LABOR'S RECORD

Pointing to the war record of the CIO unions in all major industries, Murray noted that "the workers' efficiency, their per capita productivity has increased 14½ percent in the past six months in these industries.

"America's workers have their sleeves rolled up," he said, "they are sweating, they are toiling, they are pleading in their effort to give the maximum in production."

Denouncing the anti-labor propaganda in press and Congress around the 40-hour week issue, the CIO president said that steps like the Smith bill to smash unions and regiment labor would not stop there.

"You can't regiment labor and regiment labor alone," he said, pointing out that Fascist regimentation starts with the unions and then spreads to everything else, including the press.

Murray declared that abolishing overtime rates after 40 hours would not increase production. "Do we need stretching of the work week in the steel industry," he said, "when 125,000 steel workers are idle, and there has been only enough work for an average working week of 39 hours?"

BARES TORY LIES

The campaign around the 40-hour week is "founded on a lie," Murray said. "There is no present limitation on working hours. It means only a cut in wages.

"If Congress should take away overtime rates, labor would have to demand of industry a restoration of its present earnings through higher wages."

Pres. Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers Union declared that the average wage of Southern textile workers is 48c an hour, while textile profits were higher in 1941 than in the last 25 or 30 years, with prospects of even higher profits in 1942. "It is time to pass on some of these profits to the workers," he said.

Governor J. M. Broughton of North Carolina, former Senator Cameron Morrison and Pres. Frank Graham of the University of North Carolina were other speakers who praised Murray and the record of the CIO.

Senate OKs Army Pay Bill

Washington, April 4—Soldiers' base pay will be raised to $42 a month under the provisions of a Senate bill passed this week by a 73-0 vote. The increase, which doubles the present starting rate of $21 a month, will be applied proportionately to other ranks.

Last week's meeting of the CIO Executive Board passed a unanimous resolution urging such an increase. The bill now goes to the House, where it faces a two weeks' delay due to the Easter recess.

Tories' Squeeze Play Flops In Senate

WASHINGTON, April 4—One more sneak attempt to put over labor-busting legislation in the form of a rider to another bill has been beaten back in Congress, this time in the Senate when only four votes were mustered when Sen. W. Lee (Pass the Biscuits) O'Daniel took a thorough trimming on his amendment to the small-business bill offered by Sen. Murray of Montana.

O'Daniel, who has been filling the Record with phoney letters against the 40-hour week from the well-organized "grass-roots" uprising, tried to slip his maneuver over at the close of a long day in the Senate.

He was licked when only one Senator (polltaxer Byrd, Va.) stood up with him to demand a roll-call vote. Later, he was joined by two more—Connally of Texas, and Doxey of Mississippi.

O'Daniel's rider was in substance the Smith bill abolishing overtime pay for overtime work, union security, plus picketing and "force and violence" for good measure. The Bourbons never admit defeat, however, and O'Daniel's colleague Connally was quick to threaten that he would bring up his long-shelved bill at the earliest opportunity.

Despite the repudiation of O'Daniel and his corporal's guard of reactionaries, labor people here warned that Connally's bill represented a real threat and that the Smith bill was distinctly not dead in the House, though somewhat groggy from the labor-administration counter-drive.

BOTTLENECKS

Speaking on his bill to help bring small business into the war production picture, Sen. Murray of Montana made an effective answer to the boys who would rather smash labor than help smash Hitler, declaring:

"The idea of attacking labor at this time is absolutely absurd. There are no strikes in the country . . . the real cause of lack of production in the country is the fact that the big corporations have obtained all the contracts, and the small concerns, which during the past six months have been endeavoring to get into war production, have been left entirely out of the picture."

Some pretty fancy oratory accompanied the O'Daniel skirmish in the Senate. Here is an example from polltaxer Doxey of Mississippi, with mixed metaphors taking the place of facts. Naturally he's arguing against the 40-hour week:

"Let us cross the Rubicon and take our stand beside the boys in the trenches, on the high seas, in the air, and say to those who would stop or retard our all-out defense efforts: 'This glorious Republic is not poor and beaten France. We must all work or fight; we cannot do more; we dare not do less."

Doxey tossed off this gem on March 10. He liked it so well that he repeated it this week, with added sound effects.

Behind the sound effects, however, the danger from anti-labor legislation that would strike a severe blow at all-out war production remained acute.

Joint Output Councils Being Set Up Fast

WASHINGTON, April 4—More than 100 war plants have already set up labor-management victory production committees, Donald Nelson, head of the War Production Board, reported this week.

This action followed the appeal for such committees in his radio speech of early March, which was endorsed by CIO Pres. Murray on March 6 and by unanimous action of the CIO Executive Board at the special meeting last week.

The War Production Board also reported that some 31 victory production conferences have been held in 29 cities in the last two weeks, with more than 10,000 people attending them. Two thousand plants were involved in these meetings, with a top attendance of 758 delegates in Cleveland, Ohio.

First plant to receive praise from the WPB for recent production actions was the Batavia, N. Y., branch of the Doehler Die Casting Corp., under contract with the CIO Natl. Association of Die Casting Workers. Nelson praised the workers and the company for carrying on production during a recent flood.

COVER 500,000

Three of the country's top-ranking corporations—U. S. Steel, General Electric and Westinghouse—have already moved to put the joint labor-management councils in operation. The trio of firms, all operating under CIO contracts, employ close to a half-million workers.

Immediately after Donald Nelson's suggestion for creation of the joint committees, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee invited U. S. Steel to take quick action to get the production groups in operation.

One of the first instances where provision for the joint committees was written into a union contract was reported from the West Coast. The Oil Workers Intl. Union, CIO, and the Union Oil Co. signed a pact which sets up the councils and gives them jurisdiction over a number of functions: production, morale, training, safety and labor supply.

CIO Leaders On Radio April 7, 14

Washington, April 4.—The CIO is taking to the radio airwaves in order to bring its "work to win" program more clearly to the American people, and to answer the campaign of anti-labor slander currently crowding legitimate news out of the columns of the daily press.

Negotiations are nearing completion with a national network for a regular program in which labor's message can be brought to the general public. Plans for the program were instituted several months ago by the CIO publicity department.

PITTSBURGH MEETING

On Tuesday, April 7, CIO Pres. Philip Murray, AFL Pres. William Green and Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt will be heard over the Mutual Broadcasting System between 10:15 and 10:45, Eastern War Time. The microphones will pick up addresses at an historic "Unite for Victory" Rally in Pittsburgh under joint CIO and AFL auspices.

It will mark the first time in years that the leaders of the CIO and AFL have spoken from the same public platform.

A week later, on Tuesday, April 14, the CIO War Relief Committee will sponsor a coast-to-coast program over Mutual and the Don Lee network on the west coast. The program, "Hold the Fort," will be presented at 11:30 p.m., Eastern War Time.

It will be a half-hour dramatic and musical show, depicting how CIO members are working, fighting and giving for victory, with a special message from Pres. Murray.

Local CIO groups are urged to contact their nearest Mutual stations and make certain that the two programs are carried.

Coast CIO Maps Output Plans

San Francisco, April 4 — More than 1,000 union officials, shop stewards, rank-and-file unionists gathered here under CIO auspices to implement WPB Chairman Donald Nelson's plan for increased war production.

The meeting was called by the Industrial Union Councils of San Francisco, Alameda and Contra Costa counties. Although primarily a CIO meeting, State Sen. John F. Shelley, president of the city AFL Labor Council and Alexander Watchman, head of the building trades council, were present.

An enthusiastic meeting, the conference discussed constructive methods of increasing production, whether employers cooperate or not. For an hour after Sec. Mervyn Rathborne of the San Francisco Industrial Union Council presented the points of the formula, delegates gave concise reports, criticisms and plans from the floor.

Southern Progressives Meet April 19

Nashville, Tenn., April 4 — The Southern Conference for Human Welfare, composed of labor and progressive leaders throughout the southern states, will hold its third parley in Memorial Auditorium here on April 19-21.

"The conference can center the concern of the nation on the solution of our problems as the means of releasing our great potential energy for the defense of America and its final victory," the call to the meeting stated.

It added that the conference believes "that labor, business and government — the farmer, women, youth, the Negro—all share in the burden of building the south, and likewise must be guaranteed equal benefit in southern progress."

Congress in Recess

During the present brief Congressional recess, many members of Congress have an excellent opportunity to learn what the folks back home are really thinking.

While in Washington, they may be confused by the propaganda of a press which is almost uniformly hostile to the working people and by the manufactured flow of form letters, form telegrams, etc., designed to misrepresent public opinion.

But when your Congressional representatives get home, there is a good chance for labor voters to contact them (as labor's enemies will be doing) and to impress upon them such facts as the following:

(1) That the labor unions and their members are 100% behind the war effort and taking the lead in all steps necessary to increase production. The CIO calls for 24-hour, seven-day week operation in war industries.

(2) That labor has laid aside the strike weapon for the duration, has given up Sunday double time within the 40-hour week and made many other sacrifices for all-out war production.

(3) That most of the obstructions to production arise from profiteering selfishness, from dollar-a-year men, and from shortages and failures to plan production over which labor has no control.

(4) That the campaign supposedly directed against the 40-hour week is a phoney. There is no such present limitation of hours, and most war plants are working much longer hours. The sole purpose is to slash the wages of already underpaid workers by abolishing overtime rates.

(5) That open-shop, wage-cutting, union-smashing bills like the Smith bill are the worst blow that could be struck against our war effort, breeding disunity, turning group against group and destroying the morale so necessary for victory.

(6) That the war demands strengthening not destruction of the unions, fair wages, union security, fair taxation and not soak-the-poor sales taxes.

Don't let your Congressman or Senators go back to Washington with any doubts as to how labor stands or what it thinks of the labor-baiters who are playing Hitler's game. Now is the time to contact them.

Double Standard

Most of the business-controlled daily press has two standards: One for the rich, another for the poor; one for profits, another for wages.

A sample: The Washington Post one day editorializes against profit limitation on grounds that industry must have an "incentive" to produce. A few days later, the same paper favors slashing wages for overtime after 40 hours, saying labor should need no incentive, since the war should be incentive enough.

This sample is typical of daily press editorial reaction on the 40-hour week, wages, profits, taxation, unemployment compensation, union security, wage-freezing and every other issue on which the interests of capital and labor can be counterposed.

As revealed factually in the adjoining column, "Looking Ahead," most of the daily press has been consistently lining up for what it conceives to be the profit interests of its owners and big advertisers and against the claims of the working people.

This is an old story perhaps. Labor has long had to combat the hostility of the millionaire press. But it is peculiarly shocking that the war seems to have made little difference in such propaganda of selfish anti-labor bias. If anything, it seems to have grown worse in recent months.

So far as the CIO (and labor generally) is concerned, national unity for winning the war is its first consideration. It has laid aside the strike weapon for the duration. It is eager to cooperate wholeheartedly with industry and other groups on every step to increase production for victory. To this end it is willing to subordinate old animosities, and not to try to settle old scores till the war is won.

Is it too much to ask of anti-labor newspaper publishers that they show evidence of a like spirit?

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

WORST offenders of all business-as-usual interests are those controlling America's daily press. Despite the war, they continue to propagate disunity by setting rich against poor; by attacking labor and demanding worse conditions for it, while they excuse profiteering and employer obstructions.

Does this sound too rough? It is a conclusion based not on general impressions but on the strictly factual, statistical and impartial findings of the Weekly Analysis of Newspaper Opinion prepared by James S. Twohey Associates. Their measurements of daily newspaper editorial treatment of current issues reveal such samples as these:

The 40-Hour Week: Almost without exception, the daily press promoted the anti-labor propaganda that strikes (which have ceased), the wage-hour law (which does not limit hours to 40) and other labor causes are holding up war production.

The testimony of every responsible authority, from President Roosevelt down, that the above propaganda is untrue, that far more than 40 hours are being worked, and that the anti--40-hour drive is merely a device to cut wages, has finally been reflected in about 20% of the press

But most of it continues its propaganda for legislation like the Smith bill. About the only qualification, made by some, is that the proposed 6% profit limitation would be bad, because capital must have a profit incentive.

Wages: Besides favoring the wage-cutting drive involved in abolishing overtime rates after 40 hours, almost the entire daily press has been urging that wage increases must not be allowed.

Profits: Tender concern for profits is in striking contrast to the hard-boiled attitude toward wages. When the House Naval Affairs Committee reported many glaring instances of war profiteering, and at the same time called for restrictions on unions, 62% of the press defended business against profiteering charges and laid major stress on union controls; and only 6% condemned profiteering.

Exposure of the Jack & Heintz Co. profiteering stirred the indignation of only 9% of the press; 20% were more or less philosophical, and 11% blamed the government.

The indulgent attitude toward profiteering, in contrast with the almost unanimous fury against labor when charges of union wrong-doing are made, leads Twohey Associates to this reflection:

"Press treatment of the Jack & Heintz incident, in conjunction with current and past press treatment of labor, brings into fairly sharp focus the persistent tendency of a large proportion of the press to side with industry and against labor.

"This tendency has been growing in past months and it appears probable that the press will have to revise its general treatment of industry vs. labor if it desires to maintain any public pretensions to impartiality."

Arnold Testimony: When Thurman Arnold made his blanket denunciation of labor unions, 58% of the press applauded vigorously and demanded action against labor.

When he followed this by denouncing Standard Oil for its deal with the German trust which held up American synthetic rubber production, only 14% roundly condemned the company, and 19% thought up excuses.

Twohey comment: "If the administration desired to lay a trap to break press attacks on labor and to show through juxtaposition the difference between press attitudes on an industrial practice of the same type, the Arnold statements appear to be a practical way to do it."

Taxation: The sales tax is the form of taxation that places the greatest proportional burden on the poor and gives the greatest relief to the rich. Forty per cent of press immediately demanded sales tax, when U. S. Treasury opposed it, and a general drive for a sales tax is under way in the press.

Mandatory joint returns and taxation of tax-exempt securities would fall chiefly on the rich. So a strong press campaign is on against them.

Every other current issue affecting capital and labor reveals the majority of the press opposing labor demands and supporting the employers' position. This includes opposition to special compensation for war unemployed, to overtime pay and to union security, support for wage-freezing, etc.

"An overwhelming majority of the press has consistently sided against labor on almost every controversial issue in the past three years," Twohey comments, noting "obvious fear of labor."

In light of the above facts, is it an exaggeration to say that the major machinery for molding public opinion is business-controlled and used for selfish employing-class purposes?

In war-time particularly this is a menace to our national unity, which demands remedying.

Chinese Workers' Co-ops Vital Link In Anti-Axis War

By DAVID CROOK

New York, April 4—China has her own Murray Plan already operating in the two thousand units of the Chinese Industrial Co-operatives.

Some of these are safely set-up way back in the interior of China, hundreds of miles from the fighting-lines. Others are mobile units turning-out war-materials a few miles from the front. If the enemy advances too close they move off, bag-and-baggage, and set up shop again without losing more than a couple of working days. Some plants even wage industrial guerilla warfare behind the Japanese lines. Indusco—as the Chinese Industrial Co-operatives are known—is one branch of the United Nations war industry which is really on a 100 per cent war footing.

Besides this, Indusco rescues thousands of war-area refugees from starvation or dependence on meagre relief. At the same time it enables workers to raise their living standards and it steps up war production by operating on a thoroughly democratic basis.

Workers don't have a share in the management. They are the management!

ELECT THEIR BOSSES

These co-op members actually elect their bosses from their own ranks—and fire them if they fall down on the job! There's no chance of conversion lags or business-as-usual under this set-up.

A group of anywhere from seven workers up (three hundred is the largest unit to date, but the sky's the limit) gets together with an industrial project. They have skill and will, but no capital. This they receive in the form of a loan from CIC headquarters, which is supported by private individuals in China and abroad, and has the official sponsorship of the Chinese government.

To begin with the members hold a general meeting to elect a manager and board of directors—all rank-and-file workers on the job every day. Each member has one vote, no matter how many shares he owns. Together they decide on their own production policy, wages, working-hours and conditions. No disputes here. They make their own rules and abide by them.

SHARE PROFITS

At the end of the year at another general meeting the profits are shared out in the form of bonuses, after necessary deductions for loan repayment and interest, reserve fund, etc.

This last includes an educational project. Many a Chinese worker, deprived of education as a child, has learned to read and write as a result of joining a co-op.

These Chinese workers are a long way off, but they face many problems similar to ours. They have to contend with stiff opposition from the business-as-usual boys in private enterprise—to say nothing of dodging Japanese bombs.

Indusco has a speakers' bureau and offices at 425 Fourth Avenue and will be glad to provide further information on the Chinese Industrial Co-operatives.

Murray Lauds China Relief

Washington, April 4—CIO Pres. Philip Murray said today that "every member of the CIO is wholeheartedly behind the United China Relief campaign" and praised the organization for the aid it is rendering to the Chinese workers and fighters "in our common fight for freedom."

Mr. Murray endorsed the campaign in a letter to W. R. Herod, president of United China Relief, following his election to the national board of directors of the fund-raising organization, which is launching a drive for $7,000,000 during China Week, April 12-19.

U. S. Committee Nails Tory Lie About Work Week

Washington, April 4—The Truman Committee of the U. S. Senate, making another in its reports on war production progress, this week nailed one more of the current lies against labor.

Discussing conditions in West Coast industry, the committee said that only one executive out of several interviewed thought that output could be improved by lengthening the work week.

"It is interesting to note," the committee added, that this "single dissent" came from a plant where labor and management relations have not been harmonious.

"Employes in nearly all plants were working a 48-hour week," the committee noted. "Executives said if overtime is eliminated, it would be necessary to increase hourly rates to provide the same weekly earnings."

CIO Editors Will Meet This Week

Washington, April 4—About a hundred CIO editors and publicity directors are expected to meet in Washington April 11 and 12 for a special conference called by National Publicity Director Len De Caux.

The conference call was issued pursuant to action of the recent CIO Executive Board meeting in setting up a special committee on general CIO radio and press publicity, with particular reference to counteracting the present anti-labor propaganda campaign.

De Caux was appointed chairman of this committee, which also includes Pres. Milton Murray of the American Newspaper Guild and editors and publicity directors, of CIO affiliates.

TO DISCUSS PLANS

The first day of the conference will be devoted to CIO publicity plans and organization, in line with the purposes of the Executive Board's action.

The Sunday's sessions will be more general in character and designed to coordinate the CIO press more closely with promoting the war effort. Representatives of various government departments concerned with relations with the labor press will participate in these sessions and join in the discussion.

Speakers invited to address the conference on the second day include Archibald McLeish, head of the Office of Facts and Figures, and Colonel A. Robert Ginsburgh of the War Dept.

The conference will be held in the Embassy Room of the Ambassador Hotel.

Fortify Freedom, Murray Urges W. Va. Miners

By C. W. FOWLER

WELCH, W. Va., April 1—All support, "with no reservations or qualifications" to President Roosevelt "to bring about a speedy and victorious end to this war" was pledged by CIO President Philip Murray before an overflow mass meeting of workers celebrating Miners' Day in this coal diggers' town, center of the West Virginia bituminous area.

"This is labor's war," Murray said. "Labor must play its full part, must assume greater and more important responsibilities. As President of the CIO, I have told the President of the U. S. that American labor supports him in this war. I'm willing to give him all support, with no reservations or qualifications, to bring about a speedy and victorious end to this war."

LONG PARADE

Murray spoke after an hour long parade with bands had preceded his arrival, with almost the whole town waiting for him and taking part in the anniversary of the eight hour day in mining industry. With him on the platform were William Blizzard, vice-president of District 17 of the United Mine Workers, John B. Easton, president of the state CIO Council, the Mayor of Welch, and other union and civic leaders.

The Governor of the state, who was unable to attend, sent a message of greeting, as did Van A. Bittner, president of the UMWA District.

HITS LABOR STABBERS

A portion of Murray's speech dealt with back-stabbers in Congress who are trying to hamper the war effort by pushing the Smith bill and other measures aimed at destroying unions and working conditions. Pointing out that basic industries are still working at much less than capacity—coal and steel especially—he asked what good a 48 hour week would do when industry was keeping the week down itself to half time in coal, less than 40 hours in steel.

Rubber, autos, tin and the like are working at even less capacity, Murray said—in autos due to conversion and in the others due to lack of materials. "The bottlenecks are in materials shortages," he said. "Labor is not at fault."

"Labor is ready to bleed and sweat and die to give the United States the goods we need to win the war," he declared. "But there is more idle machinery that could produce war goods today than ever before in the history of war."

Murray reviewed briefly the history of unionism in this section, calling on his audience to remember the days before 1933 when the armed guards and the Baldwin-Felts men made life and work a thinly disguised brand of slavery for the miners.

"You remember, as I do, the kind of life you had then," he said. "The life of poverty, of starvation, of emaciated bodies, with many of your children literally starving. There was no union then, no checkweighman. All you had was the speed-up, the long hours, the knowledge at the beginning of the day that you might not have your job at the end of it."

The audience, made up of white and Negro workers and their families, showed that they remembered by punctuating Murray's speech with cries of approval and agreement—particularly when he talked of labor's war and CIO's determination to give it all support needed for victory.

Efforts to split the unity of the labor movement behind the war effort were sharply denounced in his speech, Murray declaring: "Labor is interested in only one war, the war against the Axis. Labor doesn't want internal wars. Let no man or group now attempt to split the hearts of labor. Such work only creates factionalism and confusion in labor—which is exactly what Hitler wants."

Miners Show Their Stuff On Holiday

Welch, W. Va., April 1—They take miners' day to heart in Welch, where the hills rise up straight from both sides of Main street and where the long coal trains snake through the center of town.

To begin with, what looks like a large part of the town takes the day off. The kids come tearing out of school at 10 o'clock. With their elders, they line up on the sidewalks to wait for the parade, to pass the time of day, to listen to the bands.

PLENTY OF MUSIC

Especially the bands, of which there are five; two from high schools, two made up of Negro workers and their kids, one from a neighboring town. While they wait for the parade to shape up, the bands play and the citizens listen and gossip.

The Negro workers' band, from Local 6204 of the United Mine Workers, draw the biggest attendance when it breaks into swing every so often. In the hotel, the two high school bands draw up in the lobby and face each other, playing a sort of musical duel. Occasionally they combine to tear off a number together, and the result is deafening.

Have you told your Senators and Congressmen that you personally demand that politics be forgotten for the duration and that legislation essential to an all out war be passed immediately?

Tell them that you demand legislation prohibiting strikes, dispensing with closed shops and cleaning up the labor rackets which are impeding our war program. We, as an organization, have done everything possible but now is the time for America to speak as individuals. Send a wire or letter immediately.

Truman Calls It 'Treason'

Standard Oil-Nazi Deal Shocks Senate

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, April 4—Top officials of Standard Oil appeared for three days this week before a Senate investigating committee in a desperate effort to prove that the company's 12-year "marriage" to I. G. Farbenindustrie, big German chemical trust, was only a platonic friendship.

But at week's end, Sen. Truman of Missouri, committee head, was unconvinced. In fact, he accused Standard Oil of "treason" for its deal by which the Nazis received reports on American chemical research while Standard refused to show the U. S. Army and Navy its discoveries in the important field of synthetic rubber.

Not even the frantic stooging of Sen. Tom Connally of Texas—a leader of the Congressional anti-labor bloc—was able to repair Standard's sagging reputation. He tossed into the hopper a few questions, designed to picture Rockefeller's empire as the nation's most patriotic institution—questions for which Pres. W. S. Farish of Standard provided grateful replies.

But each time Sen. Truman and Committee Counsel Hugh Fulton brought the examination back to the facts in Standard's exchange of patents with the big Nazi corporation.

COURT DECREE

The hearings were an aftermath to the sensational consent decree in a New York federal court 10 days ago, under which Standard paid $50,000 in fines, dissolved its agreement with the German company and agreed to make synthetic rubber patents available at no cost to American corporations.

Full details of the incredible arrangement through which Standard turned over to the Nazis chemical secrets it withheld from the United States government, were given to the Truman commitee by Thurman Arnold, head of the Justice Department's anti-trust division.

The IGF-Standard deal was worked out in 1929. Standard desired a world monopoly in oil and synthetic gasoline products. I. G. Farben was interested in a world monopoly on certain chemicals. Each wanted to be free of competition from the other, or from outside companies; and each wanted to benefit by the other's knowledge.

Standard agreed, therefore, to give information about its chemical research discoveries to IGF. The German firm agreed to turn over to Standard Oil "any patents or discoveries which directly concerned oil production, including synthetic gasoline."

BROUGHT UP-TO-DATE

First worked out in 1929, the conspiracy was brought up to date in September, 1939—after the war had started—at a meeting of the companies' executives in Holland. At that time, the two companies swapped patents and made arrangements for continuing their relationship through the war, even if the United States were to enter the conflict.

One fruit of the corporate "marriage" was the development in Germany, with Standard's background assistance, of buna—a synthetic rubber product which the Nazis are producing in quantities equal to their pre-war rubber imports.

"This has freed Germany from the necessity of running the United Nations blockade on rubber," Arnold told the Senate group. " . . . Standard Oil delayed the use of buna rubber in this country because the Hitler government did not wish to have this rubber exploited here for military reasons."

Standard claimed that Hitler prevented IGF from swapping its information about buna rubber. But the American company, apparently unmindful of this infidelity on the part of the Germans, faithfully respected its own vows to the Nazi corporation.

Since 1932, Standard had been carefully dissuading other American companies from entering the synthetic rubber field, and it refused to divulge what information it had on buna because "the Hitler government does not look with favor upon turning the invention over to foreign countries."

Meanwhile Standard technicians had developed butyl rubber, described as a good substitute for inner tubes and similar products.

WALTER TEAGLE OF STANDARD OIL
He Said "Please"

SET HIGH RATES

Arnold told the Senate group that Standard first sat tight on this product, as per its arrangement with the Nazis. Eventually, other rubber companies demanded the right to its manufacture under Standard patents, but Standard made the rates so high and the conditions so difficult as to discourage production.

"Standard's activities thus frustrated the creation of an American synthetic rubber industry," Arnold said.

In its defense, the Rockefeller interests sought to convince the Senate committee that all its relations with the German corporation had the full approval of the government. That argument was broken down, in part at least, when the committee showed that much of the information provided by Standard to the United States was scanty, incomplete and inconclusive.

OTHER RESULTS

The monopoly tie-up with the German corporation led to a host of developments all injurious to the interests of this country in its opposition to the Axis:

1. Standard gave Army and Navy officials the run-around when they sought information on synthetic rubber processes; the company was loyal to its agreement with IGF.

HITLER
He Said "No"

2. It was considering, in 1939, a closer relationship with the biggest Jap company.

INTENSIFICATION of the "Organize for Victory" drive was put first on the national auxiliary agenda by the Executive Board of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO, meeting in Washington on March 24 and 25.

"Our purpose is to help win the war by giving the most effective possible support to the CIO program of all-out production for a spring offensive," Mrs. Faye Stephenson, National President of the CIO Auxiliaries said. "In order to do that we must build our membership as fast as possible."

Rapid expansion of auxiliary membership now, Mrs. Viola Pascoe, Vice President of the auxiliary congress from the United Electrical and Radio Auxiliaries, pointed out, will mean more union minded women among the millions needed for war production in the next year or two. The job of the auxiliaries is to help the unions by making women union conscious before they go to work so that they will be ready to build the union in the plants.

The importance of the auxiliaries in carrying an understanding of the CIO program to other groups in the community was emphasized by Mrs. Julia Katz, National Director of the auxiliary congress.

Growing Interest

Reports of increasing interest by unions in auxiliary growth and financial support to auxiliaries were made at the Board Meeting. The Utility Workers, the Fur and Leather Workers, the Philadelphia District of the Steel Workers, the Furniture Workers, the National Maritime Union, the Oil Workers and the State Councils in New Jersey, Ohio, and Michigan, were among those listed as taking an active interest in building auxiliaries. Regular financial assistance from the Industrial Union Councils was reported by the Philadelphia, Los Angeles and New York City Auxiliary Councils. State CIO Councils in Utah and Maryland pay travelling expenses for auxiliary organizers.

Consumer Program

Concentration on a consumer program, first point of which is demanding retail price control and broadening of rationing to all scarce goods, was voted unanimously by the Auxiliary Executive Board.

The New York Transport Auxiliaries, according to Miriam Murphy, Congress Vice President from that group, are devoting their next meetings to explaining rationing to their members and urging cooperation in the Government's anti-hoarding and conservation programs.

The San Francisco Longshore Auxiliary is setting up a consumer information center in the library of the new CIO building. They have also initiated a campaign to bring milk prices down which has been taken up by the San Francisco joint AFL-CIO Auxiliary Council and by the unions.

Goebbels, Dies Hum Same Song, Wallace Charges After Smear

WASHINGTON, April 4—The charge that he acts for Hitler and against the United Nations was thrown directly in the face of Martin Dies this week by no less a personage than Henry A. Wallace, the Vice-President of the United States.

Wallace's charge, in which he said that Dies' disruptive attacks on government war officials "might as well come from Goebbels himself" was made after Dies had smeared 35 key employes of the Board of Economic Warfare in a public statement accusing them of belonging to "Communist fronts."

It was followed up by a further attack from Rep. O'Connor of Montana, who said in the House that he would never have voted for the committee if he had thought it would continue on its old line of smearing the administration rather than going after Axis agents.

COULD FIGHT NAZIS

"The Dies committee could render the country an inestimable service by helping track down the friends of Germany and Japan who are within our borders at this time," O'Connor said. "That is what I thought they were going to do when I supported the resolution. Otherwise, I would never have voted for it."

O'Connor also assailed Dies for promoting disunity among the United Nations, pointing out that his blasts at the Soviet Union amount to "fighting a country that is fighting by our side," while the Soviet people "are fighting our common enemy, Hitler."

Dies' smear at the 35 government officials might be discounted in peace time as "the product of a witchcraft mind," Wallace said, but in war time such tactics are an active aid to the enemy.

"We are at war," Wallace said, "and the doubts and anger which this and similar statements of Mr. Dies might as well come from Goebbels himself so far as their practical effect is concerned. As a matter of fact, the effect on our morale would be less damaging if Mr. Dies were on the Hitler payroll."

Wallace's statement took sharp issue with "the enemy within our gates who hides under many cloaks, the most insidious of which is false patriotism." Anyone who "seeks to undermine faith in our government by a malicious misuse of Axis soldiers within our borders," he added.

"Hitler and the Japs know this better than anyone else. We Americans must face the implications of this ugly truth."

MONEY TROUBLE

The unAmerican Dies committee was also running into money trouble during the week, according to indications from Rep. Cochran of Missouri, chairman of the House Committee on Accounts. He told the House that since Dies had failed to appear before the Committee to request funds, nothing can be done until after the two-week Congressional recess.

Meantime, Cochran said, the Committee is down to a mere $6,000, which will not be enough to meet the March payroll, to say nothing of expenses.

CIO Asks House Bar Funds to Dies

Washington, April 4.—The CIO today asked the House Committee on Accounts to deny Chairman Dies and his unAmerican Committee "any appropriation which will permit him to carry on in a manner similar to that which he has practiced in the past."

The request, made by Secretary James B. Carey, was in line with recent CIO Executive Board actions in opposition to Dies' disruptive anti-labor and anti-Administration smear campaign. The letter described Dies Committee activities as "furnishing a real basis for disruption of the national effort."

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

A splendid victory was chalked up last week in an NLRB election by the American Communications Asscoiation, CIO, at the largest branch in the country of the Western Union Telegraph Company, with the following results by divisions:

Metropolitan New York Division: CIO, 2,266; AFL, 1,066; no union, 117.

Cable Unit: CIO, 178; AFL, 8; no union, 27.

Warehouse Division: CIO, 59; AFL, 8; no union, 18.

Home Office (White Collar Division): CIO, 87; AFL, 89; no union, 135.

Newark, N. J., Division: CIO, 2; AFL, 75.

This smashing victory gives CIO bargaining rights for 6,241 employes as against the AFL 180. A runoff will take place among the Home Office White Collar Workers. It is to be expected that this group will see that their interest is in a union with the vast majority of their fellow workers. This accomplishment means eventually complete organization of the employes of Western Union throughout the nation. One more big one on the way.

Another repeater by Director Walter Harris and his staff in the Shoe Organizing Drive at Manchester, N. H.—International Shoe Co. plant: CIO, 114; no union, 45. Keep 'em rolling, boys!

UE Increases Membership

At the International Executive Board Meeting of the UERMWA, March 20th and 21st last, the official report showed for the fiscal quarter 36,296 increased membership, 58 new contracts negotiated, bringing 18,000 workers under a union agreement for the first time. Won 36 labor board elections covering 14,455 employes. No mean accomplishment!

Regional Director Pieper of New Orleans reports two NLRB election victories for the CIO. One at the Tennessee Coal & Iron Co. plant, Holt, Ala.: SWOC, 142; no union, 50. Second, at the Solvay Process plant by District 50, UMWA, at Baton Rouge: CIO, 177; AFL, 113.

Regional Director Fulton reports signing a union shop agreement with the Page Engineering Co., Chicago. Organizer Glenn conducted negotiations and in addition obtained a 17-cent blanket increase, 12½ per cent night bonus and vacation pay.

Regional Director Pugh of Virginia reports signing a contract at the Fibre Board Container Co. in behalf of Local 691, United Paper, Novelty & Toy Workers, with substantial increase in pay.

United Office & Professional Workers of America, Local 109, reports winning an election at the 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation and Movietonews, Inc., with the following results: CIO, 196; no union, 96.

Organize and win the war! Organize and produce more! Organize and defeat the Axis! Organize for the maintenance of freedom here and liberation of mankind from the forces of aggression and slavery everywhere! ORGANIZE!

Armour Co. Wage Parley Goes Boom!

Chicago, April 4—Negotiations between the CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee and Armour & Co. broke down here last week when the company flatly refused to grant a pay increase.

The wage conference were held under the provisions of the master agreement which specifies that questions concerning wages, hours and the military clause may be opened upon 30 days notice.

The Armour representatives also turned down four proposals advanced by the PWOC suggesting that the dispute be referred to an arbitration board.

Shirt Makers Get 10% Raise

New York City, April 4—A ten per cent pay increase effective April 1 was agreed upon at a joint conference here between a committee of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Shirt Department and a special committee of the Shirt Institute comprising 81 firms in New York, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Alex Cohen, manager of the ACW Shirt Department, in announcing the agreement, said that the Institute has had contractual relations with the union since 1933.

Washington, April 11—Oklahoma anti-laborites hit a new low this week.

Intent on smashing labor standards and union security they drafted junior high school kids to write letters to Congress demanding passage of the Smith slavery bill.

At Roosevelt Junior High School in Oklahoma City, Okla., some 1,300 letters were thus composed as a part of the pupils' study assignment and shipped off to Washington to swell the tories' "spontaneous rebellion" against labor.

BARES DETAILS

The sensational disclosure came in the form of a letter from one of the teachers to Pres. William Green of the AFL. Requesting that her name be withheld in order that her job be preserved, she wrote:

"I am a school teacher and happen to be teaching at Roosevelt Junior High School, where our principal, Mr. Charles Evans, requested and practically required us, as home room teachers, to sponsor the letter writing of these small children to their Congressmen in regard to this matter.

"I do not know how many letters were written, but it was estimated at 1,300. This was in no way voluntary on the part of the teachers or the pupils."

U. S. Bureau Sets Up Joint Labor Group

Washington, April 4 — Another labor-management production committee has been set up in the Federal government service.

John J. Carson, Director of the Bureau of Employment Security, which is part of the Federal Security Agency, has just approved a request for establishment of such a committee. The request was made by the Bureau branch of Federal Security Agency Local 10 of the United Federal Workers.

The Committee will have one representative of the Bureau, three representatives of the United Federal Workers and three representatives from the American Federation of Government Employes, the AFL union.

Negotiations are now under way with the Director of Personnel for the Federal Security Agency in an effort to establish a labor-engagement committee for the entire agency.

Accept Output Plan

Chicago — Chicago local unions of the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Campaign have approved a detailed war production plan for joint labor-management committees in all plants in the industry, the union reports.

Newark, N. J., April 4—Standard Oil, already linked by the government to the Nazi-dominated German chemical trust, today was charged with giving support to a phoney "independent union federation" which is insisting that Sunday and holiday double time be retained during the war emergency.

The statement, signed by a dozen leading CIO union officials in New Jersey, pointed out that CIO and AFL have already recommended waiving double time for Sundays and holidays as a means of assisting the government's fight against the Axis.

Refusal of the so-called Federation of Independent Unions to "accept their patriotic responsibility in the war effort, comes as no surprise, for the record of these organizations indicates what might be expected of them.

COMPANY STOOGE

"Edward Foerst, chairman of the meeting, is the head of the Association of Standard Oil Employes, an organization that is charged by the NLRB with being organized and dominated by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

"In view of the startling disclosures of the tie-up between Standard Oil and Nazi Germany, it is not hard to see why opposition to advancing the war effort should come from this quarter."

In their statement, the CIO leaders inquired what connection exists between the phoney union setup and the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers' press campaign for passage of the anti-labor Smith bill.

THREATENED STRIKE

The CIO leaders also inquired about links between the phoney union convention statement and "the threat of disrupt war production through a strike at Western Electric.

"Why did the leaders of the Western Electric Employes Assn., Inc., suddenly threaten a strike in the middle of March when their contract does not expire until May 31?

"Is this because the Smith bill, now before Congress, needs an excuse at the present time?"

Chicago Pact Wins Union Shop

Chicago, April 4—A contract that lifted wages, provided the union shop and guaranteed payment for 80 hours' work to any man called into military service, has been signed by the Page Engineering Co. and CIO Local Industrial Union 1175, it was reported today by Regional Director Fullerton Fulton.

Other features of the contract are vacations with pay, a 12½% night bonus, and strict seniority and grievance procedure.

The pact was signed by CIO Field Representative Albert Glenn and a local negotiating committee.

Reuther, GM Boss Argue 'Plan' In Novel 6-Hour Press Confab

By EDWARD LEVINSON

DETROIT, April 4—A new labor defense production proposal, designed vastly to increase tank production, was the outstanding result of an unprecedented "joint press conference" held here with Walter P. Reuther, director of the General Motors department, UAW-CIO, and C. E. Wilson, president of GM Corporation, as the participants.

Before an audience of 150 newspapermen, government, army and navy officials, and union and corporation leaders, Reuther declared the underlying principle of the "Reuther Plan"—the subject of the press conference—could be applied with gain to tank production. That principle, he said, was pooling of the auto industry's resources, much as he had proposed in December, 1940, through President Philip Murray of the CIO, that the industry's facilities be pooled for mass production of fighting planes.

Reuther said that Ford, GM and Chrysler are each turning out medium tanks, M-4's, but that each is going at the job separate and apart from the other. As a result, he pointed out, Chrysler is putting five automobile motors in its tank, GM is putting two Diesel engines in each of its tanks, while Ford has developed its own motor.

IDLE CAPACITY

Basing his statements on conferences with Edsel Ford and top Ford engineers, Reuther said the Ford company's Lincoln plant, now idle, could with 90 per cent of its present machinery plus ten per cent new machines, turn out enough motors to power all the M-4 tanks now on order from all of the big three in the automotive industry.

A standard engine for all tanks, Reuther pointed out, would increase output, reduce the maintenance difficulties on the fields of battle and would eliminate the necessity for different types of fuel.

His tank proposal, Reuther said, was an example of the kind of overall, industry - wide planning which could be accomplished under the CIO plan.

Wilson's response to the tank proposal was that the armed services were the ones to state which tank engine or engines should be used.

DISCUSS REUTHER PLAN

During some six hours of questions from the press and cross-examination between Reuther and Wilson, the original Reuther plan received a complete airing—fifteen months after President Murray had first offered it to the nation.

Wilson tripped himself up several times in his efforts to demolish the plan. Asserting that the plan was impractical as a means of producing 500 planes a day, the GM executive a few minutes later blamed the government for not asking for 500 planes a day 15 months ago. The plan was also bad, he said, because it proposed to convert only idle automotive industry machinery. A reporter immediately asked Wilson if he would have been in favor of the plan if it had urged conversion of the entire industry at once.

Denying the impracticality of the plan, Reuther indicated the similarity between standard auto machinery and the machines now in the Fords' new Pratt and Whitney airplane engine plant. As for blaming "government," Reuther replied that government, as far as defense production was concerned in 1941, was in the hands of the auto industry — specifically, William S. Knudsen, former GM boss.

Minneapolis Unions Back Russian Relief

Minneapolis, April 4—The Minneapolis Labor Committee for Victory and Freedom, comprising AFL and CIO unions in the city, has given its endorsement to the Russian War Relief campaign and asked all locals to support the agency's appeal.

"The valiant Russian army has proven that Hitler is not invincible, and they are dealing crushing blows to the Nazi murderers on their soil," an AFL union leader told the joint committee meeting.

A heading in The CIO NEWS of March 9 left the impression that the Steel Workers Organizing Committee had just won union recognition at the American Stove Co. in Lorain, O. District Director Wm. F. Donovan reports that the company has been under contract continuously with SWOC since 1937. Recognition of shop stewards was a feature of the new contract, as reported in The CIO NEWS.

Labor and the Law:

Supreme Court Back-tracks On Picketing

By LEE PRESSMAN
(CIO General Counsel)

Over a year ago the Supreme Court upheld the right of workers to engage in peaceful picketing, under guarantees contained in the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution. Picketing, the court said, may be controlled or regulated by state legislation and state courts only where it was shown to be dangerous to public peace—through violence or fraudulence.

This constitutional right was held to be guaranteed regardless whether the pickets were employes of the owner of the particular place of business.

The Supreme Court in two recent cases, has come dangerously close to backtracking on the previous opinions, which had granted labor constitutional protection for the exercise of their basic rights.

TEXAS CASE

In one case, an owner of a restaurant in Texas hired a contractor to construct a building separate and apart from the restaurant. When the contractor employed non-union labor for this job, the Building Trades Union picketed the restaurant. In support of this picketing, the union employes of the restaurant went on strike. The State Court, acting under Texas anti-trust laws, restrained the picketing.

A majority of the U. S. Supreme Court, in an opinion written by Justice Frankfurter, upheld the State injunction; the decision essentially is based upon theories which prevailed in the Supreme Court years ago when it usually held interest and rights of business superior to those of labor.

The majority opinion simply states that because the restaurant business had no connection with its owner's other construction job, the picket line around the restaurant could not be justified.

Two dissenting opinions criticized this departure from the Court's previous position defending the constitutional right to picket.

LABOR'S NEEDS

Justice Black pointed out, realistically, that labor's most important method of protecting its interests is that of communication to the public. Obviously, communication must be made where it will bring the greatest economic pressure upon the employer involved in the dispute — in the Texas case, by picketing the restaurant.

The minority opinion simply holds that unions are entitled to be free in their opportunity to acquaint the public with the facts of the industrial dispute.

The Supreme Court minority points out further that the majority opinion may encourage labor's enemies to enact legislation not merely restricting picketing but making every union activity illegal where one union attempts to support another outside of the immediate industry involved.

STRANGE ATTITUDE

It is strange that during the present period when personal liberties are assuming even greater importance than ever before in our history, the Supreme Court should take this opportunity of restricting their exercise. It is doubly dangerous that such restrictions should be imposed, in the first instance, upon the activities of labor unions seeking to protect the living conditions of their members.

The second case involved a New York Teamsters Union, whose members had been employed by bakeries to deliver products to retail stores. The Union found its members were being made idle by the bakeries' use of peddlers, who delivered the product without hiring any employes.

The Teamsters Union carried on peaceful picketing of the bakeries, and also of the stores which purchased the product from the peddlers. The New York courts restrained their picketing.

The Supreme Court, by unanimous opinion, reversed the state court's injunction. Five members of the Court ruled that the Union's activities were confined to an area of a single industry and that therefore the picketing was justified. In addition, these five justices held that the picketing as an exercise of the right of free speech was not shown to have caused any real embarrassment to either the bakeries or to the retail shops where the picketing had been conducted.

Justices Douglas, Black and Murphy, having a more realistic appreciation of the problem involved in this case, held that the New York court could not restrict picketing of any character where there was no proof of violence or fraud.

Support Firing Of Disrupters

Cleveland, April 4—Demonstrating that its support of the war program is more than mere words, the Natl. Assn. of Die Casting Workers today approved a government recommendation for the dismissal of four Alcoa employes found guilty of seeking to slow down war production.

Edward T. Cheyfitz, national secretary of the CIO affiliated union, joined two organizers and two officers of Local 55, in endorsement of a War Labor Board order dismissing the four workers for instigating a recent slowdown. The report also ordered the Aluminum Co. of America to negotiate with the union on grievances in the ingot department.

"We regret that the company precipitated this production slowdown through their instituting of new work procedures without first consulting the union," the NADCW statement said.

"However, it is our position that there can be no work stoppage today for any reason, and that any man guilty of such a stoppage must go. At the same time, we state that the grievances of the men must be handled promptly and fairly, because settlements of grievances are necessary to all-out production."

Survey of Idle Machinery A No. 1 Job for CIO Councils

By JOHN BROPHY
(Director of Industrial Union Councils)

The recommendation made by the CIO to its affiliated unions that they relinquish premium pay for Saturdays, Sundays and holidays as such during the emergency is an important practical contribution to the continuity of war production.

This significant declaration of CIO policy has a substantial bearing on war production questions which I have discussed in these columns previously. As I have pointed out, the city and state Central Production Committees which I have urged CIO councils to establish will have a wide variety of functions.

One of those functions, to which immediate attention should be given, is that of following up the CIO's declaration of policy in regard to premium pay with surveys in every state and city to determine whether employers are making a real effort to get their plants and machines on a full production basis, or whether new excuses are now going to be found for failing to do so, and new attempts are going to be made to blame production troubles on the workers.

JERSEY SURVEY A MODEL

I have sent all industrial union councils copies of the excellent report prepared by the New Jersey State Industrial Union Council, revealing wide-spread failure of corporations in Northern New Jersey to put their operations on the 168-hour week. This report revealed that war industry in northern New Jersey was utilizing only 49 per cent of its full productive capacity. The essential conclusions of the report were confirmed by Donald M. Nelson, Chairman of the War Production Board, after an investigation which followed the report.

I have suggested to all our councils that they make a careful examination of the New Jersey report with a view to making similar surveys in other states and in metropolitan areas. There is probably no more important job for the Central Production Committees of our city and state councils to undertake at this time.

City and County Industrial Union Councils are the organizations best placed in many respects and best suited to prepare careful surveys and reports showing the extent of full-time operations in their own communities. The data necessary for the completion of such reports can in many instances be provided by the delegates from the affiliated local unions. Where organization or affiliation is not complete, workers from one plant can turn in information about conditions in unaffiliated or unorganized plants.

AID FROM GOVERNMENT

In many cities and counties, and certainly in most states, there are Government bureaus which can supply information on the number of plants in the area, with names and addresses. Often these bureaus will be able to contribute other information which can be fitted into the general survey.

Sometimes school boards or professors or faculties of local colleges, universities, and business schools, will be willing to help. Very frequently college students will be willing to volunteer. Our councils should develop friendships and connections of this kind which will assist them in the technical aspects of work along the lines suggested. Needless to say, the resources of the National Office of the CIO are at the beck and call of every state and local council, through the Department of Industrial Union Councils.

Textile Union OK's Waiving Double Time

Charlotte, N. C., April 4.—Recommendations of the CIO on overtime pay for work performed on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays in war contract shops were accepted unanimously by the executive council of the Textile Workers Union which met here this week.

The action will affect those of the union's 400,000 members engaged in war production. The CIO executive board recommended elimination of overtime pay for Saturday, Sunday or holiday work when such work falls within a 40-hour week, with the provision that time and a half be paid for the sixth consecutive day and double-time for the seventh day.

Frame-Up For Southern Farm Leaders?

New Orleans, La., April 4.—The sheriff of Concordia Parish has allegedly sworn that two Louisiana Farmers Union leaders who were organizing sharecroppers to produce more food for the war program will never leave Vidalia Jail alive.

Vidalia Jailer J. D. Cross was accused this week by one of the prisoners of attempting to extort money from them under a promise of "freedom." Ironically, a grand jury of planters and landlords scheduled to meet at the parish seat, Harrisonburg, on April 6, may try to pin an indictment of "obtaining money under false pretenses" against the two men—Clinton Clark, Negro, 39; and Kenneth Adams, white, 28, because they collected union dues.

CIO UNIONS HELPING

Members of various CIO unions in New Orleans were taking steps to secure the release of the two, who have worked closely with trade unions in developing the war program and who have been held in jail without substantial charges since their arrest last January 5.

The Adams-Clark Defense Committee, headed by A. Roy Pearce, of the National Maritime Union, issued an urgent appeal for letters, telegrams, and postcards from individuals and organizations, demanding the release of the two prisoners, to be sent District Attorney Jesse McGee, Harrisonburg, La.

Jersey CIO Calls Convention On War Problems

Newark, N. J., April 4—A special convention of the CIO in New Jersey has been called for April 11 to deal with war production problems, according to Irving Abramson, state CIO president.

The convention call, sent to 237 local unions, warned that "our CIO must prepare by joint effort a program for war production which will prove conclusively that we can 'work to win.'

"It must cover all phases of the problems of producing for the war effort. It must be geared toward making the public, government and industry understand that we have made this war our war—and that we intend to win it both at home and abroad; that we shall together resolve to leave no stone unturned to reach our goal of swift victory for the United Nations."

A Message to General MacArthur

and The* AUSTRALIAN COUNCIL OF TRADE UNIONS

Acting on instructions unanimously voted by the Executive Board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, President Philip Murray and Secretary James B. Carey addressed the following cables to General Douglas MacArthur and to President A. E. Monk of the Australian Council of Trade Unions:

To General Douglas MacArthur:

"Executive Board of Congress of Industrial Organizations by unanimous vote directed me to convey to you and your valiant men our support in this great struggle for freedom and humanity. The millions of members of our organization working in the mines, mills and factories that comprise our arsenal of democracy are proud to be associated in this great fight. We with you are confident of ultimate victory over the forces of the Fascist Axis."

To A. E. Monk, President, Australian Council of Trade Unions

"Executive Board of Congress of Industrial Organizations has voted unanimously to send warm fraternal greetings to Australian Labor in this hour of our common peril and our common effort to defeat the brutal imperialism of Japan and the Axis. The five million members of the CIO feel a particularly close bond of kinship and fellowship with the Australian workers now that our sons and brothers are fighting side by side with your gallant troops. CIO has made production for victory its chief objective and will leave nothing undone to further our common fight for freedom and democracy until final and complete victory is won."

Signed by Philip Murray, President
James B. Carey, Secretary

The Congress of Industrial Organizations received the following cablegrams from General MacArthur and from A. E. Monk, President of the Australian Council of Trade Unions. Both were in reply to the messages from the Executive Board of the CIO.

From General Douglas MacArthur:

"Appreciate deeply your message which has just reached me. Labor has played its magnificent part in every great war our Republic has fought, and that it will do so again and proves the indestructible backbone that will determine the present vital struggle, is my firm conviction. I have complete trust in the mighty effort that I feel sure you will put forth."

From A. E. Monk, President, Australian Council of Trade Unions:

"Workers and whole people of Australia are gratified by your pledge of 100 percent war production to assist Australia and all countries fighting for liberty and for the defeat of Axis aggression. We will fight with your armed forces in this country till the last and contest every inch of ground against Japanese. Fully appreciative of the close bond established between the workers of America and Australia."

Murray, Green Talk At Rally; New Radio Series Scheduled

WASHINGTON, April 11—New, precedent-creating steps towards American labor unity were taken this week by CIO and AFL, representing 10,000,000 workers and their families.

For the first time since the creation of CIO as an independent labor organization six years ago leaders of the two groups of workers appeared on the same speaking platform and promised joint efforts to win the war.

At a Pittsburgh rally attended by some 4,500 persons, CIO President Murray, AFL President Green and Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt reviewed labor's contribution to the war production program and shouted defiance at the long-time foes of unionism who have used the conflict as a cloak for their attack on the workers.

Part of the program was broadcast over a nationwide network, and millions of Americans heard Green introduce Murray as "my friend, my collaborator and my fellow-American." Murray backed up the AFL leader by noting the close cooperation between CIO and AFL.

Another step toward unity was made public in Washington, when CIO and AFL revealed joint sponsorship of a new weekly radio program, to be heard over the NBC Red Network each Saturday night at 10:15 Eastern War Time.

The two groups will alternate in presenting the program, which will describe labor's war activities, and present the view of union leaders and rank-and-file members. The first program in the series, under AFL auspices, will be heard April 18 at 10:15 EWT.

Indiana Local Flays Smith Bill

Decatur, Ind., April 11—Charging that the Smith Bill and the current newspaper attack on labor "is definitely in the interests of the Hitler Axis," Local 904 of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers demanded defeat of the measure and a government probe of the slander campaign.

Attention: Mr. Hitler, Rep. Smith

Pittsburgh, Apr. 11—Union men are smashing all steel production records—and also the lies of anti-labor congressmen and newspapers.

A new world's record for steel plate production was established in March at a plant of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., U. S. Steel subsidiary, which has a contract with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, and was the first steel company to agree to joint labor-management production committees.

The record was made by a crew of the 100-inch continuous plate mill which in turning out 72,530 tons exceeded its own previous record by more than 9,000 tons. A new world's record was also established by SWOC members in a blast furnace at Braddock, Pa., the previous record having been held at a Carrie, Pa., plant.

Metal Union Raps Slur From WPB

Washington, April 11—The CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers today asked Donald Nelson, head of War Production, to repudiate an attack on labor by one of the WPB's officials.

The official, Bradley Stoughton, head of the WPB heat treating unit, was quoted in a trade paper news story as blaming "strikes and metal shortages" for delays in war production, Ben Riskin, research man for the union, told Nelson.

"My union is proud of the fact that it has not engaged in a single strike since our entry into the war," Riskin wrote.

"The Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, together with the CIO and AFL as a whole, are pledged to a no-strike policy for the duration."

Another CIO Victory

Cleveland—Employes at the General Electric Co.'s Cleveland Bulb Works voted 6-1 for the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers as sole bargaining agency.

If It Had Been You— Press Would Go Crazy

Washington, Apr. 11—Horrible day dream for a warm spring afternoon—

Suppose that your union was found to have hoarded away 500,000 pounds of aluminum at a time when every plane producing plant in the country was hollering for more of the precious metal—

Can you picture the turmoil in Congress, in the press, on the street corners? Can you see yourself and your union brothers on the inside of the hoosegow looking out?

Well, this week the government cracked down on the Hoover Vacuum Co. for diverting 500,000 pounds of aluminum into vacuum cleaners—and the papers and most Congressmen were about as excited as a Nazi looking at a picture of Benito Mussolini.

Get Going on Rationing, Price Fixing, OPA Told

WASHINGTON, April 11—Immediate and effective retail price fixing and rationing are necessary to stop deep slashes now being made in workers' health and efficiency by rising living costs, Pres. Philip Murray declared in a letter to Price Administrator Leon Henderson here.

Murray emphasized that present living standards have already been cut by living costs, that further cuts will come unless prices are fixed and consumers' goods rationed and that war production will inevitably decline.

He pointed out that Henderson has ample authority to fix retail prices under the Emergency Price Control Act of January of this year, and that his failure to do so was putting "an increasingly unbearable burden" on workers.

"These rises in the cost of living are cuts in workers' wages," Murray wrote. "They mean less food, housing and clothing for the men and women in the war plants who are turning out the weapons of victory.

"These wage cuts mean that the health, the efficiency and the morale of our war production workers is being seriously impaired and that war production will suffer accordingly. It is your responsibility to stop these price rises."

CAMOUFLAGE

Living costs are already up 15 to 20 per cent, with every sign that they will go up further, Murray added, reminding Henderson that the CIO had urged price control and rationing at its March 24 Executive Board meeting. He also hit sharply at current attempts to blame labor itself for these price rises, calling them a smokescreen to hide the failure of the government to control living costs and ration goods.

"Efforts have been made to camouflage this failure behind the smokescreen of an attack on labor, implying that the increases in the cost of living have been due to the wages of labor," he said.

"This is false and you well know it to be. There has been no general wage rate increase in any basic industry since the spring of last year. Therefore the price rises which have been taking place cannot be blamed on labor's wages."

Murray pointed out to Henderson that wage increases now being asked by labor are needed "to offset in part the damage already done to workers' living standards by the tremendous rises in the cost of living over the past year."

U. S. Labor Greets Norway Workers

Washington, April 11—A message of hope and a promise of freedom went to the workers and the people of Norway from the leaders of organized labor in America this week.

The message, signed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray and AFL Pres. William Green, was sent on the occasion of Norway's second year of Nazi subjection. A similar message was sent to the clergy and the teachers by leaders in religion and education here.

Murray and Green wrote:

"On the second anniversary of the treacherous attack upon your peaceful homes by Nazi aggressors, the 10 million organized workers of America pledge you that heroic Norway shall again be free.

"You glorious resistance has set the example for all of us. We pledge to you that we shall build 10 times over the ships, the tanks, the planes, the guns to drive the totalitarian beast from this earth.

"Day and night our far flung assembly lines shall move without a pause. Day and night the hearth fires of our great factories shall fling their blazing emblem of freedom to the skies. Day and night the skill, the energy and the will of America's workmen shall remain consecrated to this single and certain end—that the freedom of Norway, and of all the peoples of the earth, shall be firmly reestablished in justice and brotherhood."

Steel Union Officials See Efficiency Through Planning

NEW YORK, Apr. 11—"American industry can achieve a higher level of national efficiency than the dictator-regimented German industry, not by imitation but by cooperating with government and organized labor in a national democratic planning effort."

This quotation from "The Dynamics of Industrial Democracy," by Clinton S. Golden, regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, and Harold J. Ruttenberg, SWOC research director, was cited in a radio review of this new book recently made by Louis E. Fine, over station WCNW.

DYNAMIC DEMOCRACY

Selecting the section on National Democratic Planning as one of the most significant chapters, the reviewer said that "the authors claim, and rightly so, that industrial democracy is dynamic and ever changing in our ever changing and growing way of life. Like democracy, itself, it can not permit static without encountering peril."

The plan advanced by the authors, Fine said, is based on the principle that "the future of industrial democracy depends upon the attainment of full production and employment on a sustained basis during and after the war," by the adoption of a national democratic Planning Program which could make the next armistice the starting point of a period of genuine industrial democracy.

Premium Pay Issue 'Bores' Arms Maker

Hartford, Conn., Apr. 11—The newspapers screamed that labor should waive overtime payments—

But when the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers asked the Colt Patent Fire Arms Co. to discuss the matter of giving up premium wages for Saturdays and Sundays, the company was bored stiff.

A spokesman said the union proposal had been accepted "for consideration, and no action has been taken. With what little study we have been able to give it, we do not find the proposal of any real interest."

Stone Union Wins Raises At 3 Plants

Barre, Vt., Apr. 11—New wage scales increasing the pay of some 160 employes 6c to 8½c an hour were negotiated with the Staso Milling Co., the CIO United Stone & Allied Products Workers announced here this week. The company has plants in Fairhaven, Vt. and Hampton, N. Y.

Eugene Pedersen, international union representative conducted the negotiations. The contract already contained terms calling for a union shop, check-off of dues, paid vacations and seniority rights.

A 5c hourly pay boost retroactive to February 1, covering 140 men employes at the Thomasville, Pa., Stone & Lime Co. was also announced.

A feature of the contract is the provision for 'vacations with 40 hours pay plus a $10 bonus.

Negotiations with this company were handled for the union by Representative J. B. Foreman.

Negro Group Hails Easing Of Navy Ban

Washington, Apr. 11—President Roosevelt and Navy Secretary Knox were both commended by the National Negro Congress here for their action in relaxing the ban on Negro enlistments in the Navy, the Marines and the Coast Guard.

"We feel sure that the great burst of enthusiasm with which your action will be greeted by the Negro people will find an equal burst of enthusiasm from all the American people who understand that the stake for which our country fights is the freedom of our country from the tyranny of fascism," the Congress said.

"The Negro people understand that the fate of America is their fate. We pledge anew our fullest support in the prosecution of this war against fascism.

"We urge you to continue to remove all hindrances which prevent us from throwing our full and unrestricted energies into the battle for the total defeat and destruction of our country's enemies and for victory."

Miners Endorse CIO Relief Drive

Washington, Apr. 11—The CIO war relief campaign is "a worthy cause, linked up with the effective prosecution of our war program," and should be supported, the United Mine Workers said here in a letter signed by Pres. John L. Lewis and Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Kennedy.

"Thousands of members of the UMWA are already in the armed service and as the war advances they will need appreciate assistance from the war relief committee referred to herein," the letter said.

"We believe that officers and members of local unions should do their best to make such contributions as may be within their means in support of this very worthy cause, which is linked up with the effective prosecution of our war program."

Gotham CIO Plans Victory Conference

New York, April 11—New York's 500,000 CIO members are planning a "Win the War" conference for next week, the city CIO council announced here in outlining a program of parades, community rallies, radio broadcasts and conference sessions on production and other war problems.

More than 75 per cent of New York workers' war production are under CIO contract, Council President Joseph Curran said in issuing the call.

Local chairmen, shop stewards, etc., "must assume responsibility for involving every CIO worker in daily activity so that our pledge of responsibility to President Roosevelt and the people of America may be fully and effectively carried out," he added.

Wire Union Parley In Atlanta

Atlanta, Ga., April 11—Delegates from all sections of the country are arriving here for the sixth national convention of the CIO American Communications Association which opens here Monday at the Ansley Hotel.

"Communications workers are on the march. Shoulder to shoulder with their brothers in industry, in the army and in the navy, communications labor is on the job—flashing over land and sea the message which causes production lines to move, transports to roll and armies to go into action for victory of democracy over fascism," declares the convention official call.

SPECIAL JOB

"We, the workers in the communications industry, have a great and special job to do. We have pledged our energies, our skill and our brains to the end that the facilities with which we are entrusted—the vital nerve system which links the brain with the production and military arms of our nation—will function efficiently and effectively in the total war effort.

"Our desire and ability to make these contributions to our embattled nation have won the recognition of our Government, which has taken heartening action to assure the participation of labor in the over-all task of planning for the nation's communications systems under war conditions to the end that complete industry solidarity in the war effort will be assured."

Negroes Offer Plan to Nelson For Training 50,000 Workers

JOBS FOR NEGROES: Donald Nelson, War Production chief, discusses plans for bringing more Negro workers into factory jobs with Ferdinand Smith, secretary of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union (left), and Alderman Earl Dickerson of Chicago. They presented suggestions for helping to eliminate discrimination in industry.

WASHINGTON, Apr. 11—Suggested plans for training 50,000 Negroes for jobs in war industries were discussed this week with Production Chief Donald Nelson and were to be forwarded to the White House for further consideration.

Earl Dickerson, Chicago Negro alderman and a member of the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee, and Sec. Ferdinand Smith of the CIO National Maritime union presented the four-point proposal.

Its main suggestions as given to Nelson:

1. "That you, as War Production director, publicly announce that the War Production Board will take immediate steps to use Negro labor throughout the nation in the war production program.

TO AVERT SHORTAGES

2. "That as a first step to carry out this announced policy, the War Production Board take effective measures to train fifty thousand Negro workers in the next three months; and allocate these trainees throughout the country where serious shortages exist or will exist within the near future.

3. "That a national production conference on the subject of Negro manpower be called within the next thirty days by you, which will include representatives of labor, management, government and representative Negro organizations for the purpose of working out detailed plans for full utilization of Negro manpower for winning the war. From such a conference will develop similar area production conferences.

4. "That you recommend to the President, Negro representation on the War Manpower Board."

FIRST CONFERENCE

Presentation of the plan to Nelson marked the first time that Negro leaders have conferred with the War Production Chief, and advanced a plan for utilizing Negro manpower for all out war production.

Both Dickerson and Smith were high in their praise of what they described as Nelson's "frank, and direct approach to the production plan."

They said he expressed a keen interest in every phase of the plan, and indicated that he will take it up with the War Production Board, when the board meets at the White House this week.

Murray, Green Pledge CIO-AFL Unity To Wipe Fascism From Face of Earth

UNITY SYMBOL: CIO Pres. Philip Murray (right) shakes hands with AFL Pres. William Green at a joint labor mass meeting in Pittsburgh, where for the first time since formation of CIO the presidents of the two labor organizations spoke from the same platform. Below, Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt, another speaker at the meeting, who praised labor's record, attacked sponsors of anti-union legislation.

Pittsburgh Labor Rally Hears McNutt Swat Workers' Foes

PITTSBURGH, April 11—Organized labor of both the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor have "buried the hatchet" for the duration of the war and told the nation that their millions of union members could be counted on to the limit to crush the Axis.

At a gigantic joint CIO-AFL "Unite for Victory" Rally at Syria Mosque, on April 7, President William Green of the AFL and President Philip Murray of the CIO invited their critics to exchange the anvil and hatchet for weapons which will "wipe totalitarianism from the face of the earth."

The presidents of both groups stood on the same platform to symbolize the unity of labor behind the war and called upon the 5,000 unionists who jammed the hall to witness their mutual pledges of good faith and trust.

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt was the government's official witness to the hatchet-burying ceremony and he joined with the labor leaders in a plea to the American people to give labor a square deal.

Appearance of Presidents Murray and Green on the same platform along with local executive boards of both CIO and AFL aroused interest in the meeting to a high pitch throughout western Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio and West Virginia. Union men in industrial centers in the surrounding areas poured into the city in special bus and streetcar caravans to attend the joint patriotic rally.

A nationwide radio hook-up carried parts of the speeches of the union heads and McNutt to millions of people throughout the United States.

MEETING IS SYMBOL

"This meeting tonight is magnificent testimony to the fact that American labor is united in the face of national danger," McNutt declared. "It is proof of statesmanship of a high order. It throws the challenge in the teeth of those who said it could not be done. It has been done!"

Murray viewed the meeting as symbolizing "labor with its sleeves rolled up, labor bending over its picks, its shovels and its machines, ready to make whatever sacrifices are necessary to win this war."

"American labor has made its commitments to the President of the United States and will keep them," he declared. "Labor, and particularly its leaders, have had their motives impugned by those without and within the ranks of labor."

"I don't give a tinker's damn who impugns my motives. I am going to support the President of the United States in this war and let those who want to, fight him. That's an obligation labor has.

"The President of the United States is the greatest friend the American workingman ever had and I'm sticking with him against the Japs, the Nazis and anyone else who wants to fight him. That was my position before Pearl Harbor. That's my position now. And with God's help that will be my position from here in."

RAP POLL-TAXERS

Both union presidents and McNutt joined in sharp condemnation of "certain elements," particularly those Congressmen typified by Representative Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, and Eugene E. Cox, of Georgia, who are attempting to "stab labor in the back."

"All I can say tonight is, God help them, they know not what they do," the CIO president said. "I charge they are doing this nation and this war effort a serious injustice. They can't continue to impugn the motives of labor."

GREEN'S PLEA

Green addressed a plea to his "soldiers of production" for self-discipline of the type required of soldiers in the field to the end that labor may keep its no-strike pledge to President Roosevelt.

"And to those few Congressmen, newspaper editors and radio commentators—cease making war

Auto Union Demands:

'Equal Sacrifice' By All Groups To Aid War Plans

DETROIT, April 11—Representatives of a half-million CIO auto workers this week accepted proposals to waive premium wage payments for Saturdays and Sundays, and then presented the nation with a dramatic 10-point program for "equality of sacrifice" to help win the war.

Meeting in a special two-day conference of the United Automobile Workers, the 1,000 delegates proposed that wages for all time over 40 hours each week be paid in the form of U. S. War Bonds provided the government adopts a thorough-going system to end war profiteering, curb the new crop of war millionaires, and keep prices rigidly fixed.

"The UAW-CIO . . . calls upon the President and the Congress of the United States to give this program immediate and favorable consideration," the union statement said. "Its adoption is necessary to insure maximum cooperation in winning the war.

"It will protect all groups engaged in the war effort—government, our armed forces, labor, farmers and industry. It will preserve basic American freedoms which must be the cornerstone of our drive for victory. It will establish equality of sacrifice."

The UAW-CIO program was to be presented to President Roosevelt April 12, when Pres. R. J. Thomas attended one of the regular meetings of the six-man joint CIO-AFL Labor's Victory Board.

RECALL SACRIFICES

In its introduction to the equal-sacrifice proposals, the UAW members recalled that labor has already laid aside many of its hard won gains in the interest of the war program—premium wages and the right to strike—and that it has constantly advocated more and faster production of war goods.

But, the union pointed out, "the winning of the war requires more than these sacrifices on the part of labor. It calls for equality of sacrifice through the adoption of measures of national scope affecting many aspects of our economy."

TEN MAIN POINTS

Key points in the UAW program follow:

1. End war profiteering, with all returns over 3 per cent on corporate investment turned over to the government. Action to prevent payment of exorbitant bonuses to corporation officials.

2. No luxuries in wartime; no war millionaires. Limit individuals' incomes to a top of $25,000 a year.

3. Stop rising costs; prevent inflation. Rigid ceilings on prices to keep the cost of living down.

RATIONING

4. Rationing, through a democratic process, of all food, clothing, housing and other necessities.

5. Adjustment of wages to meet rising living costs, and the lifting upward of all substandard wages (below $1 an hour).

6. Security for dependents of men

Labor Radio Series Starts Saturday

WASHINGTON, Apr. 11—CIO and AFL go on the airwaves next week in the first regularly-scheduled labor program ever broadcast over a national network.

"Labor for Victory" is the title of the program, which will be heard every Saturday night between 10:15 and 10:30 P. M., Eastern War Time. It will be broadcast by stations affiliated to NBC's Red Network.

The first program, on April 18, will be sponsored by the AFL, while the CIO will make its bow on April 25. The two labor organizations will alternate on the 15-minute program, but will have a common purpose: to tell Mr. and Mrs. America how the men in overalls are helping Uncle Sam to win the war.

Labor's Example

Labor has set a shining example to the rest of the country by the spirit of united effort for victory which has brought the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor so close together.

It takes mutual tolerance, an attitude of give-and-take, respect for the rights and opinions of others, and above all devotion to a common purpose, to achieve such results.

Labor offers to industry and all other American groups the same kind of cooperation for victory as now exists between CIO and AFL. The broadest national unity can be achieved in the same spirit that has recently been so much in evidence between the two great labor movements.

The Sales Tax

Arguments about the "fairness" of the sales tax remind one of Anatole France's famous remark about the "majestic equality" of the law which "forbids rich and poor alike to beg on the streets or sleep under bridges."

Sales taxes take a dime from a Rockefeller and a dime from the poorest man in the country, and call it "equal treatment."

Actually the sales tax is about the most unjust form of taxation ever invented to relieve the rich of taxation at the expense of the poor.

"It is my considered judgment," CIO Pres. Murray told the House Ways and Means Committee, "that the worst possible revenue measure which could be enacted would be a general sales tax of any character."

He pointed out that a general sales tax would interfere with war production by placing the heaviest tax burden on wage earners and working farmers, cutting their already low incomes below the level necessary for health, efficiency and morale; while only those with high incomes would benefit.

Murray also noted that a general sales tax would break down effective price control, resulting in higher retail prices. It would create an inflationary atmosphere, he said, by "establishing the proposition that the way to pay taxes is to buy things."

The soundest tax principle is that those who have most should pay most. The general sales tax would destroy this principle.

That is precisely why wealthy interests, with the greatest ability to pay taxes—including most newspaper publishers—are hell-bent to have a general sales tax included in the present tax legislation.

It is up to labor, the farmers and the common people generally to see that Congress blocks this dangerous attempt to foster special privileges for a wealthy minority at the expense of the great majority of the population.

Attention, OPA

When shortages arise in times of peace, it is usual to allow the rich, who can afford to pay high prices, to have all they want, while the poor just go without.

But the necessities of war compel a measure of social justice in this regard. So many essential commodities become scarce that rationing and price control must be resorted to.

Such measures are fair as well as necessary, and labor is the first to demand their enactment in every country. They are designed to give the working people their fair share of available commodities to check profiteering, and to deprive the wealthy of special privilege at the country's expense.

But at the present time there is a shameful and dangerous delay in enforcing effective price control and widespread rationing.

CIO Pres. Murray has called to the attention of Price Administrator Leon Henderson that workers' living costs have risen 15 to 20 per cent in the past year. These rising living costs "mean less food, housing and clothing for the men and women in the war plants who are turning out the weapons of victory," he says. They seriously threaten the workers' health, morale and productive efficiency.

Mr. Henderson has full authority to remedy this situation by imposing effective controls on the prices of goods that people must buy in order to live, and by establishing widespread rationing.

But recently our Price Administrator seems to have been too busy thinking up arguments for keeping down wages to get on with his real duties.

Labor is getting impatient for more action on price control and rationing, and less phoney theorizing about wages, Mr. Henderson. How about it?

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE close and cordial relations now established between the CIO and the AFL have attracted national attention repeatedly in the recent past.

Joint CIO-AFL rallies, speeches by Philip Murray and William Green from the same platform, joint press statements, joint sponsorship of a "Labor for Victory" radio program—these are some of the public signs that "labor's ranks are closed against the enemy," as Murray put it.

"Labor is showing the nation how to bury past quarrels and how to unite in all-out war effort," says Green.

This contribution of labor to national unity for winning the war, is only one of many ways in which labor has taken the lead since Pearl Harbor—and long before, for that matter.

The working people have led in personal sacrifice and in all steps to increase production as well as to promote national unity. It has not been easy for them. But they have realized how much they have at stake in this war against the labor-enslaving and anti-democratic forces of the Axis.

The conflict between CIO and AFL has been deep-rooted and frequently bitter in the past. It has involved bread-and-butter considerations for the workers, as well as differences over form of organization, jurisdictions, etc.

But once war was declared, the working people were the first to realize that united effort was imperative. Personal feelings were subordinated, old grudges forgotten, and immediate steps taken to unite labor for more production and victory.

The workers did not wait for the unraveling of jurisdictional knots, for organic unity. They just got together, in their plants and through their unions, setting up joint committees and making other arrangements for joint action.

The January meeting of the CIO executive board gave its official blessing to all such forms of cooperation. It made joint effort with the AFL for victory a major objective, both locally and nationally.

National leaders of both movements now meet frequently and have the friendliest personal relations. The combined Labor War Board spends little time on union rivalries. It functions rather, with the President, as a unified body promoting labor and national effort to win the war.

Besides uniting its own ranks, labor has taken the lead for closer cooperation with industry and government to increase production.

It has set an example of voluntary sacrifice by giving up its right to strike, by relinquishing Saturday and Sunday premium payments, and in many other ways.

Nor have these been light sacrifices. The right to strike is labor's chief weapon for self-defense and to improve its conditions. Labor has voluntarily disarmed itself, the better to arm our country.

The sacrifice of premium payments means a voluntary wage-cut, less of the necessities of life for workers' families whose income is low at the best of times.

The special Auto Workers' conference showed how hard it was for these workers to give up payments which were theirs by right. To many it seemed unreasonable that labor should always take the lead in sacrifice.

Yet this conference voted overwhelmingly to make this sacrifice. It demanded only that the money given up by the workers should not go into the overflowing coffers of their employers; and that some "equality of sacrifice" be effected before further sacrifices are asked of labor.

Many employers have responded well to labor's advances for united effort to increase production. But as a group the owners of industry have made no sacrifices comparable to those of labor. They have continued to roll up huge and increasing profits, while labor's wages have been cut again and again by rising living costs and other war conditions.

For the wealthier classes a sacrifice of income means only the loss of a few luxuries. To the working people a parallel sacrifice means less food for their children.

Yet it is labor that constantly takes the lead in sacrifice; while millionaire publishers, war profiteers, high-paid columnists and politicians, who have sacrificed nothing, continue to insult labor and demand that more and more be taken from the working people.

Labor has shown the way for united effort, for sacrifice of anything that may delay victory, because it considers winning the war more important than anything else. It is time that the profit-makers and their mouthpieces also put up or shut up.

Smith Bill Limps; LaFollette, Thomas Ask Curb on Bosses

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, April 11—The drive to cut war production by smashing labor unions through the Smith bill limped along rather slowly this week, with Congressmen and Senators resting up in preparation for a long promised spring recess, and the press backwatering somewhat on its current anti-labor conspiracy.

President Roosevelt returned again to the attack on advocates of an unlimited work week, pointing out at his regular press conference that Britain had discovered that you could get more production out of a shorter week than you can out of weeks up to 60 hours and more.

At the same time, the President revealed that studies were being made covering the wage question and problems of further price control. He cited the fact that workers are putting in a 48-hour week and better in war industry at the present time, making it clear that the administration is opposed to arbitrarily lengthening the week and abolishing overtime pay.

CONNALLY BILL

Chief threat to war production came from the Senate, where the efforts to get the Connally bill to freeze the open shop and cancel union contracts out on the floor were continued by polltax Senators. As it now stands, the bill will come up April 20. This development was supported by Senator Pepper of Florida, who called for substantially the program of the Smith and Connally bills.

Offsetting this Senate drive, Senators LaFollette of Wisconsin and Thomas of Utah introduced their "Oppressive Labor Practices Act" which would make a long list of anti-union employer activities illegal and punishable by law.

This bill is based on the three-year studies of the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee. It provides criminal penalties for anti-labor spying, vigilantism, blacklisting, yellow-dog contracts, and other forms of coercion.

DIRTY HANDS

Continued revelations of the Truman Committee, showing the Nazi connections of Standard Oil, brought out the fact that big corporations have continued to do business with Hitler, placing profits above everything else. These revelations also helped to take some of the steam out of the anti-labor crowd that has been yelling for union blood in recent weeks.

The Truman Committee also revealed that only one employer of several scores interviewed believes that overtime pay is holding up the war effort. This employer, according to the committee, has bad relations with the workers in his plant.

TALK OF PROFIT LIMIT

At the same time, Senate and House boiled with talk and promises of action to curb excessive war profits, both spurred on by the fact that the general public is wise to some of the robbery that goes on under cover of the anti-union drive. Nothing definite came out during the week, but everyone in Washington expects some action will have to be taken.

A surprise witness for overtime payment turned up in a letter inserted in the Congressional Record by Senator Maloney of Connecticut. It was from the head of the Hartford, Conn., Association of Manufacturers, who wrote a long defense of the 40-hour week with time and one-half that was only weakened by a sidebar attack on the union shop.

Despite the comparative lull in Congress, labor people who keep an eye on the statesmen continued their warnings. The Smith bill is by no means dead, they pointed out, and the Connally bill is definitely scheduled for April 20.

in the armed forces, through payment of a living wage to their families by the government.

7. A moratorium on debts for all men thrown out of work through conversion shutdown of factories.

LABOR DIVISION

8. Creation of a labor production division in the War Production Board to accelerate suggestions for increasing war output.

9. Post war planning, to assure labor and the public "that we shall win the peace as well as the war."

10. "Upon the acceptance of the foregoing measures, we agree that all wages for time over 40 hours a week shall be paid in the form of non-negotiable special defense bonds. This will mean a tremendous source of income for our government for financing the war effort. It will, at the same time, relieve the existing pressure toward rising prices and will create a cushion of purchasing power for the post-war period."

The proposal to waive premium wages for Saturday and Sunday work was adopted by a near-unanimous vote, but it brought forth long discussion, with many of the delegates demanding that other groups in the population should be called upon to sacrifice for the war.

Speeches by UAW-CIO leaders and a letter from President Roosevelt—in which he said that abandonment of premium payments "should not operate as a windfall to any employer or group of employers"—convinced the vast majority of the delegates.

SUPPORT MURRAY

The UAW-CIO voted unanimously to endorse the policies of CIO Pres. Philip Murray and to support his program for labor unity and for support of the war.

In other resolutions it warned the War Labor Board that delays in settling disputes endangered morale among workers and gave employers an opportunity to take advantage of labor's no-strike pledge; and authorized the union to spend $50,000 on an advertising campaign to bring the UAW-CIO message before the public.

U.S. Officials To Address CIO Editors

Washington, April 11—CIO President Philip Murray and four top-line speakers from government war agencies were scheduled for the CIO editors and publicity directors conference called here this weekend by National CIO Publicity Director Len De Caux. They were Archibald MacLeish, head of the Office of Facts and Figures, Col. A. Robert Ginsburgh of the War Dept., Captain Henderson from the Navy Dept., and Byron Price, head of the Censorship Office.

Murray will speak at the Saturday session. The four government official will speak Sunday. Delegates will question the speakers and carry on discussion around points of government and labor cooperation in getting war facts and their significance across through labor press and publicity.

MANY AGENCIES

Other government officials from various war agencies, including Civilian Defense, War Production, Price Administration, War Bonds, etc., will be present to answer questions and take part in the talk.

Saturday's session was scheduled to concentrate on CIO press and publicity problems, radio, advertising, pamphlets and the like. It will discuss publicizing CIO war production campaigns and counter-drives against such measures as the Smith bill, and will make recommendations for action by CIO affiliates on publicity lines.

A major part of the session will be discussion of the conference report to the CIO Executive Board, at whose direction the meeting was called.

New Blasts Shake Rep. Dies

WASHINGTON, April 11—The spring drive against Martin Dies, the darling of the Axis shortwave broadcasters, rolled along this week with increased CIO pressure, with a new attack by a Representative in Congress, and with even some newspapers waking up to the menace to the war effort that Dies represents.

CIO's share of the anti-Dies offensive came in a letter from Secretary James B. Carey urging the House Accounts Committee to deny Dies "any appropriation which will permit him to carry on in a manner similar to that which he has practised in the past."

HINDERS WAR

"The CIO and its millions of members are most anxious that national unity be maintained in order that our present struggle shall culminate in a final victory," the CIO letter said.

"It is our contention that the activities of the Dies Committee have not been directed toward the real enemies of the nation, but rather toward labor organizations and officials of the Federal Administration, thereby furnishing a basis of real disruption of our national effort."

The attack in Congress came with Representative Hook of Michigan inserting an editorial from a Washington paper in the Congressional Record. The editorial, evidence that even newspaper publishers can't quite swallow Dies when he tries to smear the war agencies of the government, lit out after him for his attack on the Board of Economic Warfare.

170,000 Idle In Auto Plants, Union Notes

Detroit, April 11—At least 170,000 auto workers were suffering from unemployment due to conversion from peace to wartime production, George F. Addes, secretary-treasurer of the United Automobile Workers reported this week.

"Returns from our local unions covering 124 auto industry plants with a normal employment of 383,400, indicate that 113,476 workers from these plants were out of work last month," he said. "This sample would indicate total unemployment throughout the industry amounting to from 170,000 to 190,000.

Carey to Speak At Southern Conference

Nashville, Tenn., Apr. 11—Organized labor in the South will take the spotlight when the Southern Conference for Human Welfare meets here April 19-21. Some 1,500 delegates from 16 Southern states are expected to attend.

The conference, which is sponsored by CIO and AFL unions and the Railway Brotherhoods, will be on the subject of "The South's part in winning the war for democracy."

Sec. James B. Carey of the CIO, and representatives of the AFL and the railway brotherhoods will address the meeting. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is scheduled to talk on "Youth and Training—Civilian and Military."

Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina and a member of the National War Labor Board, will speak at the Sunday evening session, and on Monday evening there will be a concert by Paul Robeson at which Mrs. Roosevelt will present the Thomas Jefferson award to the outstanding Southerner of the year.

GE Workers Go CIO

Gets $9,865

Newark, N. J.—Faced with contempt of court penalties, the anti-labor management of the Newark Star-Ledger finally came across with payment of a $9,865 back wage case to Agnes Fahy, former board member of the American Newspaper Guild. Miss Fahy was fired for union activities in September, 1937.

SETTLEMENT: Mayor A. J. Reaume of Windsor, Ont., addresses a rally of the CIO United Automobile Workers after a recent three week strike at Motor Products Co. which ended in victory for the union and a spur to the war effort. All workers were returned to their jobs and strike-breakers were fired.

'They Won't Try Again,' Texas Labor Verdict As Tory War Fizzles

By TRAVIS K. HEDRICK

HOUSTON, Tex., Apr. 11.—A general agreement that "they won't try it again in Texas" was found this week among labor people in the Lone Star State following the fiasco the attorneys for the manufacturers and oil corporations made of the so-called "grass roots" upsurge "against the New Deal" on March 24.

The spontaneous movement among Houston workers that literally took the meeting away from its sponsors when an attempt was made to viciously attack the Roosevelt administration and the progressive labor laws of the federal government will have a lasting effect throughout the state. The action demonstrated to Texas workers better than dozens of lectures and speeches by the score that unity pays off.

UNITY WON THE DAY

Unity among the workers in the oil fields and refineries, in the shipyards aboard the great tankers and in mines and mills forced the hand of the reactionaries who backed the Houston rally. Unity permitted labor to show the people of the nation exactly how crude and how phoney the "grass roots" meeting was . . . without any necessity to have it pointed out by graph and chart.

Texas workers hope that their action will serve as a model for workers in every state who later may be faced by a similar situation.

It is obvious to all workers here that the "grass roots" movement is national in scope and that it is designed as much as a weapon against America's great Commander-in-Chief, President Roosevelt, as it is against the 40 hour week, the closed shop, and all of the other measures labor and the CIO have won to bring security and a decent living to the country's industrial army.

PAPERS SPEECHLESS

The reactionary Houston newspapers were editorially speechless, while the attorneys who backed the meeting, John H. Crocker of Humble Oil, Raymond Elledge of Republic Oil, also had nothing to say publicly.

If the reactionaries can't get away with this type of thing "Deep in the Heart of Texas," can there be much hope for them in the better organized and better prepared sections of the country? Texas labor says "no."

Production Group

Eureka, Calif.—A Victory Production Committe was set up this week by four locals of the CIO Intl. Fishermen & Allied Workers in cooperation with dealers, and the committee met with Coast Guard officials to work out methods for increasing the spring catch of salmon.

German-America Unionists to Buy Bomber for Army

New York, Apr. 11 — (FP) — A campaign for funds to buy a bomber for the U. S. armed forces was started at a union conference April 7, sponsored by the Victory Committee of German - American Trade Unionists.

The conference also mapped a program to enable German-American unionists to make other contributions to the American war effort.

Both the AFL and CIO are represented on the committee. M. J. Obermeier of Local 6, Hotel & Restaurant Employes Intl. Alliance (AFL), is chairman while Gustav Faber of the Transport Workers Union (CIO) is vice chairman. Eleven CIO and AFL unions are represented.

The government's gratitude for the contribution of loyal aliens was expressed at the conference by Edward Corsi, chairman of the Enemy Alien Board.

able to AFL and CIO as a public service.

In a joint statement, CIO Pres. Murray and AFL Pres. Green declared:

"We are grateful to the National Broadcasting Co. for its patriotic and broadminded attitude in giving to the millions of organized American wage earners this opportunity to express their viewpoint each week on the air, along with the business and industrial interests that already are represented in the field of national broadcasting."

Murray explained that the CIO "will use this opportunity of a regular radio program for the major purpose of promoting the war effort. It will bring before the public the message of labor and its activities for all-out war production.

"We are most happy to cooperate with the AFL in this undertaking, and most assuredly will not allow any narrow or partisan considerations to interfere with this presentation of American labor's united and joint efforts for victory."

'FIRESIDE CHATS'

AFL Pres. Green expressed hope that through the weekly program, "labor hopes to be able to have a fireside chat with the people of America each week." He said that when the American public has heard labor's viewpoints, it "will be justly proud of their production soldiers."

The "Labor For Victory" program will feature current news commentary, plus interviews with outstanding national and labor officials, and workers in the industrial arsenals of the nation.

The program will be conducted for the CIO by its publicity director, Len De Caux.

on labor. Instead, join with labor, united as we are here tonight, for the purpose of winning the war for America."

As to labor's record since Pearl Harbor, McNutt declared that "It is time we examine the facts."

He pointed out that, by voluntarily waiving the right to strike, "organized labor has assured the nation of uninterrupted production of war materials as far as labor is concerned."

INSPIRING ACTION

"Organized labor in directing its unified strength to the war effort has placed the loyalty and patriotism of the American workingman beyond all doubt. It has also provided the most inspiring exhibition of the unity of our citizens since the treacherous attack upon Pearl Harbor.

"Yet while the workers are loyally pulling their weight in the war effort we are faced today with a stream of libels against labor in the press and in Congress. These indictments are part of a campaign to arouse antagonism based on confusion and misunderstanding. It is the kind of attack against patriotic citizens that so often proved successful in weakening other countries to the advantage of the Axis powers."

He scored these false accusations against labor and rapped "the men who are attacking labor in attempts to create popular misunderstanding about the 40-hour week."

DON'T BE MISLED

McNutt asserted "the men who are attacking labor have also tried to use the fear of inflation as a weapon to beat down the wages upon which the workers and their families depend for a living."

"Let us not be misled. Inflation is not caused by maintaining a fair relationship between wages and the changing cost of living. The workers must struggle with rising prices and with the dislocation of families as they move into crowded areas where war material is being produced. . . .

"There is no reason to regard a moderate rise of wage rates as adding to inflation as long as they do not run ahead of living costs."

He also declared that the War Labor Board, "as long as it remains unfettered by restrictive legislation and unwise limitations, is an ideal tribunal to meet the problems of American industry during the trying days that are before us."

Auxiliaries Plan to Mark Mothers' Week, May 1-8

By ELEANOR FOWLER

SPECIAL observances for Mothers' Week—the week between May 1, Child Health Day, and May 8, Mother's Day—are urged on all CIO Auxiliaries in the April issue of the Washington News Letter, monthly publication of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO.

Cleveland auxiliaries will participate in the yearly Mother's Day parade, Mrs. Faye Stephenson of Cleveland, president of the Auxiliary Congress announced.

Auxiliaries of the United Automobile Workers in Detroit, according to Helen Goldmann, national executive secretary of the Auto auxiliaries, are planning a broadcast on May 1 on the importance of immunization, in which they will urge mothers to make a contribution to victory by having their children vaccinated at once. Migration of workers seeking defense jobs from states which do not require vaccination for school entrance has greatly increased the danger of epidemic everywhere according to U. S. public health authorities.

The news letter urges every CIO auxiliary in arranging to celebrate Mothers' Week to make plans to honor especially mothers of men in the armed forces. A special drive to sign mothers up as auxiliary members is also stressed as part of the national "Organize for Victory" drive.

Soldiers' Pay Raise

A campaign for letters to Congressmen urging passage of the bill to raise the basic pay of soldiers to $42 a month, already passed by the Senate, is emphasized as an immediate auxiliary activity.

This bill was endorsed by a resolution at the Detroit National Auxiliary Conference in November, the news letter points out. Auxiliary members are asked to urge each woman they visit in their organizing drive to write to Congress on this issue.

New Auxiliaries

Encouraging progress in organization of new auxiliaries is announced by the national CIO Auxiliary Congress. The International Woodworkers Auxiliary has added four new Canadian auxiliaries to its rolls.

Philadelphia and St. Louis each report one new fur and one new maritime auxiliary. In St. Louis the new auxiliaries have offices in the same building and have already worked out a plan for fur auxiliary members to take care of maritime children in the fur office on maritime auxiliary night, and vice versa.

Two new auxiliaries have just been formed to locals of the United Cannery, Agricultural and Allied Workers of America—one in Memphis, Tenn., and one in Phoenix, Ariz.

Ohio also reports two new auxiliaries in Columbus and in Barberton. Both groups accept to membership women relatives of CIO members of all local CIO unions. The first act of the Columbus group under President Lena DeNucci was to ask the Red Cross how the CIO auxiliary could help.

Price Ceilings

Praising the setting of retail price ceilings on household electrical appliances as a step in the right direction, the national auxiliary news letter calls for nationwide pressure for application of similar ceilings to all consumer goods which show rapid price increases.

"Safeguarding the buying power of the pay check is essential to the health and morale of war production workers," President Faye Stephenson says in an introductory paragraph, "and efficient war production depends on the good health and high morale of the workers in our arms plants."

This, she points out, is an important part of the CIO victory program, and one the housewives who do the buying are especially equipped to concentrate on.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

I had the pleasure of attending a meeting in Pittsburgh this week addressed by CIO President Philip Murray, William Green, president AFL, and Paul McNutt, Administrator, Federal Security Agency. The hall was jammed to capacity and thousands on the outside. The messages given there for unity of effort were inspiring and will do much throughout the entire nation to unite our forces in this all-out effort to win the war. Mr. McNutt lauded labor's efforts and condemned its enemies in Congress now. Like President Murray and President Green, he defended the 40-hour week. All three joined in a vigorous condemnation of those who would enslave labor by restricted legislation patterned after the Axis. The great audience cheered and cheered the statements made by all three of the speakers.

Many Victories

Textile Workers Union won an election at Dallas Manufacturing Co., Huntsville, Ala., with the following results: TWUA, 353; AFL, 110, and no union, 84.

Bernard Borah, regional director, Dist. 50, United Mine Workers of America, reports following election victories: Representative Paul Christopher assisted—Tennessee Chemical Co., Nashville, Tenn. (subsidiary of Armour & Co.): Dist. 50, 163; against, 12. DeSoto Paint & Varnish Co., Memphis, Tenn. (subsidiary of Sears Roebuck): Dist. 50, 34; against, 26.

Regional Director Harvey Fremming in Kansas City reports the winning of an NLRB election at the independent packing plant of Fred Dold & Sons, with the following results: PWOC, 29; AFL, 15.

Regional Director Fullerton Fulton, Chicago, reports two elections recently won by the UERMWA, as follows: Pioneer Gen-E-Motor Co.—UE. 567; AFL, 22, and no union, 15. General Electric Service Co.—UE, 103; no union, 44.

Shoe Drive Shows Gains

Director Harris in charge of the organizing drive in the shoe industry reports a pact arrived at with the Brown and International Shoe Companies, providing for maintenance of membership, increase in wages and vacations with pay. This agreement follows the splendid victories won in elections at the plants of these companies and will stabilize the local unions where such elections have been won while organizing continues in the other plants of these firms.

The United Automobile Workers, CIO, report a number of victories in recent weeks. At Port Huron, Mich., the employes of the Mueller Brass Company voted 1,130 for the UAW-CIO, with 521 for the AFL; Veeder Root Plant, Bristol, Conn., UAW-CIO 189, no union 22; Clark Bolt Company, Milldale, Conn., UAW-CIO, 80, no union 50; Knight Plating Company, Detroit, Mich., UAW-CIO 87, AFL none, no union none; Accessory Forging Company, Detroit, UAW-CIO 66, no union 35; Detroit Plating Industries, UAW-CIO 43, AFL Metal Polishers Union 7.

The UAW-CIO reports an average paid-up membership of 524,395 members. This record was obtained during the time when thousands of additional members were thrown out of work due to the conversion of the automobile industry from peace to war-time production. There is every indication that when industry gets fully into war production a record breaking membership will result.

Regional Director H. R. Ballard of Omaha, Nebr., reports an election victory at the Sioux City Stock Yards with 155 for the CIO, compared with 8 against. Another victory was obtained in the meat packing division of the Kroger Grocery and Baking Company of Sioux City, with 50 for the CIO and 2 against.

Merchant Marine May Go Under Navy Blanket; Would Slice Pay Scales

WASHINGTON, Apr. 11—Signs were multiplying here this week that government officials responsibile for marine war shipping are thinking seriously about putting the American merchant marine under the U. S. Navy, with seamen and officers to be inducted into uniformed service.

According to reports received by the CIO Maritime Committee, the Navy has submitted such a plan to President Roosevelt, who has ordered a further study of legal and other angles involved and report back to him later.

The plan calls for enlisting seamen and paying them regular Navy pay, thus knocking out present wage scales won by the CIO maritime unions over the past five years. To meet this new situation, the National Maritime Union and the CIO Committee have advanced a five-point plan to set up a Maritime Personnel Board with full power to "accomplish the most efficient results in the operation of the vessels of the U. S. merchant marine.

This Board would handle all problems of ship manning, discipline, elimination of disloyal elements wherever found, waiving of any practices that are found, by mutual agreement, to interfere with war shipping, and improving safety at sea conditions.

CIO maritime union officials here pointed to this plan, to the union's campaign for safety measures, for an auxiliary patrol to deal with coastal submarines, and to rigid discipline and self-sacrifice by union members as further counter weights to the Navy plan.

Protest Long Sentences For Seamen

Newark, N. J., Apr. 11—Five years in a New Jersey jail is more than enough punishment for an assault case and for alleged robbery of a worn lumberjacket and $21.80, defense committee officials here declared in seeking pardon for three marine workers convicted during the 1937 seamen's strike.

The three police victims are Anthony Panchelly, Edward Woodworth and Donald Brown, west coast seamen who drew a 15 year sentence for knocking down a man that tried to persuade them to become strikebreakers during the walkout.

"These seamen have wasted five long years in jail," the defense committee said. "If the Court of Pardons approves their application, they will be free to live useful lives. If the application is not approved, and other appeals fail, they may remain in jail until 1951."

Until U. S. Crackdown:

Standard Oil Sold Gas To Big Axis Airlines

WASHINGTON, April 11—It took the threat of a government black-listing of the Rockefeller-controlled Standard Oil of Brazil to force the company to cease providing Nazi-dominated transatlantic air lines in South America with badly-needed aviation gas.

That information was given to Sen. Truman's investigating committee last week by A. A. Berle, Jr., assistant secretary of state, and William LaVarre, Commerce Department chief on Latin-American matters, as a follow-up to sensational disclosures of the company's patent "deal" with the Germans.

FACIAL STUDY: Vice-Pres. Frank Howard of Standard Oil of New Jersey looks scarcely concerned as the Senate's Truman investigating committee bares the company's 13-year link with a big Nazi firm. But Pres. W. S. Farish, right, seems to have "that lazy, sluggish feeling."

Standard bowed to the government's threat—which would have prevented any American corporation from dealing with the Brazilian subsidiary—and as a result the German Condor Line and the German-Italian Lati line were forced to stop operations shortly afterwards. Both airlines, operating in and between Europe and South America, carried scores of German and Italian spies, Gestapo men, trade agents and military men on secret missions to South America.

OFFICIALS REFUTED

The testimony of the two U. S. officials knocked the ground out from under W. S. Farish, head of Standard Oil of New Jersey, who earlier had claimed that the company made no delivery "except in conformity with the policy of the (State) Department."

Standard contended that its contract with Condor prevented cancellation of the gasoline shipments. But Asst. U. S. Atty. Gen. Thurman Arnold had previously shown from the minutes of the company's executive committee that "there is no contract covering this business."

LINK TO NAZIS

LaVarre told the Senate committee that between 1939 and 1941 the Italian airline was the only South American link with Axis-controlled Europe and "the only means of breaking the British blockade."

"The principal loads crossing to South America were spies, propaganda and profit-producing goods," he added. "The loads to Europe were essential war materials. The Department of Commerce had no authority to do anything about this. We had to sit by and watch it go."

TOOK SWIFT ACTION

Berle said that in March, 1941, the State Department decided to clean Lati and Condor out of South America, and it sought to have Standard's subsidiary cut off its flow of the precious high-octane gas to the Axis lines.

Standard indicated it would do so only if the State Department promised to "insure" the company against possible suits for breach of contract. Disgusted with the corporation's attitude, Berle reported:

"On Oct. 22, 1941, I initiated steps to have Standard Oil of Brazil placed on the blacklist"—a step which would have made it illegal for any American company to deal with the outfit.

"News of this traveled very fast," Berle commented, and the next day Standard agreed to stop selling oil to the Axis.

Labor and the Law:

Wisconsin Labor Act Status Still in Doubt; High Court Hits Coercion

By LEE PRESSMAN

CIO General Counsel

A recent decision of the Supreme Court involved the constitutionality of the Wisconsin State Labor Relations Act.

Under that law, a State Board was given jurisdiction to determine and pass upon unfair labor practices on the part of employes as well as employers. Under the language of the State Act, workers who are held to have committed unfair labor practices are denied the status of employes.

In the particular case, it was admitted that the employer was under the jurisdiction of the National Labor Relations Act; but the Federal Board had not assumed jurisdiction over the case. The state board did assume jurisdiction and ruled that the union and its members had committed certain unfair labor practices through acts of violence.

However, the State Supreme Court stated specifically that its ruling did not deprive the individuals of their status as employes. The case was carried to the United States Supreme Court, where the union contended that this state act, when considered as a whole, was inconsistent with the basic provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

SPECIFIC ORDER

The Supreme Court upheld the specific order issued by the State Board in this case, since it was confined to violence and mass picketing. But the Supreme Court expressly refused to pass upon the validity of the entire state act. In effect, the Supreme Court said that it was merely holding that a state may enact a statute whereby violence or mass picketing can be restrained. There is no question as to the soundness of this position.

The implications of the opinion are, however, that if a state board attempts to interfere with an employer-employe relationship where the employes are also subject to the National Labor Relations Act, such State legislation will probably be held invalid by the Supreme Court.

Another case involving an interpretation of the National Labor Relations Act was decided by the Supreme Court in a manner that may be deliberately misinterpreted by employers since it involves the issue of the closed shop. It involved an employer who had a contract with certain AFL unions which admittedly represented a majority of the employes.

The contract was merely an exclusive bargaining agreement. However, there was an additional oral provision which simply provided that members of the AFL unions could not change their collective bargaining representative for the duration of the contract, and that any new employes hired would have to join.

Before the expiration of the contract a CIO union initiated an organizing campaign. In order to defeat this organizing activity the employer attempted to compel those of its employes who had left the AFL unions, to rejoin them. Thereafter the employer entered into a closed shop contract with the AFL unions.

BASIS OF DECISION

The Supreme Court held:

(1) That in the absence of a closed shop contract, the AFL unions were not entitled to have the employer intimidate or coerce the workers who had decided to leave the AFL unions to join the CIO union; and

(2) That because of such intimidation the closed shop contract which was later executed was invalid. This was based upon the provision of the Labor Act that a closed shop contract cannot be given to a union unless it represents a majority of the employes and unless it obtains such a majority without assistance or coercion by the employer.

This decision is eminently sound and protects the legitimate activities and contracts of all unions. It does not in any way endanger closed shop contracts.

Name Attorney To Aid Unions With WLB Cases

Washington, April 11—Benjamin Sigal, Pittsburgh attorney, has been appointed an executive assistant by the National War Labor Board and been assigned to assist in coordinating the work of the CIO representatives serving as members of the Board, or as associate and panel members.

Sigal is located in Room 5419 of the Dept. of Labor, and will be available for purposes of consulting with Board and panel members, as well as with CIO unions having cases before the WLB.

Fair Tax Plan Can Aid War, CIO Tells U. S.

WASHINGTON, April 11 — Congress has the chance to pass a tax bill that "will accelerate and improve the nation's war production effort" and also the temptation to pass one that will "hamper the war effort and impede production," the CIO told the House Ways and Means Committee here this week.

Speaking for President Philip Murray, CIO Economic Director Ralph Hetzel told the committee that passage of a sales tax, ardently pushed by the NAM and other reactionary groups, would sabotage the war effort by undermining workers' health and productivity.

"It is my considered judgment that the worst possible revenue measure which could be enacted would be a general sales tax of any character," he said.

"Such a tax would be inflationary; it would bear with unfair and unequal weight on wage earners and working farmers; and it would hamper the war production effort."

CIO WOMEN

President Murray's testimony against the sales tax was backed by the testimony from the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries and by Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

Speaking for the auxiliaries, National Director Julia Katz said in endorsing the CIO's opposition to sales taxes:

"We urge this as an organization of American women who know full well that sacrifice is necessary for victory; who are accepting with fortitude necessary sacrifices in living standards, in leisure; and in the families of hundreds of CIO seamen killed in the war, the loss of dear ones. We maintain that a tax on the purchasing power of American families, regardless of income, is not in the interests of victory."

CORPORATION TAXES

Murray placed the CIO tax program again before Congress in calling for increased corporation and excess profits taxes, higher income taxes on basis of present exemptions, closing of all tax loopholes, luxury taxes, and no general sales or wage taxes.

"This program would guarantee the maximum output of war production," Murray said. "It would protect the income of working people and farmers which is necessary to them to maintain a minimum standard of health, efficiency and morale. It would have the necessary anti-inflationary effect in cutting purchasing power."

BACKS TREASURY

Declaring that the CIO is in general support of the Treasury tax program, Murray added a warning note to Congressmen bent on hampering the war effort by taxing the workers' food and clothing and other necessities in contrasting workers' needs with the special interests of the NAM and the Chamber of Commerce.

"It is much more difficult for a working man to sit down and write in his own handwriting his conviction that already his burden is too heavy, that the cost of living is threatening the well-being of himself and his family and that a tax program should be enacted on the basis of ability to pay.

"But that does not make the need of these working people any less dire. It does not lessen one bit the obligation of Congress to enact a tax program calculated to serve the welfare of the less articulate groups and of the nation as a whole."

Bananas

Houston, Tex., April 11—Houston residents have discovered the cause of occasional shortages of bananas in their grovery stores. It's the war.

At the Brown Shipyard, a 165-foot sub chaser recently went down to the sea on a cushion of seven tons of the slippery fruit. The bananas have been found to be an ideal lubricant to slip the ships down the ways.

Vote for CIO

New Orleans — Workers at the Colonial Sugar Refinery here have voted for CIO representation by a 351-229 margin.

N. Y. State Prudential Agents To Vote

New York, April 11—The United Office and Professional Workers of America, CIO, announced today that the Prudential Insurance Co. and the union, in a signed stipulation, had agreed to hold a collective bargaining election among the company's 4,000 agents in New York State, thus averting a threatened strike.

UOPWA, in agreeing to the statewide election, voluntarily set aside bargaining rights won for 2,500 Prudential agents in a State Labor Relations Board election in the Greater New York area last November. The company has guaranteed that it will recognize the union and bargain in good faith.

The company and the union, in coming to a mutual understanding, stated in the stipulation that they "are of the opinion that prompt and peaceable settlement of the dispute between them will contribute to the development and the maintenance of national unity and strengthen public morale and in that way aid in the successful prosecution of the war . . ."

The union prepared for a strike when, after winning the SLRB election by a three to one vote, the company refused to bargain.

'Victory Films' Available For Unions

New York, Apr. 11—"Films for Victory," a special listing of movies dealing with the war, with production, civilian defense and the like is announced by Brandon Films, Inc., distributors of Garrison films here. The movies are 16mm. sound films specially chosen for showings by unions, farm and church groups, etc., in meeting halls.

Subjects include shorts on air raid precautions, handling of bombs, incendiaries; "Women of the United Nations at War," with shorts on women in the war effort of the U. S. (one written by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt), Britain, Canada and the Soviet Union; two shorts on children under war conditions in England; a series of "war newsreels" including one on the Pearl Harbor attack and another called "Russia Stops Hitler" and a longer number called "The Nazi Way," a documentary on the results of appeasing Hitler.

'Vets' of Ford Strike Kitchen Cook 'Em Up for Red Cross As Detroit Labor Mobilizes

By MARY POND

DETROIT, Apr. 11—A union-made ambulance donated to the American Red Cross by the members who worked on it, the establishment of additional CIO units of Red Cross, an auxiliary program for participation in Red Cross services, and a program for training Ford workers in Red Cross first aid are additional evidence of the Detroit unions' part in the defense work of the nation.

The women who ran the Ford strike kitchens will turn their talents to canteen work for the American Red Cross as part of the program of the UAW auxiliaries here to take part in the work of the local Red Cross chapter.

Led by Mrs. Catherine Gelles, who organized the soup kitchens for the UAW in the past, the auxiliaries will meet April 13 with officials of the local chapter to discuss establishment of classes in nutrition, home nursing and training for canteen corps and nurse's aide corps.

OFFER CIO OFFICES

Four hundred CIO headquarters throughout the state of Michigan have been offered as centers for mass feedings in time of emergency, through Ben Probe, secretary-treasurer of the Michigan CIO Council.

At the same time, two additional CIO units of the Red Cross are being opened under the sponsorship of the UAW auxiliaries. Two such centers, where Red Cross activities of the unions are coordinated, have been put into operation during the past two months.

With workers coming as far as 15 miles to attend classes, Dr. Morris Raskin, who is directing first aid training within the CIO locals of the city, has asked members of the unions to request their personal physicians to register as instructors for the union groups.

Dr. Raskin is conducting an instructor's course for 35 UAW members from the first aid departments of the Ford plant, with the proposal that these men, then begin training of fellow workers. Seven classes have been completed under Dr. Raskin's direction, with 11 others in progress at the present. Classes are held in CIO Red Cross centers and local union halls, with nine Detroit doctors already assisting Dr. Raskin in the project.

TRAILER CAMP CLASS

Newest class is that being formed in the trailer camp near the Chrysler tank arsenal where 500 UAW members have asked for instruction.

Dodge Truck workers, members of Local 140, UAW, collected sufficient funds to purchase an ambulance for the Red Cross, with special equipment for the ambulance included in the gift. Al Berres, director of the Detroit Chapter of the Red Cross, was presented with the ambulance in a ceremony within the Dodge Truck plant.

L. A. Papers Must Bargain WithNewsboys

Washington, April 11—Publishers of four Los Angeles newspapers have been ordered by the National Labor Relations Board to bargain upon request with the CIO Newsboys Union as sole representative of their full-time newsboys and checkmen.

The Board's orders apply to Hearst Publications, Inc., publisher of the Los Angeles Examiner, and the Los Angeles Evening Herald & Express; the Times-Mirror Co., publisher of the Times; and Stockholders Publishing Co., publisher of the Los Angeles News.

The CIO Newsboys Union was certified some months ago as qualified bargaining representative after it had won elections conducted among the newsboys of the four papers, but the managements refused to recognize or bargain with the union.

The CIO union thereupon filed charges and hearings were held in Los Angeles and Washington. The Board's decision was handed down several weeks after a final oral argument was held in Washington on Feb. 19.

Bosses Cold To Union Plea For Conversion

Rockford, Ill., Apr. 11—Given the haughty brush-off by local employers, leaders of the CIO United Furniture Workers are going on their own to Washington in an effort to seek war production jobs for this furniture city's 75% idle plants.

Joseph Kennedy, business agent for Local 707, CIO United Furniture Workers, has asked Donald Nelson, WPB head, to send a consultant here to investigate possibilities of turning out plastic and wood airplanes in the local factories.

The Rockford Furniture Manufacturers Assn. has twice turned down suggestions from the union for a joint labor-industry committee to examine methods of converting the plants to war production. Only one independent employer accepted the union's invitation for a meeting, but the parley was called off when the 12 association members rejected the bid.

GOOD RESULTS

Many experts believe that planes constructed out of plywood may be the answer to the nation's current aluminum shortage, and recent experiments have given encouraging indication of the suitability of this material for airplane construction.

Kennedy said that local plants—which have 3,000,000 square feet of space—are operating at 25% of capacity, with only 1,500 workers on the payroll.

WE'LL WORK TO WIN

AT DETROIT: Tom (Brush) Smith, veteran United Mine Workers official and CIO supporter, who died suddenly in Tennessee this week, was pictured with Pres. Murray at the Detroit CIO convention last November. A veteran of scores of organizing campaigns, "Brush" was popular with unionists from all over the nation.

'Brush' Smith, Veteran CIO Member, Dies

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 18.—Tom (Brush) Smith, veteran member of the United Mine Workers, and a well-known delegate at every CIO convention, died this week.

His death followed an emergency operation for appendicitis.

Nearing 80 years of age, "Brush" Smith was an active fighter for labor and a tireless promoter of organization for the unorganized workers of the country. During recent years he had served as a CIO field representative in Tennessee, and his talks at union meetings endeared him to thousands of workers.

ORGANIZED MINERS

"Brush" Smith was organizing coal miners in the Tennessee hills decades ago, when mere mention of the word "union" was enough to bring out the bosses' posses. Working at night, holding secret meetings, contacting key workers, "Brush" did his share in bringing the union to its present great strength in the Volunteer state.

When two CIO organizers were beaten by vigilantes in Roane County last autumn, Smith recalled that almost 50 years previously he had undergone a similar experience in the same hill country.

"Brush" Smith was as young in spirit as he was advanced in years; and he'll long be remembered by workers in Tennessee and throughout the country for his contributions to the welfare of organized labor.

'Steel Labor' Is Bomber's Name

Providence, R.I., April 18.—Bombs from an American plane named "Steel Labor" in honor of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee will soon be falling on the Axis, SWOC Local 1561 announced here.

The local is putting on a drive to raise funds to pay for such a bomber. According to local President Thomas Cashman, contributions are coming in in a way that means more bad news for Hitler—and soon.

Calling All Blondes

Washington, April 18.—Industry as well as gentlemen, prefers blondes—that is, 100%, honest-to-God blondes!

Their hair, if naturally blonde, undyed and unpermanented, is needed for aircraft flight instruments, WPB announces.

Blonde glamor girls, who plan to sheer their long tresses into Victory haircuts, can sell or donate their locks if they're 15 inches long or more.

Julien P. Friez & Sons, Baltimore, will donate the "crowning glory" to the Red Cross or the USO and the donor will be given a certificate for her contribution to the war effort. Step right up, ladies!

CIO Asks Firm Lid On Rising Prices

WASHINGTON, April 18—The CIO moved on a double front this week to protect labor's living standards and morale from an assault by southern poll-tax Congressmen and by the steadily increasing cost of living.

President Murray called upon every affiliate to resume the battle against the Smith-Vinson "slave labor" bills, which are scheduled to be discussed in Congress next week. He urged a strong labor offensive to smash the legislation for once and for all.

Meanwhile the CIO made publice a policy statement calling for firm and effective price and rent controls, strict limitation of profits through taxation and immediate institution of a comprehensive rationing program.

The statement charged that the "terrifying" price rises of the past year are due to failure of the OPA vigorously to enforce limits on consumer prices.

Thomas Gives Publishers Story They All Missed!

New York, April 18—This week's issue of Editor & Publisher, newspaper trade paper, will give the bosses of the nation's newspaper industry something to think about beside how to get advertising money for publicity about U. S. Defense Savings Bonds.

The United Automobile Workers, CIO, is taking a full page advertisement in the current issue to call attention to one of the worst cases of "double standard" treatment of labor news yet recorded.

LIE WAS SPREAD

He recalled that last month Drew Pearson and Robert Allen, authors of the Washington Merry-Go-Round, spread the lie through a national network broadcast that Miss Genevieve Samp had been thrown out of her job at the National Stamping Co., Detroit, for producing too much. The columnists claimed the union was responsible, and alleged that the reason was her complaint that the union refused to step up production.

Subsequently, Thomas pointed out, it developed that Miss Samp was not a production worker, that the union case against her grew out of disturbances in the plant to which Miss Samp frankly admitted, "I contributed my share," and that the union was helping to increase output.

The nation's newspapers featured the Pearson-Allen fabrication Thomas said, but ignored the important developments that showed the story to be a lie.

A few days later the Navy awarded its famous "E" award to the National Stamping Co.

Not a single daily paper in the country, outside of the three in Detroit, carried that story, Thomas reminded the publishers. Those in Detroit neglected to recall that the National Stamping workers "had but a few weeks previous been held to scorn as alleged defense saboteurs."

Firms Fail to Hire Local Jobless

St. Louis, April 18.—Demands that St. Louis employers hire jobless workers in their war order factories before starting to train inexperienced persons from rural areas, were forwarded to War Production Chief Donald Nelson today by the St. Louis CIO Council.

Luther Slinkard, city CIO secretary, told Nelson that the unions are "willing and anxious" to participate in a city labor-management committee, and offered the suggestion that such a council might serve to improve hiring and personnel policies in the interest of speedier war output.

Union Meets Bond Goal, Sets Another

Washington, April 18—Secretary Morgenthau today congratulated the United Automobile Workers on their completion of purchases of $50,000,000 of War Savings Bonds, pledged on the heels of the Pearl Harbor attack to replace the U. S. S. Arizona, on which a union member of the labor organization was killed in action.

R. J. Thomas, president of the union, in a telegram from Detroit, also pledged to the Secretary a second drive for another $50,000,000 of War Bond sales to provide another battleship, and expressed confidence of the membership that the second goal would be reached more quickly than the first.

"We fight a two-ocean war," said Mr. Thomas in his message, "and the UAW-CIO wants to have a ship in each ocean so that we can carry the struggle against Fascism to Tokyo and Berlin."

First Aid Class In Boss's Office

Cleveland, April 18.—The stenographers really have taken over the boss's office at the R. L. Polk Company here.

Employes of the direct mail advertising division of the firm, members of the United Office and Professional Workers of America, needed a place to hold union-sponsored Red Cross First Aid classes.

Frank Sturtevant, manager of the division, offered the use of his own office after hours to the union. Not stopping there, he stayed overtime himself to watch the demonstration of bandage technique taught by Ralph Geiger, Red Cross instructor from the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

SET OUTPUT RECORD: Seven members of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee exhibit happy smiles as their 34-man blast furnace crew rolls up a new world's record output mark. Employed by the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp. at Rankin, Pa., they turned out 41,782 tons of pig iron in January. American workers, straining to out-produce the Axis, are proud of these standard bearers.

CIO Editors Push Plan To Aid War On Hitler

WASHINGTON, April 18—Full working unity with government, industry and labor press and publicity units "in all publicity efforts to promote production" for an immediate military offensive against Hitler was pledged by 60 CIO editors meeting this week.

The meeting, called on direction of the CIO Executive Board and Pres. Murray, urged a strong counter-attack against the pro-Axis forces that have subjected labor to "an infamous campaign of misrepresentation" in order to put over the Smith bill and other wage and production cutting measures.

It outlined a recommended program for these two major objectives that included setting up local publicity committees to work with existing CIO publicity agencies, greater support for the labor press and in particular for The CIO NEWS, further use of radio, advertising, etc., and a demand that the daily press abandon "policies which hinder successful prosecution of the war" and dedicate itself to the defeat of the Axis.

The conference was divided into two sessions, the first one for consideration of CIO publicity and editorial policies to further the war effort, and the second one devoted to extended discussion with representatives of government war publicity and press agencies. The sessions were presided over by CIO National Publicity Director Len De Caux.

PROMINENT SPEAKERS

Speakers at the second session included Archibald MacLeish, head of the Office of Facts and Figures; General Lewis B. Hershey, head of Selective Service; Col. Robert Ginsburgh of the War Department; Capt. Henderson of the Navy Department; Byron Price, director of the Office of Censorship, and officials from the War Production Board, the Office of Civilian Defense, Co-ordinator of Information, Price Administration, War Bond Division of the Treasury, and others.

Sole theme of all the discussion with government officials was ways and means for CIO publicity to help in the war effort. Each speaker recognized the prime importance of the labor press in building national unity and morale for production, MacLeish declaring: "The labor press has the important role in winning the battle of production. It must fight the defeatists and divisionists that are trying to split the United States and the United Nations."

TO WIN THE WAR

The delegates heard an account of the seriousness of the present military situation of the United Nations, and a declaration that an early offensive against the main enemy, Hitler Germany, was in preparation.

From General Hershey, they heard a brief review of the problem of changing the whole direction of the American people to the war effort, directly involving 40 million men. "This change must be done in a democratic way," the General said. "We must achieve the maximum efficiency with the maximum democracy."

Hershey declared that labor and management must get together to decide what men should stay in industry, since production is their joint responsibility.

Speaking for the Navy Department, Capt. Henderson described the system of "E awards" given for excellent production, revealing that the Navy plans to bring sailors and marines who have actually used arms from a particular plant to greet the workers there. He also said that the Navy was instructing its publicity officers to contact labor union people throughout the country.

ASK LABOR'S HELP

All the government speakers stressed the importance of labor supplying material to the war publicity agencies for domestic propaganda and for the short-wave beam to Europe, Asia and Latin America. In turn, they promised that the supply of war publicity material to the labor press would be stepped up and improved.

Several delegates pointed out weak spots in the government's war publicity setup as directed to the labor press, chiefly in the somewhat disorganized way in which the material has been sent out. This situation is now being remedied, the government officials explained, and plans call for a steady flow of release copy designed for the labor press.

PRESS, RADIO DRIVES

A large part of the delegates' time in the first session was spent on a perennial subject with labor editors—the inequities of the commercial press and how to overcome them. General conclusions were as outlined in the policy statement released from the conference—that labor must build its own press, must continue to nail lies with facts and overcome prejudice by taking labor's message around the publishers straight to the people.

This, the delegates all declared, involved the labor press taking the offensive in pushing labor's victory program despite the anti-labor lies and slanders designed to break unions and cripple war production.

FCC Head Applauds CIO Wire Union's Aid To Govt. War Effort

By CHARLES SILBERMAN

ATLANTA, Ga., April 18—From the opening address of President Joseph P. Selly on Monday to the more than 100 delegates attending the sixth national convention of the American Communications Association at the Ansley Hotel here, every speech and every action of the conferees has had one underlying theme—"gear the ACA, the communications industry, and the whole nation to the successful prosecution of the war against the Fascist Axis."

In a statement of policy on production and balanced war economy adopted unanimously today, the convention called for "complete mobilization of all the resources and the entire productive capacity of our nation behind the war effort."

PRAISED BY FLY

James Lawrence Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission and the Defense Communications Board, who addressed the conferees on Monday, paid special tribute to the role of the AFL, CIO, and particularly the ACA, for the work of these organizations in increasing war production.

Fly called attention to ACA's campaigns for purchase of defense bonds and donations of blood to the Red Cross, and its aid to local civilian defense bodies on wire and radio matters.

Obviously referring to the recent action of David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, who donated his blood to the ACA-Red Cross Blood Bank, Fly said he found "symbolic significance in the fact that the donation of at least one communications company president is mingled with yours in the same blood bank."

SUPPORT TO FDR

First official resolution adopted by the convention was in the form of a message to President Roosevelt extending "our active support and deep spiritual sympathy" for his inspiring and effective leadership, and pledging unconditionally "to examine all problems that arise in our work from the standpoint of the national interest alone, from the standpoint of winning this war. We pledge to give all we have to win."

The convention unanimously adopted a resolution urging "the opening of a second front on the continent of Europe by the armed forces of Britain and America so that our foe shall be divided and conquered."

The convention urged the government to "take every necessary step to root out the disruptive and destructive forces led by Gerald L. K. Smith, Pelley, Coughlin, Dies, Detherage and others, and prevent them from dividing and disrupting national unity," and heartily approved the suspension of the mailing right of Social Justice, Coughlinite paper.

Men Over 45

Detroit—The war is knocking down the barriers to jobs for older men. The Hudson Motor Co. naval ordnance plant inserted this ad in local papers:

"Wanted—Toolmakers and jig and fixture inspectors; age limits 45 to 98 years."

Tasks of Labor Publicity Outlined By Editors

Following are excerpts from the statement adopted by CIO editors and publicity directors at their conference in Washington April 11-12:

This conference of CIO editors and publicity directors, whose publications reach millions of American workers and their families, pledges 100 per cent cooperation with the government and with all patriotic American groups for the stimulation of labor enthusiasm and effort to increase war production, to back up our armed forces and for all other steps necessary to secure victory over the Axis.

We particularly extend our closest and most fraternal cooperation with the editors and publicity representatives of the American Federation of Labor and the railroad brotherhoods, to the end that the whole labor press and all labor publicity activities may be coordinated for joint effort to increase production in order to win the war.

OFFENSIVE NEEDED

In line with national CIO policy of our respective unions, we offer to industry our cooperation in all publicity efforts to promote production and to insure safe delivery of the goods the United Nations need for an immediate military offensive against the Hitler Axis.

In recent months, labor has been subjected to an infamous campaign of misrepresentation, for the purpose of cutting wages, destroying union organization, and in advancing the profits of special interest groups. Most of the daily press has joined in this campaign, together with such radio commentators as H. V. Kaltenborn and others of his type.

This anti-labor propaganda campaign, if not directly inspired by Axis agents and American appeasers, at any rate plays their game by striking at national unity and undermining labor morale.

MUST MEET ATTACK

We are of the opinion that labor must meet this attack, not in a defensive spirit, but by publicizing increasingly its positive stand and ts many actvties to promote the war effort.

We recommend that the labor press make clear labor's leadership in the war effort. This can be done by emphasizing the Murray Industry Council Plan and other production plans and achievements of the affiliated unions of the CIO. At the same time, the labor press will continue to expose the retarding influence of certain sections of business on the victory production program.

Labor has given up many of its rights and conditions. The labor press should demand all necessary sacrifices from other groups in the nation to expedite the war effort and win victory.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The development of a more influential people's press is urgently needed. We therefore recommend:

That the daily press follow the example of other private industries by abandoning policies which hinder successful prosecution of the war and convert itself into a war industry which will be dedicated to the defeat of the Axis; that labor give increased encouragement and support to those newspapers that pursue progressive policies conducive to national unity; that our unions increase their support for the existing labor press; that a special effort be made to increase the circulation and to secure more financial support for our national paper, The CIO News, so that it may reach the general public as well as labor through newsstands sales, etc.; that the CIO, in cooperation with other sections of labor, watch for the first opportunity to launch a national labor daily newspaper.

Radio has to date been more sensitive than daily newpeper publishers to the demand that both sides of controversial issues be presented, if real freedom of press and radio is to be preserved. We heartily welcome the action of the National Broadcasting Company in offering to the CIO and AFL a weekly radio program over a national hookup.

We recommend that all Industrial Union Councils and local unions establish press and publicity committees, or select publicity representatives whose duty it shall be to bring the victory program of labor to the public attention and watch for all local opportunities to answer anti-labor attacks.

In conjunction with the international union publicity setups and the Publicity Department of the national CIO, such local publicity representatives can form a closely cooperating publicity network for promoting the labor cause and enlisting labor along with all other sections of the population in joint effort for victory over the Axis.

GE on Spot For Patent Link to Nazis

Washington, April 18.—More grizzly details in the story of American corporation connections with German industrial monopolies were aired this week by the Senate Patents Committee.

Following the Truman Committee's probe of Standard Oil of New Jersey's link with I. G. Farbenindustrie, the committee heard details of somewhat similar patent pools involving Aluminum Co. of America and General Electric.

Testimony about General Electric revealed that the company's activities had lifted to sky high levels the price of tungsten carbide, an extremely hard alloy used in cutting tools. Prices were lowered only when the Dept. of Justice began investigating.

Senate probers heard that while a 10-gram lump of the material costs $1.75 in Germany, it was sold in this country for $8. As a result, Germany was using 22 times as much of the material as American industry.

Hit Smith Bill As Blow at Unity

Beverley Hills, Calif., April 18.—The Smith-Vinson bills "strike at the root of the things our nation seeks to preserve," Local 24 of the Aviation Division of the UAW-CIO declared in a message to Rep. Carl Vinson, head of the House committee now considering the two measures.

Such bills would hamper the war effort which "our nation, along with its allies, is embarked upon" to prevent Hitler from enslaving the world, the local's message said.

TUNE IN ON 'LABOR FOR VICTORY'

Union Hails Harvester Decision

CHICAGO, Apr. 18—Decision of the National War Labor Board on the bitterly contested issue of maintenance of union membership handed down this week in the International Harvester Co. case was hailed by the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee here as an "outstanding victory" for the union. The case involves eight Mid-West Harvester plants.

In an 8 to 4 decision—the four employer representatives dissenting—the Board ordered Harvester to include a maintenance of membership clause in union contracts if a majority of the workers in each of the eight plants involved vote in favor of this at special elections ordered held by the War Labor Board.

OAKES COMMENTS

Commenting on settlement of this issue which split the Board's decision, Grant Oakes, chairman of the CIO Farm Equipment Workers, said: "On the question of union security, we are entirely confident that the members in every Harvester plant will vote overwhelmingly for maintenance of membership.

"As a matter of fact, we are happy that the workers have the opportunity to reaffirm publicly their faith in their union and their wholehearted support of it. The Harvester workers have achieved a great victory through the FEWOC, and they recognize the job their union has done in the face of every conceivable obstacle."

OTHER ISSUES INVOLVED

On other main issues involved the 12 members of the Board panel turned in an unanimous decision calling for:

1. A 4½-cent hourly wage increase retroactive to Jan. 15, 1942.
2. Pay for all union representatives such as stewards, grievance and bargaining committeemen, for time spent in handling grievances in the plant.
3. Negotiations on further wage increases may be opened in June and every three months thereafter upon notice.
4. Time-and-a-half pay for work beyond eight hours a day, or 40 a week, but no overtime for Saturdays, Sundays or holiday, as such when they fall within the 40-hour work week.

Walter Teagle, Tory Eagle

Washington, April 18.—Leader of the employer minority on the War Labor Board that fought an unsuccessful attack against the union security decision at Intl. Harvester Co., was Walter Teagle, chairman of Standard Oil of New Jersey.

Less than three weeks ago, Teagle was fined $5,000 for his role in Standard's long-time connection with the German IGF corporation—a connection finally broken by government action.

While Teagle was fighting the Intl. Harvester workers, the Natl. Labor Relations Board was issuing an intermediate report demanding that Standard dis-establish a company union in its plant.

Unionists Galore Wearing 'E' Buttons For Service to Navy

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, April 18—Next time somebody tries to convince you that labor is lying down on the production job, suggest that they "go tell it to the Navy."

For a survey of the plants that have been granted the Navy's coveted "E" awards for beating output schedules, revealed today that a high proportion are working under union contract conditions.

Uncle Sam's Navy and American labor can both be proud of the manner in which organized workers have spurred their production drive, and the blue "E" pennants floating over scores of unionized factories are themselves an answer to those who would scoff at labor's contributions to the war effort.

Workers in the humming shipyard, steel, electrical and machine tool industries have already had a chance to pin the Navy's "E" buttons along side their union insignia.

The Navy "E" pennant is an old tradition on U. S. fighting ships; it's something new for industrial workers who build the fleet, an award of which they may well be proud.

40 YEARS OLD

The "E" symbol came into use nearly 40 years ago, when the Navy started to award honor pennants to ships that had excelled in certain performance tests. When Uncle Sam rolled up his sleeves and started to outproduce the Axis, Navy officials realized that factories and workers, as well as ships and sailors, constitute the American fighting force.

Appointed to head the newly-created Navy Board of Production Awards was Rear Admiral H. A. Wiley, retired. To American industry and American labor, the Board promised to award the "E" pennants and buttons on the basis of fast production, ingenuity in beating obstacles, reliability, "willingness to assume new and difficult tasks and evidence of desire toward genuine and effective cooperation."

Each of the selected companies is awarded a swallow-tailed pennant bearing the Navy anchor and the "E" symbol. Each worker in the plant gets an "E" button as his permanent possession. But the flag stays with the company only for six month. If, at that time, the

CIO Sweeps Curtiss Plane Poll

Columbus, Ohio, April 18.—A Labor Board election held among the workers at the plant of the Curtiss-Wright Corp. here, was won last week by the CIO United Automobile Workers 1,557 to 382 for the AFL Intl. Assn. of Machinists.

Nicholas Dragon, UAW organization director for all Curtiss-Wright plants, announced after the election that negotiations with the company would start immediately and predicted that the UAW would also defeat the AFL in plants in Buffalo, N.Y., Paterson, N.J., and other Curtiss plants in the East.

An independent union at the Columbus plant withdrew from the ballot before the election. An examiner from the National Labor Relations Board recommended that it be disbanded as company dominated following a hearing on the charges filed by the UAW.

Resume Attacks On Smith Bills, Murray Tells CIO

WASHINGTON, April 18—An urgent plea to resume the offensive against the Smith-Vinson bills was sent to CIO affiliates by President Murray this week, in a circular letter pointing out that CIO unions "have apparently slackened the counter-drive" against them.

Despite revisions of the anti-union measures now being cooked up in Congress, the main purpose of the bills "remains as an attack on the unions and consequently on war production," Murray said, adding that they come at a time "when the utmost war production is needed for the offensive the United Nations are preparing to launch against the Hitler Axis."

Murray's letter dealt with schemes of Rep. Carl Vinson and other reactionary Congressmen to slip the Smith-Vinson measures over by making meaningless amendments to the original proposal. Under this scheme, the bill would extend the work week to 48 hours before payment of overtime. The proposal would also freeze the open shop and the union shop. As bait for support, it includes a wholly inadequate provision for limiting profits.

SHARP WARNING

Murray warned that the Connally bill, which also outlaws the union shop, was set for Senate consideration April 20, declaring:

"It should not be necessary to remind CIO members of the extreme danger to the war effort that these bills represent . . . Any failure on our part to take every step necessary to stop this anti-victory drive becomes an aid to the enemy."

COUGHLIN SHEET BARRED

While the Smith-Vinson proposals remained the major threat to the nation's war production effort, the government took steps to abate two lesser nuisances that have sniped continually at morale and national unity.

One of these moves took place in the ban on Coughlin's magazine "Social Justice," which was barred from the mails on the ground that its contents violated the Espionage Act of 1917, and the other was seen in the hailing of Rep. Clare Hoffman, veteran labor-hater and isolationist, before a Washington grand jury.

Commenting on the ban on Social Justice, Attorney General Biddle declared: "Social Justice reproduces in this country the lines of the enemy propaganda being waged against this country from abroad. The Espionage Act of 1917 is designed to defeat this type of attack."

VETERAN FOE

Hoffman, who has been a leading enemy of labor ever since he went to Congress in 1935, was summoned to testify on a matter of speech-mailing, reminiscent of the case of Ham Fish's secretary who got a prison sentence for distributing pro-fascist propaganda through the mails. It seems that Hoffman material has also been mailed out under more than suspicious circumstances.

Action against other seditious publications along the line of the ban on Social Justice was indicated by the Dept. of Justice, and is expected soon.

Recent newspaper and magazine articles have exposed what the labor movement has long known—that a domestic fascist press exists in this country, run by men of the type of Wm. Dudley Pelley, Gerald L. K. Smith and the like.

No Dough For Dies--Yet

Washington, April 18—One more week and Dies still hasn't got his appropriation, due to labor's drive against his disruptive activities, to opposition by a handful of Representatives in Congress and to newspaper attacks on him for anti-war effort statements and smear jobs.

Despite his obvious need for money (there is considerable doubt that he met the March payroll), Dies has so far failed to appear before the House Accounts Committee to ask for his dough.

In the meantime, he announced that he would conduct a mammoth investigation of Axis agents on his own conveniently-located ranch in Jasper, Texas. This is about the twentieth such investigation he has announced.

Quite why it should be held in the remote ranch in Jasper has not been revealed.

The Helping Hand

Murray Speaks Up

"I am interested in winning one war, and that is the war against the Axis powers," said CIO President Philip Murray in his letter to District 50, United Mine Workers, deploring attacks on the CIO and himself "designed to disrupt and create confusion within the organization."

If there has ever been a time in the history of the world when labor needed to be united in its own and the country's interest, it is today. Our soldiers and sailors depend for their lives on the united support of American labor. The survival of the labor movement itself, as of all our democratic institutions and our whole way of life, depends upon united effort for victory over the Axis.

Both CIO and AFL have shown full appreciation of this urgent need for united war effort. Both their leaders and their membership are working in close harmony to this end. It is doubly deplorable therefore that any appearance of disunity within the CIO itself should be created by the kind of sniping and dissension-breeding campaign of which President Murray complains.

Writing as vice-president of the United Mine Workers, he emphasizes the splendidly patriotic record of his union and the unity of its rank and file behind the war effort. The conflict amongst its elected and appointed officers, Murray says, should be resolved by the membership by cleaning house rather than assuming the hazard of furthering labor disunity.

The president of the CIO and its leadership generally have exhibited great patience and forebearance in the face of many provocations. They have suppressed their personal feelings and minimized animosities in the broader interests of labor and national unity for winning the war.

It is in the same spirit, and with our major war interests in mind, that Murray now speaks up, urging an end to internal sniping, to inflammatory statements and to all other actions that create labor disunity.

He addresses his appeal primarily to his own union, from whose membership he has received many statements deploring the attacks upon the CIO and upon himself. But he also speaks to the whole movement when he urges that labor maintain its unity and dispose of internal issues with one thought in mind above all else, namely united effort for victory.

Work, Fight and Give

When the CIO pledges itself to all-out effort to win the war, it means just that—all-out fighting, all-out production, and all-out giving.

"All-out giving is an old union custom," says Pres. Murray. The generosity of the working people for all humanitarian purposes has always been proverbial.

The giving for which this war calls, giving for war relief, is not only humanitarian in purpose, it is also a great opportunity to demonstrate our solidarity with the other free peoples of the world who have so far borne the brunt of Axis assault, and to aid and comfort our own American fighting men.

The CIO has set up its own Committee for American and Allied Relief. It is aiding the bombed out, homeless children of Britain; the Chinese who have so long and so magnificently resisted the Japanese invaders; and the brave people of the Soviet Union, who have met head-on the full fury of Hitler's assault and have been the first to turn the tide of battle against him. It is also aiding the American troops and our war prisoners.

Many CIO members have already pledged an hour's pay a month, or the equivalent, for war relief. This method of giving has been organized by the unions in most cases, and a number of employers have cooperated in the plan, matching their employes' contribution. This is a systematic method of giving that simplifies matters for the donors and assures a steady flow of money for relief.

Let's not give too little or too late. The need is urgent now. All CIO unions and members should organize at once for all-out giving. Send your contributions to the CIO War Relief Committee and contact it for advice. Its new address is 1407 L. St. NW., Washington, D. C.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE CIO EDITORS' conference, recently held in Washington, was a most unusual gathering in many respects.

Little children are (or were) supposed to be seen but not heard. Labor editors, on the contrary, are constantly heard from but seldom seen. They listen to many speeches but speak little. They attend many conventions, but do not convene themselves.

On this occasion, however, the CIO editors and publicity directors turned the tables. They made news instead of just reporting it, at the first full-dress conference of their kind ever to be held.

Traditionally, labor editors have been treated as if they were voiceless funnels for union policy, experts employed by the labor movement but somehow apart from it. But the CIO has broken this tradition.

The Washington conference was authorized by the executive board and Pres. Murray, so that CIO editors and publicity directors might have their say and make their contribution as a group to the whole movement.

Some 60 men and women met for the conference, all of them credentialed representatives of their respective publications, unions and councils. Nearly every union had an editor there, from all but the most distant parts of the country.

Most of the delegates were newspapermen by profession, though many were from the industries represented by their respective unions. But all of them were primarily labor men and women, with no sense of apartness from the movement on account of their particular skills.

The labor press and pamphleteering are the oldest forms of labor publicity work. But radio, advertising, movie and other types of experience were also well represented, and the discussion covered every phase of the most modern publicity arts.

The war of course dominated all discussions, and a whole day of the conference was devoted entirely to gearing CIO publicity to the war effort.

These sessions revealed an interesting and encouraging fact—namely that, at any rate in the press and publicity field, the basic importance of labor's part in the war effort is widely recognized by government.

Top figures in the governmental set-up gave up much of their Sunday rest to attend the sessions, and to subject themselves to a vigorous cross-fire of questioning and discussion.

General Hershey, head of Selective Service, was there. Director Archibald MacLeish of the Office of Facts and Figures inspired discussion on labor's part in the battle of ideas against the Axis. Director Byron Price of the Office of Censorship dwelt on the relationship of freedom of the press with war requirements.

The armed forces were well represented by Col. A. Robt. Ginsburgh of the War Dept., by Capt. Robt. Henderson of the Navy Dept., and by their aides. The War Production Board had four representatives of its Labor Division present. In addition, a dozen or more leading representatives of other government departments attended.

The conference was not a policy-making body, but it did relate CIO policy to publicity and make significant recommendations for executive board consideration, within the scope of its authority.

In line with CIO policy, the editors and publicity directors voted eager cooperation with the AFL and railroad Brotherhoods, with industry and government, in all publicity efforts that can aid in securing victory in the war.

They met the challenge of the recent anti-labor drive by asserting that labor's publicity must not be defensive in spirit, nor fall into the trap of division and disunity set by Axis agents or tools. On the contrary, the delegates said, labor must meet this attack "by publicizing increasingly its positive stand and its many activities to promote the war effort."

The business-controlled daily press, which has played such a shameful part in creating disunity by its anti-labor attitudes, was urged to "convert itself into a war industry dedicated to the defeat of the Axis." And specific steps were recommended to build a labor press of more frequent appearance and more general circulation.

Radio, newspaper and billboard advertising and many other publicity methods were discussed. The consensus was that every such medium should be used, under proper labor direction, within the limits of the movement's financial ability; but that labor should not become a milk cow for advertising and newspaper interests nor attempt to keep up with millionaire groups that can spend a thousand dollars for such paid publicity to every dollar that labor can afford.

Union Plants Win Navy 'E' Awards

plant is maintaining its high output rate, the Navy adds a star to the pennant. If it's not, the Navy retracts the award.

The "E" award now graces scores of plants and thousands of workers. And the list is well peppered with companies under contract with the CIO.

There's Carnegie-Illinois Steel, at Homestead, Pa., for instance. It works under contract with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee. Bethlehem Steel flies the E pennant at its Bethlehem, Pa., plant, where most employes are members of the SWOC.

TWO IN CAMDEN

RCA Manufacturing Co. at Camden, N. J., making radio equipment for Navy ships, was the first firm to get the award, back on Jan. 29. It's been working under an agreement with the United Electrical, Radio & Marine Workers for years. Camden scored again when the huge New York Shipbuilding Corp., which recently signed a union shop agreement with the CIO Shipbuilders Union, received its "E" last month.

Bell Aircraft, up in Buffalo, makes planes for the Navy's fighting arm. The men who make the planes are members of the United Automobile Workers, and the "E" button snuggles up beside the UAW-CIO pin on their shirts. Big festivities were scheduled for New Kensington, Pa., where last week the big plant of the Aluminum Co. of America got its Navy flag, and several thousand members of the Aluminum Workers of America re-received their pins.

It was almost a city holiday in Toledo when the Doehler Die Casting Co.—where joint management-labor production committees have been functioning for months—was honored by the Navy. The workers, members of the Natl. Assn. of Die Casting Workers, were praised by military officials, the press and the management for their contribution to licking the Axis.

Letter Says UMW Members Deplore Attacks on CIO

WASHINGTON, April 18—President Philip Murray of the CIO this week made public a letter, written in his capacity as Vice-President of the United Mine Workers of America, to the Director of Organization and the Organizing Committee, District 50 UMWA, in reply to a communication addressed to him on April 7 by the Organizing Committee of District 50.

The communication from District 50 complained of an article appearing in the New York Times of March 29, which purported to quote various expressions of opinion by officers of the CIO United Automobile Workers Union in regard to President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America. The District 50 letter called upon President Murray to take action on the matter.

The District 50 letter was signed by John Kmetz, John O'Leary, Martin Wagner, Charles H. Fell, John Mates, Organizing Committee; and Michael F. Widman, Jr., Director of Organization.

The text of President Murray's reply follows in full:

Director of Organization,
Organizing Committee,
District 50, United Mine Workers of America,
United Mine Workers Building,
Washington, D. C.

Gentlemen:

Your communication of April 7, appearing in the newspapers prior to its receipt by me, and a copy of the statement attributed to Brothers Thomas and Reuther, (of the United Automobile Workers) were handed me Friday morning upon my arrival in Washington.

I am aware of the unassailable record of the United Mine Workers of America and its contribution to the organization of the great mass-production industries of the United States of America. As vice-president of that great union, I, together with other representatives, have played my part. There is no one who deplores more than I do inflammatory statements designed to discredit leaders of our unions or cause disunity within the ranks of any of our organizations.

If what you have said is true regarding Brothers Thomas and Reuther, then, of course, it is regrettable. Unfortunately, statements derogatory to the President of the CIO have also been made, evidently designed to disrupt and create confusion within the ranks of the organization. I have no desire to publicize the many statements that have come to me from members of my own organization, the United Mine Workers of America, deploring the attacks which have been made upon the CIO and myself personally. I have never questioned the patriotism of the United Mine Workers of America. As a matter of fact, its record in support of the President of the United States and our country is beyond reproach.

CALLS FOR UNITY

I pray to the good Lord that every one, particularly the officers of my own union, the United Mine Workers of America, will by example show to the nation, and particularly labor, a wholesome desire to establish national unity. When I think of the grim realities of war and the greater need today of a united labor, it vexes me to note the conflict that is raging amongst the elected and appointed officers of our union. I can assure you that there are no manifestations of disunity in the rank and file and I hope to heaven the taxpayers, who keep all of us in office, will clean house, rather than assume the hazard of furthering labor disunity.

I am interested in winning one war, and that is the war against the Axis powers. That has been my attitude for a considerable period of time. In fact, long before the seventh day of December, 1941.

I have referred your communication, together with the report which appeared in the New York Times, to Brother Thomas and Brother Reuther for their information and I have asked them to communicate with you regarding the matter.

Very truly yours,
PHILIP MURRAY.

Workers Nail 'Slowdown' Gossip

Washington, April 18—CIO workers in the Curtiss-Wright plant at Columbus, O., "deeply resent the unfounded charges" of union instigated slow-downs made by poll tax Senator Harry F. Byrd, union officials declared today.

According to a letter of Paul E. Miley, board member of the United Auto Workers, CIO, and a statement by Richard T. Frankensteen, aviation director of the UAW, the Byrd charges were "a vicious lie" that should be investigated at once by the government.

Both men pointed out that the UAW-CIO months ago had demanded that the government operate the Columbus plant in order to insure production of planes. In addition, they said, workers had complained frequently of not having enough work to keep them busy.

ASKS PROBE, APOLOGY

"The UAW-CIO has never complained that hours were too long or that the men were over-worked," Frankensteen said. "In the interest of the war effort, the UAW-CIO demands that the statement made by the Naval inspector be investigated by a Federal agency immediately, and that proper apology to the organization be made.

"The keynote of the union's organizing campaign was increased production," Miley said. "Union records show instance after instance where men complained of lack of tools, of forced delays in getting work, efforts of lead men and foremen to slow production, requests on the part of the supervisory staff to take time off, etc."

Byrd's charges, of course, received wide publicity in the anti-labor press. At time of writing, the CIO officials' statements had not been given a fraction of the space the poll tax Senator received.

Censorship By Press

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 18. (FP)—Good CIO news is no news so far as Publisher Cecil Highland of the anti-labor Clarksburg Exponent-Telegram is concerned.

Recently CIO Organizer Joseph Angelo organized the employes of the city and they won a contract on wages, etc., from the city council. City Manager A. L. Ash refused to enforce the contract so the CIO went to court and got a writ compelling him to do so.

Union members are now enjoying the benefits of the contract, but most of Clarksburg does not know it because Publisher Highland forbade his reporters writing anything about it and refused to print a word.

Support Murray

Columbus, Ohio, April 18.—Reciting past accomplishments which have improved labor's standards and assisted the country's war effort, the Columbus Industrial Union Council today commended CIO President Philip Murray "for the organizational policies he has pursued and the leadership he has given, not only to labor but to the entire nation."

Union Hails Harvester Decision

Although labor members of the panel concurred with the majority decision, they did not agree entirely with the majority opinion written by Dean Wayne L. Morse. Thomas Kennedy said the labor members regarded the wage increases granted as inadequate and disagreed with the language used in rejecting the union's demand for a 12½-cent hourly increase.

RESULT OF UNITY

Officials of the CIO Farm Equipment Workers here attributed the favorable points won in the decision to that fact that the three unions involved—the FEWOC, the CIO United Automobile Workers, and two locals of the AFL, "had submitted all evidence and documents before the War Board jointly."

The CIO and AFL unions have agreed that in plants where either is in a minority, their respective members will join the majority union, whether it be AFL or CIO.

Labor members of the War Labor Board panel which sat on the case were Thomas Kennedy, R. J. Thomas, George Meany and Martin P. Durkin.

'Wage-Freezing Unnecessary,' CIO Says; Asks Price Control

WASHINGTON, Apr. 18—Pointing out that the nation's workers "are most keenly aware of the evils of inflation" because they are the ones "who suffer most," Pres. Philip Murray today made public a CIO statement of policy calling for firm and decisive government action to meet the steadily rising cost of living.

In a four-point program described as the "CIO Victory Program," Murray urged immediate action on these four points:

1. Determination and enforcement of fair retail prices for food, clothing and rent.
2. Immediate rationing to divide available consumer goods evenly among all the people.
3. Adoption of a progressive tax program which will eliminate any "unreasonable" profits resulting from the war, and the defeat of sales tax proposals.
4. Determination of wage rates through the "present machinery of collective bargaining and the National War Labor Board."

WAR IS PRIMARY

Pointing out that American workers wish no action which may hinder the war program, Murray declared:

"The workers believe that the primary problem is to win the war, and all other questions are secondary. The workers believe that the wage policy should be predicated upon those factors which will permit them to exert their maximum energy to out-produce the slave labor the Axis powers and complete an early victory over the Axis powers."

The CIO leader pointed out that organized labor is "unalterably opposed to wage freezing" on the basis that such a proposal is "absolutely unnecessary and profoundly dangerous."

PRICES CONTINUE UP

During the past year, Murray noted, there has been no wage increase in any single basic industry, yet prices have continued to go up.

"Clearly, then, it has not been the cost of wages which has brought about the rising prices and increasing of living," he said. "As a matter of fact, workers have taken wage cuts during the past year in that their real wages have fallen to the extent of the rising cost of living."

A special study of living costs in certain steel towns showed cost of living increase of 15-20 per cent in a year, the statement said.

OPA's FAILURE

"This terrifying situation," it added, "has resulted from the failure of the Office of Price Administration effectively and vigorously to enforce price control of consumer goods and to institute fair and democratic rationing," while at the same time corporations have been allowed, through a weak tax program, to harvest record-breaking profits.

Wage-freezing, the statement pointed out, would keep the workers of the country on a low income level. Instead, the CIO leader urged, the WLB should base its decisions "upon the need of establishing 'fair and equitable wages' in relation to the national program of stabilization of prices."

'Divide and Conquer'

Off the presses of the Government Printing Office there came, a fortnight ago, a great new pamphlet—"Divide and Conquer." Prepared by the Office of Facts and Figures, it warns Americans of Hitler's plans to divide our nation so that the Nazi legions can mop up the pieces.

Most workers are aware of the dangers of such disunity; most workers are aware of the menace of Hitlerism or any other brand of fascism. But we here reprint excerpts from "Divide and Conquer" to remind American labor that it must always be alert to the dangers of the Fifth and Sixth Columns.

"MENTAL confusion, indecisiveness, panic," Hitler once said, "these are our weapons."

The United States is now subject to a total barrage of the Nazi strategy of terror. Hitler thinks Americans are suckers. By the very vastness of his program of lies, he hopes to frighten us into believing that the Nazis are invincible. In carrying out that program he takes it for granted that decent people here—as they have elsewhere—will say: "Such evil cannot be."

But Hitler is wrong. For Americans, reading the story of the Hitler terror, will neither be blinded nor afraid. As free men, they will say to Hitler, "Don't pull any of your tricks on us. We're wise to them."

PRE-INVASION TACTICS

Before Hitler attacks any country, his agents carefully sow seeds of hate and disunity, turning people against their own governments, governments against their allies, class against class.

Before the invasion of Austria, young Nazi hoodlums were sent onto the streets to play schoolboy pranks on the police and make them appear ridiculous in the eyes of passersby.

In the early days of the war, before France was invaded, morale was lowered by professional weepers, clothed in deep mourning and wailing loudly, who wandered into subways and onto buses in Paris spreading the false belief that French casualties were enormous. Mothers received mysterious postcards informing them that their sons, at the front, had either been killed or were deathly ill. Soldiers received anonymous notes saying that their wives or sweethearts were unfaithful and had run off with British soldiers.

Palm readers and crystal gazers in the pay of Hitler gloomily predicted to their clients that in the days to come France would lie prostrate at the feet of Germany. Nazi agents combed the gossip columns of Paris newspapers for items that could be used as blackmail against prominent persons. Armed with scraps of personal dirt, they would force the victim to act as a Hitler agent, and help spread rumors to confuse and demoralize the public.

Rumors of secret weapons spread like wildfire: Hitler had electrical mines, nerve gas, deadly germs that could be dropped over an entire country-side.

Edmond Taylor, in his authoritative and valuable book, The Strategy of Terror, has said that these rumors, planted by Hitler agents, were often passed on during casual conversations. "I heard today," a young Frenchman whispered to a group of friends at a sidewalk cafe, "that Hitler has a secret weapon that will destroy Paris in two minutes. This machine is so terrible that even Hitler is afraid to use it."

By nightfall each of his friends had told several other friends, and the story soon blanketed Paris.

THE POISON TAKES HOLD

These rumors and thousands like them gradually accomplished their purpose. Circulated day after day, worming their way into the minds of Frenchmen, Norwegians, Danes, Belgians, Austrians, Dutch, Czechs and Poles, they created a feeling of fear and frustration, a loathing of the war, and a certainty of defeat. Having weakened the resistance of his enemies, Hitler was quick to find outlets for their discontent.

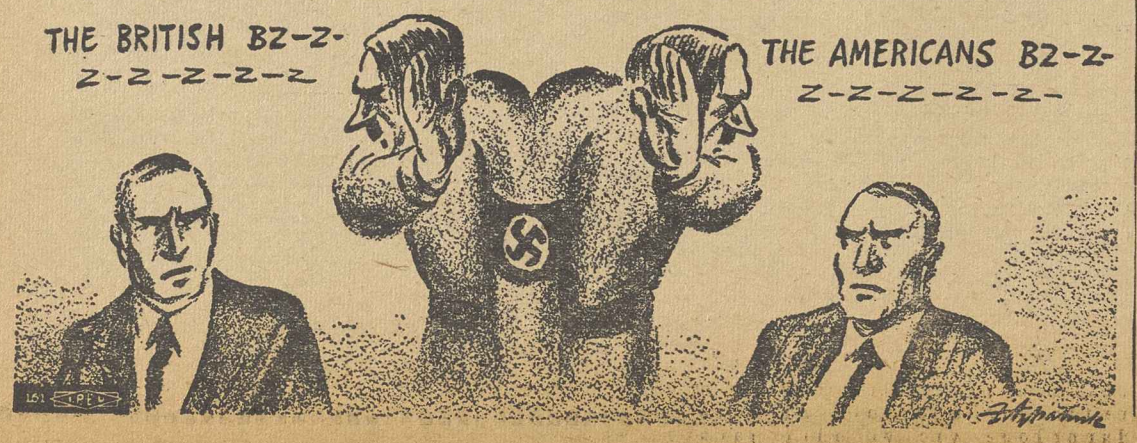
For most evil, the Jews were to blame. Business is bad? Labor is to blame. Wages are low? Capital is to blame. War is hell? The British are to blame.

Everybody was to blame except Hitler, the common enemy who would crush them all.

National unity was destroyed by setting group against group. In Belgium, Nazis told the French-speaking Walloons that King Leopold was pro-German and was preparing to sell out Belgium to the Nazis; they told the Flemish that King Leopold had a secret treaty with the Allies and was ready to declare war on Germany.

WHAT HITLER WANTS US TO BELIEVE

To destroy our national unity, create unrest in all groups of the population, and deflect us from our major purpose—the defeat of the Axis—Hitler is trying to set capital against labor, white against Negro, Catholic against Protestant, Christian against Jew. He knows that prejudice, in any form, plays his game. Controlling the sources of news in every occupied country, and often in neutral nations, he releases only such news as he wants us to read. He will try to play upon our fears, raise our hopes, confuse and bewilder us. Through statements from "authoritative sources" he will present false and misleading pictures, often leading us to believe that he is weak when he is strong, napping when he is preparing to spring.



So All May Share:

Sugar Rationing Plan Nearly Ready; Sign Up May 4-7

WASHINGTON, April 18—Every one of America's 132,000,000 consumers—even new-born babies—will be registered for the first food rationing program ever attempted in the United States on May 4, 5, 6 and 7.

After that time no one—the housewife, the grocer, the baker, or the candymaker—will get a grain of sugar without going through the rationing procedure set up by the Office of Price Administration.

After that time, also, everyone with a Ration Book will be able to get some sugar—his ration. There will be no more runs on shops—no more first-come-first-served selling, no privileges for the storekeeper's "good friends."

The sugar shortage that made rationing necessary will continue, it is true; but the available supply will be divided equally and fairly among all consumers.

EVERYONE SHARES

To make this "share and share alike" plan work efficiently, the Office of Price Administration has solicited the cooperation of every patriotic American.

The OPA, performing its duty as Uncle Sam's rationing agent, has proceeded on the theory that consumers will gladly suffer whatever "bother" is necessary, provided the inconveniences, the sacrifices even, will help the United States win the war and provided, above all, that the system makes for democratic equality and fairness.

Before the war is over other foods may have to be rationed, but the rationing of sugar now is necessary for two reasons; first, our supply of raw sugar is drastically curtailed, and, second, sugar is a vital war material.

USED BY ARMY

Government sugar statisticians predict our supply of sugar may shrink from close to 8,000,000 tons in 1941 to about 6,300,000 tons this year.

But there is more to our sugar shortage than a shrinkage of supply. Modern war takes sugar, just as it takes rubber. Sugar cane makes molasses. Molasses makes industrial alcohol. Industrial alcohol is an important ingredient in making smokeless powder. Smokeless powder is used in gun shells and bombs.

A big gun on a warship burns up the equivalent of 2,700 pounds of sugar every time it is fired. This is 25 times the annual consumption of the average American including his consumption of sugar in the form of soft drinks, pastry, canned goods, chocolate, etc.

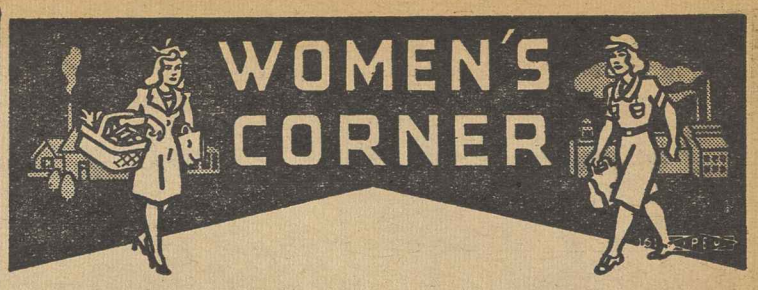
Rationing is no simple matter. One hundred and fifty million War Ration Books had to be printed and sent on their way to the registration centers. Another 150,000,000 forms for registration had to be printed and distributed. To handle the biggest registration ever attempted in this country, a large corps of registrars had to be organized.

HOW TO REGISTER

How will consumers register? Simply by going to the elementary school nearest his home, and appearing before a registrar. The teacher serving in this capacity will fill out a form, which will record the applicant's name, address, the number in his family, and the amount of sugar, if any, he has on hand. Only one member of a family should go to the register and to obtain War Ration Books for all.

The interview will take about five minutes. The War Ration Books to which the applicant is entitled will then be handed over. That will be all.

From that time on, the Ration Book will be essential to every purchase of sugar. It will contain 28 stamps. Each can be exchanged for one ration of sugar.



Murray Names Three Leaders To Auxiliaries Committee

By ELEANOR FOWLER

FORMATION of a national CIO Auxiliaries Committee was announced this week by President Philip Murray in a letter to all affiliated organizations.

Members of the committee are CIO Sec. James B. Carey; R. J. Thomas, head of the United Automobile Workers; and Reid Robinson, president of the International Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers. Both Thomas and Robinson are vice-presidents of the CIO.

Purpose of the new committee is to carry out the resolution on auxiliaries adopted at the CIO convention by establishing a liason between the CIO and the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries.

"The women in the homes of organized labor have a significant contribution to make to the strength and continued growth of the CIO," President Murray's letter says. "The war, with its demand for the participation of women on all fronts, increases the value of women's auxiliaries to your organization."

The letter also calls the attention of each CIO official to the program of the Auxiliary Congress included in the proceedings of the Detroit Auxiliary Conference, which President Murray said "warrants every encouragement and support from the unions of the CIO."

CIO Tax Program

Vigorous support for the tax program of the CIO was voiced by Mrs. Julia Katz, National Director of the CIO Auxiliaries, in testimony given before the Ways and Means Committee of the House.

Mrs. Katz emphasized opposition of the auxiliaries to a sales tax which would place the tax burden on those least able to bear it. "A tax on the purchasing power of American families, regardless of income, is not in the interests of the war," Mrs. Katz said.

"Incomes of millions of American families are not now adequate for buying the kind of life which our democracy owes to its people, and the energetic effort which the people owe to our democracy at war," she continued.

"Through their unions, our husbands have pledged to voluntarily give up part of their overtime pay to the government. We are proud of such patriotic sacrifice, but the additional wage cut which a sales tax means, may well place even minimum living standards beyond the reach of a large part of our population."

"There are other sources for securing federal revenue where the taxation would be far more just and much less disasterous to the living standards of the people and to the Victory program of the Nation.

Effective excess profits taxes; increased individual income taxes—without lowered exemptions; increased rates and lowered exemptions on estate and gift taxes; excise taxes on certain luxury goods; and the closing of loopholes in individual and corporate income taxes must be enacted before the necessities of life are taxed."

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

The Steel Workers' Organizing Committee had a Production-for-Victory meeting in Kansas City attended by delegates from every lodge in Kansas City-St. Louis area. It was very enthusiastic and demonstrated that the workers are alert to their responsibilities and determined to serve their union and country.

I had the pleasure of addressing the meeting on Sunday, April 12th. I followed it up by visiting the St. Louis area, where I found everyone on their toes and the sentiment for CIO running high. Monday night, I addressed a banquet given in honor of a rugged old character of the UAW-CIO, Norman Smith. The affair was sponsored by the Ford local of St. Louis.

I found a healthy spirit of cooperation prevailing in Chicago among all our affiliated organizations. The URW & DSEA has apparently reached an impasse in negotiations with the firm of Montgomery-Ward, which has adopted a definite anti-union attitude. The Department of Conciliation has been called in to attempt to settle the matters at issue.

Officers and members are alert to the dangers of those poll-tax Congressmen who seek to divide the nation by shackling labor. They must be heard from when these anti-labor bills come up in Congress. If these Congressmen had the same faith in the workers as the workers have in the nation, they would cease trying to stab labor in the back and would join with them in the all-out effort for victory.

The Aviation Division, UAW-CIO, reports winning the election recently held at the Curtiss-Wright plant in Columbus with a vote of 1557 for CIO as against 382 for AFL.

Walter Harris, director of the United Shoe Workers Organizing drive reports a victory at the Cape Girardeau plant with the following vote: CIO, 935; against, 445.

CIO Regional Director A. J. Federoff reports two elections recently won; (1) the Schenley Distillery with a vote of 28 for the CIO, none for the AFL. (2) Armstrong Cork Company voted for CIO by 277 as against 52 for no union. Both these cases have been a two-year problem, finally culminating in a victory for CIO.

Overtime Wages

Paul R. Christopher reports Natl. Labor Relations Board settlement of differences between Sequatchie Handle Works in Sequatchie, Tenn., providing back pay for workers, collective bargaining and agreement whereby all earnings from time and a half and double time will be "paid directly to the Treasury of the United States."

About 70 per cent of the mill's output is used in industries engaged in war production and the agreement provides payment of overtime earnings to the government "to help the employer to pay for war materials produced by union members."

This agreement for return of overtime to the U. S. Treasury is the first of its kind reached in the South. Brother Christopher also reports a victory in behalf of District 50, United Mine Workers of America at the Desoto Paint Company by a vote of 36 to 24.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers won the right to represent employes of the metal department of the Lilley-Ames Corp. Columbus, Ohio, by a vote in behalf of CIO at an election held recently.

17th Victory

The Steel Workers Organizing Committee reports its 17th straight victory in Bethlehem Steel, when the union took an election at Bethlehem's Wilmington, Del. plant.

According to Regional Director E. D. Hodson, whose office aided in organizing the plant, the vote was 188 for SWOC, 61 for an independent and 10 for no union.

FDR Gets Auto Union 'Equal Sacrifice' Plan

WASHINGTON, Apr. 18—National officers of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, today conferred with President Roosevelt and Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, on elements of the "Victory Through Equality of Sacrifice" program adopted by a special national conference of the union in Detroit last week.

R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW-CIO, said that both the President and Mr. Nelson had promised earnest consideration of the "Equality of Sacrifice" program. The union delegation which met with the President and Mr. Nelson was composed of Thomas, George F. Addes, secretary-treasurer, and Richard T. Frankensteen, Richard T. Leonard, Richard E. Reisinger and Walter P. Reuther, members of the union's defense employment committee.

WILL STUDY IDEAS

"The President," Thomas said at the White House after the conference, "said he would give our proposal earnest consideration."

"We informed him that we feel our 'Equality of Sacrifice' program is of the utmost importance because labor has come to feel that it is surrendering many of its rights without corresponding contributions being exacted from the employers and owners of industry.

"We feel that winning the war is the prime consideration of all of us, but that thus far the major burden of the war effort has fallen on labor.

"Current attacks of labor would demand that this inequitable condition be extended. We told the President we felt that was the wrong way to build labor morale, and the wrong way to mobilize the nation for a total war effort."

CONFER WITH NELSON

Conferring with Nelson, the UAW-CIO leaders stressed three points: Creation of a labor production division in the War Labor Board; the refusal of man employers in national defense to agree to setting up of joint labor-management production committees in the plant; and the need for creating greater mobility of labor in shifting from non-defense to defense work.

Voice Support For CIO Leader

Aberdeen, Wash., April 18.—Eight thousand members of the Intl. Woodworkers of America, acting through delegates to their district conference here, have pledged "to support, with unswerving loyalty" the policies of CIO President Philip Murray.

The pledge also included a tribute to "the splendid leadership President Murray has given to the CIO in the past," and promised to support him against anyone "who may attempt to shackle labor or destroy the structure of the CIO."

Create Manpower Board, Jersey CIO Tells U. S.

NEWARK, N. J., April 18—Meeting at an enthusiastic, single-minded special war production convention, representatives of Jersey's 270,000 CIO members last week adopted a program for maximum output to win the war against the Axis. Some 525 delegates were present at the special emergency confab.

SETTING: Here's the speakers' stand at the New Jersey CIO convention, with photos of Pres. Roosevelt and Pres. Murray. Victory was theme of the convention and of the meeting hall itself.

The tone of the meeting was set early in the day when Alexander Barkan, formerly an official of the Textile Workers Union and now a Navy apprentice seaman, told the convention:

"There are two things for us to remember. The first thing is this: the winning of this struggle for democracy transcends everything else in importance. We have got to keep that fact before us at all times. The second thing is that this struggle will be won and lost in the factories of our country."

Barkan, in mentioning the leave given him by the Navy, said that it was a source of satisfaction to know that "the very fact that we have been granted leave to be with you, shows that the armed forces and services realize the importance of production."

11-POINT PROGRAM

Principal action of the convention was the adoption of an 11-point man and machine power ration plan, calling for establishment of a National Manpower Board to unify all labor supply and training agencies throughout the country under federal control.

Discussing the state CIO recommendation, Pres. Irving Abramson pointed out that "democratic machinery must be set up for the conscription of labor; otherwise, workers will be transferred to and from jobs like herds of cattle.

"Labor must be given a voice in the creation of this machinery and its administration so that mobilization of workers can be most effective with the smallest amount of hardship," he said.

VOICE FOR LABOR

The state CIO recommendations called for labor representation on the manpower boards, to be set up both nationally and in the various regions, and suggested that control over machine power rationing also be lodged in the boards.

Underlying all the recommendations was the demand, frequently expressed, for all-out production and for elimination of any barriers to full output.

Also asked by the convention were the establishment of a statewide production committee and of a state victory committee with representatives from CIO and AFL. Other resolutions protested allotment of more funds to the Dies committee, and urged the national CIO to establish working relations with the Anglo-Soviet Trade Union Commission.

John Brophy, CIO director of industrial union councils, complimented the state labor group for its recent survey of idle plant capcity and expressed hope that "we can have much more of this sort of realistic appraisal of economic conditions by CIO organizations."

He stressed the need for basic economic planning so that we may never "return to pre-war and pre-depression conditions," and urged continued support for the Murray Industry Council Plan as a move to bring democracy into American industry.

Community Action:

Conversion Problem One For Councils

By JOHN BROPHY

Director of Industrial Union Councils

The government's recognition, in announcing the policy of setting up union-management plant production committees, that organized labor has an important contribution to make in production techniques is a significant development. It is but a good beginning, however, for modern production can not be understood in the perspective of a single manufacturing plant, or even the plants of one corporation.

The CIO is cooperating with the War Production Board on the plant committee plan. It will do a good job. It will not be content, however, to rest upon that contribution. Labor's real work in this field must be conceived of in terms of industrial planning on all industry-wide and community-wide scale.

As I pointed out recently in this column, one form which labor's contribution to production has taken in terms of a whole region is exemplified by the study made by the New Jersey State Industrial Union Council of the extent of idle plant time in defense industry in northern New Jersey.

VALUABLE STUDIES

Similar studies of other industrial problems can well be undertaken in all our war production centers. They should take up, for example, questions of the conversion of plants from peace-time to war-time production, and related problems of the subcontracting and farming out of defense orders. This process of conversion and subcontracting is proceeding far too slowly in many places.

Councils can make arrangements to take both the labor and the management representatives on joint plant production committees to local offices of the Defense Contract Service of the War Production Board and try to get war business for plants which do not have it. They can also give publicity to situations where employers hold on to peace-time business because they think it is more profitable, or where government officials refuse to give proper assistance.

IDLE MACHINERY

There is the problem of getting full use out of all available machines. Our organizations are pasting stickers on idle machines which read, "This machine works for Hitler." Employers in some industries have formed pools of idle machines which are available to other employers.

Councils and their production committees can gather information about such machines and equipment and serve as community-wide clearing houses which will help to prevent equipment standing idle in one plant when it is needed in another.

There is also, of course, the vitally important matter of labor supply and training. Organized labor is keenly interested in this question, both in its bearing on war production and in relation to questions of collective bargaining. It is the official policy of the CIO that there must be full labor representation on all government agencies, national and local, concerned with matters of labor supply.

Councils should keep closely in touch with these issues, watching the operations of the local offices of the United States Employment Service and other government bureaus involved, to make sure that the interests of all labor organizations and their members in the community are protected.

It is the responsibility of city and county industrial union councils to help affiliated locals cooperate with one another in solving problems which arise for their members in connection with all these matters of conversion, subcontracting, utilization of men and machines, full-time operations, and general working and living conditions. State councils should keep in touch with this work and help it along.

Murray Backs Blood Donor Program

Washington, April 18—CIO President Philip Murray today endorsed the blood donor campaign of the American Red Cross and urged all CIO members to support it.

Text of Murray's statement:

"Organized labor of America is doing everything in its power to see that the men in the armed forces shall have the necessary arms and supplies in this fight against Fascism.

"Pearl Harbor has shown us that blood plasma, immediately available at the scene of attack by the enemy, is the means of saving hundreds of lives of our soldiers and sailors.

"To the worker at home the donation of a pint of blood means little sacrifice. To the men wounded in war's conflicts, it may mean life or death. Let every member of the Congress of Industrial Organizations who can do so make his contribution to the blood plasma bank of the American Red Cross. This is the least we can do."

Workers Plan Shoe Drives

Portsmouth, Ohio, April 18—Close to 100 delegates assembled here April 12, at the Third Regional Conference of the United Shoe Workers of America, representing about 8,000 shoe workers in the Ohio Valley.

In addition to the reports submitted by each local through its local officers, the conference heard a report by National Representative George Martin and a report on the national situation and a review of the conference work will be made by USWA President Frank R. McGrath.

Southern Steel Parley Pledges More War Output; Sets Organizing Goals

FAIRFIELD, Ala., Apr. 18—Leaders of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in the southeastern area met here last week-end, and heard pledges that the union would continue its organizing activities in order that southern steel workers may make a maximum contribution to the war effort.

Reports by Regional Director William Mitch and District Director Noel Beddow cited the gains won by the steel union throughout the South during the past year.

DEPENDS ON OUTPUT

In his speech to the delegates—who came from Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia and Louisiana—Mitch warned that no victory for America's armed forces are possible without unlimited production of steel and munitions. He attacked legislators who forget the need of national unity and seek to weaken labor unions throughout the country.

Beddow praised the leadership of CIO and expressed the belief that their activities would bring success to labor in its war for production.

CITES SWOC GAINS

National Secretary-Treasurer David MacDonald of the SWOC, a guest of honor at the meeting, revealed the union's present membership as 648,000, and predicted that it would go steadily upward. He said organizing activities in the South will be intensified during coming months, and predicted an overwhelming victory for SWOC in coming elections at U. S. Steel.

Other speakers at the meeting included Mayor C. N. Gilley of Fairfield, President W. H. Crawford of the Birmingham CIO council, Rev. Father T. L. Flynn, Mrs. Louis McLaren of the Southern Summer School for Workers, and Bishop Shaw of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church.

10 Firms Ordered To Stop Race Bias Or Lose Contracts

WASHINGTON, April 18—Ten big firms, all of them working on war orders, were told to stop discriminating against any Negro and Jewish job applicants in the most sweeping order issued to date by the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices.

The order directs the 10 companies, located in Chicago and Milwaukee, to submit monthly reports describing workers newly hired and showing the number of Negro workers included and the jobs to which they are assigned.

The companies were accused in a two-day hearing held by the committee of having refused jobs to Negroes and Jews, of having told employment agencies to send only whites and Gentiles, and of having specified "gentile" or "Protestant" or "white" in ads placed in newspapers. The charges were denied by the 10 firms, but evidence at the hearings substantiated them.

BROPHY ON GROUP

The Fair Employment Committee, set up by President Roosevelt some months ago, has representation from organized labor, with John Brophy, director of Industrial Union Councils, representing Pres. Murray and the CIO.

The companies involved are: Stewart-Warner Corp., Buick Aviation of Melrose, Ill., Bearse Mfg. Co., Simpson Mfg. Co., Nordberg Mfg. Co., A. O. Smith Co., Heil Co., Allis-Chalmers Corp. and the Harnischfeger Co.

"The findings and directions will give the committee a continuing jurisdiction over the employment practices of these industries, which hold contracts for war implements and material, as each concern has been asked to file reports with the committee, showing the extent to which steps have been taken to bring the company's employment policies and practices into line with the national policy," Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, chairman of the committee explained.

Pact Bars Race Bias

Jeffersonville, Ind., April 18 (FP)—A clause forbidding discrimination against any employe or prospective employe because of race or color was written into the new contract between the National Maritime Union (CIO) and the Jeffersonville Boat & Machine Co.

The contract, which raises wages and provides other benefits, covers 600 workers who are building submarine chasers for the U.S. Navy in addition to regular repair work on river boats and barges.

Union Forces Firing of 5 Nazi Stooges

Newark, N.J., April 18. (FP)—Steady pressure on the FBI by Local 167, Utility Workers Organizing Committee (CIO) has resulted in the firing of five admitted Nazi sympathizers by the Public Service Corp., which supplies power and gas to many war plants.

The discharged men, four of whom were bosses, are:

Herman von Busch, in complete charge of the gas plant's night shift and former state secretary-treasurer of the German-American Bund.

Wilhelm Koehne, chief still operator in the gas plant, who made a practice of praising Hitler and boasted of being a Bundsman.

George Haag, chief purification operator, who constantly heiled a Hitler picture which he kept at his bench.

Fritz Kunze, general foreman, who was discharged as a dangerous enemy alien in the last war and who boasted of the German army's strength.

'Stop Tory War, Let Labor Fight Axis'---Carey

Schenectady, N. Y., Arril 18—American labor wants to fight only one war at a time—and that one with Hitler and the Japs—CIO Secretary James B. Carey told the Empire State Town Meeting of the Air. His speech was a bristling attack on tory foes of labor and a demand that anti-labor legislation be stuffed down the poll-taxers' throats.

"Labor wants to convert, build, ration, work, produce," Carey said. "Labor wants to win this war speedily."

But, he pointed out, American workers are hampered on their jobs as long as their organizations must beat off constant attacks from reactionary sources.

"Labor must be on the alert against rearguard attacks," he declared. "Labor must devote half of its mind to the protection of its long-established and hard-won rights against repressive legislation; labor must devote half of its time and energy to countering false propaganda and preventing a reactionary blitzkrieg."

Hartford City Council Raps Tory Bills

Hartford, Conn., April 18—Labor joined hands across the aldermanic table on April 14 and helped place the Hartford Board of Aldermen on record unanimously against any Congressional legislation which endangers the 40-hour week.

Introducer of the resolution was Alderman Frank M. Heavey, leader of the AFL International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers in Hartford.

Giving full support to the Heavey resolution was Alderman Thomas Keough, member of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, Colt Local 270.

Union Leaders Present Plan For War Economy

WASHINGTON, April 25—Three far-reaching actions marked the meeting of the executive officers of the CIO here this week. These were:

An open letter to President Roosevelt outlining an affirmative program to gear the country's economy to war, including retail price fixing, rationing of consumers' goods, taxation on excess war profits and no sales taxes, and leaving wages and other union conditions to collective bargaining.

Establishment of three new standing CIO committees, to deal with problems of price fixing and rationing, taxation and manpower mobilization, plus appointment of a new CIO legislative representative, Nathan Cowan of the SWOC.

A resolution and covering letters to the United Mine Workers of America, overruling the claim that the CIO owes a money debt to the UMWA, and reaffirming deep gratitude for the contribution the Mine Workers have made to building CIO.

British Labor Praises CIO Relief Drive

Washington, Apr. 25—A spokesman for British labor today expressed gratitude for the work of the CIO Natl. War Relief Committee and hailed the common cause in which British and American workers are allied.

In a telegram to Irving Abramson, head of the CIO committee, Frank Wolstencroft, chairman of the British Trades Union Congress, declared that "the strong bond of trade unionism is proving its worth as a medium for unifying the workers' efforts in every section of the war front . . .

"We rejoice in the knowledge that these defenders of the common cause are animated by the same aims and as firm a resolve as ourselves. On this we base our confidence in final victory over the evil forces arrayed against us."

BIG CONTRIBUTION

Reciting the tremendous contributions of Britain's workers to its country's war effort, Wolstencroft concluded:

"Our people, whether engaged in the armed forces, civil defense services or on the tremendous tasks imposed on industry, are more conscious than ever of the solidarity which has been their prime asset."

Pegler's Arizona Heaven: It Sounds Like Hades!

Douglas, Ariz., Apr. 25 — Westbrook Pegler described his idea of heaven this week—and it's a vertitable hell on earth.

The Scripps-Howard columnist wrote a few lyrical pieces about Ajo, a company town dominated by the rich, powerful Phelps-Dodge copper interests. He praised its neatness, its remoteness and its "ideal" government, in which the town bosses aren't elected by the people. They report not to God but to the management of the company.

It sounds like an ideal town for Westbrook Pegler, but most workers regard it differently, according to Orville Larson, international representative of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers.

100% CONTROLLED

Here's his description of Ajo:

"Ajo is completely company-dominated, the company owning almost the entire town, including hotel, store, homes of the employes, etc.

"A strict watch is maintained on all strangers who come into Ajo to be sure they do not bring the wrong kind of unionism into the citadel of Phelps-Dodge. No meetings are ever held in this community unless Phelps-Dodge know what they are for . . .

"Phelps-Dodge rules the southwestern corner of the state like feudal barons."

Larson charged that Pegler is always anxious to defend the powerful Phelps-Dodge copper interests. Last year, when the U. S. Supreme Court ordered reinstatement of striking CIO workers at the Bisbee mine, the columnist wrote a dissenting opinion smearing the men as communists.

The Old Giveth Way

Rockwood, Tenn., Apr. 25 (FP)—Down the main street here, where union men once were slugged and kidnaped, 500 CIO members paraded and sang union songs in the first War Victory celebration in Tennessee.

Negro and white joined to stage a parade and fish fry. Local 579, CIO Mine Mill and Smelter Workers, which won a labor board election here 323 to 1, sponsored the affair.

"The unity of the colored and white people in Rockwood is a grim warning to Hitler. Labor has abolished slavery and won't be chained and fettered again," said the main resolution adopted at the rally.

NAM Beats Drum AgainstLabor;Echoes Knock 'Em for a Loop

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, April 25.—The Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, which bought several thousand dollars worth of advertising space last Monday to launch a new anti-labor campaign, was reeling at week's end like Donald Duck in the final scenes of a silly symphony.

The NAM full-page ads took the position that labor's demands for union security were, for reasons best known to the reactionary businessmen, imperilling the nation's war effort. The employers' organization lashed out at CIO, AFL and the War Labor Board, which has so far refused to bow down to the anti-labor crusade of big business.

CIO, AFL REPLY

CIO Pres. Murray and AFL Pres. Green met the NAM charges with a joint statement accusing the outfit of "waging a private war against organized labor . . . . regardless of the effect upon the real war now in progress which threatens the lives and freedoms of all Americans." WLB backed up the unions' statement.

The two labor leaders asserted that the NAM officialdom "speaks for only a minority of American employers and does not express the views of American business as a whole." And they reminded the NAM that employer representatives at the labor-industry-government conference shortly after Pearl Harbor had agreed that the question of union security should come within the scope of the War Labor Board.

He denied that he had agreed that the union security issue was a proper subject for consideration by the WLB. Witherow was one of the industry spokesmen at the December labor-relations meeting, which had been called by President Roosevelt.

ROUND THREE

In a second joint statement, Green and Murray quoted the President's letter to the conferees, which stated that "I am happy to accept your general points of agreement . . . ." Among those points was one giving the WLB jurisdiction over "all disputes".

"Mr. Witherow was there," Green and Murray commented. "He well understood that the covenant proposed by the President plainly provided that all disputes, including those involving union security, were to be handled by the War Labor Board . . . .

"Under the circumstances, we are forced to conclude that Mr. Witherow, by denying he was a party to such an agreement and by advocating at this time the freezing of the open shop by law, has broken faith with the President of the United States."

WLB'S STATEMENT

Witherow squirmed a little more when the War Labor Board—including its four employer representatives — upheld the CIO-AFL principle that union security is a matter for the Board to discuss and decide. The WLB statement was understood to have followed long conferences among the Board members, during which the labor and public representatives won over the employer spokesmen to their views.

The NAM advertisement made up in noise what it lacked in honesty. It pictured labor's demands for protection against union-baiting employers as practically the only obstacle to Hitler's surrender the day after tomorrow.

The Murray-Green rejoinder charged that the NAM's proposal for legislation to freeze the open shop wouldn't have "the ghost of a chance in normal times" and asserted that "the NAM is brazenly trying to take advantage of the war to secure special protection that it could not get in peace time for a few selfish recalcitrant employers who hate unions more than they hate Hitler . . . .

"Organized Labor unites in condemning this narrow, partisan and unAmerican policy.

"Organized labor unites in great majority of decent, honorable, patriotic employers of America to repudiate the false leadership of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers."

U.S. Labor Unites On Billion-a-Month War Bond Drive

WASHINGTON, April 25—Representatives of more than 11,250,000 organized workers pledged to the Treasury Department in a nationwide broadcast with Secretary Morgenthau and leaders of industry on April 23 that their members would do all within their power to achieve and better the 10 per cent of payroll quota figure set for the nation in the billion-dollar-a-month War Savings Bond Campaign.

Speaking on behalf of labor on this historic war-time broadcast were CIO Pres. Murray; Thomas C. Cashen, chairmen of the Railroad Labor Executives Association; and William Green, AFL president.

In thousands of factories, mines and stores, union workers have been cooperating with management for many months in establishing Payroll Savings Plans for the regular setting aside of Bond dollars every payday.

It is labor's immeditae goal, labor's three spokesmen declared, to greatly increase Bond purchases, so that 10 per cent of every company payroll in America will be going into War Savings Bonds.

SET HIGH GOALS

Pres. Murray announced that the members of his organization did not set themselves a goal of only 10 percent.

"Those of our workers who have a high level of earnings have set themselves higher goals," he said. "We feel that the voluntary nature of the present program is best designed to build the enthusiastic support for both the War Savings program and the war effort as a whole.

Organized labor is doing its share to set the Bond pace for the whole community, Murray declared, and he urged that labor "be given a greater voice in the participation and administration" of the Payroll Savings Plans.

The fullest participation of every worker who can afford the purchase of bonds can only be secured through Payroll Savings Plans "administered by a joint committee consisting of representatives of management and of the organization representing the employes," he said.

Omission

Washington, April 25 — W. P. Witherow, NAM head, made a significant departure from the written text of his speech when he broadcast on the Treasury bond program along with labor and government officials.

Witherow's speech, as released to the press, said:

"It is our responsibility to cooperate with our employe. and their labor representatives by establishing a payroll savings program."

Witherow omitted the words "and their labor representatives."

Observers thought it typical of NAM's anti-union bias.

FDR Gets Auto Union 'Equality' Plan

Washington, Apr. 25 — National officers of the CIO United Automobile Workers conferred this week with President Roosevelt and Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, on the "Victory Through Equality of Sacrifice" program adopted by a special national conference of the union in Detroit last week.

R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW-CIO, said that both the President and Mr. Nelson had promised earnest consideration of the "Equality of Sacrifice" program. The union delegation which met with the President and Mr. Nelson was composed of Thomas and George F. Addes, secretary-treasurer, Richard T. Frankensteen, Richard T. Leonard, Richard E. Reisinger and Walter P. Reuther, members of the union's defense committee.

WILL PONDER PLAN

"The President," Thomas declared at the White House after the conference, "said he would give our proposals earnest consideration.

"We informed him that we feel our 'Equality of Sacrifice' program is of the utmost importance because labor has come to feel that it is surrendering many of its rights without corresponding contributions being exacted from the employers and owners of industry. We feel that winning the war is the prime consideration of all of us, but that thus far the major burden of the war effort has fallen on labor.

"Current attacks on labor demand that this inequitable condition be ended."

The UAW-CIO plan, drawn up and approved at a recent special conference, pledges the workers to take all overtime pay in non-negotiable war bonds provided the government institutes a sweeping program of limiting profits, instituting an equitable tax program, rationing consumer goods and fixing rigid price ceilings on retail goods.

Seamen Ask Action

New York, April 25—The way to end the "atrocity campaign" now being waged by Axis subs against the American merchant marine seamen is to open a western front immediately, Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, said here in a letter to Navy Secretary Knox and War Secretary Stimson.

'Vacations O.K. If Output Is Kept at Par'—Nelson

Washington, Apr. 25—America's industrial workers should get their summer vacations if it's all possible without cutting production, the War Production Board indicated today.

Acting on numerous queries, WPB Chairman Donald Nelson said that ingenuity in planning should make it possible for workers to get their vacations without hurting the war output schedule. But he warned against vacations where they will interfere with production.

"Under no circumstances can the desire or need for vacations be permitted to excuse any shutdown of any department of any war production plant," the WPB chieftain declared.

Nelson said:

"Experience here and abroad is indicating that the workers, even when stimulated by the urgency of the Allied war situation, cannot work long hours and maintain peak output indefinitely. We know that he benefits in peace-time from an annual vacation.

"After the extensive overtime and the added emotional strain of the war effort, we can be sure some rest period this year is going to prove doubly effective in the restoration of his energy and determination.

PLANNING NECESSARY

"In planning the vacation program in 1942, it is particularly necessary in each plant that American industry show its ingenuity in securing the vacation benefits without paying a counterbalancing cost in productive hours lost."

CIO Officers Adopt New Programs To Build Workers' Morale For War

Murray Names Three New Committees

Washington, April 25.—Three new standing committees to deal with basic sections of the CIO victory program were set up at the meeting of the executive officers here this week.

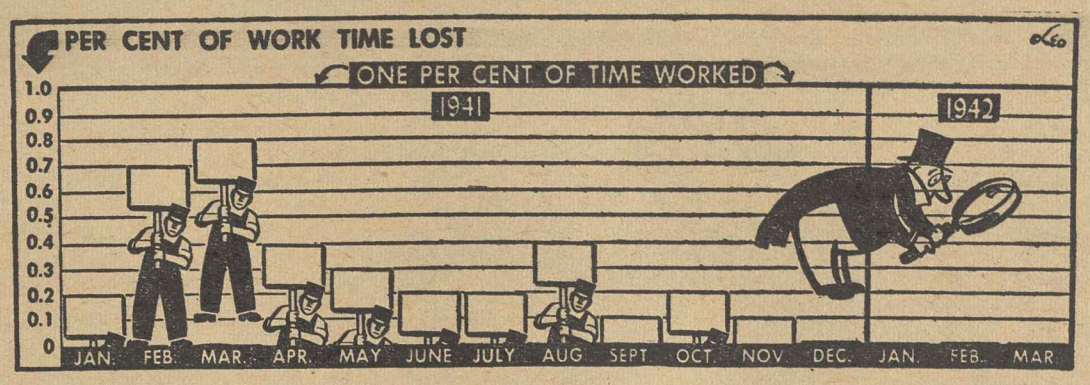
The officers also ratified appointment of Nathan Cowan, former sub-regional director of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, as CIO Legislative Representative, to work with Eugene Cotton of the Legal Dept.

SET FUNCTIONS

The three committees will handle problems of price control and rationing, taxation and manpower mobilization and the new labor production division of the War Production Board. Their function will be to work out methods of applying the CIO program, as outlined in an open letter to President Roosevelt and in other CIO statements and actions.

Vice-Presidents Joseph Curran, S. H. Dalrymple and Emil Rieve were assigned to the price control and rationing committee, to work with CIO Economic Director Ralph Hetzel. The taxation committee consists of Vice-Presidents Reid Robinson and Frank Rosenblum, and the manpower mobilization committee of Vice-President R. J. Thomas, Secretary James B. Carey and General Counsel Lee Pressman.

The action was taken as a means of relieving President Murray of the tremendous pressure involved in attempts to cover these fronts of the war effort.



TRUTH FOR TORIES: "All through the nation, not a strike was in sight"—that's the message of this chart, reprinted from the liberal New York newspaper PM. Since Pearl Harbor, American labor has given up the right to strike; but foes of the workers pretend they don't know about it.

Urge FDR Aid Nation's Consumers

Washington, April 25. — CIO took major strides toward gearing the country's resources and uniting the nation for war against Hitler at the meeting of executive officers held with President Murray this week. These included:

An affirmative program to strengthen the health and efficiency of workers for all-our war production, presented to President Roosevelt and calling for retail price control, rationing, taxing of war profits and avoidance of sales taxes, and an end to attempts to freeze wages and other union conditions "as a blow to morale and national unity and consequently, a cut in war production."

Establishment of three standing CIO committees to cover questions of price control and rationing, taxation and manpower mobilization, and appointment of a new CIO legislative representative to work out of the national office.

A resolution to the United Mine Workers, declaring that the "deep debt" the CIO owes to the UMWA "cannot be measured in dollars" and renewing the CIO's feeling of gratitude for all the UMWA has done in building CIO, together with a plea for unity "to assure victory for our nation in its present war of survival."

ANSWER NAM

At the same time, the CIO took action on other fronts to advance the war effort and to protect unions in war production, by smacking down the Natl. Association of Manufacturers on its claim that unions are hampering the war and by protesting passage of three bills designed to hamstring the labor movement.

The open letter to President Roosevelt, after pointing out that "every worker wants to work at top efficiency to produce the weap-

Shipyard Workers Buy Bond To Launch 'S.S. Murray'

Baltimore, April 25—One of these days a U. S. Liberty Ship named the S.S. Philip Murray may be ploughing through the Atlantic seas.

Members of the CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers initiated the plan—and it's now before the U. S. Maritime Commission and the Treasury Department for approval. Final o. k. is expected soon.

CIO shipbuilding workers at the Bethlehem shipyards here are buying $1,500,000 war savings bonds, and under the union proposal, the money will be spent for constructing a Liberty Ship to be named after the CIO president. Mrs. John Green, wife of the shipbuilding union president, will christen the boat when it is launched.

Liberty Ships are medium sized freighters being turned out in "mass production" style to help carry war materials from the U. S. to the other United Nations.

'It's Our War, Let's Win It' Theme of Gotham CIO Rally; Offensive Action Urged

NEW YORK, April 25. (FP)—Men and women from the ships and the shops, the factories and the warehouses are out to show this, the world's largest city, how to mobilize for an all-out war on Fascism.

They want a western front against Hitler, they demand price control, strict rationing, an end to profiteering, they promise to keep on producing at unequalled pace and they are going to spend $50,000 arousing the public of New York.

All this was decided unanimously at a "Win the War" Conference here April 18 which was attended by 4,112 rank-and-file delegates from 243 CIO locals representing 500,000 workers in 7,780 shops in this area. Nothing like it has ever happened before in New York.

The rally was keynoted by Joseph Curran, president of the Natl. Maritime Union and of the Greater New York Industrial Union Council; R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers; and Mayor F. H. LaGuardia. But the big shots were not the only ones heard. Throughout the long sessions, delegates from the shops told what they were doing to increase production, buy bonds and give blood.

Pledging that "the necessary sacrifices to win this war will be made by labor unconditionally," the conference voted to demand that all "groups and individuals . . . adopt and put into effect . . . . unconditional sacrifice."

Unity with the AFL and leadership of labor in rallying the people were stressed. The conference voted unanimously to invite the AFL in New York to stage a united labor rally. All unionists were urged to take part in a giant "I Am An American Day" rally May 17. Plans were made for a "people's victory parade" June 14 involving all groups in New York.

The need for a military offensive, not only for strategic reasons, but to spur production and the enthusiasm of the people as a whole was brought out by almost every speaker.

PRAISES SOVIET ARMY

Declaring that the only thing that stands between the U.S. and a critical military situation is the Soviet army, Curran opened the conference with a plea that the U.S. "leave the defensive and open a western front." He also called on labor to take the offensive against "grass roots reactionaries" and all others who are disrupting national unity.

"We can't go on leaving the fight to somebody else," declared Thomas, who emphasized that too many people do not realize that the U.S. can lose the war. He said that exorbitant profits and salaries must be stopped and outlined his union's "Victory through Equality of Sacrifice" program.

Labor's enemies within the country were not neglected. Speaker after speaker called for the jailing of fascists like Coughlin and Gerald Smith, and an end to the reactionary attack on labor by newspapers and other forces.

WPB To Form New Division For Labor

Washington, April 25—Appointment of Paul V. McNutt to head the new War Manpower Commission, expected for some time, was announced by President Roosevelt here this week.

At the same time, it was learned that a new labor section will be set up in the War Production Board. Sidney Hillman, head of the labor division of OPM and later of the WPB, has taken an extended leave to recover his health.

Functions of the new Manpower Commission as announced by McNutt will be to coordinate all labor supply activities of the numerous government agencies handling the problem now, to assure "the most effective mobilization and utilization of the nation's manpower in the prosecution of the war."

The Commission will also have the job of "estimating the requirements of manpower for industry, reviewing all other estimates of needs for military, agricultural and civilian manpower, and directing the several departments and agencies of the Federal Government as to the proper allocation of manpower."

WOMANPOWER TOO

There were strong signs that "womanpower" and "manpower" are regarded as synonymous for purposes of war production. President Roosevelt made this point at a press conference, and increasing pressure for voluntary registration of women workers was observed.

Chairman McNutt, who also heads the Federal Security Agency, was one of the chief speakers at the recent CIO-AFL victory rally in Pittsburgh.

Hail Locals Aiding War Relief Drive

Washington, April 25—Splendid cooperation is being received from the CIO membership nationally on the hour-a-month war relief campaign, Irving Abramson, national chairman of the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief, said this week.

"Locals have been adopting the "hour-a-month" system for war relief contributions in every part of the nation. The reaction everywhere is the same: the membership wants to give all-out support to our boys in the American services and to the people of the United Nations.

"CIO membership everywhere has welcomed a program which avoids the haphazard, hit-and-miss giving of recent years. They want to be sure, and are sure, that their hard-earned dollars are really counting toward victory."

From the National Headquarters of the War Relief Committee at 1407 L Street, N. W., Washington, Director Monroe Sweetland listed a large group of locals which have notified the national office this month of their support for the CIO program.

Mounting numbers of CIO members are wearing the colorful "Working—Fighting—Giving" emblem issued by the National CIO Committee. These buttons, along with other campaign literature, are available through the National Office to all CIO members who pledge to make their contribution to war relief on the regular hour-a-month basis.

Quick Work

Provo, Utah—Fruits of labor-employer harmony were demonstrated at the Columbia Steel Ironton Furnace here. When the furnace broke its hearth jacket, a crew of workers ripped out the old lining and laid in a new one in 20 days less time than ever before.

CIO Broadcast Makes Debut

Washington, April 25—CIO's first radio program went out to the nation tonight over the NBC Red Network.

On the 15-minute program was a review of the labor news of the week, together with a conversation among CIO President Murray, two war industry workers and an army airforce pilot.

CIO's next broadcast will be on Saturday, May 9, at 10:15 EWT, and every alternate week thereafter. Next Saturday's program will be under AFL auspices.

America Wants Victory

The National Association of Manufacturers, in its recent full-page anti-labor advertisements, declared that "America wants victory," but then it qualified this true statement by adding, "but not the closed shop."

Our idea is that America wants victory, without any qualification whatsoever. If the union shop, the closed shop, or any other form of union security helps to bring victory, every true American will want it, regardless of what his feelings might otherwise be on the subject.

American labor is proud to be the most aggressive leader in every step necessary to increase production and to win the war. It has shown its willingness to sacrifice its rights and privileges, wherever these might interfere with this main end—as witness its voluntary actions in giving up Sunday double-time and the right to strike.

But when labor seeks union security, it does so precisely because it believes this to be necessary for the kind of industrial relations most conducive to high labor morale and maximum cooperation to increase war production.

"Union security is the bedrock of stable labor-management relations," the CIO executive officers declared in their recent open letter to President Roosevelt. "Without it, the union must devote most of its time to a struggle for existence, leaving little time or energy for the all-important job of production."

American working people and their unions are making winning the war their first consideration. They have offered their wholehearted cooperation, with all their brains and energies, to industry and government for every kind of joint effort to this end.

Mutual recognition and good faith are necessary to make such cooperation truly effective. The employer who fights or seeks to undermine the union offering such cooperation, is sabotaging the war effort. But if he accepts the union in good faith, he should not object to its enjoying union security, so that it may devote its energies, without friction or disturbance, to the major task of winning the war.

A Lesson From Britain

Great Britain has been in the war much longer than the United States. It has also been in much deeper. Its cities have been bombed mercilessly from the air, its armies and its navy have long been engaged with the enemy, and it has faced the immediate threat of actual invasion.

It is well therefore for the United States to examine closely the steps the British have taken in adjusting their economy to war needs—so that we may profit from their experience and avoid their mistakes.

One lesson the British learnt early in the war, namely that production cannot be increased by unduly long working hours, nor by eliminating protective labor measures and practices.

Another lesson they have learnt is related in a revealing article by Craig Thompson in a recent issue of the New York Times. This is that anti-strike laws, and the jailing of workers for violating them, do not lead to uninterrupted and increased production.

The outlawing of strikes "was widely hailed as smoothing the production paths," Thompson writes, but "it failed dismally." British industry, he adds, "has had its full and continuing share of strikes," and the number of strikes, and of days lost on account of them, increased considerably between 1940 and 1941.

Now the British are hopefully looking to a reduction of strikes and lost working time through the very voluntary methods long advocated by the CIO in the United States.

Joint works councils, with unions and management equally represented, are now being established in increasing numbers, Thompson says. They are already producing remarkable results in increasing production and in promoting industrial peace and cooperation for war purposes.

In the United States, strikes have been virtually eliminated by the voluntary agreement entered into by the unions, and a most promising beginning has been made by the joint labor-management committees already established in many plants as part of the production drive.

British experience shows that this is the most productive approach, as well as the most democratic. The kind of anti-strike and anti-union laws which a reactionary minority are urging in the United States, can only result in more friction and less production.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

IF YOU have ever wondered why so many big business papers use the name "Mirror," just take some writing and hold it up to a mirror. You will notice that every word appears in the mirror the other way around from what it really is.

By dint of long and painstaking effort, with their "mirrors of opinion," American newspaper publishers have finally bred and conditioned a type of allegedly human being that not only reads but thinks in reverse.

This amazing (and possibly mythical) Frankenstein has been presented to the world by one Dr. Gallup, on behalf of the publishers. Garbed in statistics and festooned with percentage signs, it appears in the papers each week under the whimsical name, Public Opinion.

This thinker-in-reverse appears to believe that the way to win the war is to take from them that have not, and give to them that have too much. By the same process of reverse reasoning, he would stimulate the workers' enthusiasm to lick Hitler by chaining and enslaving them in Nazi fashion, and by placing new whips into the hands of profiteers and labor-baiters.

More specifically, Gallup's poll parrot echoes the publishers' program-in-reverse—for less taxation of wealth and war profits and heavier taxation on those who can pay least; for preventing inflation by drastic sales taxes, whose first effect would be to boost prices; for increasing production by freezing wages at levels insufficient to buy enough food and other necessities to insure a worker's productive efficiency.

In addition, this program-in-reverse purports to seek maximum voluntary war effort by hamstringing or destroying the unions through which the workers' voluntary and enthusiastic cooperation is chiefly mobilized.

Fortunately, there is a large body of American opinion—at least ten million organized working people—still capable of looking at facts as they are, without seeing or thinking in the reverse fashion of the publishers' "mirrors."

The CIO, for instance, has presented to the country a straight-thinking affirmative program to maintain workers' efficiency at maximum levels for war production; to prevent inflation; to raise necessary tax revenue in the fairest and most productive fashion; and generally to organize our war economy in the way most logically designed to win the war.

At the present time, soaring living costs have made terrific inroads into the incomes of the working people who do the most essential work of war production. More than half of all American families receive less than $1,500 a year, though experts estimate that about $2,400 is necessary to maintain proper health, morale and productive efficiency, on the basis of present living costs.

Corporate profits last year, even after increased taxes, rose as much as 31%. On the other hand, for a period of a year there has not been a general wage increase in any single important basic industry.

Clearly inflation is a dangerous evil for the whole country, and particularly for the workers who are already suffering most from inflationary increases in living costs.

It should therefore be obvious to anyone but a reverse-thinker that any adequate tax and anti-inflation program should be designed to take money from those who have most to spare; should place a lid on rising living costs; should avoid wage-freezing while wages are insufficient for maximum efficiency; and particularly should avoid such measures as sales taxes, which are both inflationary in character and designed to relieve the rich by soaking the poor.

The CIO program, advanced by President Philip Murray and approved by all the executive officers at their recent Washington meeting, is drafted along just such logical and practical lines.

It calls for immediate and effective action by the Office of Price Administration to put a ceiling on prices for food, clothing, rent and other necessary living costs.

It demands the widespread institution of rationing—the fairest and most democratic method of insuring that available goods are distributed according to need, and not according to ability to pay inflated prices.

It opposes wage freezing and sales taxation, as unfair methods of soaking those least able to pay, as unnecessary, and as profoundly dangerous to our war production effort.

It advocates a progressive tax program, to eliminate unreasonable war profits and to raise necessary tax revenue from those best able to pay.

To FDR From CIO: Labor's Proposals On Taxes, Rationing, Price-Fixing

Following is the text of a letter addressed to President Roosevelt and signed by the executive officers of the CIO. Drawn up by the CIO leaders at their meeting in Washington this week, the letter was signed by President Murray, Secretary Carey and Vice-Presidents Curran, Dalrymple, Rieve, Robinson, Rosenblum and Thomas.

Dear Mr. President:

The one object of all true Americans is to win the war against the Hitler Axis. As you have said, this is a war for survival. To win it, every man and woman in America must fight and work at top efficiency.

Every worker wants to work at top efficiency to produce the weapons needed for the offensive against Hitler and his Axis puppets. Organized labor has made this amply clear in its proposals and actions for victory, even before Pearl Harbor.

As you know, labor voluntarily laid aside the right to strike for the duration. The creation of the War Labor Board, the combined labor victory committee, the joint labor-management production committees and other forms of action for victory are due in great measure to the initiative and the will to win of America's organized workers.

To achieve all-out war production, labor has presented an affirmative program to the nation that will maintain workers' health and efficiency and raise them to new levels. This program deals with basic questions of food, clothing and other living and working conditions. Its only object is to bring victory nearer by providing the nation with an adequate, strong and secure working force.

CIO's Program

This program, advanced by the Congress of Industrial Organizations, calls for control of prices of food, clothing and rent; immediate rationing of consumers' goods; taxation to raise money for victory from excessive war profits, avoiding general sales or wage levies; stabilization of wages through collective bargaining and the War Labor Board, and the strict avoidance of any form of wage freezing or freezing of other labor-management relationships as profoundly dangerous to the whole war effort.

As all government sources show, and as everyone's daily experience proves, spiralling living costs are eating into the health and efficiency of workers on the production front. This spiral is not due to increased wages; in fact there have been no industry-wide wage increases in any basic industry for the past year. It is due to the failure to control prices of the things which the workers buy.

We urge the immediate use of the authority of the Price Control Act to control prices of food, clothing and shelter at fair levels that will protect living standards.

Increasing shortages in consumers' goods are an additional burden on workers and their families. Under present conditions, the higher income groups alone are assured of sufficient needed goods in all but a few instances.

Democratic Rationing

We urge an immediate system of fair and democratic rationing, to assure the equal sharing of basic consumer goods. Low income groups should be assured minimum requirements of food and clothing to establish a freedom from want.

Current proposals for the forthcoming tax bill do not provide for adequate war revenues from those best able to pay. Excessive war profits are not sufficiently taxed, and great incomes escape the burden they should bear. In addition, proposals come from many sources for sales taxes that would further decrease workers' living standards.

We urge a tax program to raise money for victory through sharp tax increases on profits, on large incomes, and a strict avoidance of sales or wage taxes or other additional burdens on already low income groups.

Great heat has been generated recently on the question of wages and other collective bargaining relationships. A loud demand that such relationships be frozen for the duration is made in the newspapers and in certain sections of Congress. A deliberate conspiracy to wreck the organized labor movement, plotted by groups whose motives are more anti-labor than anti-Hitler, has been in progress for weeks.

A major part of this anti-victory conspiracy is the drive to lengthen the work week and to abolish fair payment for overtime work. As you have pointed out, the work week is already considerably longer than 40 hours, despite the false campaign in the press and over the radio. Under the pretext of lengthening the work week, therefore, the authors of this conspiracy are merely seeking other means to cut wages and lower the efficiency of American workers.

Another section of the conspiracy is concerned with wiping out union security. Here again the object is to destroy morale and national unity. Union security is the bedrock of stable labor-management relations. Without it, the union must devote most of its time to a struggle for existence, leaving little time or energy for the all-important job of production.

Axis-Inspired Plot

This conspiracy, we submit, has all the characteristics of Axis inspiration. Certainly its intended effect in dividing our people and weakening the war effort bears all the earmarks of a Dr. Goebbels propaganda offensive.

In beating down this attack on our national security, it should not be necessary to repeat labor's record of contribution to the war effort. The record is well known due to your own efforts to clear up misinformation as much as to those of any individual.

These contributions must be maintained. The fact that they are voluntary is the best guarantee that they will be maintained. To freeze wages, to outlaw union security, to arbitrarily lengthen the work week, or destroy other voluntary labor-management relations would be a blow to morale and national unity and consequently, a serious cut in war production.

We urge that matters of wages and other labor-management issues be left to voluntary collective bargaining, to the War Labor Board and other existing agencies and processes.

Mr. President, many of your highest aides have praised labor's part in the Victory Drive. We have heard declarations that American war production is now out-reaching the Axis. The country is anxiously waiting for the United Nations to take the offensive that will mean victory in 1942.

The workers of America want only to get on with the job that is now so well started. The conditions that we describe are hampering that job. Threats of further cuts in the health and efficiency of our production soldiers can have only one result, to threaten present production levels and to make further advances impossible.

For these reasons, we urge adoption of a bold and affirmative program such as we have recited. We are convinced that under your leadership, it will enable us to win the final victory over the Axis slavemakers. In this manner we will crush Hitler and the Axis powers—not Labor.

CIO Officers' Statement On Mine Union Debt Claim

WASHINGTON, Apr. 25.—Following is the complete text of a resolution adopted by the executive officers of the CIO April 23 answering debt claims advanced last month by the United Mine Workers through its Secretary-Treasurer, Thomas Kennedy. The CIO statement was signed by Pres. Murray, Sec. Carey and Vice-Presidents Curran, Dalrymple, Rieve, Robinson, Rosenblum and Thomas.

Whereas, (1) The United Mine Workers of America took a leading role in organizing the Committee for Industrial Organization in 1935, and along with other industrial unions pledged the contribution of sufficient funds to initiate an organizing drive among the unorganized workers in the basic mass production industries;

(2) The United Mine Workers of America and these other unions did make such advances to the CIO in keeping with their pledge and as a result millions of unorganized workers have been given the benefit of union organization and economic security, and have achieved an improved lot for the women and children in workers' families throughout the nation;

(3) John L. Lewis, only recently and for the first time, has indicated to the CIO that he considers the advances, which were thus made by the coal miners for the benefit of the other less fortunately situated workers, as a debt owing to the United Mine Workers of America; now, therefore, be it

QUOTE STATEMENT

Resolved, that (1) The coal miners comprising the United Mine Workers of America have inscribed in history the heroic and militant role which they have consistently played in the struggle of the American workers to achieve economic freedom. They have given the inspiration and leadership which resulted in the tremendous growth of the Congress of Industrial Organizations. Through the strength of the CIO, the United Mine Workers of America has also become stronger and its recent achievements must in part be attributed to the great labor movement—the CIO—which stood solidly behind the United Mine Workers of America. John L. Lewis, addressing the Executive Board meeting of the CIO on November 15, 1940, stated:

"The representatives of the United Mine Workers of America did not stand in the market places of this country beating their breasts and calling upon all men to witness that they are holier or better than somebody else because they had a few dollars that their membership dug coal for and had instructed them in convention to utilize those dollars to aid those less fortunately situated and whose organization, after all, would result in the increased security and increased strength and the increased power in the economic world of the United Mine Workers of America."

LABOR'S DEBT

(2) All workers throughout the nation owe a debt to the United Mine Workers of America. This debt cannot be measured in dollars. Only one steeped in avarice can discuss this problem in mercenary terms. In the words of President Murray, the funds furnished by the coal miners to the CIO were used to

". . . . feed the hungry, clothe the naked and shelter the homeless during bitter struggles on the part of the workers to establish their unions. Experiences of the CIO in this regard may be very well likened to the great heroic struggles of the United Mine Workers of America during the dark days from 1925 to the early part of 1933 to maintain the union.

"I can remember distinctly making personal appeals at public meetings for assistance to provide shelter, nourishment, clothing and medicine to the gallant fight of our union for decent living standards and economic freedom."

The CIO is firmly of the opinion that the United Mine Workers of America did not and does not consider the advances which it made to enable other and less fortunate workers to achieve freedom through union organization to be a debt to be repaid in dollars and cents.

CALL FOR UNITY

(3) The CIO and its millions of members expresses and re-affirms its everlasting gratitude to and affection for the United Mine Workers of America. The steel workers, the auto workers, the rubber workers and the millions of workers in all the other industries united in the CIO desire nothing other than to stand shoulder to shoulder with the coal miners in their forward march. Today, more than ever, this unity must be maintained in order to assure victory for our nation in its present war for survival. We assure the United Mine Workers of America that if the occasion ever arises in which it needs aid or succor, there shall not be a worker or a union anywhere in the nation which will not give of every resource and assistance.

CIO Debt to Miners Not Cash, But Gratitude of All Workers; Lewis Gift Statement Quoted

WASHINGTON, April 25—CIO's debt to the United Mine Workers "cannot be measured in dollars," the executive officers of the CIO declared in a unanimous resolution addressed to the UMWA this week.

The resolution, which dealt with the problem of a $1,600,000 claim from UMW President John L. Lewis for money advanced to the CIO in its formative times, was accompanied by a copy of an earlier letter from President Philip Murray which said that the money had been advanced to:

" . . . feed the hungry, clothe the naked and shelter the homeless during bitter struggles on the part of the workers to establish their unions. Experiences of the CIO in this regard may be very well likened to the great heroic struggles of the UMWA during the dark days from 1925 to the early part of 1933 to maintain the union."

The resolution added that "only one steeped in avarice can discuss this problem in monetary terms." It included a strong plea for unity "to assure victory for our nation in its present war for survival" and a renewed pledge that all CIO unions would help the UMW, as it had helped them, in any need that might arise.

ASK DUES PAYMENTS

With the resolution went a second letter, signed by Secretary James B. Carey, asking the UMW to pay three months' per capita which is now due the CIO. The letter reminded the UMW that prompt payment of dues "is one of the basic principles to which every union man subscribes."

"The benefits which accrue to any affiliated union of the CIO should not be enjoyed by any union which deliberately withholds its per capita tax. I therefore respectfully request the payment of your past due per capita."

The resolution also reminded the UMW that it had secured many benefits from the organization of the CIO, as well as helping to make that organization possible in the early days. It quoted from a speech of John L. Lewis when he was president of the CIO, in which he declared that the UMW did not claim to be "holier and better than somebody else" because they had a large treasury, and that the UMW had ordered its officers to help organize unorganized workers.

This action, Lewis said at the time, was because the miners knew that building the CIO "would result in the increased security and increased strength and increased power in the economic world of the United Mine Workers of America."

NOT A MONEY DEBT

Following this quotation, the resolution added: "The CIO is firmly of the opinion that the UMWA did not and does not consider the advances which it made to enable other and less fortunate workers to achieve economic freedom through union organization to be a debt to be repaid in dollars and cents."

Murray's earlier letter, dated March 16, reminded the UMW officials that "no gifts, loans, contributions or advances of money have been made by any organization to the CIO during my incumbency." This letter also asked payment of per capita tax from the miners' union.

The actions of the CIO executive officers were taken on instructions from the CIO executive board meeting of March 24, when they were directed to study the problem and deal with it.

Give Up Overtime

New York, April 25—The 1,100 CIO men and women who make the famous Norden bombsight are ready to give up overtime pay for Saturday and Sunday when they fall within the five-day, 40-hour week.

The announcement was made by Local 475 of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers here. Recently the company received the Navy's "E" award for excellent production. The firm is 100 per cent CIO organized.

Texas CIO Makes Pledge To Boot Dies From House

HOUSTON, Tex., April 25—A solemn pledge to work for the retirement of Rep. Martin Dies, (Dem., Tex.), to private life was taken by delegates to the CIO Texas State Industrial Union Council's convention here April 18-19 in a resolution that declared that Congressman Dies is "the avowed enemy of all true liberalism and trade unionism worthy of the name."

The two-day meeting was featured by addresses by John Brophy, director of CIO Industrial Union Councils and David J. McDonald, national secretary-treasurer of the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

McDonald appeared as the principal speaker at a Victory Rally held Sunday afternoon, April 19, in Music Hall. He drew repeated rounds of applause as he reviewed the advances and achievements of SWOC and predicted further great gains for CIO and SWOC in the great Southwest.

PRESENTS CIO PROGRAM

Director Brophy, appearing before the convention on Saturday, castigated labor's enemies in both the economic and political fields and presented a clear picture of the CIO war program centering around President Philip Murray's slogan of "We'll Work to Win."

When Brophy called for the defeat of Martin Dies as the No. 1 issue facing Texans on the political front, he was stopped by a vigorous round of applause.

L. L. Crane, of Oil Workers' Local 228, Port Neches, was elected president of the council, succeeding Simeon Hyde of Local 227, OWIU, who declined to run.

Other officers elected were: James Hollis, National Maritime Union, Port Arthur; J. E. Crossland, OWIU, Pasadena; Hyde, and J. C. Gray of OWIU, Houston, as vice-presidents. Clyde Ingram of OWIU, Houston, was elected secretary of the council. P. F. Kennedy of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and incumbent secretary, did not offer for re-election.

Don Kobler of UCAPAWA, Houston, was named educational director of the council, and an executive board composed of one member from each of the affiliated organizations was chosen.

WANT FDR SUPPORTER

The resolution on Dies denounced the reactionary congressman as a "mis-representer of his state" and resolved that "we mutually pledge ourselves to actively work for his defeat in the coming democratic primary and be it

"Further resolved that we ask all workers in Martin Dies' district to support the candidacy of the first fair-minded, honest American who offers to run in the primary on a program of full support to President Franklin D. Roosevelt and his foreign and domestic policies—including the social legislation enacted under the New Deal."

The convention endorsed the OWOC-CIO drive and "pledged every possible aid and assistance to Texas oil workers in their struggle against company-unionism and to bring about that full measure of production that will insure a victory for the United Nations."

ATTACK POLL TAX

Other resolutions advocated the repeal of the poll tax law and called upon all workers to fight against discrimination against the Mexican people of Texas. This resolution lauded the Mexican people of Texas for their contribution toward winning the war and also condemned the beating of two Mexicans by the chief of police and his officers at Port Arthur.

The NMU offered another resolution on the Port Arthur situation that called for mass action to obtain the removal of the chief, H. F. Baker and failing that, to institute a state-wide boycott on the city of Port Arthur. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

House Told Tory Bills Spell Danger

Washington, April 25—CIO opposition to three bills designed to hamstring labor was expressed before the House Judiciary Committee by Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, in testimony this week.

The three bills are HR 6872, an amendment to the "anti-racketeering" act of 1934; HR 5128 which in effect repeals the Wagner Act and the anti-injunction act, and HR 6572, a bill similar to HR 5218.

DENOUNCES BILLS

Cowan denounced the campaign for these and similar bills as based on distortion and falsehood, and warned that they would disrupt national unity and morale for the war effort.

The first bill, he pointed out, would outlaw strikes, and comes at a time when strikes are non-existent due to labor's all-out war production effort. The other two would permit courts to go back to the old injunction days, when unions were forbidden to carry on normal activities at the whim of any Federal judge who happened to dislike labor.

"Neither labor nor management nor government can have much patience with those in public office or out who, instead of throwing themselves into the national war effort are sniping and backbiting and attempting to secure advantages for themselves," Cowan warned.

Foresters Urge Cooperation With Labor

State College, Pa., April 25—The Allegheny Section of the Society of American Foresters has instructed its executive council to establish relations with organized labor for the purpose of considering and solving forest conservation problems.

This is one of the first instances of such a step by a professional society, and it is understood the national organization is considering similar action.

M. W. Humphrey, secretary of the Allegheny Section of the SAF, is located at the State College Forestry Department, State College, Pa.

ons needed for the offensive against Hitler," urged the CIO victory economy program as the only means of providing the nation "with an adequate, strong and secure worikng force."

It dealt with bedrock problems of getting enough food and clothing to the workers to enable them to stay on the job producing war material. Spiralling living costs, bringing inflation just around the corner, the absolute need for wage increases, and the burden of taxation "are eating into the health and efficiency of workers on the production front," the letter said.

To counter these inroads on war production, the letter called for retail price fixing, rationing, fair taxation and adequate wages and other working conditions, to "enable us to win the final victory over the Axis slavemakers."

LEGISLATIVE FRONT

In earlier offensive moves during the week on the legislative front, CIO Pres. Murray wrote to the Senate Labor Committee urging them to reject all repressive labor bills on the plea that national unity is vital for the war effort.

"Will you help national unity?" Murray asked. "Will you raise your voice in protest against the dastardly attempts that are being made to destroy labor unions in America? Will you join with labor in lending every possible support to the early and effective winning of the war? Let's crush Hitler—not American labor."

One effect of CIO's steady drive to keep the nation's war effort at full pitch was seen in the continuing delays in presenting anti-union legislation on the floor of Congress. These delays, which have held up both the Smith-Vinson and the Connally bills, as well as others, are due in large part to CIO's campaign.

Reactionary forces in Congress, "more anti-labor than anti-Hitler," were also marking time for Pres. Roosevelt's message to the nation, scheduled for delivery as THE CIO NEWS went to press.

Charge Waste

Washington—The General Motors Co. plant at Dayton, Ohio, is permitting "flagrant misuse of certain extremely critical defense materials," the CIO Electrical Workers charged this week. The union told WPB that GM is using vital copper and tin in the production of icetrays for refrigerators.

Your cooperation in demanding the Union Label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers has demonstrated once more the effectivness of organized labor's purchasing power. There are still a few open-shoppers left in the men's and boys' clothing industry who deny their workers the basic right of organization. Each demand for the Amalgamated Union Label is one more blow against all anti-labor employers. Always ask for the Amalgamated Union Label on all men's and boys' wearing apparel that you buy.

CIO Women Ask Lid On Retail Prices

By ELEANOR FOWLER

IMMEDIATE issuance of an order freezing retail prices, including prices of food, was urged this week by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO in a letter to President Roosevelt. The Auxiliary Congress also offered the cooperation of its members in enforcing price ceilings through a system of having women check the prices charged in various stores as is done in Canada.

The letter emphasized the need for action on the CIO program to prevent inflation and maintain a standard of living for our working people that will enable them to achieve maximum production to win the war.

In addition to pressing for retail price fixing the letter supported the CIO program by urging extension of rationing to ensure fair distribution of goods which are scarce and opposed fixing wages as "a serious blow to war production since it would freeze wages of many workers at starvation levels and undermine the morale of our war production workers."

"The women in the families of organized labor," the letter said, "like the workers themselves, believe that today everything is secondary to winning the war.

"We know that one of our biggest contributions to that end is to maintain comfortable, happy homes and serve good nourishing meals. Many of us cannot do that now because the cost of living has gone so high. Most of us will be unable to do it soon unless the government steps in to stop price rises. We, therefore, urge you, Mr. President, to act now on freezing retail prices."

RATION SYSTEM

The Canadian government has issued 250,000 blue books in which women are asked to keep a record of the prices they pay. If they find prices increasing they discuss the increase with the storekeeper. If he does not satisfy them that he is complying with the law, the complaint is taken up by the local women's committee, made up of representatives of all women's organizations. If they fail to settle it, the complaint goes on up to the regional women's committee which the government has established, and then to the regional office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

The CIO Auxiliaries are urging that women be given similar opportunity to aid enforcement of retail price ceilings in this country through neighborhood consumers' committees of defense councils. They are urging auxiliary members to start immediately keeping a record of the prices they pay so that they can report price increases.

CIO auxiliaries throughout the country have been devoting their energies to combatting price rises. In Portland, Oregon, the Woodworkers auxiliary is registering rent increases since January, 1941, so that they can prove the need for a ceiling on rents. In Washington, D.C., the auxiliaries joined with other consumer groups in calling upon Price Administrator Henderson to set a retail price ceiling on milk.

Get That Moth!

Good housekeeping is one of the best methods of protecting woolens against moths, according to the Bureau of Home Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

"Keep all floors and rugs well swept. Moths often get a start in the part of a rug under a heavy piece of furniture or close to the wall where it may be difficult to sweep thoroughly," a recent release stated.

"Eliminate all possible breeding places for moths: Never leave wool rags or old wool clothes lying carelessly around or under the baseboards—or dog hairs remaining in the basement. Moths like to eat hair, feathers, and fur as well as wool.

"Ordinarily, moths don't bother clothes that you wear frequently. But they are likely to set up housekeeping in a wool coat or dress that hangs in the back of a dark closet for weeks at a time.

"So even if you aren't wearing garments a lot—it's a good idea to take them out and sun and brush them occasionally."

Try Peanut Oil

Peanut oil is expected to help make up for shortages in fats and oils this year, according to the United States Department of Agriculture.

Government home economists say that peanut oil is good for frying, especially for frying potato chips and other fried foods that are served cold.

Peanut oil, like other vegetable oils, is also said to be useful for greasing cake and bread tins economically because they form a continuous film on the pan.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

The United States Government through the Navy Department has taken over the Brewster Aircraft plants. These plants are under union shop contract with the UAW-CIO and are located in Eastern Pennsylvania, Long Island, New York and Newark. The Navy Department, in taking this action, states it is on account of the inefficiency of management and gives labor a clean bill of health.

The continuous attacks upon labor have been answered effectively by actual results. President Roosevelt, Chairman Donald Nelson of the War Production Board and Chairman Paul McNutt of the Man Power Mobilization Board and other responsible government agencies are convinced that labor is doing it all. Recent action taken against employers, some of which have been dealing with the Axis powers, raises a question of their loyalty.

Labor has demonstrated beyond a doubt that it is loyal on all issues involved and determined to produce the maximum to win the war in the voluntary way as patriotic citizens. Such measures were tried in Great Britain and failed. Free labor can and will outproduce slave labor.

Write your Congressman and tell them these facts; oppose all anti-labor bills. Produce and organize; this is the road to victory.

SWOC Victory

At the Carnegie Steel plant at Gary, Indiana, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee came out with a smashing victory of 23,100 as to 1900. This shows what the results will be at all the U. S. Steel plants throughout the nation. The officers of the SWOC, this local union, regional and international representatives are to be complimented on this splendid showing.

Regional Director Ernest B. Pugh in Virginia reports winning an election at the Richmond Cedar Works, where the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee rolled up a vote of 88 to 20.

Walter H. Harris, director of the Shoe Drive, chalked up two more victories for USWA-CIO, one at the Mattoon plant, Brown Shoe Company, where the score was: for CIO, 548; against, 128, and the other at the Salem, Ill., plant, of the same company, where the score was: for CIO, 482; against, 77.

CIO Regional Director Ben Henry reports winning an election at the Hall Manufacturing Co. in Cedar Rapids, Ia., with 71 votes for CIO and none for AFL. The AFL had a union shop contract here and this election, though small, is significant in view of this fact.

Chicago Reports

Regional Director Fullerton Fulton in Chicago reports the following results of the NLRB held in Chicago recently: PWOC-CIO, 166; 56 for no union. He also reports an agreement between the H. Kramer Company, Chicago, and SWOC providing union shop, check-off and blanket increase at the rate of 10 cents per hour.

Director Adolph Germer reports winning an election at the Ohio Match Co. at Gusick and Newport, Washington Logging Camp and Mill with a vote of 202 for CIO, 63 for no union.

UAW-CIO Regional Director Alex McGowan reports hitting the Jack pot in two recent elections; one at Federal Bearing, where 1,200 workers voted two to one in favor of UAW-CIO; the other at Harrison Radiator, Lockport, where 2,175 voted for UAW-CIO and 634 for no union.

Regional Director Kojetinsky reports that the SWOC in Hannibal, Mo., has recently chartered two new local unions with a contract giving a nine cent hour increase, vacation with pay, check-off, etc.

UAW-CIO Regional Director McGowan reports another victory at Ferree Company, Lockport, Ill., with a score of 78 for UAW as against 44 for no union.

Local 719, UAW-CIO, at the Electro-Motive Diesel Works, have forwarded a nice contribution to the CIO committee for American and Allied War Relief. This contribution comes from the night shift bowlers at Electro-Motive in LaGrange. They state "This is just the beginning of our campaign to help the CIO raise at least $1,000,000 a month to aid the needy people of the United Nations." I, personally, want to thank you boys for this wonderful spirit.

Output Key to Victory, Southern Confab Agrees

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 25.—A rapid increase in production which may mean the difference between victory and slavery was called point number one in "the South's part in winning the war for Democracy" at the third meeting of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare held here last week-end.

Labor was represented by scores of delegates from AFL, CIO and railroad unions. William Mitch, president of the Alabama CIO; George Googe, southern representative of the AFL, and H. V. Reid of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, were elected vice chairmen. President Homer P. Rainey of Texas University was elected chairman.

James Carey, national CIO secretary, was among the speakers who took part in the panel discussion on industrial production held the second day of the conference under the chairmanship of Dr. Frank P. Graham, member of the War Labor Board, and president of the University of North Carolina.

Mrs. Roosevelt who attended the conference in person, presented the Thomas Jefferson award given each year to outstanding leaders in the South, to Dr. Frank Graham for his leadership in education and public life, and to Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, president of Bethune-Cookman College in Florida, for her excellent work for the colored race.

HIT KLAN TACTICS

Declaring for an offensive both on the military fronts and at home, the conference demanded protection of civil liberties and labor's rights as well as an active fight against the Ku Klux Klan and other disrupters.

For the first time in the history of the south Negroes and whites sat together to hear Paul Robeson, great Negro baritone, not only sing but make a speech.

Congress was petitioned to withhold all funds from the Dies Committee and to pass immediately the Pepper-Geyer anti-poll tax bill and an anti-lynching measure.

In a message of greeting sent to Dr. Graham, President Roosevelt expressed the hope that the conference would "present tangible suggestions for the full utilization of our resources within the principles of our democratic faith."

Britain Moves Towards Adopting Own 'Murray Plan'

NEW YORK, April 25.—Great Britain is finding out that compulsory anti-strike legislation doesn't work, and it is turning increasingly to voluntary methods of cooperation as a means of stepping up production.

These facts are becoming evident in news dispatches from England, among them a lengthy story in the New York Times which recounted how the island nation is moving towards a "Murray council plan" of its own .

The story pointed out that although Britain placed a wartime strike ban on its legislative books, walkouts have continued in substantial proportions.

EXCHANGE OF VIEWS

This week, Herbert Tracey, editor of a Labor news bulletin of the British Trades Union Congress, reported that joint management-Labor committees are being set up in the machine and shipbuilding industries to provide "regular exchange of views between management and workers.

"All matters relating to the improvement of production and increased efficiency for this purpose will come within the scope of these factory committees.

"Nearly forty unions, including the Amalgamated Engineering Union, the biggest organization of skilled workers in existence, are parties to the scheme," Tracey wrote. "It is embodied in an agreement, signed last week, between the unions and the Engineering and Allied Employers' Natl. Federation.

Like the committees now being set up in U.S. factories at the suggestion of WPB Chief Donald Nelson, the British groups will consider maximum use of machinery, upkeep of machines and tools, elimination of waste, improved production methods and safety questions.

The scheme contemplates small committees for large plants," Tracey continued. In the larger plants they will be obligatory for all federated employers.

Workers' representatives are to be elected by ballot, conducted jointly by the management and the union representatives in the shops, and are to cover all departments as far as possible."

A BBC broadcast to the United States on Sunday, April 26, was scheduled to give Americans further information about the joint councils. The program was to go out on the Mutual Network at 11:30, EST.

Arbitrators Name Rieve To Board

New York, April 25—Emil Rieve, CIO vice-president, has been elected to the board of directors of the American Arbitration Association, it was announced here today by Lucius R. Eastman, chairman of the board of the Association.

Commenting on Rieve's election to the board, Eastman stated:

"With representatives of both labor and management guiding the policies of the association's voluntary industrial arbitration tribunals, a real service is being rendered by the American Arbitration Association to the nation by providing impartial arbitration facilities for the immediate settlement of differences as they arise.

"Mr. Rieve's election to the Board of Directors is another important step forward in the development of voluntary arbitration of management-union controversies during this war period, thereby insuring the continued flow of war material to our own armed forces and to those of the United Nations."

Elected

Cleveland—William F. Donovan, district director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, has been elected president of the Cleveland Indutsrial Union Council. He was unopposed.

Predict Canada Voters Will Authorize Draft

OTTAWA, April 25.—Canadians are awaiting details of a manpower mobilization and selective service bill which are not expected to be revealed until after April 27, the date for a plebiscite on whether the Government should be released from pledges against conscription of men for overseas armed service.

The number of those who have joined for service anywhere is high however. Passage of the plebiscite which has been vigorously supported by organized labor, is a foregone conclusion.

The action of the government in again introducing drastic legislation such as the manpower mobilization without consulting organized labor was criticized by President A. R. Mosher of the Canadian Congress of Labor.

NO LABOR VOICE

"No objection could be properly taken to the decision reached in this respect but it should have been done long ago," Mosher said. "Once again, however, the government has adopted a far-reaching program of vital interest to the workers without any consultation with organized labor.

"Of much more serious concern to the workers is the fact that thousands of skilled workers are either unemployed or working part time and there is apparently no coordinated plan for fullest utilization of the services of workers now available and of the productive facilities of Canadian industry."

GIVE TO HELP OUR ALLIES—THROUGH THE CIO WAR RELIFF

Publishers Meet, Yawn At Attacks

NEW YORK, April 25—American newspaper publishers, under attack as they have seldom been in recent history, met for their annual covention here this week.

Criticism of the publishers for their sniping campaigns on labor, the Administration and on all progressive groups has spurted upwards in recent months, with President Roosevelt branding some publishers as a "6th column". Yet——

Believe it or not, the principal theme of the president's keynote address to the American Newspaper Publishers Assn. was a long appeal to the government to buy advertising space for the U. S. War Bond sales drive!

Broader questions of newspaper policy in wartime apparently received little attention in the publishers' discussion behind closed doors.

A few days earlier the American Society of Newspaper Editors had heard a ringing challenge from Archibald MacLeish, director of the Office of Facts and Figures to give more assistance to the nation's critical war effort.

He berated the editors for failing to "hunt out and expose by every instrument of truth the skulkers in the journalistic ambush—the cowardly, half-hearted publishers and their venal editors of their staffs who use for their own disloyal purposes" the freedom of the press.

Noting critically the old newspaper custom of criticizing everybody except other publishers, MacLeish said that the policing of the press should be done by the papers themselves, rather than by government.

INSIDE THE LAW

"The most poisonous and perversive defeatism is not practiced by those who violate the statutes of their country openly," he said. "It is practiced by those who take scrupulous care to stay within the law, to come, as one of them is reported to have told his staff, 'as close to treason as I dare.'

"To silence such publishers would endanger the free press . . ."

MacLeish stressed that the "sole purpose of newspaper propaganda aimed to divide our people from the Russian people or the British people . . . is defeatist. . . . The sole purpose of newspaper propaganda demanding a defensive war . . . is defeatist."

Typical of the mumbo-jumbo being chattered by many of the publishers was the comment of col. Robert McCormick of the Chicago Tribune, a leading contender for the post of the worst reactionary in newspaper circles.

Pleased that Associated Press members had denied a franchise to Marshall Field's Chicago Sun, which has generally supported the New Deal foreign and domestic policies, McCormick got off this whopper:

This vote . . . "means that the Gestapo is out of American newspaper offices forever."

Carey Raps Patent Deal; Ruled Off Air

Bridgeport, Conn., Apr. 25 — A speech by CIO Sec. James B. Carey in which he discussed the secret patent connections between certain American and German corporations, was banned from the air by Station WICC here.

The station management claimed it was "controversial."

Carey delivered his speech to a CIO Production for Victory meeting, and his praise for American labor's war contributions won cheers from the audience.

"Labor wants to fight one war at a time. Labor wants to beat Hitler and the Japs. Labor wants to convert, build, ration, work, produce," the CIO official pointed out.

"But," he asserted, "labor must devote half of its time and energy to countering false propaganda and preventing a reactionary blitzkrieg."

UGLY SPECTACLE

Contrasting the actions of labor in behalf of the war with the conduct of some sections of big business, Carey discussed the "ugly spectacle" of Standard Oil's connection with the Nazi IGF company.

"We have this added feature," Carey's speech pointed out, "that Standard Oil's agents have been leaders in the anti-labor campaigns that are supposedly causing our midwestern prairies to blaze with hatred of labor and demands for its extermination.

"The import of that double connection is sinister. Standard Oil is on friendly terms with Nazi agents—or at least it was until Dec. 7. And Standard Oil encourages a war on labor.

"It seems to me that somebody ought to talk to Mr. Rockefeller's people. Our government, with the biggest stick it has handy, should remind Standard Oil that we are fighting the Nazis; and that we are not fighting American workers who are straining every muscle to wipe Adolf Hitler and his miserable fascist cohorts from the face of the earth."

Seamen Charge Life-Savers Caused Deaths

Baltimore, Md., April 25—Sworn charges that old-fashioned, inefficient cork life preservers contributed directly to the death of at least 10 seamen were made today by two members of the CIO National Maritime Union who were rescued from a torpedoed oil tanker.

Sidney Mordes and John M. Dandy, the survivors, filed a statement with local NMU officials which asserted that the men, rather than benefiting by the life preservers, had to fight them to keep from drowning.

"Of all the men picked up, only two were revived," they said.

"Both complained bitterly of the inefficiency of the life preservers which were filled with cork. Ross (one of the survivors) said he spent most of the time fighting the life preserver to keep from being drowned. He was unconscious when he was picked up, and was later sent to the hospital."

They charged that the obsolete cork life preservers "ride up on your shoulders and force your head down."

Urge Offensive

Bridgeport, Conn., Apr. 25 (FP)—Declaring that Connecticut labor is producing the arms and equipment necessary for a western front, 300 delegates at a CIO production conference here called upon the U. S. and England to launch an offensive against Hitler on the European continent.

The conference also called for unity of the United Nations and the unity of labor throughout the world with closer relations among the unions of Great Britain, the U. S. and the Soviet Union.

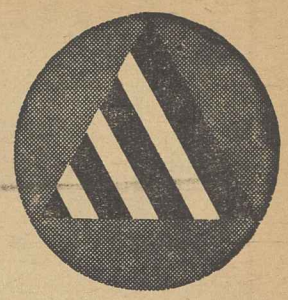
DRIVERS CORPS

The Drivers' Corps will be identified by a red steering wheel in white triangle set in blue circle. Persons willing to offer their cars as well as their services as drivers will be enrolled. This work is particularly suitable for women.

A Coordinator of Transportation usually is in charge of the corps and organizes it in sections or units. Cars and drivers can be assigned by the Coordinator to First Aid Parties, Casualty Clearing Stations, Control and Message Centers, and to the staff of the Local Defense Coordinator.



AIR RAID WARDEN

The Air Raid Warden will be identified by a red and white striped triangle set in a blue circle.

Though he is not a policeman and usually does not have police powers, the Air Raid Warden usually works closely with the police. He serves a unit of 500 persons, and his post must be accessible and plainly marked. Since at least one person must be always on duty, the Air Raid Warden generally has three Assistant Wardens.

Contract Parleys On At Harvester After WLB Ruling

CHICAGO, April 25.—Discussions preliminary to signing contracts covering eight plants of the International Harvester Co., which embodying terms ordered in the decision handed down last week by the National War Labor Board are under way, the CIO Farm Equipment Workers' Organizing Committee announced this week.

As soon as the contracts are signed, special elections will be held in the eight plants involved, to determine the stand of the workers on the question of maintenance of union membership, according to the provision laid down by the WLB in its decision.

All issues settled by the Board become effective immediately upon the signing of the contracts with the elections to be held as quickly as possible after the signing of the contracts, the CIO union stated.

EIGHT ELECTIONS

The eight elections will be held in five plants where the FEWOC has sole bargaining rights—West Pullman, Tractor Works, McCormick Works, East Moline and Rock Falls; at the Springfield plant where the CIO United Automobile Workers is the certified union, and at the Milwaukee and Farmall Works. where two AFL federal locals are the recognized bargaining agencies.

FEWOC union officials declared that negotiating committees from the Harvester plants at the Chicago conference indicated the workers were anxious to get the business of signing the contracts out of the way so that they could get under way with the special poll on the maintenance of union membership which they were confident of winning.

The clause in the decision of the War Labor Board under which the special elections will be held reads:

"All employes who are now members of the union in good standing or who may in the future become members will be required as a condition of employment with the company to maintain their membership in good standing during the life of this contract;

"Provided, that this provision shall not apply until the National War Labor Board has certified to the company in writing that a majority of the members of the local union who are employes of the company have voted affirmatively on this specific issue by secret ballot in a referendum conducted under the auspices of the Board subsequent to the signing of this contract."

Introducing Harry Gantt

Harry Gantt is circulation representative of The CIO NEWS. His job is to help build the number of readers of the CIO's official organ so that it will be an even stronger publicity weapon for CIO's five million members.

Mr. Gantt is visiting various parts of the country in connection with The CIO NEWS circulation drive, which has been given a warm endorsement by Pres. Philip Murray. When Gantt appears before your local or council, he'll have an interesting story about how The CIO NEWS can assist your organization.

Gantt has been associated with The CIO NEWS for the past several years and is well acquainted with both the problems and the services of the labor press.

They Still Vote CIO

Mobile, Ala., April 25—In one of the south's biggest elections, workers at the Alabama Dry Dock Co. voted overwhelmingly for the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

The poll, one of the most important in the south, found CIO getting 3,080 votes to 1,254 for the AFL and 117 for no union.

Beverly, Mass., April 25—The days of nonunionism are over at the United Shoe Machinery Co. plant whose tight monopoly controls the manufacture of shoes throughout the country.

The CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers won 1,352 votes to 1,213 against.

The company licenses machinery for making shoes to companies throughout the nation.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., April 25—A sweeping victory was won by the CIO United Automobile Workers in a Labor Board election held here among employes of the Federal Bearing and Schatz Corp.

Union Plan Seen Benefit To U. S. Fleet

Washington, April 25—Any manpower shortage that exists in the merchant marine can be corrected by application of the Natl. Maritime Union's production plan, Joseph Curran, NMU president, said here in commenting on the government order taking over shipping now in private registry.

This plan, Curran said, calls for a central ship-manning program that will prevent owners from hoarding crews, which has been a frequent cause of delays in shipping war supplies, and will prevent possible sabotage and spying. This would be done, he said, by correcting the present practise that allows shipowners to keep crews on the ships for days or weeks at a time.

The plan also calls for a central shipping pool to supply United Nations ships, allowing aliens to ship on any United Nations' vessel.

Army, Navy Laud Coast CIO Workers

SAN FRANCISCO, May 2.—Army and Navy went out of their way this week to congratulate two groups of West Coast CIO workers for their contribution to the war effort.

Asst. Sec. of War Robert Lovett wired to workers at the North American Aviation Corp. in Los Angeles—who are members of Local 887, CIO United Automobile, Agricultural Implement and Aircraft Workers—that 10 of the 13 bombers which recently flew 2,000 miles from Australia to blast Japanese bases in the Philippines were North American products.

"Your workmanship helped get them there and bring them back," Lovett wired. "We recognize that fact and know you join with us in pride in their accomplishment.

At army headquarters in Australia, Lt.-Col. John H. Davies said the North American B-25 is the "sweetest big plane I ever handled.

"Full credit should be given the designers and workers, the North American Co. and everybody who contributed in any way to the manufacture of the planes . . . . Keep 'em coming and we'll keep 'em flying."

Praise Longshoremen

The Navy's bouquet went to CIO longshoremen and their employers in San Francisco for quick handling of war cargo. Rear Admiral J. W. Greenslade, commandment of the 12th Naval District, told this story to a meeting of the Pacific Coast Maritime Industry Board:

"A few days ago, the services of a particular vessel were urgently needed as quickly as possible. The situation was explained to executives of the operating steamship company and to the Longshoremen's Union, and their response was instant and positive.

"No sooner was the ship moored than picked gangs from the union pitched into the unloading work.

"In less than half the usual time, the cargo was out on the dock and the ship was made available for the new and urgent assignment. Records were broken and the ship sailed in record time . . .

"The steamship company concerned, and the longshoremen's union, merit equal praise. Their actions will go far toward refuting the unwarranted charges that the San Francisco waterfront has been a weak point in the military supply line."

The West Coast shipping industry is functioning through a joint industry-labor council plan, proposed by Pres. Harry Bridges of the longshoremen, along the lines of the Murray Industry Council Plan.

SMITH BILL PUT ON ICE

(See Story Page Three)

WASHINGTON, May 2—Labor won a mighty victory this week when the House Naval Affairs Committee tabled the Smith-Vinson bill, through which Congressional reactionaries hoped to cripple American labor.

Over-ruling poll-tax Rep. Vinson of Texas, who heads the committee, the group voted 13-12 to put the bill on ice. Frantic pleas by Vinson for okehing a greatly-watered down version of the bill were in vain, with pro-labor members pointing out that such a procedure would allow the "kill labor" bloc to tack the vicious features back on to the bill when it reached the House floor.

A similar retreat took place in the Senate, where Sen. Tom Connally of Texas withdrew his own bill to freeze the open shop and stop labor progress. The withdrawal was accompanied by wails of complaint from die-hards on the Senate floor.

The tremendus victories for America's millions of organized workers was the climax to months of campaigning, led by Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO. Leaders and members of unions throughout the nation flooded Congress with their protests against the legislation, pointing out it would not only affect unions but would react against the whole war effort.

Joint Labor Unity Councils Sprouting Throughout U. S.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Far-reaching efforts to unify labor behind the victory program, and to defend the workers from tory onslaughts, according to reports reaching CIO national headquarters.

In many sections of the country, CIO and AFL groups are forming joint victory committees on city-wide and state-wide bases to help push the nation's war effort.

In Oklahoma, for instance, where the Chamber of Commerce and the newspapers first began the so-called grass roots campaign against labor, workers and farmers have formed a Unity Council of Industrial Research Education. Represented on the council are the AFL, CIO, Farmers Union, railway brotherhoods and the Veterans of Industry."

First objective of the anti-propaganda campaign is the Oklahoma Times and Oklahoman, a newspaper monopoly which has tried to inflame the public mind against workers and farmers by charging them with impeding the war effort.

In Cincinnati, AFL and CIO city councils have formed a War Labor Victory Board for joint action in the field of legislation, political action and support of the war effort. The brotherhoods will also be represented on the board.

A statewide United Labor Victory Committee has been set up in Rhode Island, with Frank J. Benti, state CIO head as chairman and Edwin Brown, secretary of the Providence AFL city council, as vice chairman.

Join CIO--- For Free Vitamins!

Philadelphia, May 2—Join the union and get your vitamin pills free.

That might be the "sales talk" of CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers officials here, who have just signed a new contract with the Empire Ordnance Corp.

The pact provides that each of the 2,000 employes are to get two vitamin pills a day at company expense.

Carl Bersing, UE international representative, estimates that each pill contains the vitamins equivalent to four quarts of milk, 22 ounces of butter, four yeast tablets, three heads of cabbage, two pounds of string beans, one pound of beefsteak and two carrots.

Extra energy derived from the pills will spur war arms output.

Name Germer To Western CIO Post

(See "Organizing", Page 7)

Washington, May 2—Appointment of Adolph Germer, veteran union official, as CIO national representative to supervise the work of regional directors and organizers in the Pacific Northwest and Rocky Mountain States, was announced today by Allan S. Haywood, director of organization.

Germer's territory includes the states of Utah, Arizona, Oregon, Washington, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming, Nevada, New Mexico and Idaho. He has been serving as director of the organization drive of the CIO International Woodworkers of America.

In a series of other appointments, Haywood named Al F. Hartung, assistant director of the Woodworkers' campaign, as regional director in Oregon; Frank Bonacci as regional director in Colorado; Roy Atkinson as acting director in Washington; Sylvester Graham as director in Montana; Paul R. Christopher as regional director in Tennessee, and Frank Hardesty as director in Texas.

Diogenes Finds His Man ---In Seattle

Seattle, Wash., May 2.—Stand up and cheer, boys—here's a businessman who's got a good word for labor.

He's W. W. Williams, chairman of the Washington State Defense Council and former head of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce.

"We hear about labor's purported slowdown activities; we hear about rigid union regulations that threaten war production . . . but the spirit exhibited by labor here is the spirit of loyal American citizens who are truly all-out for America's war efforts," he said in a statewide radio broadcast.

"If I interpret the spirit of labor throughout the nation, and I believe I do, then it means labor's shoulders are squarely behind the wheel of the war effort."

Vote For CIO Union

New York, May 2 — Office workers of the Central Coal Co. here voted 56 to 15 for the CIO United Office & Professional Workers in a recent State Labor Relations Board election.

Slav Congress Enlists Aid Of Labor

DETROIT, May 2—(FP)—The newly organized American Slav Congress, headed by V.-P. Leo Krzycki of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO, is planning the closest ties with organized labor in the campaign to mobilize the 15,000,000 Slavic people in America behind the war drive of the United Nations.

The congress met in Detroit April 25 and 26, attracting 2,500 delegates from almost all the representative Russian, Ukrainian, Polish, Bulgarian, Czech, Slovak, Croatian, Yugoslav, Albanian and other Slav fraternal, religious and other organizations in the country. Serving with Pres. Krzycki will be Sec. Stephen Zeman, Jr., and representatives from every nationality.

While plans for the labor tieup are not yet on paper Krzycki indicated that the international unions with Slavic members may be asked to name a committeeman of that race to sit on a labor advisory council. A token of the labor unity behind the Slav mobilization was the posing for news photographs by Krzycki with Pres. R. J. Thomas of the UAW-CIO and Pres. Frank X. Martel of the Detroit Federation of Labor, AFL.

MANY SPEAKERS

Both Martel and Thomas spoke at the enormous mass meeting in the State Fair Coliseum where Chairman Paul V. McNutt of the new War Manpower Board was the main speaker. McNutt praised the contribution of Slavic American workers and of all workers to the production campaign of the U. S. war machine.

When McNutt demanded "tanks for Timoshenko" great cheers went up. He said neither justice nor courage are enough to win wars. "Work wins wars," he summed up.

The congress voted to buy through its affiliations $25,000,000 in war bonds this year. Resolutions emphasized production, greeted the Slav peoples who are resisting Hitler and Mussolini, and made a special appeal to women and children in America of Slavic origin to show their solidarity to the limit.

The production resolution quoted approvingly from production slogans of AFL Pres. Wm. Green and CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

Thomas a Sponsor Of Russian Relief

Detroit, May 2—Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Automobile Workers has become a sponsor of the Russian War Relief, Inc., it was anounced today.

At the same time, Thomas said he would push a campaign among auto workers for donation of an hour's pay a month to the Natl. CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief.

Interned Japanese Unionist Hails Camp's Democracy

San Francisco, May 2—(FP)—"The workings of democracy are clearly demonstrated before our eyes," Karl Yoneda, Japanese member of the CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union wrote in a letter from a government internment camp at Manzanar, Calif., where he is now an evacuee.

APPLAUD U. S. POLICIES

"There are many CIO and AFL members here," Yoneda wrote. "Everyone appreciates the treatment given by the government authorities in charge. Those of us who are American citizens of Japanese ancestry are grateful to our government for the way this grave question of evacuation is being handled. What a difference from fascist-controlled countries . . .

"Democratic nominations were held April 13 for block leaders in the 10 populated blocks. There are about 300 persons to each block.

"We are conducting a campaign on 'It's a sin to waste tin' and are saving old newspapers as well. In two weeks of operation, the post office has sold over $500 in war bonds and stamps."

St. Louis CIO Honors Air Hero

St. Louis, May 2—The "affectionate honor and respect" of the St. Louis CIO was presented to Lt. Commander Edward O'Hare, courageous pilot of the U. S. Naval Air Force, during his visit to this city last week. O'Hare's home is in St. Louis.

A resolution passed by the city CIO council pointed out that it "takes double pride in the accomplishment of a distinguished son of the community and the industrial production of the American workers whose anonymous work made mechanically possible the instruments of battle which were ready to Lt. Commander O'Hare and his comrades' hands in the far Pacific."

In other resolutions the council called upon the government to lift soldiers' pay to a minimum of $500 a year, and strongly opposed wage freezing proposals for American labor.

The city CIO will cooperate voluntarily in any program to prevent inflation, the council stressed.

New Legislative Agent Has Career Of Union Service

WASHINGTON, May 2—Nathan Cowan, newly appointed CIO legislative representative, has the background needed for his job and he knows how important it is to the victory effort.

He's been a union man since 1898, which was the date he joined the United Mine Workers of America as a youngster following his father's trade. Today, after 44 years in the labor movement, he has three sons in the armed forces of the United States. All three of them—James, William and John—are in the Air Corps, two serving in Australia, the third in India.

When the CIO started out to organize the nation's steel workers in 1936, Philip Murray asked Cowan to come over to SWOC, where he served in the northeast region as travelling trouble-shooter and negotiator. In 1938, he went to Buffalo, N.Y., where he was SWOC sub-regional director until this month, when Murray called him in to Washington.

VICTORY PLANS

Cowan's assignment in Washington will put him in charge, under Murray's direction, of work on Capitol Hill, blocking passage of anti-labor bills that would hamper the victory drive by hamstringing unions, pressing for new bills to further the war effort, upholding the present legislation that protects working and living standards and thus furthers production for victory in 1942.

As he told The CIO NEWS, Cowan wants the active help of every CIO representative and every affiliate in carrying out the tremendous assignment given him. "The job we have to do in Congress and in Washington needs everyone's support," he said.

"It's an important job, one of the most important facing the CIO.

"What Congress does or does not do has an immediate bearing on our victory. We have to see that Congress does the things that are needed for victory, avoids the things that will delay or hamper the drive to wipe Hitlerism from the face of the earth."

Plant 100% Sold On U. S. Bonds

Richmond, Va., May 2.—Two hundred CIO workers at the Richmond Piece Dye Works have subscribed 100% to purchasing U. S. War Savings Bonds, CIO Regional Director Ernest Pugh announced today.

The workers, members of Local 27, Federation of Dyers, Finishers, Printers and Bleachers of America, are averaging about $1.10 a week in their purchases, he said.

The plant is the first in the city to reach 100% on the bond buying plan.

Dies Gets Dough-- After Fight

WASHINGTON, May 2—Dies of the un-American Committee got his appropriation this week, but not without a fight—a fight that the Texas fuehrerling didn't have the nerve to face himself.

Led by a handful of Congressmen and backed by the protests of millions of organized workers and honest progressives from all over the country, the fight to bolck Dies' anti-victory smear committee whittled the appropriation down from a requested $300,000 to $110,000, $10,000 of which goes to make up a payroll deficit.

DEFENDED BY COX

It also kept Dies away from Washington for several weeks, to the point where he was afraid to come before the House Accounts Committee himself to ask for the dough. His pals on the committee and one lone Congressman, poll-taxer Cox from Georgia, spoke up for him.

Active in opposing Dies' new money grab were Representatives O'Connor of Montana, Marcantonio, Dickstein and Klein of New York. Earlier struggles to muzzle the Axis radio favorite were led by such Congressmen as Eliot of Massachusetts, Coffee of Washington and others.

CIO Sweeps 94th Election At GM Plant

Lockport, N. Y., May 2—By rolling up a vote of 2,175 to 634 in a Labor Board election held here among workers of the Harrison Radiator division of General Motors, the CIO United Automobile Workers union has brought the list of GM units for which it has sole bargaining rights to 94.

The victory was won despite the fact that "the management used every trick in the book" to stall and prevent the holding of an election, said Alex McGowan, UAW regional director.

Local union officials hailed the result as "a decisive answer to those anti-labor and company-union minded elements who said Harrison workers will never go CIO." This was the third election held at the plant. At the first election held in April 1940 both the UAW and an AFL union lost. At the second poll held in April, 1941, the CIO vote increased but fell short of a majority.

Set Policy On Inter-Union Cases At WLB

Washington, May 2—Agreement between CIO and AFL for the handling by the War Labor Board of jurisdictional disputes for the duration of the war was announced today by WLB Chairman William H. Davis.

"Under procedure worked out with Philip Murray, president of the CIO, and William Green, president of the AFL, all jurisdictional questions in cases coming before the War Labor Board will be referred as a matter of course to the labor members of the Board for adjustment," Davis said.

WILL NOTIFY LEADERS

"If any particular dispute cannot be settled by the labor members, Mr. Murray and Mr. Green will be so notified and they will thereupon promply appoint a group or individuals to make a final and binding determination of the dispute.

"Jurisdictional disputes have always been the most difficult to settle because of their very nature. The American people will welcome this agreement between the two labor organizations for finally determining all jurisdictional disputes until the war is won."

Peacetime Fink Proves Wartime Axis Agent

Los Angeles, May 2—Scratch a fink and you're apt to find a Fascist.

The FBI did just that last week, and came up with not only a Fascist but an active Axis agent as well.

The arrested man, charged with betraying his country, is William A. Schuler, who a year ago was betraying his union, Local 9, of the American Communications Association.

Twelve months ago Press Wireless, Inc., got the bright idea of "running away" from its ACA agreement in San Francisco by moving to Los Angeles and hiring a non-union staff. To accomplish its purpose, the company, which handles newspaper wireless messages from the Far East, brought in a group of scabs from other sections of the country.

ONLY DESERTER

Only member of the San Francisco ACA local who accepted a job was William Schuler. Before going he tried unsuccessfully to persuade his fellow union members to desert their organization for the scab wages in Los Angeles.

As a result, Local 9 tried and expelled him for anti-union activities.

This week the FBI arrested Schuler on espionage act charges and revealed that—

"Schuler recently approached an un-named person and offered to transmit messages for foreign agents by means of the wireless facilities of the company.

"Arrangements were made whereby Schuler was introduced to an FBI special agent posing as an enemy agent, and was given 'messages' to transmit, one on April 11 and the other on April 12.

BOMBS IN HOME

A search of the arrested man's house revealed a cache of home-made bombs.

Commented C. A. Jones, head of the ACA local: "During all this time the Dies Committee, which pretends to investigate un-American activities, had dossiers on all the good union men in the ACA. Why didn't Dies have a dossier on Schuler?"

Smith Bill Frozen By House Committee

WASHINGTON, May 2—The Smith-Vinson bill has been laid on ice—at least temporarily—by action of the House Naval Affairs Committee in voting to table it by a slim margin of 13 to 12. The motion was made by Rep. Bradley of Pennsylvania.

Before it was carried, Rep Vinson, committee chairman, tried to persuade the committee to report out a greatly modified version of the bill dropping all the anti-union provisions. This maneuver would have allowed anti-labor Congressmen like Smith of Virginia to re-inject the union-busting features in the form of amendments from the floor.

The bill, which would have outlawed union contracts containing overtime pay for overtime work and union security clauses, met immediate and sustained opposition from labor and other progressive groups and individuals all over the country.

This opposition, led for the CIO by President Philip Murray, was joined by administration leaders from President Roosevelt and War Production head Donald Nelson on down. The measure was opposed on one basic ground—that its passage would cut war production by destroying carefully built-up collective bargaining relationships throughout industry.

IN THE SENATE

A similar retreat by anti-labor forces was carried out in the Senate, when Texas polltaxer Connally withdrew his bill to freeze the open shop and outlaw all labor progress.

Connally's withdrawal was covered by a great deal of flowery language and some sharp cries of pain from bitter-enders and isolationists like Senator Byrd (also a polltaxer) of Virginia and Senator Taft of Ohio.

Connally's withdrawal was attributed by Connally and the newspapers to President Roosevelt's message and radio speech, in which he said that no new legislation to control labor was needed at this time. More observant people here gave a great deal of the credit to labor's successful job of arousing

File Complaints With CIO Board, District 50 Told

WASHINGTON, May 2—Acting with approval of the executive officers of the CIO, Secretary James B. Carey, this week, made public a letter replying to a demand by Ora Gasaway, head of District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America, that CIO President Philip Murray repudiate alleged attacks on the United Mine Workers of America by the Transport Workers Union.

Sec. Carey's letter noted that District 50 representatives have "invaded plants in industries which have been organized by other affiliated unions of the CIO," which it described as "most unfortunate because of the impact which it would have upon the desired unity that should be maintained within the CIO."

The letter further noted that District 50 representatives were reported invading the Transport Workers Union, of whose recent acts in New York City Casaway's communication to Murray complained.

FULL TEXT

Full text of Carey's letter to Gasaway follows:

"Your telegram regarding the dispute between District 50 and the Transport Workers Union of America has been referred to the undersigned.

"You are well aware that any dispute of the kind which you describe in your telegram is one that may and should be brought before the Executive Board of the CIO for investigation and disposition. That would be the true and democratic manner in which problems of the kind which you describe should be handled. It cannot be anticipated that the national office would be in a position to make any decision on this problem in the absence of an investigation of all the facts involved in the situation.

DISTURBED BY REPORTS

"It is to be regretted at any time, and particularly at the present time, that there should be any quarrelling or disunity between affiliated unions of the CIO or between any groups of workers. The national office has therefore been disturbed at the numerous reports which have been received to the effect that representatives of your organization have attempted to invite local unions of other CIO unions to discontinue their present affiliation and to join up with your organization.

"Reports have also come to our national office to the effect that representatives of your organization have invaded plants in industries which have been organized by other affiliated unions of the CIO. For instance, in the New York situation, according to the newspaper reports, your local representatives in New York City were dealing with members of the Transport Workers Union in a situation where the TWU has existing contracts with the employers involved.

NEED FOR UNITY

"Any such practice, if true, would be most unfortunate because of the impact which it would have upon the desired unity that should be maintained within the CIO.

"I repeat my suggestion to you, that if you wish to have the specific situation which arose in New York given further consideration, upon your request I shall refer the matter, in the manner prescribed by the constitution of the CIO, to the Executive Board for its investigation and disposition."

OPA Freezes Prices After Roosevelt Sets 7-Point Program

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Speaking to the nation through a message to Congress and over a radio hookup on all networks, President Roosevelt this week presented a seven-point program "of general principles which together could be called the national economic effort for attaining the great objective of keeping the cost of living down."

Following the message, Leon Henderson, head of the Office of Price Administration, issued a detailed price-fixing order covering a long list of consumers' goods and fixing rents in hundreds of war production centers.

The seven-point program as listed in the message was as follows:

1. To keep the cost of living from spiraling upward, we must tax heavily, and in that process keep personal and corporate profits at a reasonable rate, the word "reasonable" being defined at a low level.

2. To keep the cost of living from spiraling upward, we must fix ceilings on the prices which consumers, retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers pay for the things they buy; and ceilings on rents for dwellings in all areas affected by war industries.

3. To keep the cost of living from spiraling upward, we must stabilize

News Guild Leader To Aid Bond Sales; Locals Cooperate

WASHINGTON, May 2—The U. S. Treasury Department announced today the appointment of Milton Murray, president of the American Newspaper Guild, CIO, as consultant to the War Savings staff. Murray will assist the press section in developing publicity plans for the new War Bond Quota Campaign.

Following a conference with Secretary Morgenthau, Murray pledged the full cooperation of his organization, and announced that he was calling upon 16,000 Guild members throughout the country to volunteer their assistance to local War Savings Committees.

"Guild members are anxious to aid the war effort, and the War Bond program appeals to me as one of the finest ways they can voluntarily serve their country in a capacity in which their skills and training will be of greatest value," Murray said. "I am confident I can assure the Treasury Department of their complete cooperation."

WIRES LOCAL HEADS

Murray announced that he had wired the presidents of the 86 local affiliates of the American Newspaper Guild, urging them to appoint War Bond Chairmen, whose duty it would be to cooperate with the local War Savings Committees in their publicity work, and to enlist the volunteer support of other Guild members.

This type of plan was already functioning in three cities—Allentown, Pa., Worcester, Mass., and Salt Lake City, Utah—Murray explained.

In Salt Lake City, he said, the local Guild has been assisting the War Savings Staff for many weeks in getting news material to papers throughout Utah, in digging out news stories and picture ideas, and in composing sales letters sent to firms to stimulate the Payroll Savings Plan.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

"But," said Mr. Hennessey, "those open-shop min ye menshun say they are f'r unions if properly conducted."

"Shure," said Mr. Dooley, "if properly conducted. An' there we are; an' how would they have thim conducted? No strikes, no rules, no contracts, no scales, hardly iny wages an' dam few members."

Mr. Dooley uttered these immortal words many years ago. But the "open shop min" are still with us—still writing and talking the same way, in Congress and in the press.

So too is Mr. Dooley's open shop boss, of whom he said: "He don't care no more f'r money thin he does f'r his right eye. It's all principle wid him. He hates to see men robbed av their indipindence"—so they can't "scab on some other poor devil."

The big difference between the open-shop drives of the past, that Mr. Dooley knew so well, and the present open-shop drive, is the war.

A drive to destroy unions and to lower the wages and working conditions of labor is an ugly business at the best of times, no matter how much hypocritical language is used to camouflage it. But in the midst of a war like the present it is little short of treason.

Yet we have before Congress numerous bills to hamstring unions, on one pretext or another; to freeze the open shop; to cut wages through abolishing overtime rates.

And we have most of the press opposing any measure of union security—with all the age-old arguments of the open-shoppers—as if their private war against American labor were more important than the life-and-death struggle of our whole civilization against Hitlerism.

Most notorious—and most obvious—of today's newspaper divisionists is Westbrook Pegler. War or no war, he continues almost daily his calculated campaign to breed hatred and dissension between different sections of the American population.

The screeching and scurrilous abuse which is Pegler's stock-in-trade follows a style similar to that of the Nazi press. It is also similar in content, specializing in stirring up national, racial and class prejudices. His recent slanderous attack on the Negro press is a good example.

But, like the European Nazis whose style he follows and whose game he plays, Pegler's first and most consistent purpose is to do a job on the labor movement.

Now and then, in their early propaganda efforts, the Nazis would hit on some abuse in the democratic structure, and exploit it to the limit for their own ulterior purposes. Pegler similarly exploited some instances of graft and racketeering to use as a springboard for his general campaign against all labor unions.

More recently, however, Pegler has dropped all pretense to being a reformer of union abuses. He has written column and column attacking the whole labor union movement and all its principles, lock, stock and barrel.

One of his latest columns, for instance, refers to both CIO and AFL and to their leadership in such terms as the following:

"Professional manhunters . . . mercenaries and dictators . . . labor's most dangerous, greedy and relentless enemies . . . grafters . . . slave-hunting fake friends . . . extortions and thuggeries . . . money-loving and power-hungry rogues . . . infested with criminals . . . master racketeers."

Mr. Dooley's "open shop min" claimed they were for unions "if properly conducted." Hitler says he is for labor organization—in his Labor Front.

Even Pegler disclaims opposition to unions in general. He just opposes all existing labor unions, and would "reform" them by depriving them of all power to organize and hold their members or to better the workers' conditions.

Similarly the Congressional sponsors of all current open-shop, union-busting and wage-cutting bills claim they favor collective bargaining and just want to reform union "abuses."

But the character of their bills belies such claims. For they go far beyond the alleged abuses to destroy all existing protections for labor.

"It may properly be claimed that an operation is intended to cure a growth on a finger when the operation is confined to the growth or the finger," said Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, in testimony against one of these anti-union bills.

"But when the knife is plunged into the patient's heart, the claim that there is a growth on the finger cannot conceal the murderous intent."

While never allowing its attention to be diverted from its main war tasks, labor must mercilessly expose the Peglers and other labor-baiters for what they are—conscious or unconscious tools of the enemy whose divisionist activities are a stab in the back to our country's war effort.

A Few Facts

Hitler has based most of his propaganda on lies—and the bigger the lie the more effective he has considered it to be. His imitators and tools in this country have followed this technique in their anti-labor and other divisionist propaganda.

But facts are stubborn things—and the facts of the case will finally lick both Hitler and the anti-labor crowd. Here are a few samples of anti-labor lies and the facts that blast them:

Lie: Labor strikes and wage demands obstruct war production.

The Facts: The War Labor Board reports the practical disappearance of strikes in war industries. Only six one-hundredths of one percent of total hours worked were lost through strike idleness in the first quarter of 1942. This means 99.94% without any strike stoppages.

On the other hand, 450 million man-days were lost due to illness in the first 10 months of 1941—two thousand percent more time than was lost through strikes. Wages sufficient for adequate food, shelter and clothing increase production by cutting down time lost through illness.

Lie: Longer hours without overtime in the last war meant more production.

The Facts: American workers in war industries are now producing each hour 100, 200 and 300 percent more than they did in 1918 or 1919. This greater productivity means a greater burden on the workers' nervous and physical energy—and British experience has shown that undue lengthening of working hours actually means less production, due to fatigue.

Lie: Freezing of the open shop would result in less industrial friction.

The Facts: In the last war a voluntary agreement was made to freeze open and closed shop conditions. But many more strikes occurred under this arrangement (due to employers taking advantage of it for anti-union purposes) than have occurred under present conditions in this war.

U. S. Labor Department figures show that under the frozen shop agreement three to five times more strikes occurred on an average in each month of the last world war than have occurred in the four months from December to April, 1942, with labor free to seek union security.

'Union Profiteering'

To divert attention from real war profiteering, some labor-baiting Congressmen have made charges of "union profiteering." They seek to base them on the report of the House Naval Affairs Committee on union funds.

But any fair examination of these figures reveals some very different conclusions.

The net gain in union funds—due to increased membership and steadier work and dues payments—is little more than 12 million dollars for 117 international unions with more than six million members, in the 18 months between Oct. 1, 1939, and March 31, 1941.

This represents a net increase of only $2 per member, and the total is mere tiddlywinks as compared with the tens of millions of increased profits accruing to most major industrial corporations.

Furthermore, this total includes payments toward life insurance and other benefit funds maintained by unions. CIO unions, which generally do not maintain such insurance funds, showed net increases in funds of only about $1.25 per member.

Further examination of the figures reveals the remarkably economical way in which labor unions secure major improvements for their members with a minimum expenditure of the workers' money.

For instance, total union expenditures during the 18 months covered by the committee report amounted to only $11.10 per member, or 60 cents per member per month. Only part of this amount went to union administrative expenses, since much of it was accounted for by payment of life insurance policies and other benefits. CIO unions which do not maintain such benefit systems showed expenditures of only about 33 cents per member per month.

Considering the amount of service unions render to their members—and the substantial wage and other improvements won in the period covered—such expenditures are remarkably small.

All in all, the House committee's figures show that American labor unions operate on a most modest financial basis; and that the economy with which they serve their members cannot be matched by any other type of organization.

It is a showing of which labor can be truly proud.

Rent-Freezing Big Success In Nation's Capital; Unions Advise Need for Vigilance

WASHINGTON, May 2—If nationwide rent control works as well as it has in boomtown Washington, lots of people throughout the country are going to get a real break.

That was the comment of local CIO officials here following news that OPA Administrator Leon Henderson had designated 323 areas throughout the country as defense-rental zones under the price control act. The areas contain some 76,000,000 persons.

"The situation in Washington would have been in complete chaos and crisis without rent controls," commented Sidney Katz, CIO regional director here.

District of Columbia rents were frozen several months ago at the level of January 1, 1941. With the nation's capital rapidly expanding its population with a flood of government employes, rents would have gone sky-high without the controls, both CIO officials and housing experts concede.

In some cases tenants can sign "consent" orders—which are reviewable by District of Columbia rental authorities—permitting landlords to lift the rents over the January 1, 1941, levels. Most of these cases develop where landlords have instituted substantial improvements in the dwelling, it was said.

Rents for apartments in new buildings are set on the basis of rates in homes of a comparable character in order to keep the rents at a level rate.

JOB FOR UNIONS

The need for active participation by CIO groups in helping tenants guard their rights, and in "policing" the rental situation, was stressed by Milton Lowenthal, chairman of the rent committee of the Washington (D. C.) Industrial Union Council.

Pointing out that rent freezing is a measure designed specifically to protect the tenant, the union spokesman said the rent committee has been alert to help union members and others protect their interests. He stressed the fact that labor representation on local rent agencies goes a long way in this direction. In some cases, Lowenthal said, "pro-landlord" rent examiners have been partially responsible for defeating the aims of the rent-control setup.

CIO's INITIATIVE

Katz pointed out that in Washington the local CIO group was the first to take the initiative for rent control, and that its active fight for legislation and proper administration largely overcame the opposition of real estate groups.

Henderson's rent order designated rent control areas in every state except Idaho and North Dakota, and it placed most of the eastern seaboard with its heavy concentration of war industry workers, under the rent protection blanket. His order lifted the number of such zones from a previous 21 to 323.

In four-fifths of these localities the rents were frozen at the March 1, 1942, levels, although in most of these spots rents had already moved up substantially from pre-war rates.

THREATEN ACTION

In the remaining 64 zones, the freezing order was made applicable to January 1, April 1, or July 1, 1941—to remove what the OPA felt were excessive increases in the past year. OPA Administrator Henderson said that in any of the 323 areas where there "exist clear cases of excessive charges," steps will be taken to bring the rents down to a more normal rate.

Acting under the price control statute, the government official said steps will be taken against profiteering landlords.

Asserting that Americans pay nearly six billion dollars a year for their living quarters, he appealed for landlord-tenant cooperation to make the control work successfully.

"Property owners in defense-rental areas will perform a patriotic duty in making accommodations available at a reasonable rental. They should offer for rent every available extra room at a fair price.

"In some sections of the country rents have gone beyond reasonable bounds, doubling and tripling in many individual cases. Thousands of tenants who could not pay these increases have been forced out of homes without knowing where to find shelter.

"These conditions have slowed the recruiting of war labor.

"Elsewhere the upward rise in rents is just beginning. We must act swiftly and vigorously to halt this pressure for inflation."

Tsk Tsk

New York, May 2—Proposals for a $25,000 limit on individuals' income have thrown the Park Avenue millionaire set—and their real estate agents—into deep gloom.

The New York Times reported that the limit will "affect adversely the renting of the luxury-type apartments that have been costing the tenants $5,000 or more a year.

"Although some leases up to about $10,000 a year have been signed recently, activity in this class of apartment has been slowing down, brokers admitted," according to the Times.

Economic Outlook

New U. S. Tax Bill Threatened By NAM 'Putsch'

WASHINGTON, May 2—The tax bill is "one of the most important to labor ever considered by Congress," the Economic Outlook, monthly publication of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, declared in its current issue released today.

The nature of the tax bill, aside from the fact that some 25 billions of revenue will be raised by the Federal government next year, will determine whether or not revenue for victory will be raised from "those who can afford to pay or whether it will come out of the pockets of low-income working people and farmers," the Outlook said.

Greatest threat to a sound program is the pressure from the Natl. Association of Manufacturers and other reactionary groups for a general sales tax, the Outlook explained. Such a tax would be "the worst possible revenue measure which could be enacted."

FOUR TIMES HEAVIER

Quoting from Senator Robert M. LaFollette, the Outlook pointed out that a 5 per cent sales tax would bear four times as heavily on people with incomes under $2,000 as it would on those with incomes over $10,000. OPA figures, it added, show that 78.3 per cent of all families got less than $2,500 in 1941, receiving only 44.5 per cent of total U. S. income. Estimates for 1942 show that 75.3 per cent of families will get less than $2,500, which is only 39.6 per cent of the total income.

"If it is the intent, as reported, of the new tax bill to mop up the industrial purchasing power, it is obvious that the taxes must be placed upon incomes of above $2,500, not below," the Outlook said. "It is clear on the basis of these reasons why a sales tax would impair the war production effort."

The Outlook recited the CIO tax program as outlined by President Murray in testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee. This calls for increased taxes on war profits and large incomes, tightening of present loopholes, increases on estate and gift taxes and a strict avoidance of sales or wage taxes.

UNEMPLOYMENT

The CIO estimate of unemployment for February was given at 7,012,000, while the production index increased from 171 in January to 173 in February.

the country to the dangers such bills represent to the war production job.

WORKERS SPOKE UP

That job involved millions of letters and thousands of wires to Senators and Congressmen, involved repeated appearances in testimony by President Murray, scores of radio speeches, and a sustained publicity and educational job in the labor press and in pamphlets.

The fact that the House bill was blocked in committee and the Senate bill withdrawn by its author does not mean that both bills are dead.

The anti-labor appeasement group in Congress is still there. Their main object—cutting war production by smashing the labor movement—still remains.

FDR Offers Seven-Point Program

the remuneration received by individuals for their work.

4. To keep the cost of living from spiraling upward, we must stabilize the prices received by growers for the products of their lands.

5. To keep the cost of living from spiraling upward, we must encourage all citizens to contribute to the cost of winning this war by purchasing war bonds with their earnings instead of using those earnings to buy articles which are not essential.

6. To keep the cost of living from spiraling upward, we must ration all essential commodities of which there is a scarcity, so that they may be distributed fairly among consumers and not merely in accordance with financial ability to pay high prices for them.

7. To keep the cost of living from spiraling upward, we must discourage credit and installment buying, and encourage the paying off of debts, mortgages, and other obligations; for this promotes savings, retards excessive buying and adds to the amount available to the creditors for the purchase of war bonds.

PRICE CONTROL

The price control order fixes prices at the highest retail levels obtaining in the month of March, 1942. It goes into effect May 18. In issuing the order, OPA officials said that the cost of living has already gone up an average of 15 per cent, and must not be permitted to go higher if we are to avoid inflation.

In concluding his message to Congress, President Roosevelt described the war against Hitler as "a people's war," declaring that all the people must participate in it to the fullest extent to bring victory.

U. S. Wants No Defiance By Big Corporations, WLB Tells Shipyard

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, May 2—The War Labor Board this week ordered a modified maintenance-of-membership system at the Federal Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. in Kearney, N. J., and coupled its ruling with a sharp warning to U. S. Steel—owner of the company—not to try to fight the board and the government.

The WLB, with its employer representatives dissenting, ruled that with minor exceptions, members of the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers at the company's huge Kearny, N. J., yards must retain their standing in the union.

The decision brought a 10-month dispute at the property a step closer to settlement.

Under the Board's compromise ruling, workers who withdraw from the union or who are expelled from it, may continue in their jobs by agreeing to a voluntary check-off of an amount equal to the union dues. Such funds would be turned over to the union by the company.

Whether the corporation, a subsidiary of powerful U. S. Steel, will accept the WLB decision was still a matter of doubt. Nathan Miller, one-time governor of New York State and now counsel for Big Steel, had previously advised the Board that he would tell the company to refuse decision which in any way borders upon the union shop.

UNION ACCEPTS

The union, through Pres. John Green, immediately notified the WLB of its acceptance. Green commented:

"We are pleased to accept the WLB's decision as a step towards complete harmony between workers and management at the Federal Shipbuilding Co. We pledge to the nation to work with renewed vigor in the interests of the war ship construction program in order that the goals set before the country by Pres. Roosevelt may not only be met but be exceeded.

"While this decision does not meet our original demands, it is quite acceptable in view of the war emergency. The Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, together with the other unions of the CIO, are once again demonstrating their fidelity to the pledge that there shall be no interruptions in production, and that the number one task of American organized labor is to win the war."

WARN COMPANY

The shipyard was operated by the Navy for a period of several months, during which production rates bounded upward. When it reverted to private management, the union and the company again became deadlocked and the issue again reverted to the government arbitration agency.

Frank Graham, head of North Carolina University and writer of the WLB's majority opinion, told newspapermen that he could not conceive of a corporation at this time refusing to accept such a decision. He was backed up by William H. Davis, WLB chairman, who hinted that the government might seize the plant again if management balked at the Board's order.

POINT TO RECORD

Pointing to labor's magnificent no-strike record in the first quarter of the year, the WLB declared:

"An increasing number of companies recognize certain values in the maintenance of membership clause. These managers hold some such views as these:

"A stable, responsible union is better for management than an unstable, irresponsible union . . . Cooperation between the company and the union for the maintenance of membership can make for cooperative maintenance of production on higher levels.

"In the North American aviation plant, the outright maintenance of membership clause has facilitated responsible industrial relations and promoted increased production. A survey of the Northwest lumber industries indicates that the maintenance of membership clause has helped to stabilize the strife-worn Northwest woods, and has helped to promote vital production for the war."

WANT NO DEFIANCE

The decision also contained a sharp warning to U. S. Steel that this is no time for defiance of the Board's ruling.

"Failure to settle this dispute would reveal both lack of the acceptance of the democratic process and a lack of understanding of the decisive role of ships in the world strategy of the United Nations against the long-gathered might of the Fascist-Axis powers," he WLB said.

Speaking directly to the company, the Board added:

"In the momentous struggle between the United Nations and the Axis powers, let us have not defiance of the nation, no mustering of disunity, no measuring and testing of the comparative sovereignty of the United States Steel Corp. and the United States of America."

GIVE TO HELP OUR ALLIES—THROUGH THE CIO WAR RELIEF

Tory Columnist Counsels Company to 'Defy' U. S.

New York, May 2—Mark Sullivan, columnist for the country's most reactionary die-hards, thinks that U. S. Steel has a "public duty" to defy the War Labor Board decision in the Federal Shipbuilding company case.

Commenting on the WLB demand that the company sign a contract under which union members would have to remain in the organization for the duration of the pact, Sullivan found the decision "utterly new" . . . containing "seriously explosive possibilities."

If the company exercises its "perfect right . . . even its public duty" to resist the decision, the government could take it over, the columnist said.

If the company accepts, Sullivan foresees that a "deeply vital principle will have been lost—lost to the country, to the Constitution, to the whole tradition of individual liberty." Union members at Kearny, anxious to win security so they can build ships to fight the Axis, were less concerned about this alleged loss of rights than Sullivan—a foe of unions since way back.

Union Plan Outlines Methods for Ending Shipyard Delays

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Declaring that the union "bitterly resents" charges by Maritime Commission head Emory S. Land that "loafing and agitation" by workers are responsible for shipbuilding lags, the CIO Marine and Shipbuilding union today presented a brief on the actual conditions responsible.

The brief was presented to Edward Macauley, a vice chairman of the Maritime Commission, by Ross Leroy of Boston and William Johnston of New York, both international representatives of the union. It consisted of "a typical cross section of the industry," and presented an account of conditions in Atlantic coast marine repair and outfitting yards.

CONCEAL NAMES

Names of the yards examined were not revealed, for military reasons. At "X Repair Yard," the brief said, there is one full shift that works 10 hours a day for four days a week, and eight hours the other three. The night shift is only a skeleton crew. The machine shop, equipped with "precious lathes and drills," stands idle except for one 10-hour shift, while men wait in the yards for parts.

In "Yards Y and Z," only one of two floating drydocks is in use, while three graving docks are completely idle, despite the fact that a nearby Navy Yard is jammed up with repair work. Use of these facilities would release the Navy Yard for much-needed new building, the brief pointed out.

IDLE MEN

Replying to Land's anti-union blast before a Congress committee that shipyard workers were idle, the brief agreed that men were not working, explaining that the reason was the same that kept machines and equipment idle—"inefficient planning by management and the Maritime Commission."

"Men are idle during the day because there is no work," the brief said. "Bottlenecks in key places along the production line and shortages of materials, both due to incompetent management, are the principal causes. Our members want to work. They know we need ships to lick Hitler. They are not trying to line their pockets at the the expense of the public. We say—give us the work to do and we will do it as fast as we know how."

UNION PLAN

The brief outlined the union plan for breaking bottlenecks and increasing production. The plan called for better scheduling of repair work, use of repair yards to outfit vessels after they have been launched, and staggering work to use equipment to full capacity.

The plan further called for central hiring halls to end the shape-up whereby many men are kept idle waiting for jobs that do not come in, for enforcement of zone standards in the stabilization agreements, for elimination of all current anti-union practices such as discrimination, arbitrary firing, etc., and for setting up a comprehensive training program.

The brief noted that similar plans had been presented to the Maritime Commission and to the Navy Department, that they had been apparently ignored, and warned that the workers were becoming increasingly restless and dissatisfied. "Our nation must win this war," the brief said. "To do so, it must build more ships and still more ships. We are going to do everything in our power to help our nation do just that."

CIO Women Cite Child Care As Prime Wartime Need

By ELEANOR FOWLER

THE importance to victory of healthy children and the absolute necessity of winning the war if we are to ensure our children's welfare are highlighted in the statement issued by Mrs. Faye Stephenson, President of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO, on May 1, Child Health Day.

"We women in the CIO Auxiliaries join in celebrating National Child Health Day with deep feeling. The suffering of the children of our allies, England, China and the Soviet Union, is a constant reminder to us that good food, good care, good medical attention are not all that is needed to make children healthy. Thousands and thousands of children have died from fascist bombs. Thousands have been tortured by barbarous fascist troops.

"Only if we wipe fascism off the earth can we really protect the health of our children.

"We have pledged, as our men have, to do our utmost to help win the war. We know that a standard of living which will enable us to meet the needs of our families is basic to that victory.

"We have watched prices climb during the past year to a point where many of us have to choose between eggs and orange juice—where enough milk means not enough meat. We have fought for retail price ceilings and we pledge our organized strength to see to it that those ceilings are observed. This is the first plank in our child health program.

Care For Children

"Our second plank is good care for children whose mothers must work in war industry or in essential civilian jobs. The number of those mothers is increasing rapidly. Women will not be able to give their best work to war industry unless they are sure that their children are well cared for.

"Our members are working in cities throughout the country for adoption of community programs of nursery schools for children from two to five, before and after school care for grade school children and planned recreation for adolescents to meet the needs of these part time war orphans.

"In this period of over-crowded housing, of lack of full time home care for many children, medical attention is of vital importance. We hail the government program of immunization of all children to prevent epidemic as part of a national program for adequate medical care.

"Our Cleveland Auxiliary Council has led the way in arranging for free immunization of all children of CIO families at CIO headquarters all day today, May 1.

"With the cooperation of the Cleveland CIO, leaflets have been distributed urging all members to take advantage of this opportunity. Doctors have given their time, the health department has given the serum. We are proud of this practical demonstration of the contribution we can make to child health.

Union Kids Help Salvage Drive

Detroit, May 2.—(FP)—The two children of a UAW-CIO organizer and two neighbor kids, busy with soapbox racing, became infected with the victory spirit and decided to go all-out for salvage of metals and other material needed to win the war.

Intl. Rep. Daniel M. Gallagher reports that the quartet enlisted other kids in the drive, collected considerable salvage, interested housewives in conservation and set up a regular collection service.

They also put their organization at the service of the neighborhood air warden for leaflet distribution and will devote all proceeds from sale of salvage to buy equipment for fighting air-raid fires.

WPB Acts on Union Complaint, Raps GM

Washington, May 2—Acting upon complaints filed several weeks ago, by the CIO United Automobile Workers, the War Production Board today accused General Motors of violating priority orders on scarce metals.

As punishment, the company was prohibited from making any but functional replacement parts for a three-month period. The union had charged the GM Ternstedt division with turning out radiator grilles and other fancy trimmings by the scores of thousands.

WPB estimated that General Motors had wasted, in the manufacture of such knick-knacks, 10,259 pounds of chrome steel, 9,239 pounds of primary aluminum and 11,492 pounds of secondary aluminum.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

Two important victories were won in the South. The Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, CIO, came out with a splendid victory at the Alabama Shipbuilding Dry Dock at Mobile, receiving 3,080 votes, against 1,254 for the AFL, and 117 for no union. This was accomplished after the most vicious campaigns put on by the AFL resorting to a new low ebb.

A second splendid victory in the South was in Memphis, Tenn., where the CIO secured an overwhelming vote at the Firestone Tire Company over the AFL and no union. The AFL had bargaining rights in this plant heretofore and the result of the election was: URWA-CIO, 911; AFL, 521, no union, 3. With this victory, the workers at the General Motors plant there are enrolling in the CIO in increasing numbers.

H. R. Ballard, CIO Regional Director in Nebraska, reports a fine achievement by the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee with a vote of 335 for PWOC-CIO, as against 128 for no union.

Western National Representative Adolph Germer advises that the CIO won an election at the Bellingham Plywood Corporation in Bellingham, Wash., with a vote of 168 for IWA-CIO, as against 67 for AFL. The AFL previously had a back-door contract here signed approximately two weeks before the election was ordered. John Hawkins, IWA organizer, assisted materially in this victory.

Frank Bender, CIO Regional Director in Baltimore, reports winning the election at the Gordon Sleep Rite Company in behalf of the United Furniture Workers of America, with a vote of 29 against 11 for no union.

Powers Hapgood, CIO regional director in Indianapolis, and CIO Field Representative Elmer Whitman came out with colors flying at the Hoosier Veneer Company in that city. After numerous efforts, lasting over a period of years, they were successful in getting a Labor Board ruling reinstating 12 employes with back pay amounting to $8,119.47. These workers are members of the CIO Local Industrial Union No. 607.

A. F. Kojetinsky, CIO regional director in St. Louis, sent in three applications for Local Industrial Union charters. These are in addition to other charters he obtained for SWOC, and, follows the recent shoe and steel election victories in that area.

From Paul R. Christopher we learn that the labor-hating employers of the Southern States Industrial Council are still busy creating dis-unity in the country and trying to fight labor instead of Hitler. They have a 10-point program attacking everything that labor has struggled for for a number of years, as well as casting reflections upon the officials of the United States Government.

Changes In Regional Offices

The following changes, through resignations, have been made on the CIO staff:

Adolph Germer is assigned as National Representative, supervising and coordinating the work of our regional directors and organizers in the following states: Utah, Arizona, Oregon, Washington, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming, Nevada, New Mexico and Idaho.

Al F. Hartung, CIO Assistant Director of the IWA-CIO drive, has been assigned regional director for the state of Oregon with offices in Portland, to take the place of William Dalrymple, resigned. Frank Bonacci is assigned as regional director for Colorado with offices in Denver, to take the place of Frank Hefferly, resigned. Roy Atkinson is assigned as acting CIO regional director in the state of Washington, with offices in Seattle, to take the place of Richard Francis, resigned.

Sylvester Graham is assigned as regional director for Montana, with offices in Helena, to take the place of W. A. Boyle, resigned. Paul R. Christopher is assigned as regional director for Tennessee, with offices in Knoxville, to take the place of William Turnblazer, resigned. Frank Hardesty is assigned as regional director for Texas, with offices in Houston, to take the place of Maurice Dineen, resigned. These men are all experienced, energetic and enthusiastic in their work.

The Leather Workers Division of the IF&LWUA held their convention last week in Detroit with a fine delegation. This division of the IF&LWUA has grown more than 500 per cent since its affiliation with that organization. I had the pleasure of addressing that convention. Delegates are all determined to keep up their forward march until they have accomplished the job of completely organizing their industry.

Correction

Through an unfortunate error, the italicized phrase was dropped out of the sentence, "Labor has demonstrated beyond a doubt that it is loyal on all issues involved and determined to win the war in the voluntary way as patriotic citizens and in such a manner that no restrictive legislation could." Leaving out this phrase made it appear that voluntary measures "were tried in Great Britain and failed." The meaning, of course, is exactly the opposite.

Another error in last week's column made the following sentence read: "President Roosevelt, Chairman Donald Nelson of the War Production Board and Chairman Paul McNutt of the Man Power Mobilization Board and other responsible government officials are convinced that labor is doing it all." The sentence should have read, "labor is doing its all."

Textile Union Asks Dime Raise In New England

Boston, May 2—New England representatives of the CIO Textile Workers Union, meeting here last week end, set in motion a campaign to win dime-an-hour wage increases for 175,000 woolen and worsted workers in the six northeast states.

Pres. Emil Rieve said locals had been instructed to open contract negotiations immediately.

"In comparison with other vital war industries, among which textiles rank as the third most important, the textile workers are the lowest paid," Rieve pointed out.

Clothing Workers Get Pay Boost

New York, May 2—A general pay increase of 10 cents an hour covering 150,000 union members in the men's and boys' clothing industry is scheduled to go into effect Monday, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers announced here.

The raise was negotiated some weeks ago in conferences between the union and the employers, with the effective date being agreed upon at a final meeting on April 6. The union had asked that the increase become effective early in April, while the employers wanted it postponed to the end of May. As a compromise, the date of May 4 was finally decided upon.

The 10 cent increase applies to all week workers, with a proportionate increase for piece workers.

News From Abroad

Toledano Sees Hemisphere Unity

Mexico City—(ALN)—After conferring with William Green and Philip Murray in Washington, Lombardo Toledano, president of the Federation of Latin American Workers, believes that hemispheric labor cooperation is not only possible but imminent, he told his first press conference here since his return from his recent visit to the U. S.

"I went to the U. S. to carry out the resolutions of the November Congress of the CTAL," Toledano said, "which as you remember called for expressing to the labor unions of the U. S. the desire of the Latin American labor movement for continental unity against Nazism and fascism.

"I spoke at length with the leaders of the AFL and CIO, and we agreed on a program of action for the labor movement of the continent, details of which will be announced in the next few weeks. In this way, the defense of the hemisphere will become the task not only of the various governments, but also of the principal popular groups."

Soviet Unions Training Nurses

Moscow (ALN)—Many of the Soviet Union's famous nurses, who have been known to report for duty by parachute, carry a union label. The first crop of graduates of union courses in nursing is now moving up to the front.

As the result of a resolution of the All-Union Control of Trade Unions, short-term nursing courses have been organized in all union headquarters, factory recreation rooms and union-owned community centers. There are over six thousand of these community centers in the U. S. S. R.

Working women attend classes after hours; courses for wives of workers, organized by the women's auxiliaries, are held during the day.

British Union World's Biggest?

London—The possibility that Britain may shortly have the world's biggest union, comprising over one million workers in key war factories and shipyards, has arisen following a conference in York of delegates from the Amalgamated Engineering Union, Confederation of Shipbuilding and Engineering Unions, and the National Union of Foundry Workers.

Plans were made at the conference to unite these three groups—of which the A. E. U., comprising mainly skilled workers in the war industries, alone has 650,000 members.

At present Britain's biggest union is the Transport and General Workers' Union, with nearly 800,000 members. The TGWU is a confederation of different groups, including longshoremen, public employes, and all transport workers except railwaymen.

Chinese Workers Help Morale

Chungking (ALN)—Thanks to the activities of girls employed in the textile factories of Kunming, much-bombed terminus of vital supply routes from India and Burma into China, the people of Kunming no longer have to waste the daylight hours during Japanese raids.

Due to the lack of shelter within the city, the entire population is obliged to leave as soon as the alert sounds and take shelter in the surrounding fields. As the front has approached Kunming, raids have occurred more often.

Recognizing the serious effect on the war effort of this loss of time, the textile workers, organized into a Workers' Salvation Corps, have met the difficulty.

Britain Speeds Councils

LONDON, April 23.—Revolutionary changes in the character of British industry are heralded by the production committee elections now being held in all government-owned Royal Ordnance factories.

As soon as those works councils are established, Ernest Bevin, minister of Labor, intends to extend the system to all private plants working on war contracts. "It is my policy to promote works councils everywhere," he says.

10 FROM UNION

On each council in the Royal Ordnance factories there will be ten workers and ten representatives of management. Qualifications for the workers' representatives are union membership and a minimum of twelve months' service with the plant. But all workers, union and non-union alike, and of any length of service, have a vote.

Elections will be held annually. There is no intention to return to the old ways after the war.

Management and workers, will have separate secretaries to prepare items for the agenda. Management provides facilities for meetings, which must take place during working hours. Workers receive normal earnings for attendance.

Marsden Jones, prominent manufacturer, has just declared: "There are born leaders among the rank and file in industry—give them a chance to show their mettle. In war and peace there should be fewer high executives and more men and women with a measure of responsibility."

RESPONSIBLE TASKS

The management of one large privately owned factory in London has made the works council responsible for the future running of the entire plant. The reason for management's action in this case was persistent late coming by workers, due to transport difficulties caused by disposal of workers' homes after the great bombing raids.

Labor Editors, WPB to Meet For Discussion

New York, May 2—Editors of trade union papers in the New England and Middle Atlantic states meet here Saturday, May 9 at the first of a series of regional conferences called by the War Production Board.

Purpose of the meeting is to discuss issues involving unions and the war, and to further cement relations between the labor press and the government agencies.

The meeting will be held at Harkness Hall on the Columbia University campus.

'Convert to War' Furniture Union Asks Employers

NEW YORK, May 2—Conversion of the nation's furniture industry to wartime production is long overdue, the United Furniture Workers' general executive board warned at a three-day meeting here.

With UFWA Pres. Morris Muster presiding, the board set as the union's No. 1 goal development and acceptance of such a conversion program.

"The furniture, bedding and related industries, with a quarter of a million skilled workers and the most modern productive equipment and plants, have not been integrated into the general victory program," the union said.

"The failure to immediately draw the efficiency and productive potentialities of these and other thousands of workers into the channel of our war effort seriously jeopardizes the complete victory over fascism."

The board instructed officers of the union to present to War Production Chief Donald Nelson plans for placing war work orders for civilian and military furniture "in the various geographical markets of the furniture industry." It also urged "proper coordination and pooling of small plants in these areas" and re-training, where necessary, of furniture workers to make them ready for war jobs.

In other resolutions the UFWA executive group called for CIO participation in a joint council with representatives of British and Soviet trade unions; urged the opening of a western front to defeat Hitler; praised the government's action banning Coughlin's Social Justice; called for the freedom of Earl Browder; attacked racial discrimination in industry; criticized the activities of John L. Lewis as "at variance with the general victory program and with the policies of the CIO"; and voiced "unqualified support" of the policies of CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

Union Shop Won for 4,500 In Michigan

Detroit, May 2—A union shop agreement covering 4,500 employes in four plants of the Eaton Manufacturing Co. was announced this week by the CIO United Automobile Workers. The plants are at Cleveland, Detroit, Marshall and Battle Creek, Mich.

The union recognition clause provides that all employes who are members of the union must continue in good standing for the duration of the agreement. Richard E. Reisinger, UAW director of the Eaton Dept., in announcing the contract, said that the union now has 100 per cent membership at the plants.

The agreement also provides that probationary employes must become members of the union at the expiration of their probationary period and calls for $75 vacation pay for male and $55 for female employes with more than one year's seniority.

Harvester Parleys Zoom

Chicago, May 2.—All major points involving union contracts in the eight International Harvester plants covered in the recent decision handed down by the War Labor Board were settled in negotiations here this week between union and management officials, the CIO Farm Equipment Workers' Organizing Committee stated here.

"The union security ruling in the International Harvester dispute is of particular importance to the FEWOC, since 16 of its affiliated locals are demanding a union shop clause in the contracts they are negotiating," the union declared in a statement issued here.

FEWOC officials anticipated final signing of the Harvester contracts by the end of the week, by which time the deadline set for this action by the WLB will have been exceeded.

"Retroactive wage raises are to go into effect as soon as the signatures of the parties involved are affixed to the contracts, the FEWOC said.

Rubber Union Takes Firestone Poll By 2-1

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 2.—The CIO's southern organizing campaign took a big step forward here when the United Rubber Workers, CIO, won an NLRB election at the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. plant here.

It was considered significant that the CIO victory came after the men worked a year under an AFL contract.

"Experience has shown us that only through the CIO can we get the kind of pay and conditions we Southern workers need," declared a tire builder. "Thank God we are not falling so much for propaganda to divide us and keep us barely at a subsistence level. Thank God for the CIO that has helped us to understand these things."

Directing the Firestone drive was URWA Field Rep. Forrest M. Dickenson, assisted by CIO Rep. Harry Doll.

HAYWOOD'S COMMENT

Allan S. Haywood, CIO Organizational Director, hailed the victory as "an outstanding indication that the working people of the South want genuine organization as represented by the CIO."

"We interpret this vote as a mandate from the people of the South to push our drive vigorously and forcefully in spite of all obstacles," he said.

In a joint statement issued after the election Dickenson and Doll stated:

"We shall open negotiations on a new contract as soon as possible after we are certified. We have a mandate from the Firestone workers to secure improvements in their working and living conditions—conditions which are substandard and come well within President Roosevelt's definition of conditions which can and should be improved.

"At the same time, we are committed without reservation to the CIO policy of unqualified support and active assistance to the war effort. It shall be our purpose to see that such support is made effective at Firestone now that the CIO is the recognized bargaining agent."

Leather Union Membership Up 100% In Year

DETROIT, May 2.—Membership in the Leather Division of the International Fur & Leather Workers Union has doubled during the past year, Pres. Augustus J. Tomlinson reported to the 250 delegates attending the Leather Division's convention which opened here April 24.

In his opening speech, Tomlinson told of the steps taken by the union's affiliates to aid the war program. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have gone for War Bonds, he said, and thousands of the members were in uniform.

"All-out production to back up our boys in uniform to give maximum support to our government and its allies for victory in the battle to crush the fascist aggressors, to preserve our priceless heritage of liberty, freedom and program—that's the most important job American labor has today," Tomlinson declared.

HAYWOOD SEES VICTORY

Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, who addressed the convention on the second day, also spoke of labor's role in the war. "Free labor will outproduce slave labor anywhere," he said. "We do not count what we have to do today as sacrifices, but as a privilege, to win the war quickly."

Declaring that victory by Hitler would mean the destruction of American trade unions, Haywood said, "We'll never give in. We'll work to win.

"I know that with your support and that of all the CIO's millions of members, the CIO war program of giving all to our fighting forces will speed the inevitable defeat of the enemy."

Honorary union membership to General Douglas MacArthur for "his courage, valor, foresight and profound knowledge of military strategy" was voted unanimously by the convention after a rousing demonstration by the delegates.

Unstinting support of the government and an immediate offensive by British and American forces to launch a western front in Europe to achieve victory jointly with the Red Army was voted in a resolution which followed an address by IFLWU International President Ben Gold.

Iron Union Opens 67th Convention

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 2—Delegates to the 67th annual convention of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers which opened here April 28 at the union's headquarters listened to the discussions of the vital issues facing the union as it met for one of the most momentous sessions in its long history.

One of the oldest unions in America, the Amalgamated was formed in 1876 from a group of craft unions "in a day when only skilled craftsmen with their skill as a shield dared brave the wrath of employers and organize into unions," a union official said.

MERGER WITH SWOC

In addition to problems arising out of the war, the outstanding issue to come before the convention is the question of merging with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee when the SWOC convention meets in Cleveland May 19-22. Delegates expect an extended discussion of the matter before the convention adjourns.

The opening session was attended by a number of members of the Women's Auxiliaries lodges at Carnegie, Canonsburg and Bridgeville, Pa.

Murray Scores 'Sniping'

PITTSBURGH, May 9 — Pres. Philip Murray lashed back this week at a campaign of slander and "sabotage" against his leadership of CIO; demanded that certain officials of the UMWA cease their conspiracies and "foul" propaganda; and urged the miners' union to resume its dues payments to the CIO.

On three occasions—at a Pennsylvania CIO convention session, at a steel union conference, and at a meeting of his own local of the UMW—Murray defended his record as a union man and a labor leader and exposed the campaign against him.

Murry said that the two "charges" against him apparently involved his "conscientious" fulfillment of duties as a UMW vice-president and his constant support of President Roosevelt. He praised the President's record of service to labor, and urged continued union support of the Administration's war effort.

The CIO leader said he had been informed by AFL officials that UMW Pres. John L. Lewis's surprise demand for labor "accouplement"—a demand concerning which Murray had no advance warning—followed secret conversations between Lewis and William Hutcheson, head of the AFL carpenters union.

Murray pointed to the successful record of the CIO-AFL joint committee, which has conferred at frequent intervals with President Roosevelt on problems confronting labor in the war crisis.

N. Y. Times Signs First Guild Pact

New York City, May 9.—A one-year contract covering news and editorial department employes has been signed between the New York Times and the CIO Newspaper Guild of New York, after many months of negotiations. This is the first agreement covering editorial employes to be signed by the Times.

In a statement issued after the pact was signed, Nat Einhorn, executive director of the N.Y. Guild, brought to a conclusion more than seven years of differences between the management and the union.

"Certain differences remain. The Guild has agreed to a contract without the union shop, although it believes more strongly than ever that the ethical and economic welfare of the newspaper industry and its editorial workers would be raised through widespread acceptance of the union shop.

WAR PROBLEMS

"The war has made clearer than ever the need for union security as a positive contributory factor in uniting the nation to the end that labor and capital may join single-mindedly in one great effort to defeat fascism this year.

"The Guild or union shop is not now and never was a menace to freedom of the press. We believe the war has brought to the realization of the reading public recognition of that fact that freedom of the press is misused and therefore menaced by certain publishers and not by the organized newspapermen of this country."

The union's secretary pledged that the Guild would do its full share in maintaining harmonious relations.

Anti-Semites Carry Ball For Hitler, CIO Head Asserts

NEW YORK, May 9—The CIO "opposes all attempts to single out any section of our population for discrimination," CIO Pres. Philip Murray said here in answering a request from the Jewish Survey, monthly magazine, for a statement on anti-semitism.

"Particularly at the present time do we regard any evidences of anti-Semitism as pernicious and dangerous in the extreme," Murray said. "Any persons or groups who encourage such tendencies are playing the game of Hitler and the other enemies of our country and our democracy.

"All decent and patriotic Americans will join in stamping out any anti-Semitic trends the moment the first symptoms appear, lest this diseased state of mind develop into a national menace."

77,180 Voted CIO In 3 Months

Washington, May 9—CIO unions polled a total of 77,180 votes and won 304 elections during the first three months of the year, according to figures published in the Labor Relations Reporter. AFL unions polled 46,151 total votes and won 245 out of 447 elections in which they participated. The CIO was on the ballot in 432 elections.

A sharp decrease in the total number of elections held during the three-month period ending March 31, 1932 was revealed by the figures. Votes cast in all elections totaled 176,119, nearly 100,000 below the average of 275,001 for the three preceding periods.

CIO unions won 195 out of 249 elections in which no other union was on the ballot, losing 49, with returns from 5 undeterminate. Total votes cast for the CIO numbered 32,076 with 13,052 opposed.

In 46 elections in which CIO unions competed with independents, the CIO won 25 with a total vote of 17,069, to 20 for independent groups with a total vote of 11,736, and 1,858 for no union.

CIO Oil Union Plan Asks More Output, Faster Transit

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, May 9—An eight-point program, designed to spur production of aviation gas and speed transportation of petroleum from the oil fields and refineries to the big consuming centers, has been submitted to the War Production Board by the CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union.

Drafted along the same constructive lines as previous CIO programs for other mass production industries, the union's suggestions were sent to WPB Chief Donald Nelson by President O. A. Knight of the OWIU.

Major problems facing the petroleum industry and the government can best be solved by a joint production committee on which labor, government and industry will be represented, Knight told Nelson.

EIGHT POINTS

The eight sections of the union's "production and conservation program" concern these current problems: (1) development of workers' skills; (2) workers' training in fire prevention, first aid and blackout precautions; (3) transportation; (4) conservation of tetra-ethyl lead; (5) conservation of steel through use of all available drilling equipment; (6) polling of production resources of small refineries; (7) standardization of wages and hours; (8) transfer of all workers to jobs in essential plants.

The oil union leader asserted that the petroleum industry "has not as yet reached the highest efficiency in transporting petroleum and petroleum products through pipe lines. Although we are faced with the problem of increasing pipe line facilities, we believe that greater quantities of oil and gasoline could be sent through existing lines.

"We believe that ways and means should be devised to obtain the utmost of service from existing facilities and to encourage the workers on pipelines to a greater effort in obtaining the maximum throughout. This is, in part, a question of morale—one that is especially well suited to the efforts of a government-management-labor committee."

Knight also advocated the construction of steel reinforced concrete oil tankers which could plough the waters of the nation's inland waterways safe from Axis submarine attacks. Thomas Bloodworth, a member of the OWIU in Texas City, Tex., has developed plans for such a type of ship, the WPB was told, "which can be cheaply constructed within a short period of time."

PLANE GAS SUPPLY

In another section of the program, the union warned against possible shortages in the 100-octane gasoline necessary to propel the planes of the country's growing airforce.

"It is our opinion that the continued production of 100-octane gasoline in sufficient quantities to supply our airforce makes it imperative that the available supplies of tetra-ethyl lead be reserved for exclusive use in aviation fuel," the union said.

Knight recalled that one of the United Nations, faced with a tetra-ethyl shortage, tried using benzoil in its gasoline mixture. The benzoil dissolved the rubber lining of bullet-proof gasoline tanks and ruined the engines of the planes, he said.

To take the place of tetra-ethyl in civilian gasoline, a "reforming process" was developed as early as 1933, and is capable of stepping octane ratings up to 72 or 75.

WPB Chief Nelson was told of the ever-present menace of fires in the oil fields and refinery districts of the nation, and was urged to approve a program of training oil workers at once to combat the serious fires and other dangers "which will be the inevitable result of bombing."

Booklet Bares Plight of Unprotected

New York, May 9—Millions of agricultural and industrial workers in the South, both Negro and white, live and work unprotected by social and labor legislation, according to a pamphlet just published by the American Labor Education Service, Inc.

The 36-page booklet, called "Southern Workers Outside the Legislative Pale," is written by a group of writers informed on the subjects covered and is edited by H. C. Nixon. It was prepared by the Southern School for Workers.

The co-authors describe the labor scene, the low wages, minimum standards, the inadequacies of the unemployemnt compensation program; the undemocratic features of the poll tax and the problems of race differentials.

The articles are written by Lois MacDonald, E. J. Eberling, Charles S. Johnson, and Jennings Perry, in addition to Mr. Nixon.

Town Meetings Undergo Revival Through OCD

Washington, May 9—America is reviving the town meeting—earliest expression of democracy in action—to prepare civilian defense against air raids and other possible enemy attack.

Acting under the stimulus of the Office of Civilian Defense, hundreds of communities are getting together Saturday afternoons to discuss and lay plans not only for air raid defense but for other war problems, the OCD said from national headquarters here.

LABOR SHOULD JOIN

The OCD is also emphasizing the need for labor organizations to join in the programs with other citizens' groups. The programs, as outlined in the OCD "News Letter," center on such subjects as war bond sales, increasing local war production, send-offs for local boys going into the armed forces, war relief, etc., as well as the protective side of civilian defense.

"This is everybody's war," the News Letter says. 'The government can guide, suggest, encourage. But, in order to guide properly, suggest wisely, to encourage with confidence-inspiring leadership — in order to perform its duties to the best advantage, government must have the people's help, their advice, and wise counsel."

WLB Writes Contract—Complete

Washington, May 9—A complete contract was drawn up by the National War Labor Board for the first time in action taken last week to settle a dispute between the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and the Arcade Malleable Co., Inc.

The three-man panel which handled the case reported to the board that the detailed collective bargaining agreement embodying its suggestions and recommendations was drafted because "the efforts to reconcile the conflicting points of view have been unavailing, and were the parties left to their own devices, we feel that this matter would be interminably prolonged and perhaps never consummated."

The contract drawn up by the panel was signed by the union but rejected by the company. The panel then adopted the contract as its unanimous recommendation for a "fair and equitable" settlement of the dispute and referred the matter to the whole board.

The board approved the panel's action and by a unanimous vote issued an order directing both parties to accept the contract. The agreement provides for a general pay increase of 5 cents an hour.

Wire Union Warns Of 'Bottleneck' Through Merger

WASHINGTON, May 9 — The American Communications Association, CIO, yesterday blasted an attempt of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies to eliminate essential telegraph facilities through a consolidation.

President Joseph Selly, testifying at a hearing before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee on a bill to permit merger of the two companies, charged that the company effort to salvage the investment of a few thousand security holders would lead to a bottleneck in the nation's wire communications which might be disastrous to the war effort.

COUNTER-PROPOSAL

The ACA proposed instead that there should be an immediate drive by the government to rehabilitate the telegraph carriers in order to insure the transmission of telegraph messages at war time tempo. The union presented detailed testimony from the operating rooms of the telegraph companies demonstrating that low wages were driving the workers into other fields with a consequent deterioration of telegraph service.

Pointing to the growing load on the long distance lines of the telephone companies and the increasing difficulty in handling the wartime business of the telegraph companies, Selly warned that the communications load would rise as the nation climbed toward the war production goals set by President Roosevelt.

Unless steps are taken to make effective use of all wire communications, Selly declared, "the tempo of the great American workshop will have to be geared down to that of an overloaded and sluggish communications system."

PAST EXPERIENCE

The ACA brief submitted to the Senate Committee pointed out that there had never been a shortage of "experts" to testify in behalf of special interests that the nation had adequate capacity for the production of such essential war materials as aluminum, steel and rubber, in which shortages subsequently developed.

Selly charged that the telegraph company "experts" were similarly misleading the nation in regard to wire facilities.

Murray Assails Slander Campaign, Demands UMW Officials End 'Sabotage'

PITTSBURGH, May 9—In a slashing attack on slander-spreaders within the ranks of the United Mine Workers' officialdom, Philip Murray reviewed for the benefit of 700 Pennsylvania CIO convention delegates his long record of service to the UMW and the tremendous gains for CIO during his 17 months as president.

Revealing for the first time that CIO membership has increased by 1,628,000 dues payers since he assumed office, Murray recalled how he had been begged to accept the presidency at the time that John L. Lewis retired in November, 1940.

"That job was given to me with the distinct understanding and the solemn pledge 'right or wrong, right or wrong, you shall have my support,'" Murray said, in apparent reference to a speech by Lewis at the Pennsylvania CIO convention a year ago. "I have not received that support," he added.

The CIO president re-affirmed his own support of President Roosevelt, and harked back to the pre-1933 days when the United Mine Workers was a depression-battered organization.

HAILS FDR RECORD

Under the administration of President Roosevelt—the first in our lifetime to indicate "such a tremendous sympathetic interest in the downtrodden"—the UMWA organized half-a-million workers in six weeks, Murray pointed out, and thereby paved the way for the successful creation of the CIO.

The CIO leader urged the mine union—which has paid no per capita to CIO since January 15—to pay its dues to the organization, and derided the claim of some UMW officials that its gifts of $1,665,000 to CIO constitute a debt to that union.

WANTS DUES PAID

He charged that in the State of West Virginia, where the question of debt is non-existent, the UMW has paid no dues to the state CIO council since December; and that the UMW's state secretary-treasurer has urged other mine union officers to take similar action in the other states.

"I don't mind telling you that that's sabotage; that's dirty, lousy low-life sabotage," Murray told the CIO delegates.

He criticized the action of the president of District 50 of the UMW in constantly making public correspondence to Murray about internal differences, adding that "my character has been maligned, misrepresentations are being made; charges of a foul nature."

Referring to secret meetings and plottings behind his back, Murray added: "I am hoping, and I am praying and I am pleading that all these things that are going on with reference to stabbing in the back, or anybody's else's back, will stop."

ENERGY FOR WAR

Throughout his speech the CIO president stressed the fact that American labor cannot afford to waste its war-time energies in internal bickerings.

"There is only one war that I am interested in at the present moment, and that is the war to defeat Hitler and his Axis partners," Murray said.

In that connection he recited the joint activities of AFL and CIO, through Labor's Victory Committee, in placing labor's viewpoints

Steel Workers Vote to Press Pay Demands

PITTSBURGH, May 9—Delegates representing several hundred thousand workers in Big Steel and Little Steel met here for a one-day conference last week and authorized the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee to continue its demands for $1-a-day wage increases from Republic, Bethlehem, Youngstown and Inland.

The 400 local leaders and officials also received instructions from Chairman Philip Murray for campaigns to secure SWOC victories in NLRB elections at six U. S. Steel subsidiary corporations May 12 and 14, and at two others after the SWOC's constitutional convention, which opens May 19 in Cleveland.

It was revealed that the convention, which will change the status of SWOC from an organizing committee to a constitutional international union, will vote on adoption of a new name: The United Steel Workers of America.

In his talk to the steel union representatives, Murray emphasized that the SWOC will press its demands for $1-a-day increases for the employes of the Little Steel firms. The case is now before the War Labor Board, following weeks of previous negotiations and long arguments before a WLB fact-finding panel.

HITS PAY FREEZING

Murray made no comment on Pres. Roosevelt's recent call for wage stabilization, but voiced strong opposition to any form of "wage-freezing."

"The position of labor in America is one of unalterable opposition to any system of wage-freezing," he told the delegates. "This is true of both the AFL and the CIO, and I might add in passing that it is true also of British labor."

The steel union leader told the delegates that "the President and I are not at odds."

"I am one of those persons who might even disagree with a President of the United States, but the fact that I have disagreed about policy does not mean that such disagreement has brought about a parting of the ways.

"I would lose my shirt today to help the President win the war."

In their resolution, the union officials instructed their officers to carry on the fight for higher wages "in such manner as they, in their judgment, may deem to be in the best interests of the SWOC."

BIGGEST ELECTION

The election at U. S. Steel, affecting a quarter of a million workers, will be the biggest in American labor history. Victory—which the SWOC anticipates will come in huge majorities — will give the union sole bargaining rights for the first time at Big Steel. The current contract, like its predecessors since 1937, covers only members of the union.

U. S. Steel Mum on WLB Decision

Washington, May 8 — Keeping strictly mum about what it's going to do, Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. has allowed almost two weeks to pass without indicating acceptance of the War Labor Board's maintenance-of-membership decision.

The WLB ruled that, with certain exceptions, all members of the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers at the Kearny, N. J., yards, must keep their membership in the union for the duration of the contract.

Counsel for U. S. Steel, which owns Federal, had previously indicated they would refuse to accept any board order remotely resembling union security.

AFL Leader To Oppose Rep. Smith in Primaries

Washington, May 9. — Congressman Howard Smith, leader of the anti-labor old guard in the House and author of many defeated anti-union bills, is going to have a run for his political life in his nearby Virginia district at primary time.

His opponent is Emmett Davison, vice-president of the AFL Int'l. Association of Machinists and a long resident of Virginia. Both CIO and AFL unions in the area have united to bring about Smith's political funeral.

"Farmers, veterans, small merchants, businessmen, bankers, editors and other professional people" as well as labor union people "are up in arms against the reckless, inflammatory, hysterical speeches of Howard Smith in Congress," Davison said.

"His tactics of turning class against class have created suspicion, doubt and confusion. He is proving the nation's No. 1 disrupter to a 100% prosecution of the war.

"Our folks know that to win this war and to make a decent world for our children fighting for us in the armed forces we need unity regardless of class, background or occupation. That is what I dedicate myself to. Machine politics and Sixth column tactics are today useless luxuries, which must go if we are to match the Axis."

Beware: NAM Propaganda Drive Due

New York, May 9—Hold your seats for the next burst of newspaper stories praising the National Association of Manufacturers and the noble part its members play in the war effort.

The NAM has just arranged, according to its own announcement, to take "20 top-flight newspaper correspondents" on a conducted tour of war industry plants. In return, the correspondents will presumably file stories describing their trip.

Labor readers will remember a similar sponsored tour to Detroit some time ago, which brought out a series of glowing stories on conversion to war production—just at the time that conversion was at its lowest ebb.

Washington, May 9—Workers at the Union Stock Yards Co., Fargo, N. D., will vote for or against representation by the CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Commitee in an election ordered held by the NLRB later this month.

Tax Hoax

Much has been written in the papers about the action of the House ways and means committee in recommending a 94% tax on excess profits.

The impression has been created that the committee has gone further than the U. S. Treasury proposed in taxing away war profits. But this impression is a hoax on the American public.

Actually the committee's proposal would reduce the yield from profits taxation from the $3,060,000,000 proposed by the Treasury down to but $2,470,000,000.

The committee would increase somewhat the excess profits tax, which some of the biggest corporations will not pay. But it would at the same time levy only a 40% normal tax and surtax on profits in place of the 55% tax proposed by the Treasury which all corporations would have to pay.

Under the committee proposal, some of the wealthiest corporations could evade paying the 94% excess profits tax altogether, since "excess profits" may be defined as only those in excess of past "average earnings." So a company which had a high pre-war profit rate could continue to maintain it.

In lightening the tax burden on profits, the House committee is opening the way for increased pressure for sales taxation, to make up the necessary revenue.

Under a federal sales tax, Senator LaFollette has estimated, the tax burden would be almost four times as great on incomes under $2,000, as compared with incomes over $10,000.

In other words, the real news behind all the talk of a 94% excess profits tax, is that it hides a determined effort to ease up on war profits and shift much of the tax burden from them onto the shoulders of the lower-income groups.

The U. S. Treasury proposals do not go far enough in taxing excess profits, in the opinion of the CIO. But they are certainly preferable to the proposal of the House ways and means committee, since they would provide enough tax revenue from high profits to avoid any necessity for soak-the-poor sales taxation.

For More Rationing

Before there can be equality of sacrifice in the matter of consumers' goods, there must be some equality in their distribution, CIO President Murray pointed out in a recent speech.

There is certainly no equality in asking a wealthy family to give up some of its luxuries and at the same time asking a worker's family to give up some of the food it must have to maintain its health and productive efficiency.

The first necessity, Murray said, is to establish a universal system of democratic and equitable rationing. For without this, those with the most money will still be getting the most goods; and those with the least money will not be able to satisfy their barest needs.

The CIO President illustrated his point from British experience with rationing. Before the war, he pointed out, there was supposed to be an "over supply" of milk in Great Britain. The rich could get more than they needed, but the poor could not afford to buy enough milk to maintain the health of their families.

But under the present British rationing system, a man who does light work, no matter how wealthy he may be, is allowed no more than two pints of milk a week. On the other hand, the mother of a low-income family, with several children, can now get up to 8, 10 or 12 pints a week. Similarly a man doing heavy muscular work in industry is allowed more milk than the wealthy social butterfly.

Labor in the United States is taking the lead in demanding the rationing of all necessities, just as British labor has done.

To win this war, it is just as necessary that the working people and other low-income groups should have enough food, clothing and shelter to maintain their health and morale, as it is that no one should take too much from the common stock when goods are scarce.

Widespread rationing is both an urgent war necessity and a long-delayed measure of social justice. Let's have more of it, and have it now.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

PHIL MURRAY made a fighting speech at the Pennsylvania state CIO convention. It was addressed to the people who knew him best—700 CIO delegates from his own state, meeting in his home city, and the majority of them steel workers and coal miners.

He spoke frankly and personally. And the delegates cheered him to the echo, as a leader they knew and trusted, who voiced their sentiments and who was leading in the direction they wanted to go.

Murray's speech was an account of his personal stewardship and a challenge to his traducers. But it was more than this. For history has made him leader and champion of a great labor movement, in a period of world crisis.

Upon the policies of this movement, upon its strength and determination, depends in large degree the success of America's war effort. And upon the war's outcome hangs the fate of civilization.

Even the personal angles of Murray's speech, therefore, bore a broad national significance. For he has been attacked precisely on account of the policies of the movement he heads. And the disruptions he denounced would undermine the strength and unity of the whole CIO in dedicating its main efforts to victory.

Murray declared he had been thrust into the presidency of CIO against his personal wishes; and that the complete loyalty and support pledged him in return was withdrawn when he needed it most.

As to the record of his 17 months of CIO leadership, Murray pointed to an increase of 1,628,000 dues-paying members in that period; to the present sound financial position of a movement that had to borrow money before he became president; and to the many improvements won for the workers.

Murray dwelt with pride on the magnificent achievements of the CIO, in raising the living standards of millions and bringing economic and political democracy to industrial America.

"I can think of no greater evil than the elimination of the CIO," he said. "This movement must live, no matter who dies."

The CIO is so firmly established that it cannot be shaken by the disruptions now being attempted against it.

But it is also clear that efforts to create disunity and disaffection, to engage in union raiding, and to encourage the withholding of per capita tax are sabotage of the CIO—and a blow of that labor and national unity upon which successful prosecution of the war depends.

Murray called attention to the failure of the United Mine Workers to pay its per capita to the CIO in the last few months, declaring: "I say to my own union now: Pay your dues!"

He denounced as "dirty sabotage" the action of the appointed secretary of District 17, UMW, in not only withholding the per capita of his District from the West Virginia CIO but in also urging other Districts to do likewise.

Murray cited a number of instances of the kind of character-assassination and whispering campaigns directed against himself, and of attempts to disrupt the CIO.

"I have never encouraged internal warfare," he said. "The only war I'm interested in is the war to defeat Hitler and his Axis partners.

"Yet my character has been maligned all over this country. Charges of a foul nature have been made against me, in letters signed by provisional officers of the United Mine Workers."

The policies which President Murray has represented, and for which he has fought, are the policies democratically adopted by the whole CIO.

At its Detroit convention, before the United States became involved in the war, the CIO went on record unanimously to support President Roosevelt in his foreign policy, and to make the defeat of Hitlerism labor's chief aim.

This mandate has been repeated and re-emphasized again and again since then in every democratic expression of the wishes of the CIO membership. It has been faithfully and aggressively carried out by Murray in his every word and action —just as he has carried out the other mandates of the CIO to defend labor's rights and interests.

It is Murray's determined war leadership that has made him the target for every kind of attack from isolationists and appeasers, as well as from big business labor-baiters.

The enthusiastic reception his speech received at the Pennsylvania CIO convention was further evidence of the unanimity with which the membership of the whole CIO supports the policies for which Murray stands; and of its abhorrence of the disruptive attacks directed against him.

Murray Nails Slanders of 'Traducers,' Asks Mine Union Pay Dues To CIO

Following are excerpts from President Murray's speech to the convention of the Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council in Pittsburgh on May 5.

I have been president of this organization for some seventeen months. Those have been long months. They have been months that have been devoted exclusively toward the organizing of the unorganized, and the further development of the true principles of constructive collective bargaining in American industry.

I cannot forget, despite my best efforts to forget, the conditions and circumstances that thrust me into the presidency of the Congress of Industrial Organizations. Surely no man in America, no woman in America can say that I aspired to this great honor, that I indulged myself in political intrigues to acquire this great honor, that I met in secret places and connived with men to achieve this distinction. This, my friends, cannot be said. To the contrary, I was beseeched, I was pleaded with, I was asked to become the president of this great movement, and when I acquired the presidency of this organization, against my own good will, I did so knowing that, in my heart of hearts, many of the leaders and many of the organizations affiliated with it did not want me to be its president.

I knew then, as I know now, when I ascended to the presidency of the CIO that I would have to tie my cross through that proverbial Gethsemane and there have some of my former associates place the crown of thorns upon my forehead. I knew it then, and I know it more today, but these are some of the penalties that go with the acceptance of responsibility.

1,628,000 New Members

When I acquired the presidency of the CIO, the institution was not faring too well. It was not meeting its payrolls as it ought to have met them; it was compelled to borrow money to meet the expenses incident to the convening of the Atlantic City Convention in the fall of 1940.

Yes, that problem had to be met. It had to be solved. That problem was met. That problem has been solved. One million, six hundred and twenty-eight thousand new dues-paying members have attached themselves to the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

I hope, in fact I pray, that this organization will continue to grow for the purposes, for the very purposes for which it was originally created. I say to you frankly and candidly, from the bottom of my heart, that I can think of no greater evil that could possibly befall labor than would the extermination, the elimination or the abolition of the CIO. This movement must live no matter who dies. This movement, which you and I love, must live to render service to humanity not only today but in the days to come, and let no man or no group of men stand in the way of the CIO development and growth. It must go on.

FDR's Help to Labor

Let us take our books out. Let us look at the record. Let us see what has been accomplished in this country for American working men and women since a man named Franklin Roosevelt was elected President.

Anyone within the sound of my voice—can they recall any time in their lives, or perhaps the lives of their forebearers, when a President, a President of all the people, indicated such a tremendous sympathetic interest in the downtrodden, in the poor, in the weak, in the defenseless, as that man did.

You know he was elected, and then in the spring of 1933, ten days to be exact, I believe, following his election a few of us went down to the White House to see him at his invitation, to ask him what it was he intended doing now that he was elected. He immediately set out to work. He sought the enactment of the National Recovery Act, with its familiar Section 7A. The Mine Workers, whose organizations here and in Central Pennsylvania were prior to that time destroyed, set out to organize themselves, because the President had said "you have the right to organize and I am going to protect you in that right, and I am going to punish the employer that hinders or restrains you in the exercise of that right."

It took us exactly six weeks to organize all the unorganized miners in Western Pennsylvania, Central Pennsylvania, Southwestern Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, and the State of Virginia and, by the way, Alabama—just six weeks. In fact, in less than six weeks time, over 500,000 miners had joined the Miners Union, six weeks after the election of Franklin Roosevelt. What has happened since that time is history. Perhaps I could recall that history just about as intimately and perhaps just about as correctly as any man in America, because I happen to know from the record and from the performance what has transpired with relation to these many things since that time.

And so, as the President of the CIO, and prior to my ascendency to the presidency of the CIO, and consistently ever since the fall of 1932, I have in season and out of season supported the President of the United States of America.

Differences, Not Hates

I have had, like many other citizens in this country, differences, but my differences have never developed hatreds, or prejudices. I cannot hate. It is contrary to my nature. I can differ. I can fight. I can quarrel. But yet, I always understand in the end that problems, no matter how big or how small they may be, are always best solved and easiest solved through the processes of intelligent discussion and conversation without necessarily imposing upon those who are engaging themselves in such conferences such things as prejudices, malice and hatred.

It is not for me in a great convention of this description to attempt or to record the many things that have happened since CIO was originally brought into being. I have given the utmost credit to every single solitary individual that ever made any kind of a contribution toward the welfare of the CIO. I have unhesitatingly and with a degree of loyalty which has even surprised my most intimate friends, adhered to every single solitary policy enunciated by my predecessor or by my fellow officers of the United Mine Workers of America, and as the president of this great movement, given what little service I can to the movement in my own limited way. I have always expected—although I can't say that I have always received—the same degree of loyalty and cooperation that other officers received from me.

Pledge of Support

I got a job to do that was given to me. That job was given to me with the distinct understanding and with the solemn pledge, "right or wrong, right or wrong, you shall have my support." Six hundred people heard that statement in a great convention of the CIO. I have not received that support and whilst I have not received it, I am not going to beef about it particularly; I am going to keep fighting, and fighting, and fighting.

I am anxious, as any other officer of any organization is anxious, for every affiliated organization with the CIO to pay its dues. That's an old slogan. I have stood on the floor of executive board meetings of the CIO and together with my fellow officers castigated certain unions because they were delinquent in the payment of their dues, and some of those unions, some of those unions had at some time or other given money to CIO to organize back in the early days. Well, what I said with reference to other unions, I say with reference to my own union now: pay your dues. That's to be expected.

The question is raised about an alleged debt. I shan't discuss that here today except to say in passing that I happen to know as much about that phase of this situation as any man in this country. However, if there is any question of debt affecting the relationships of a particular national organization and the national CIO, surely there is no debt involved in the relationships between District 17 of the United Mine Workers of America and the State CIO of West Virginia. And yet, although there is no charge of debt being involved there, the secretary of that district organization has not paid a penny of tax for the 90,000 dues paying miners in Southern West Virginia to the State CIO Council since the month of December, 1941. And that same secretary has forwarded communications to other state organizations asking them to withhold the payment of their tax to the State CIO Councils. I don't mind telling you that that's sabotage; that's dirty, lousy, low-life sabotage.

My personal opinion of the situation is that there isn't a miner anywhere in this country who is paying dues to the United Mine Workers that will support that kind of a policy.

Loyalty to Miners

Now, as to the loyalty of my own individual self, and that has been questioned recently by an International Board member representing 247 tax-paying members, my loyalty has been impugned. Is the International Vice-President of the United Mine Workers of America, elected by the rank and file if you please—no question about that—going to be told about once or three times every week that if I don't answer his letters in the way he wants me to answer them, he is going to charge me with delinquency before the International Executive Board? And he has his letters published in the papers!

Well, that's not the way to do business. For thirty years I have been associated with my organization as an officer. I have never precipitated dualism. I have never encouraged internal warfare. I have never attempted to create confusion or disunity, and yet my character as the president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations has been maligned, maligned all over this country; misrepresentations are being made; charges of a foul nature. Letters to that effect have appeared in the public print about me, signed by provisional officers of the United Mine Workers of America.

There is only one war that I am interested in at the present moment, and that is the war to defeat Hitler and his Axis partners.

My work in that direction has been tireless. I have not faltered by the wayside. I have not been a trembling advocate of the things that labor seeks. And whilst the president of the CIO is making a battle of that kind with his back to the wall, he needs the help of his fellow men. He needs it.

I am not advocating when I advocate wage adjustments anything that might in any way interfere with the successful outcome of the present war. I have contended that in most instances, particularly in many of the major industries, these adjustments can be made without in any way agitating the inflationary spiral. I have contended that to maintain American labor at its maximum efficiency in order that it might be able to produce, produce, and produce more and more it will be necessary for American labor to get a sufficient amount of money to maintain those standards. I have contended before the bar of public opinion that rather than seek the imposition of universal national wage freezing that our country through its administrators should first seek the solution of the problem by initiating a system of universal democratic rationing of all civilian goods.

I have contended that in the absence of equitable rationing no system of price fixing or wage freezing will solve our national ills. It will still leave the fellow who has the most money in the position of getting the most goods. I contended that that is inequitable.

I contend that in the United States of America, no system will be altogether equitable unless that system provides for democratic rationing and when I say democratic rationing, I mean equality of treatment.

Just the other day some distinguished man in public life said that in this war there must be equality of sacrifice. Every sensible, right-thinking citizen in the United States believes in that. There must be equality of sacrifice. And if there is going to be equality of sacrifice, then there must necessarily be equality in the field of distribution so far as the consumption of civilian goods go.

CIO-AFL Actions

The American Federation of Labor and CIO have joined together in fighting the attacks being made in the Federal Congress against us. We have joined together upon the basic question of opposition to national wage rates. We have joined together upon the basic question of the War Labor Board being given the right to try all questions including questions of union security. We have joined together in pronouncements affecting a democratic, equitable system of taxation and have joint bills that are now in the lap of the Federal Congress.

I don't know of a single officer of any organization that has manifested a greater interest in the promotion of true, and I mean true, national unity than I have. Accordingly, I have served on every committee created by the Congress of Industrial Organizations for the purpose of discussing this situation with the American Federation of Labor. I have presided over many of the committees. I know a great deal about the conferences, of what transpired and how effectively each of us applied ourselves to the solution of that problem.

But again, it was on the 16th day of January, 1942, when I read a letter in the newspapers addressed to me, stating that this was the time, this was the day for accouplement, which has been translated by many persons who have communicated with me since that time, as something called "organic unity." That letter was addressed to me the 16th of January. I read it in the newspaper before I received it.

It came like a streak of lightning out of the blue sky, because no man had ever talked to me about organic unity betwixt the American Federation of Labor and CIO since that month in the spring of 1939 when our conferences broke up. And it was in the fall of 1940, I believe at Atlantic City, when my distinguished predecessor said to me, "Keep your organization moving, Phil, keep moving forward. Don't under any circumstances, no matter what they may be, participate in peace conferences with the American Federation of Labor, because when you do so your membership lags, your organizational drives stop, and your people lack any further interest in the movement" and so, like a good soldier, I accepted that advice, and never did I meet with or talk to an officer of the American Federation of Labor until shortly after the 16th day of January, 1942.

When I received that communication I think I was perhaps the most astonished man in America. I thought I was entitled to at least a telephone call or I thought I was entitled to at least a little bit of conversation, but such evidently is not the practice these days. So when I received the letter I answered it and suggested that we ought to have a meeting of the Board, to come over and tell the Board if there was anything new in this situation which might lead us to believe that accouplement was possible.

Secret Conversations

I called that meeting of the Board and my distinguished predecessor did not come to the meeting of the Board, and the Board heard and all they talked about was peace for two days and they finally adopted a resolution creating the committee that is now functioning with the AFL committee.

The first day that I was privileged to meet with the AFL committee, always being anxious to acquire for our people a true, a just peace, the kind of peace that would not sacrifice our unions or the integrity of a single member, I thereupon asked each of the officers of the American Federation of Labor with whom I was privileged to meet if they thought they were any closer to our concept of what a peace treaty should be than they were in the spring of 1939. They said, "No, we are just about in the same place," but they informed me that all of this excitement had grown out of some meetings that President Lewis was having with a man named Hutcheson. Mr. Hutcheson and Mr. Lewis, since September, or before that, of 1941, were having meetings and that at those meetings they were evidently discussing peace. I thought then, as I think now, that the president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations should have been taken into Mr. Lewis' confidence.

I am hoping, and I am praying, and I am pleading that all these things that are going on with reference to stabbing in the back, particularly behind my back, or anybody else's back, will stop.

And I ask each of you, all of you together, to join with your national CIO organization, lending every little bit of constructive support that you can lend to it in winning this war and keeping our people together so that the war may be won.

Beware of Lies

Please don't listen to the idle prattlings of men who may skulk in your midst or sneak around to secret places in the dark of night to tell wild stories, wild unimaginable stories, none of which are true.

I shall ask you to think of one thing before I sit down, and that is that in my thirty years of service, or approximately thirty years of service to the Miners' Union, a union that I love, a union whose affection I take second place to no man. I love my union, but I shall ask you this. When a traducer comes knocking at your door, or mayhap whispering in your ear, say to him, "Can you ever say that that fellow Murray sold a miner or worker down the river?" Say, "Has he ever betrayed a trust reposed in him?" Ask him that, because no man, I care not who he may be, can point that kind of a finger in my direction.

Pamphlet On Speech

GM Eats Crow, Drops Challenge To Labor Board

WASHINGTON, May 9—General Motors this week beat a hasty retreat from its position of challenging the authority of the National Labor Relations Board—a position described by one WLB member as "contempt . . . a sitdown strike . . . defying not only the board but the President of the United States."

GM's surrender came in the form of a statement from C. E. Wilson, head of the company, at a hearing in the Board's Washington offices. The corporation executive agreed that the company would continue to pay double time for Sunday and holidays — when they form a seventh consecutive working day—until a new contract with the CIO United Automobile Workers is reached through discussions under WLB auspices.

The UAW's contract with GM expired on April 28. When Detroit negotiations for a new pact broke down, the case went to the War Labor Board, with the understanding that the contract would remain in force until a new agreement was reached. But GM sought to exempt itself from the doubletime provision, and a statement from H. W. Anderson, company vice-president, questioned the authority of the Board to order continuation of the contract.

SLAP FOR SLUR

Anderson indicated that the Board's decision was "ex parte"—interpreted by WLB Chairman W. H. Davis to mean "one-sided"—and it brought a quick reaction from the Board's members.

But at the Washington hearing, GM's Pres. Wilson ate crow. He said the company's criticism of the Board's procedure was not intended to challenge its integrity, that he rescinded an earlier statement challenging the WLB's authority, and that personally he wasn't sure himself what "ex parte" really does mean.

LASHED BY MORSE

Before Wilson offered the white flag in behalf of GM, the company had received a thorough tongue-lashing from Dean Wayne Morse, public member of the Board and dean of Oregon University Law School.

"As a lawyer, I know what contempt is," Morse declared. "General Motors Corp. stands in contempt of a tribunal set up by the President of the United states in time of war . . . General Motors stands engaged in a sitdown strike . . . defying not only this Board but the President of the United States.

"I have no doubt what the people of the United States will say of this contemptuous position."

UNION STATEMENT

Previous to the hearing, UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas and Walter Reuther, head of the union's General Motors division, had called upon the Board to take a strong position against the company.

"As far as the Natl. War Labor Board is concerned, it will have to meet this challenge immediately and effectively. Unless it does, the standing of the Board will be seriously impaired and its usefulness mullified."

The UAW is seeking $1 a day increases, union security, improved grievance system and a number of other demands from the corporation, one of the country's wealthiest.

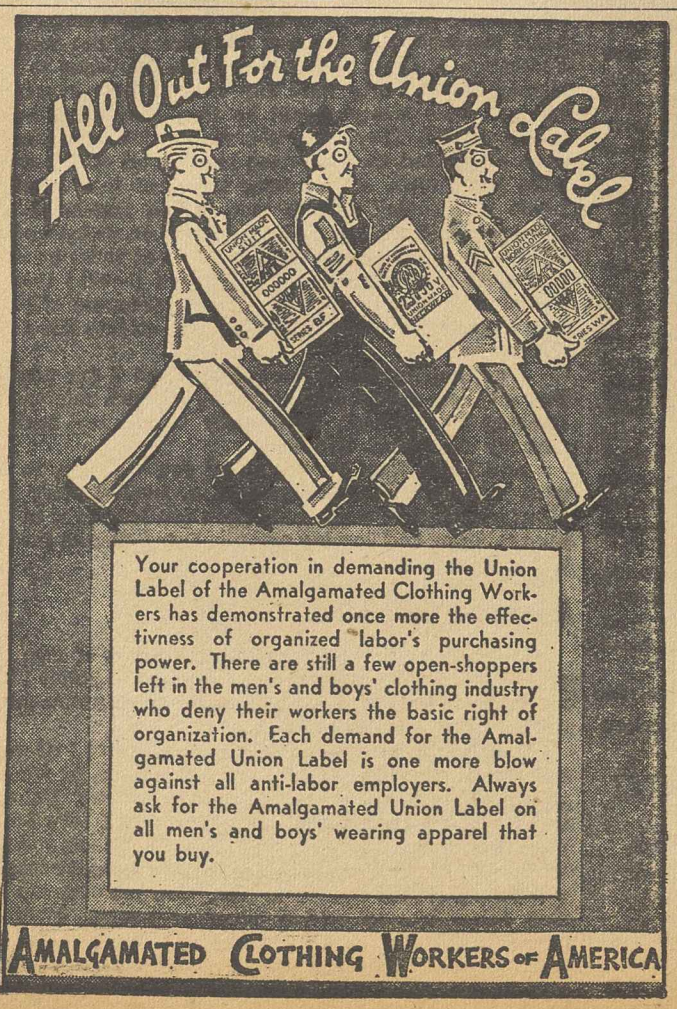
Union Offers Free Labor For Salvage

Houston, Tex., May 9—To relieve the nation's steel shortage, the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee has offered to provide free labor to take up unused street car tracks in this city.

The SWOC offered to provide 500 men who would work two four-hour shifts daily in addition to their regular jobs, if the city provide tools, equipment and supervision from its engineering force.

Win Exoneration

San Pedro, Calif., May 9—Patriotism of CIO Fishermen's Union members won exoneration from charges of fishing in closed waters here. Pointing out that these men daily risked their lives for their country in fishing in sub-infested waters, the judge cleared them of the charges.



Murray Asks Coal Miners For Support

Cokesburg, Pa., May 9.—In a surprise appearance before his home local of the United Mine Workers, CIO President Philip Murray last week made a dramatic plea for the support of his old friends and working mates against "the attempt being made to sabotage me from within and destroy the CIO."

His voice filled with emotion, Murray told members of UMW Local 1197 in this suburb of Pittsburgh that "anything I got out of life I attribute to you—all of you.

"The miners made me, the miners raised me and I hope I am given the chance to live and die and fight for, and with, the miners. I have never drifted away from the miners, and so help me God, I never will . . .

PURGE DISRUPTERS

"If anyone starts a mess in the miners' union, or in any other union, I hope he is driven out of office," Murray continued.

"I am president of the CIO, and I'm going to be president as long as I am elected."

The CIO president deplored the UMW's refusal to pay dues to the CIO, and attacked the demand for repayment of $1,665,000 advanced as gifts to help organize American workers and at the same time to strengthen the miners' union.

"I don't give a tinker's damn who fights me in this country if my own people here support me," Murray continued.

"It seems that I have been guilty of two offenses, perhaps. First, I have performed my duty as vice-president of the UMW conscientiously.

"The other offense is that I really and truly have supported the President of the United States."

Navy E Emblems For CIO Workers In Three Plants

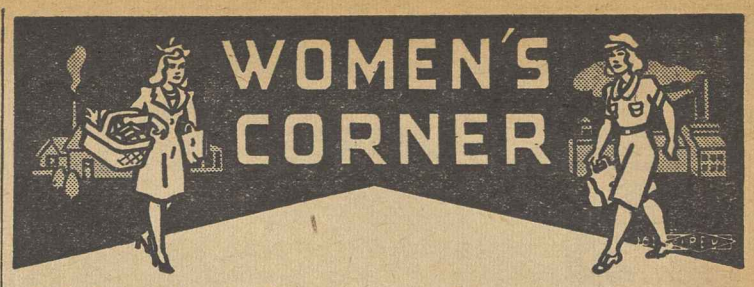
Washington, May 9—CIO workers in three armaments plants are wearing the Navy's coveted "E" buttons, signifying high production levels.

The workers include 700 UAW-CIO members at the American Blower Co. in Detroit; members of Local 696, UAW-CIO, at GM's Delco Products Division, in Dayton, Ohio; and members of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee at the Nordberg Manufacturing Co., in Milwaukee.

Hof Brau Pact Nets Workers $23,000 Raise

Philadelphia, May 9—A contract granting a wage increase that will bring employes about $23,000 more pay during the coming year, has ended a strike at Weber Hof Brau in Camden, N. J., CIO Regional George Craig announced here this week.

Other terms provide vacations with pay, hiring through the union, check-off of union dues, a union shop and a 48-hour week. The contract was negotiated by the Culinary, Restaurant & Hotel Workers Local Industrial Union 1016.



CIO Auxiliaries Greet United Nations' Mothers

By ELEANOR FOWLER

A PLEDGE "to the mothers of allied soldiers everywhere that we will do everything in our power to speed war production, to speed an offensive for Victory over the fascist Axis" was issued on Mother's Day by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO.

"We are proud of our American women who have cheerfully seen their sons go to serve in the armies our country is mobilizing to defeat Hitler," the statement said. "We are honoring these women especially on Mother's Day, Sunday, May 10, and we are honoring with them the mothers whose sons are serving throughout the world with the colors of the United Nations.

"We honor the Chinese mothers who have stood behind their sons in the twelve long years of struggle against Japan; the English mothers whose courage was never daunted by the brutal air attacks of Nazi Germany; the Russian mothers who have cheered their sons on to throw back the invading Nazi hordes; the mothers of those millions of heroes in many countries behind the fascist lines who risk their lives daily to sabotage the German war machine.

"We know that the strength of our American mothers has not been put to the bitter tests faced by the mothers of our allies. We hail their fortitude, their quiet courage, the determination with which they take their part in the world-wide battle against fascism."

Receptions, parties and meetings honoring mothers of CIO men who have gone into the armed forces are being held all over the country by local CIO auxiliaries as part of the national observance of Mother's Week undertaken by the Auxiliary Congress.

Watch Retail Prices

Immediate steps to determine the maximum March prices on basic commodities were suggested this week by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries. Women in each community were urged to draw up a list of the most important commodities, consult the files of their local newspaper for March, note the highest advertised price on each item and prepare a price list on that basis.

That list can then be compared with the price list the stores must post after May 18, and differences discussed with store managers. Cases in which the women are not convinced that stores are observing price ceiling should be reported to the local office of Price Administration.

Assist Red Cross

Three thousand overalls for European and Chinese children, victims of fascist aggression, is the quota taken from the Red Cross by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Furriers Joint Council of New York. Union women are helping the auxiliary members to finish the garments quickly. Two sewing machines are available at union headquarters, but most of the work is done at home.

CIO Auxiliary Women will shortly begin to assist in making overseas kits to be prepared by the Red Cross for each soldier and marine who sails for service abroad. The kits consist of an olive drab bag 11x14 inches which contains all the things a soldier needs on shipboard. Soap in a case, razor blades, cigarettes, playing cards, writing paper, chewing gum, a detective or adventure story, etc.

Ask End to Race Bias

Cleveland, May 9. — President Roosevelt was asked this week to call a national conference of representatives of government, labor and industry and the Negro people, to take steps to end discrimination against Negroes in war industries, in a radio speech by Dr. William H. Jernagin, chairman of the executive committee of the Fraternal Council of Negro Churches in America.

and programs before President Roosevelt and the government. Questions of wage standards, rationing, taxes and participation in the war effort have been discussed by leaders of the two labor movements.

The CIO president contrasted the successful results of the working agreement with Lewis' sudden demand for "accouplement" of the CIO and AFL—a proposal which Murray said AFL leaders believe sprang from secret conversations between Lewis and William Hutcheson of the carpenters union.

RE-ELECT PHILLIPS

Murray's dramatic hour-and-a-half address was the high point of the four-day meeting, which saw the representatives of CIO's several hundred thousand workers in the Keystone State's basic industries decide their policies.

In addition to Murray, the delegates heard speeches by Sec. James B. Carey, Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood, Director of Industrial Union Councils John Brophy and President Van A. Bittner of District 17, UMW, all of whom praised Murray's leadership of CIO —and by a number of government officials.

President John A. Phillips of Philadelphia and Sec.-Treas. Lester Thomas of Wilkes-Barre, were both re-elected without opposition.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

A well-attended enthusiastic meeting was held in Philadelphia by Federal Workers, members of CIO, AFL and independent groups. The meeting was addressed by representatives of the Mail Carriers' Union; the Commander of the Legion Post, who is also a member of a Federal Workers' Union; several Congressmen and myself. The meeting set forth the conditions of the Federal Workers and the necessity for improving wages, which in many cases has not been considered for many years. The hope of Federal Workers is to keep pace with others and obtain proper equity for them by organizing into strong unions such as the CIO has to offer.

The Pennsylvania State Industrial Union Council convention was held in Pittsburgh this week. President Murray made a stirring address, which was received by the delegates with an ovation lasting a considerable length of time. This is one of the strongest Councils in the CIO. The Convention re-elected the present officers who have done such splendid work for the workers of that great commonwealth, which has within its boundaries the major portion of steel production in this country, vast coal mining and major other industries.

Winning Elections

The Utility Workers Organizing Committee reports the winning of the election in the northern division of the Southern California Gas Company at Glendale, California, by a vote of 118 for CIO as against 61 for no union. They also report that the contract negotiations with the Ohio Edison Company covering the Youngstown Division have resulted in a 7½c per hour general increase for all employes retroactive to February 15, 1042; check-off, and maintenance of union clause.

The Packinghouse Workers' Organizing Committee reports the winning of another Swift and Company election at Cambridge, Massachusetts, with a victory of five to one over the AFL.

CIO Field Representative George DeNucci reports the winning of the election at the Columbus Malleable with a vote of 473 for SWOC as against 54.

The American Newspaper Guild chartered their first local union in the City of New Orleans and won an election by 32 as against 5 for no union at the New Orleans Item. This local union was organized in the short space of one month, chartered and under a union-shop contract. This is the ANG's entrance into the deep south and they are now in the process of organizing the Associated Press in Atlanta, Georgia.

Unions Grow in South

The organization down South is going ahead with leaps and bounds, as reported by Regional Director Sandefur in the Carolinas. He reports the United Stone and Allied Products Workers recently signed a contract with the Southern Aggregates Corporation at plants in Wendell and Henderson, N.C.; the United Furniture signed a contract at the C. M. Wall and Sons Co., in Thomasville, N.C., and he has sent in applications for two charters in the United Federal Workers of America.

Regional Director Powers Hapgood reports in a conference with Mr. Andrew B. Crummy from Newark, N. J., of the Claypool Hotel in Indianapolis, Indiana, attended by Brothers Elmer Whitman and Tom Davis, this situation was satisfactorily concluded and the local union membership ratified the agreement unanimously and expressed themselves as being highly appreciative of the fine assistance thy received in the matter from all participating.

Regional Director George Craig of Philadelphia reports the settlement of the controversy at the Weber's Hof Brau, the employers of which are organized under Local No. 1016 of that city. The CIO negotiated a contract with management, receiving a closed shop, check-off, vacations with pay, and an increase in pay amounting to 30% or approximately $23,000 annually.

Ironwood, Mich., May 9. — The oldest local of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee on the Iron Range won a sweeping victory here in a Labor Board election held among employes of the Newport Mine, subsidiary of Youngstown Mines Corp. The vote was 200 for SWOC Local 1922 to 40 against.

Local 1922 also won an election held April 16 at the Geneva-Davis Mine of the Oliver Iron Mining Co. by a vote of 272 to 110 for an "Employes Association". The company is a subsidiary of U. S. Steel.

News From Abroad:

Japanese Workers Hit By New Fascist Laws

By ANTHONY JENKINSON

Allied Labor News

NEW YORK, May 9—(ALN)—Japan's conquests in Southeast Asia since the attack on Pearl Harbor have been accompanied by new repressive measures against Japanese industrial workers, Allied Labor News has learned here from a reliable source.

Workers in the aircraft factories at Kobe, Nagoya and Tokyo, in the steel mills at Yahata, in the oil refineries at Sasebo and Yokohama, and in the shipyards at Osaka, Sasebo and Nagasaki, can no longer step outside the plant gates. When they come off shift they are herded by police into barracks in the company yard, to remain there until it's time to work again.

The first stirrings of opposition to the war are now being felt in factories. The answer of the Japanese military bosses has been to increase the number of spies and provocateurs in the plants. Today a Japanese worker hardly dares voice a grievance to his neighbor on the work bench, for fear the man may be a government spy. No workers' meetings are permitted to be held.

UNIONS ABOLISHED

The way was paved for these new restrictions in the fall of 1940, when all Japanese trade unions, a few weeks after all political parties were abolished by the government.

In place of the unions the government set up the "Japanese Patriotic Industrial Society," in which "all the trouble between labor and capital has been swept away, and they have been united under the banner of loyalty to the throne." Workers in each plant were ordered to form a "co-operative body," with "the manager of the enterprise as the leader."

Soviet Women Outnumber Men In Factories

Moscow, via London — (ALN)— Though no official survey has been made since the February 17 decree mobilizing all able-bodied women for industrial labor, it is the accepted opinion among Russian union officials that women are now a clear majority of workers in Soviet industry.

It was announced early in January that 45 per cent of the country's industrial work was being done by women. Even then Russia had the highest percentage of women in industry of any country in the world. Members of the Anglo-Soviet Trade Union Commission, back from their recent visit to British factories, report that about a third of Britain's labor force is women, a figure which is rapidly rising.

EQUAL PAY

Russia's women workers earn the same as men for similar work. There are rigid laws on the statute books forbidding wage discrimination on the basis of sex, and the unions see that the laws are enforced.

Since the German invasion there is no job that women are not doing. Women have always been employed on Soviet freighters, and the crew of one ship described recently in the Moscow press was made up of 50 sailors, of whom 42 were women.

The equality of women on the job is exemplified in the membership of trade unions. The percentage of women on shop committees and local executive boards is the same as the percentage in industry.

Australian Labor Rallies For Offensive

Sydney— (ALN) —Approximately 1,000 delegates, representing 433 unions and other organizations, met this week in a Congress of National Unity to strengthen national defense and prepare the Australian public for an offensive against the Japanese.

Speakers included the Minister of Labor and Home Security and prominent leaders. Telegrams of support were received from Ivan Maisky, Russian ambassador in London, and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

The congress emphasized plans for achieving maximum production of war materials. The president of the powerful Miners' Federation pledged that Australian miners would produce an extra 800,000 tons of coal in 1942.

Similar congresses are being held in Melbourne and other centers.

Send a Letter To 'Dear Adolf'

New York, May 9. — Want a chance to tell Adolph what you think of him, in your own words?

All you have to do is sit down and write a letter to "Dear Adolph" for a new radio series by that name which the Council for Democracy is putting on.

The program will consist of letters from workers and other groups in the country who will tell in their own language just what the war means to them, what they think about Nazism, why they are glad to work and fight for democracy, and the like.

Address your letters to the Council for Democracy, 11 West 42nd St., New York, N.Y., and you have a good chance of hearing them read on the air.

Minnesota Parley

Minnesota, Minn., May 9. — The Minnesota State Industrial Union Council will hold its fifth annual convention at Ely, Minn., August 7-9, Council Secretary Leonard Lagemon announced here this week.

LUNCH-HOUR HOLIDAY: May 1, a workers' holiday for many in New York City, was celebrated without the usual parade this year so that workers could produce to aid the war program. But 5,000 members of the CIO Fur & Leather Workers had a mass meeting during their lunch hour, and pledged to buy bonds with their day's earnings.

CIO Urges Unions:

'Police Retail Prices to Guard OPA Ceilings'

WASHINGTON, May 9—Immediate steps to set up local committees to watch over the new price control regulations were urged on all CIO affiliates by the newly appointed national CIO Price Control Committee.

Recommendation was made in a circular letter signed by committee members Joseph Curran, Sherman Dalrymple and Emil Rieve, plus Ralph Hetzel, CIO economic director assigned to work with the committee.

Pointing out that the CIO "has long been calling for general price and rent control to stop the rapid rise in the cost of living," the letter said:

"A large number of price control boards will be set up, many of them in conjunction with rationing boards now established or shortly to be established.

"It is imperative that labor institute effective representation on such boards. One of the tasks of the union price control and rationing committees should be to see that effective labor representation is provided on the boards."

RETAIL MARKUPS

Union vigilance is needed to report violations of the order to the Office of Price Administration here and to local boards. Some retailers have already started to chisel on the order, rushing big price markups through "in order to reap special returns before the price order goes into effect." The order, issued last week, fixes prices at highest March levels, and takes effect May 18.

Rents in some 300 war production areas were fixed in the order, and the CIO committee also urged union vigilance in reporting cases of rent gouging by landlords.

Secrecy Cloaks Tax Bill Hearing

Washington, May 9 — The tax bill—most important to labor and to the nation in history—continues to stay under wraps in Congress, with the House Ways and Means Committee holding secret hearings and refusing to divulge its plans to the people who will have to pay the bill.

Enough has slipped out, however, to show that present plans will go light on excess profits by several hundred million dollars, while the sales tax advocates are putting on increasing heat for a soak-the-poor plan.

The profits scheme—which the papers have given the impression calls for 94 per cent taxation—actually will let the biggest corporations off comparatively lightly, since they are required to define excess profits as only those above past average earnings. With most big corporations, past average earnings can be figured at an extremely high rate, leaving little for the alleged 94 per cent take by the government.

PROPOSE KICKBACK

Another scheme that received very favorable comment in the daily press is a reported plan to pay back excess profit taxes to the corporations after the war is over. Remember the howl about the veterans' bonus?

The CIO, meantime, is continuing to press its tax program which calls for taxes for victory based on ability to pay, rather than trying to take it all from the inadequate pay envelopes of the workers.

Wage Boost At Texas Plant

Houston, Tex., May 9—A wage increase of 7½ cents an hour for workers at the American Can Co. and the Continental Can Co., under contract with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, was announced here by Frank A. Hardesty, CIO regional director.

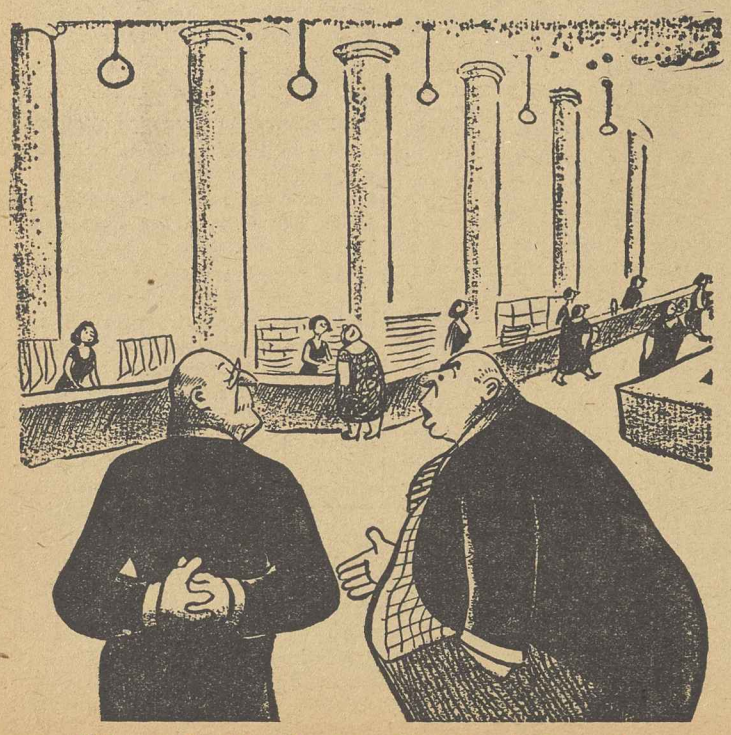
The raise was negotiated under a clause of a contract signed seven months ago granting a 10 cent hourly increase and providing that the wage clause could be opened for revision on 30 days' notice.

Aircraft Pact

Dayton, Ohio, May 9—A contract with the United Aircraft Products Co., Dayton Division, has been negotiated by Local 648, United Automobile Workers, reports UAW Regional Director Paul E. Miley.

Terms include a 75 cent hourly minimum, extra pay for work on late shifts, paid vacations; plant-wide seniority, and three days' notice of lay-off.

The Upper Crust



"Please, Mr. Hawkinson, can't we try just once to evade the government's price ceilings?"

Dyers Union Reports New Gains in Year

New York City, May 9—A record of unprecedented progress was reported by union officers to delegates attending the eighth biennial convention of the Federation of Dyers, Finishers, Printers & Bleachers which met here last week. The convention, largest in the union's history, was attended by 100 delegates from 40 locals and two district councils.

Federation President Joseph W. Knapik after welcoming the delegates in a short speech at the opening session, presented President Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers Union of America as the main speaker of the day. The federation is an affiliate of the TWUA.

Among the gains listed in the officers' report were the organization of 16 new locals and three district councils; establishment of an 85 cent hourly minimum in the metropolitan area; renewal of all existing contracts and organization of 36 new plants.

Aid to War Theme of Fur Parley

Chicago, May 9. — Mobilization of the union's entire resources to help win the war will be the chief concern of some 200 delegates to the convention of the Intl. Fur & Leather Workers Union, Fur Division, which opens here tomorrow at the Hotel Stevens.

"Our 14th biennial convention will be held during a period of grave national emergency," the union's convention call declared.

'MUST MOBILIZE'

"The convention will be confronted with the historic task of mobilizing our entire membership to contribute everything in their possession to help our government defend the country, win complete and decisive victory, and destroy forever the Nazi-Fascist, militarist Axis."

The delegates, representing fur locals from the Pacific to the Atlantic coast and Canada, will review the union's activities during the past three years and plan a program of organizational activities for the next two years.

Women for Jobs

Washington, May 9.—An adequate supply of woman power by voluntary registration will be trained and employed in war and essential civilian industries at an increasing rate during the next two years, Chairman Paul V. McNutt of the War Manpower Commission announced here this week.

New Labor Movie Tells Epic Story Of Unions' Rise

NEW YORK, May 9—A motion picture designed to create afresh those feelings of basic American patriotism has just been completed by Frontier Films, and under the title of "Native Land" it will have its first public showing at the World Theatre today.

The picture was directed by Leo Hurwitz and Paul Strand, who have been in the advance guard of documentary film production since 1931, having collaborated on "Heart of Spain," "The Plow That Broke The Plains" and "China Strikes Back."

"Native Land" is the film epic of American labor's struggle for unity in the fight against those fascist elements that sought to become entrenched here in the years preceding the war.

It's based on material gathered in the sensational investigation of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, and other official documents.

FIGHT FOR FREEDOM

This committee was formed to expose the fascist elements which were violating the Bill of Rights and the elementary constitutional rights of Americans. This is the story of the film, America's first feature-length labor film, the people's own answer to fascism.

The great actor and baritone, Paul Robeson, well-known and beloved by millions for his life-long struggle in the cause of democracy, has narrated the deeply moving commentary written by the fine American poet, David Wolff. He is also heard in a number of new songs especially composed for "Native Land."

HOW U. S. GREW STRONG

The primary purpose of "Native Land" is to show how America's struggle for freedom and civil liberties made it strong enough to defeat Hitlerism. It is the kind of film that Hollywood would never have dared to make and yet many Hollywood directors and writers, who saw it in various stages of its production, gave it unqualified praise.

It has been endorsed by trade unions everywhere, leaders of both CIO and AFL affiliates having expressed the desire to have their membership see the film.

Applications for such benefit showings are now being received and should be made directly to the World Theatre, 153 West 49th Street, New York City.

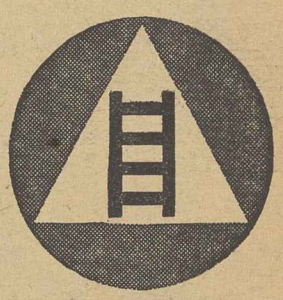
FIRE WATCHER

Fire Watchers will be identified by a significant red flame in white triangle set in blue circle.

The menace of fire bombs calls for unceasing vigilance and prompt, intelligent action. Fighting incendiary bombs is a job for all able-bodied citizens. After the municipal fire departments train their Auxiliary Firemen, they will instruct citizens in the method of fighting fire bombs. The most alert and suitable persons will then be selected to act as Fire Watchers and will be assigned to posts on roofs, in doorways, and other vantage points where they can spot and quickly reach fallen bombs during air raids.



RESCUE PARTY

Rescue Squads will be identified by a red ladder in white triangle set in blue circle.

There are many phases to rescue work in modern warfare. An "all clear" signal after an air raid may find civilians trapped in debris, shelters, flooded cellars, or exposed to danger from broken gas and water mains or unprotected electric wiring. Rescue Parties must be ready to go into action at all times to extricate them.

Each squad usually consists of about 10 men, equipped with suitable protective clothing and necessary equipment.

Steel Workers Meet, Plan Union Structure

Hit Racket On Gasoline Ration Cards

Washington, May 16—The spectacle of "thousands of citizens clamoring for unlimited gas ration cards for non-essential driving, and getting them is a disgrace to the spirit of equal sharing for victory," the members of the CIO's standing committee on rationing and price control said in a statement issued here on the first day of the issue of ration cards.

"Gasoline is brought to the eastern seaboard mostly in tankers," the statement, signed by Joseph Curran, Emil T. Rieve and Sherman H. Dalrymple pointed out.

"Already hundreds of merchant seamen have died in this hazardour trade, victims of Nazi submarines. Are they to continue dying simply in order to gratify the convenience of those who cannot face the hardship of using public transit?"

CIO ACCEPTS

The committee's sharp statement was provoked by news stories of a large portion of people applying for unlimited cards without justification.

"The membership of the CIO and the plain people of America are accepting gas rationing as a necessary and very slight sacrifice for the security of the nation," it continued.

"Those who demand unlimited ration cards would do well to remember the brave men who risk their lives to bring gasoline to them. Perhaps that thought would make them examine their fancied needs more closely, to see whether or not they are condemning seamen to the risk of death for nothing more important than their pleasure."

CIO Soldier's Manual Ready

The CIO War Relief Committee has just gotten off the presses a handsome and useful Servicemen's Manual, for free distribution to men in the armed forces.

This is a handy little booklet giving legal advice to the men on their rights as citizens: whether they may be sued while under the colors, what about their insurance premiums, car and furniture installments, their voting rights and the protection of their seniority rights on their jobs at home by their unions, and containing calendars, charts of military insignia and space for memos.

Any union desiring 1,000 or more for distribution among its men in the services may have a special edition of the Manual for the asking, containing a special page inset listing the officers of their international.

And, of course, any smaller number of copies may also be had on request to CIO War Relief committee, 1407 L St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

U. S., Seamen Reach Pact For Wartime

Washington, May 16—Collective bargaining and other union conditions on ships manned by the National Maritime Union will stand for the duration, with a provision for changes by mutual consent, under the terms of an agreement just reached between the NMU and Admiral Emory S. Land of the War Shipping Administration. President Joseph Curran signed for the union.

The agreement came after Land had made a number of statements to the general effect that the organized seamen, particularly those of the CIO, should allow all union conditions and bargaining rights to be frozen for the war.

CONTRACT

It was also in marked contrast to an agreement signed by Harry Lundeberg of the AFL's Seafarers International Union which froze conditions and abolished ship's meetings. This agreement, signed a week ago, was described by the NMU as a "maritime Munich."

Such tactics, the NMU pointed out, would be a hindrance to carrying out the NMU's slogan—"Keep 'Em Sailing" which has been maintained at the cost of hundreds of seamen's lives laid down in the line of duty.

Murray To Preside At Cleveland Parley

(See Story, Page Three)

CLEVELAND, May 16—Representatives of 650,000 organized steel workers meet here May 19 for the first constitutional convention of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

When Chairman Philip Murray calls the 1,200 delegates to order in Cleveland's municipal auditorium, it will be almost six years since the SWOC set out to do the impossible—unionize the nation's No. 1 basic industry, for decades a bastion of repression and tyranny.

Now—with hundreds of companies under contract, wages high above pre-union levels and working conditions greatly improved—SWOC has nearly completed the organizing miracle of the century.

Illinois CIO Pushes War Output

Chicago, May 16—"Labor realizes the importance of production. We realize that we must win the war. We know how much is at stake. We want to retain democracy and liberty."

So declared Pres. Sam Levin of the Illinois and Chicago CIO councils at the first state-wide production conference of the CIO. He was backed up by Robert Travis, state CIO vice-president, who added:

"We've got the production coming through now to warrant an immediate land offensive on a western front; and as our boys go over the top for an all-out offensive, we of labor will continue to go over the top in production to keep pace with the needs of the armed forces."

In a number of resolutions, the 300 delegates called for the opening of such a second front; urged a conference of labor delegates from unions in the United States, England and Russia; supported the Administration's anti-inflation program, and advocated greater buying of war bonds.

A number of speakers from government war agencies addressed the meeting. Members of the conference production sub-committee include F. J. DeLaurie, council secretary-treasurer; Albert Glenn of the auto workers; and Travis.

CIO Head Joins Board Of Russian War Relief

New York, May 16—CIO support for Russian War Relief was expressed by Pres. Philip Murray this week in accepting an invitation to become a member of the Board of Directors and in pledging CIO aid to the $6,000,000 drive now under way.

"No one can fail to admire the heroism of the Russian army and people in repelling Nazi barbarism," Murray said in his acceptance wire.

"The five million men and women of the CIO are determined to help their valiant allies in every practical way by fighting, working, giving. I know they join with me in wishing the Russian War Relief drive every possible success and in extending the cooperation and hearty support of labor."

Murray was joined by Pres. William Green of the AFL and Pres. A. F. Whitney of the Railroad Trainmen.

The $6,000,000 drive was started in New York with a conference attended by delegates of all trade unions in the city as well as other organized groups.

Fur Delegates Hail Union For Aid To War Effort; Murray Leadership Praised

CHICAGO, May 16—A pledge of wholehearted support to CIO President Philip Murray was reaffirmed by delegates to the 14th biennial convention of the Fur Division, International Fur & Leather Workers in session here this week.

In a wire sent to Murray, the convention praised the CIO President's "leadership in the great war effort for an early offensive and victory over Hitlerism and Japanese militarism."

A summary of the union's war activities made at the fourth session shows that more than three million dollars' worth of war bonds and stamps had been purchased by locals and members of the union. The Fur division, the oldest and best established part of the organization, accounted for close to two million dollars' worth of the war bond quota set by the union's general executive board to be achieved by the time of the convention.

BIG DONATIONS

A contribution of more than $150,000 was given to Britain, Russia, Chinese and American War Relief agencies, and the Red Cross, the report stated. In addition, some 1,500 pints of blood were donated to the Red Cross' Blood bank.

Greetings of the Chinese government were brought to the convention by Dr. Chen Lo Chen, Chinese consul general in Chicago.

To start the union drive to help the Chinese people the Furriers Union, at the suggestion of President Ben Gold, voted unanimously to contribute $5,000 to be used for the establishment of a hospital unit for the Chinese army.

HITS ANTI-BIAS STAND

Alderman Earl B. Dickerson, from Chicago's largest Negro ward and a member of President Roosevelt's Fair Labor Practices Committee also addressed the delegates, praising the union for its constant fight against discrimination.

Fullerton Fulton, Illinois regional director of the CIO, in his speech to the delegates, paid tribute to the Furriers union as one whose achievements are typical of the whole CIO. Fulton, who is a member of the United Mine Workers, hailed Pres. Murray as a great leader whom he said he had known for 32 years.

OFFICERS' REPORT

The support given by the union to the government in its war effort and the organizational gains made by the union were outlined in the Officers' Report the first day of the convention.

"Labor realizes that without a supreme effort this great historic victory cannot be won; that without total, complete and decisive annihilation of the fascist enemy, the people are in critical danger," the report declared.

Among the outstanding war activities reported were those of the Furriers Joint Council in New York where the workers agreed to give a day's overtime at time and one-half to create a fund for war relief, charities and sick aid.

RELIEF DRIVE

The report recommended that "the organization continue and intensify war relief activities for our allies, Great Britain, the Soviet Union and China, and that a substantial amount of money be raised for relief of the starving population of Greece."

In a section on the gains won for the workers from 1939 to 1942, the report stated that wage increases totaling more than $7,000,000 annually had been negotiated, and that "every collective and independent agreement signed in the fur industry in the U. S. and Canada provided our members with higher wages and better working and living conditions."

Declaring that practically the entire fur industry is now under union control, the report said that these gains would be guarded "zealously and vigilantly."

Court Refuses To Review Case Of Sharecropper

Washington, May 16—The U. S. Supreme Court, without opinion, has refused to review the case of Odell Waller, Negro sharecropper of Gretna, Va., who has been sentenced to death, the Workers Defense League announced here this week.

Governor C. W. Darden of Virginia has granted Waller a 31-day stay of execution to June 19. He was to have been executed May 19.

The case has aroused national attention because of its tie up with demands for abolition of poll tax laws in Southern states. The defense argued that Waller had not received a trial by a jury of his peers, as non-payers of the poll tax were systematically barred from grand and petit jury lists in Pittsylvania County, Va.

Affidavits were presented showing that more than 80 per cent of the population of the county were unable to pay the poll tax and were thereby barred from serving on juries.

StoreUnion Parley In Chicago

Chicago, May 16—The third convention of the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes of America, CIO, will open at the Hotel Morrison here on May 18. It will be the fifth anniversary of the chartering of the union.

Nine hundred delegates, representing 110,000 distributive industry workers, will lay plans for the mobilization of its entre membership in the nation's war effort. The union leaders will adopt a comprehensive program to guide the course of the union's affairs aimed to solve the problem created by the war emergency.

Groundwork for an all-out effort by the 240 affiliated local unions for closer and more efficient coordination by the distributive industry with the national war productiou program will constitute a major part of the assembly's deliberations. The conclave will explore the effect of recent government price fixing and rationing has on employment in the industry.

Several hundred resolutions have already been submitted to the convention dealing with questions of national policy. Virtual assurance of unanimous adoption of a resolution promising unswerving support to CIO President Philip Murray and for his policies is predicted.

Form Die Council In St. Louis

St. Louis, Mo., May 16—Tool and die makers and machinists of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers established a city-wide council at a meeting today, adopting a resolution pledging a seven-day to the war effort.

The council will be known as the Council of Tool and Die Makers and Machinists and extends through several war plants here on a craft basis. The resolution adopted read in part as follows:

"Nothing short of physical exhaustion will keep us from our stations in this all-out war against our Axis enemies. We meet together to join under the banner of our union, to unite and work for the advancement of our country's cause, which is the cause of the freedom and liberty loving people of all lands.

"We meet to join together in unity so that we, together with the other skilled mechanics of our city, can advance our trade and give maximum aid to war production efforts."

Pennsy CIO Voices 'O.K.' Of Murray

Pittsburgh, May 16—Full approval of the policies of Pres. Philip Murray and the CIO program of support to President Roosevelt and the nation's war effort was voted here by several hundred delegates to the annual convention of the Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council.

On the first day of their convention, the delegates had heard Murray deliver a 90-minute review of his leadership of the organization in which he lashed out at "traducers" seeking to disrupt the organization, and asked the United Mine Workers to resume its payment of dues to the CIO.

SWAP DELEGATES

Symbolic of the developing unity in American labor ranks was the exchange of delegates between the CIO convention and the AFL state parley held in Reading at the same time.

Included among the resolutions passed by the convention was one urging the CIO executive board to "initiate negotiations for the friendly cooperation of the American, British and Russian trade unions."

URGE OFFENSIVE

The delegates also adopted a resolution supporting offensive action against the Axis by the United Nations, as a substitute for a resolution calling for the opening of a western front against Hitler.

Other resolutions called for the election of pro-war, pro-labor candidates to public office; endorsed Judge Ralph H. Smith for governor; voiced support of Newspaper Guild strikes in Aliquippa and Chester; protested racial discrimination in war industries; and protested against the possible appointment of Joseph Kennedy to any high-ranking U. S. maritime post.

John A. Phillips was re-elected president of the council, and Lester Thomas as secretary-treasurer.

Freedom For All Held U. S. War Aim

New York, May 16—From the lips of Vice-Pres. Henry Wallace there came last week one of the clearest, most illuminating discussions of America's war aims and goals yet delivered by a public official.

Speaking at a banquet of the Free World Associates here, Wallace warned that victory for this nation must carry yet further the democratic trend touched off by the American Revolution, the French Revolution and the various European democratic movements of the last century.

Largely ignored by many sections of the big business press, Vice-Pres. Wallace pointed out that "this is a fight between a slave world and a free world."

"Just as the United States in 1862 could not remain half slave and half free, so in 1942 the world must make its decision for a complete victory one way or the other," he said.

CITES HISTORY

The country's No. 2 public official dipped into history to relate the history of democratic progress.

"The march of freedom of the past 150 years has been a long-drawn-out people's revolution," he said. "In this Great Revolution of the people, there were the American Revolution of 1775, the French Revolution of 1792, the Latin-American Revolutions of the Bolivarian era, the German Revolution of 1848, and the Russian Revolution of 1917.

"Each spoke for the common man in terms of blood on the battlefield. Some went to excess. But the significant thing is that the people groped their way to the light. More of them learned to think and work together.

"The people's revolution aims at peace and not at violence, but if the rights of the common man are attacked, it unleashes the ferocity of the she-bear who has lost a cub. When the Nazi psychologists tell their master, Hitler, that we in the United States may be able to produce hundreds of thousands of planes, but that we have no will to fight, they are only fooling themselves and him.

NO ROOM FOR NAZIS

"The people are on the march toward even fuller freedom than the most fortunate peoples of the world have hitherto enjoyed. No Nazi counter-revolutionist will stop it.

"The common man will smoke the Hitler stooges out into the open in the United States, in Latin America and in India. He will destroy their influence.

"No Lavals, no Mussolinis will be tolerated in a free world."

The Vice-President indicated clearly that unions and other similar democratic organizations will be a mighty force for good in the world of tomorrow.

"Industrial progress sooner or later inevitably brings a strong labor movement," he continued. ". . . Everywhere the common people are on the march. By the millions they are learning to read and write, learning to think together, learning to use tools."

Montana CIO Votes Pledge Of Confidence

Helena, Mont., May 16—Support for the national CIO's war program and a pledge of confidence in the leadership of CIO President Philip Murray were among the important resolutions passed at the convention of the Montana CIO State Council held here May 3-4.

Delegates present came from locals affiliated with the United Mine Workers; Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers; State, County & Municipal Workers; Newspaper Guild and the Oil Workers International Union. The International Typographical Union, unaffiliated since its suspension from the AFL, was also represented.

Technicians Offer Services

New York, May 16—America's organized technical workers, members of the CIO Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, have set up a new department in their union to help with war production problems.

The new department, under the direction of Beryl Gilman, will act as "a coordinating agency for war production activities and serve as a research and information agency which will provide counsel on war production agencies," according to FAECT President Lewis Alan Berne.

The union has also prepared a manual entitled, "Producing for Victory—a Manual for Increasing War Production." The manual is designed especially for labor-management production committees, and deals with technical problems from the engineering standpoint.

Murray To Preside At Sessions

By HOWARD McCARTNEY

CLEVELAND, May 16 — An outstanding chapter in the history of organized labor will be opened here May 19, when CIO's most successful organizing committee is transformed into one of the greatest labor unions the world has ever seen.

At that time the Steel Workers Organizing Committee convention will be called to order to lay the groundwork for a permanent organization, to write a constitution to govern the new union, and to elect national officers.

The 1,200 delegates who are expected to attend the sessions will hear reports of amazing accomplishments achieved in the drive to organize the steel industry — a job that many said "just couldn't be done," when the SWOC was founded in June, 1936.

650,000 MEMBERS

Those delegates will represent more than 1,100 local unions and over 650,000 union members working in mills in every steel center in the United States and Canada.

As the "Call" for the convention points out, "this will be one of the most important and historic conventions ever held, coming in the early days of a great war against oppression and dictatorship."

"It will bring together the leaders of a democratic labor union, which is devoted to the principles of all-out victory production and support of our Commander-in-Chief's war program for defeat of the Axis powers," the "Call"—signed by Chairman Philip Murray and Secretary-Treasurer David J. McDonald—declared.

The convention will be called to order May 19 by Chairman Murray at the Music Hall of the Cleveland Public Auditorium and will continue in session the rest of that week.

At the present time the SWOC is functioning as an organizing committee, with rules and methods of procedure to guide it. The committee was formed under a special agreement with the old Amalga-

Broadcast Wins Big Response

New York, May 16—"Keep 'Em Sailing" was the theme of CIO's second Labor for Victory radio program, broadcast Saturday, May 9, over the Red network of the National Broadcasting Co. at 10:15 p.m., EWT. The next CIO program is set for May 23, same stations.

The program was a dramatization of the heroism of the men of the National Maritime Union in daily facing death at sea. It reenacted the sinking of a tanker, telling the story of Bill Caves, NMU ship survivor, and had Joseph Curran, head of the NMU participating.

At the beginning of the show, Bill Caves shouted out that he had "dynamite on his chest" that he wanted to unload. Later, when he did unload, the dynamite was directed at "certain gents in Congress, certain newspaper publishers, with your defeatist editorials, war-as-usual profiteers."

NEWS COMMENTARY

The news commentary section of the program, presented by CIO Publicity Director Len De Caux, dealt largely with questions from listeners about the contrast between the workers' wages and soldiers' pay.

The script was written by Peter Frye of New York, and Earl Robinson composed the music. According to NBC officials, 150 approving phone calls came in at the end of the broadcast, representing an exceptionally high level of listener interest and large numbers of letters have been coming into CIO headquarters expressing approval of the program.

NAM Stooge Leaves Navy Morale Post

Washington, May 16—Labor and progressives won a skirmish this week when the U. S. Navy scuttled James A. Selvage from its Industrial Morale Division. Selvage was a former NAM publicity man who engineered a lot of anti-labor campaigns, and who in recent months has been giving a helping hand to scattered "I hate Roosevelt" cliques.

The Navy had no comment about Selvage, but Washington rumors predicted his successor would be Steve Hannigan, a flamboyant publicity man for Miami Beach, Fla. Hannigan has spotted more bathing girls on the nation's newspaper pages than any other man in the business, and presumably will devote his talents now to increasing wartime production.

CIO Unions Rally Against Schemes To 'Soak The Poor'

WASHINGTON, May 16—Describing the situation on the tax bill now before the House Ways and Means Committee as "critical," CIO Legislative Representative Nathan Cowan this week called on all CIO affiliates to wire the committee demanding support for the Treasury program on excess profits levies and urging that present income tax exemptions be left untouched.

This move was prompted by an increasing flood of rumors and news stories from the executive sessions of the committee, indicating that plans were maturing for drastim lowering of income tax exemption levels, for sizable relief to the corporations on war profits taxes and for a general sales tax.

SALES TAX DRIVE

Earlier in the week, U. S. Treasury Representatives were described as favoring cuts in the exemptions from the present $1,500 and $750 levels to $1,200 and $500. At the same time, the NAM-inspired campaign for a sales tax continued gathering strength.

The CIO wire, in addition to urging support "of adequate corporation taxes to at least the amount asked by the Treasury," reminded the unions of the dangers in the sales tax drive and urged an immediate heightening of the CIO campaign for adequate war revenue to be raised from taxes on those best able to pay—the rich and the profit-swollen corporations.

COMMITTEE WRITES

Earlier, the CIO Committee on Taxation, comprising Vice-Presidents Robinson and Rosenblum, had sent a wire to the House committee expressing opposition to lowered exemptions in computing the income tax. The message said:

"Apparently, the increased taxation on the lower brackets of income is intended to offset the loss of revenue caused by the committee's action in reducing taxation on corporations nearly $700 million below the amount proposed by the Treasury.

"We believe it to be most unfair to place such heavy increases in taxation upon the American workers and others in the low income brackets solely to relieve corporations, fully able to pay. We have cheerfully agreed to the greatly in-

Urge U. S. Buy Bond a Month For Soldiers

Detroit, May 16—The government was urged today to buy a $25 War Bond each month for the men in the armed forces, both as a part payment of our debt to our soldiers and as a backlog of purchasing power for postwar use.

The proposal was made by R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers, in a letter to Rep. Andrew May, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee.

Thomas's letter said in part:

"Organized labor views with satisfaction the action of the Congress increasing the compensation of the members of our armed forces. This is a step which has repeatedly been urged by my own organization as well as by other important sections of the American labor movement.

"I believe it would be justice to the members of our armed forces, as well as good economic sense for our nation, if the government would appropriate for every soldier, sailor and marine every month a defense bond worth $25 upon maturity.

"Even after the present legislation increasing the compensation of our fighting men becomes law, I believe that we will still be doing less, economically, than the defenders of our country deserve. A grant of a $25 bond a month will, I believe, help compensate them for the great economic sacrifices they are making serving their nation."

Steel Workers Convene

The convention this week in Cleveland which transforms a CIO organizing committee into a great union of steel workers, is an historic occasion of the first magnitude.

Six years ago, the CIO set up a small committee of union leaders, with Philip Murray as chairman, supplied it with funds and bade it go out and do the impossible. For decades old-line labor leaders had shaken their heads and said that steel could never be organized. For this basic American industry was also the basic stronghold of anti-unionism.

But under Murray's leadership, and with the courageous and self-sacrificing efforts of countless steel workers, the impossible has been achieved. Union membership has been increased from 8,000 to 650,000; collective bargaining has been brought to every major corporation; and the industry is now nearly 100% organized.

It is particularly appropriate that the leader of this magnificently successful organizing drive should also be president of the whole CIO. For the organization of steel has broken the back of American employing-class opposition to labor unionism. It has opened the way to industrial democracy in all the other mass-production industries.

The steel workers' convention has a still broader significance in relation to the present people's war. For the success of CIO organization, which it demonstrates, has unleashed the boundless energies of millions of workers for greater production and victory, in a way never possible in any previous war.

The whole CIO hails with enthusiasm the achievements of this mighty army of industrial democracy, now mobilized for supreme effort to win the war of world freedom.

U. S. and World Labor

American labor in the past has tended to separate itself from the rest of world labor. This has not been a matter of conviction so much as a reflection of the general separatism of a largely self-contained country, divided from Europe and Asia by the broad Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

But the present war has shocked American labor —and the rest of the American people—into a vivid awareness that geographical distances do not isolate a country from the military menace, and still less from the political contagion of fascist imperialism.

The United States is now one of the United Nations. Her troops fight side by side with our allies in a world battle for freedom. American workers know that they are part of a common production front that stretches all around the world.

The CIO cast aside all remnants of isolationism at its Detroit convention last year. It pledged itself to the world struggle against Hitlerism, in alliance with all freedom-loving peoples, before ever the United States became engulfed in the war.

Through its Committee for Allied War Relief, the CIO has demonstrated in practical fashion its solidarity with the working people of Britain, China, the Soviet Union and the other United Nations.

As the war goes on, every day brings a clearer realization of the close kinship and common interests of labor in all countries. Just as the joint effort of the workers of all lands (including those under Hitler's heel) is necessary to win the war, so, too, is their close association and common endeavor necessary to win a democratic peace.

The labor press can aid greatly in promoting better understanding between the peoples of the United Nations, by regularly printing news of labor's efforts in other countries, as The CIO News is now doing.

All such efforts will further the basic principles of organized labor and bring closer the day when labor will stand united, both nationally and internationally, for brotherhood, democracy, economic betterment and social progress throughout the world.

Down With Defeatists

In the current primary elections, every American voter has an opportunity to strike a blow for labor, democracy and victory.

Look over the candidates carefully. Apply one test to all—will they make effective the American people's demand for national unity and all-out effort for victory?

In this way you will smoke out the labor-baiting divisionists who want to smash labor more than to smash Hitler; and all the rest of the unsavory crew of appeasers, isolationists and defeatists who seek office to sabotage the war effort. And above all, don't fail to register and vote!

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE RADIO EXPERTS were non-plussed. They just couldn't reproduce the sound of running water. They had tried sand, pebbles, grain; they had used all the sound-effect machinery at their disposal. But none of these devices made quite the right noise.

They were about to give up in despair, when a visitor to the studios remarked, "Why not try water?"

Water was brought at once, and the experts discovered that running water made just the right noise for running water!

Many wiseacres in the government and industry have been wracking their heads about building labor morale for greater output. They have discussed pep-talks, slogans, exhortations, threats, promises, competitions, advertising and all the wily arts of high-pressure publicity.

But, like the radio experts of the above studio story, they overlook the most simple and obvious method of improving morale—namely, to give full scope to the morale and enthusiasm which labor already possesses.

The natural way to do this is to give recognition to labor's efforts, and to give labor democratic representation and participation in industrial planning for more production and in the administration of the war program.

There's quite a story in the public response to the Labor for Victory radio program over the NBC network each Saturday evening.

The very idea that labor should get this chance to present its case over the air got Westbrook Pegler so rattled that he broke even his own record for abusive epithets in the column he wrote on it.

Radio trade publications have been complimentary about the calm, confident and informative way labor tells its story. It is certainly in contrast with the frantic ravings of the Peglers and their kind.

But most interesting of all is the response of the general listening public, as expressed in telephone calls, letters and postcards.

The second CIO radio program hit a high mark in listener interest and approval, as expressed by telephone. The National Broadcasting Co. reported receiving no fewer than 150 phone calls voicing approval and only a few expressing disapproval.

The letters and postcards addressed to the CIO, in considerable volume, come from people in all walks of life and in all parts of the country—farmers, servicemen, housewives, business and professional people, as well as workers.

Active CIO unionists, incidentally, so far represent only a small minority of those expressing reactions to the CIO radio program.

Almost without exception, the written responses to the radio program are serious and thoughtful in character—revealing an interest in labor questions and a desire for information that belie the general advertisers' idea that the public are dumb-bells who can only be sloganized or kidded along with entertainment.

The letters deal chiefly with the facts and arguments presented on the CIO program. A fair proportion reflect the anti-labor propaganda that has filled the press and occupied so much radio time. But most of these reveal minds which are open to conviction, if they can be reached with labor's side of the case. And many of them ask pertinent questions on labor issues, which are valuable indicators of the kind of information which labor needs to present to the public.

The pro-labor letters (most of them coming from outside labor's ranks) reveal a constructive and helpful attitude, and include countless expressions of delight that labor at last has a chance to present its case on a regular national program.

Many of them report interesting incidents, present facts and arguments, and make other suggestions for material to be used on the Labor For Victory program.

Labor is breaking new ground with its national radio program. Most other radio programs, after all, are designed to sell goods for somebody's profit. Their intent is purely commercial. Or else they represent the efforts of wealthy minority interests to sugar-coat their ideas and slip them over on an unsuspecting public.

But a real labor program must give expression to what is actually on the minds of millions of working people, who constitute the majority of the radio audience. It should and can arouse a degree of audience participation that is possible for no other kind of radio program. If it is to be a labor and a people's program, the listeners must feel it is their program.

The initial response to the CIO broadcasts is an encouraging indication of the possibilities of labor's program.

SWOC Opens Convention On May 19

mated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers made in the spring of 1936.

When the SWOC was founded the Amalgamated held contracts with only a few steel fabricating plants and had a membership of less than 8,000. At its convention recently the Amalgamated voted to merge with the big new steel union.

The Cleveland convention will be the third held by the SWOC. Other sessions were held in Pittsburgh in 1937, and Chicago in 1940, but those meetings were merely "Wage and Policy" conventions.

In sharp contrast to the bitter anti-union industry it walked into in 1936, the SWOC will leave the stage with a record never surpassed in labor history. It can point to almost overnight conversion of a solid anti-union stronghold to an industry today that is virtually 100 per cent organized, including some of the mightiest corporations in the world.

900 CONTRACTS

The SWOC will turn over to the new constitutional organization over 900 union contracts governing wages, hours, and working conditions of 675,000 steel workers, representing the vast majority of the industry.

Virtually all of steel will be operating under union contract when the "Little Steel" plants of Bethlehem, Republic, Inland and Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. sign agreements. Negotiations with those firms are now in the final stages.

The inauguration and progress of the SWOC's campaign caught on in the summer of 1936, and spread like wildfire throughout the industry, finally resulting in a signed contract by the mighty U. S. Steel Corp.

Tory Tax Plan Is Shocking

A shocking proposal to take bread from the mouths of the lowest-paid families, in order to relieve the tax burden on the rich, has just come from the House ways and means committee.

This committee has actually voted to lower income tax exemptions to such a point that single persons earning only $9.60 a week, and man and wife with only $23 a week between them, will have to lower their standards still further to pay income taxes.

The same committee, only a few days before, voted to reduce sharply the corporation profit taxes proposed by the U. S. Treasury.

In earlier opposing the Treasury proposals to lower income tax exemptions, the CIO Committee on Taxation declared: "The reduction of the exemptions would make a further deep cut in the income which American workers need to enable them to turn out the maximum war production."

The issue now before Congress is whether needed tax revenue shall come from high war profits; or whether, in order to spare war profits, the poorest in the land are to be deprived of the barest necessities they must have to keep body and soul together.

Let your Congressman know your opposition to all present proposals to lower income tax exemptions still further.

creased individual income tax rates on low incomes as first proposed by the Treasury because we know that American workers are ready and willing to bear their fair share of the cost of our victory.

"REPREHENSIBLE"

"It is, however, reprehensible to increase further this burden upon the low incomes in order to relieve the corporations of the taxation which the Treasury has proposed.

"The reduction of the exemptions would make a further deep cut in the income which American families need to provide the basic necessities, and which American workers need to enable them to turn out the maximum war production. This fact was set forth by Secretary Morganthau in his original testimony to the committee.

"The lowering of exemptions would further encourage those who oppose the closing of loophles in the tax structure."

Union Gifts Aid Relief Drive

By HARRY RAPPAPORT

WASHINGTON, May 16—The CIO drive on the home front to raise war relief funds through its own organization, is meeting with marked success.

Monroe Sweetland, National Director of the CIO Committee for War Relief, has expressed gratification over the enthusiasm with which the international unions as well as locals, representing millions of CIO members, have swung into line to put over the campaign initiated by the last CIO convention. The program adopted by the convention called for collection of relief funds by our committee, which has set the minimum goal of at least one hour's pay per month from every CIO member.

MANY DONORS

A list of the organizations which have gone into action reads almost like a roster of the CIO membership.

Among the recent contributions received, to mention only a few, was one from the Furniture Union, Local 76-B of New York, for $6,417; and others from the Transport Workers Union, Steel Workers Organizing Committee, United Mine Workers of America, United Automobile Workers of America, Textile Workers Union, United Office and Professional Workers, American Newspaper Guild and State Councils and locals too numerous to mention.

Some internationals such as the National Maritime Union and the Shoe Workers Union have sent contributions out of their own funds, apart from the hour a month payment by the individual members. Internationals have been in the forefront in making substantial contributions for drives to organize the unorganized and to make other worthy causes their own responsibility.

Now that these problems are in abeyance during war times, internationals have generously, and with their usual farsightedness, made this present need of war relief their own opportunity for service, by contributing out of their treasuries.

MILLIONS IN NEED

In these war times, there are so many appeals made for war relief, from so many directions, as to bewilder the public. Never was there a more urgent need for contributions than at the present time. Millions of the civilian populations of China, Russia and the Far East countres have been routed out of their homes by enemy hordes.

These men, women and children are homeless; they need food and medical assistance. And as the war progresses, our own needs for relief in this country increase.

One of the first jobs of relief undertaken by the committee was to arrange to send bundles of necessities to the captured workers and the gallant Marines of Wake Island and Guam, in all 2,209 prisoners.

The CIO at its last convention solved the problem of how to make our contributions most useful by setting up a National Committee for American and Allied War Relief, with headquarters at 1407 L Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

Gifts Deductible

The government has ruled that all contributions made through the CIO War Relief Committee will be allowed as a deduction in determining income tax.

Labor's New Place in American Life And Industry Examined by SWOC Leaders

A Review of The Dynamics of Industrial Democracy—By Clinton S. Golden and Harold J. Ruttenberg. 358 pages. Price $3.00. Harper & Brothers, 49 E. 33rd St., New York.

By LEN DE CAUX

It is no accident that the most important book yet to appear on modern labor-management relations in the United States should be written by two busy and practical labor union officials—rather than by college specialists or professional personnel men.

It isn't any more accidental than the fact that the most significant industrial planning proposals of the present defense and war period have come from CIO unions and their leaders.

A revolution in industrial relations has taken place in the past decade. The old individualism of American workers died forever in the depression of the early thirties. It has been superseded by organization, group action and collective bargaining.

These have effectively destroyed the old false concept that an industrialist should be allowed to "run his own business in his own way," without regard to the rights and wishes of his employes and without accounting to society as a whole.

This revolution, and the idea of industrial democracy into which it has breathed life, have released boundless energies and aspirations in the hearts and minds of American working people.

A slave or a serf or an unorganized worker is treated as a "hand" performing routine work dictated by others. But once industrial unionism gives him a democratic voice and vote, the modern worker's "head" begins to count in the affairs of his industry as much as the work of his hands.

Industrial democracy is no more static than is political democracy. It is a method of procedure whereby the citizens of an industry may express their thoughts and wishes and effect social changes in the direction desired by the majority. It is a dynamic process with tremendous potentialities for social progress.

Fruits of Democracy

The recent gains in industrial democracy through the CIO have made it possible for American labor to make contributions to our present war effort of the most far-reaching importance. The Murray industry council plan is an example. So too are the plans and proposals made by the unions in nearly every basic war industry—and their organized cooperation to promote increased production.

The full significance of the recent growth of industrial democracy is only slowly being recognized outside of labor's ranks. It is not unnatural, therefore, that the first book to attempt a scholarly appraisal of the new developments should be written by two active participants in the growth of one of the greatest of the new labor unions— Clinton S. Golden and Harold J. Ruttenberg of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

"The Dynamics of Industrial Democracy" is the title of Golden's and Ruttenberg's new book. It carefully and comprehensively assembles the practical experience of the two authors and their union in organizing the steel workers, in collective bargaining negotiations, and in production planning.

From these concrete experiences, factually presented, the authors draw many general conclusions and seek to evolve a theory of collective bargaining and industrial democracy which will reveal the direction of future social developments.

While their theoretical conclusions may be questioned by some—and other social theorists may draw other conclusions from the same set of facts—no one can fairly dispute the invaluable contribution the authors have made by their scholarly presentation of some of the most essential and significant facts of modern collective bargaining in a great basic industry.

The book starts by describing the motives for union membership. It takes the cases of individual workers whom the authors knew well to illustrate the social and psychological factors involved, as well as the obvious economic considerations. It brings out most effectively the democratic impulse which finds expression through union organization.

Covers All Phases

Succeeding chapters on the art of collective bargaining, the development of leadership and the administration of contracts, are similarly based on actual incidents which illustrate most aptly the essential character of the collective bargaining process.

Every item of union negotiations—wage demands, seniority, grievance procedure, etc.—is comprehensively described and illustrated. And the chapters which deal with such subjects furnish a valuable practical guide to union negotiators in any industry—and for that matter, to employers, too.

The authors present most persuasive arguments for union security and the union shop, which they consider absolutely essential if unions are to make the full contribution to industry and society of which they are capable. They see industry-wide collective bargaining as a necessary next step.

Union-management cooperation for increased production is the goal and the gospel to which Golden and Ruttenberg direct a large part of their argumentation. Whether this has magic powers for resolving all conflict between opposing economic interests, may be debated. But it has clearly proved its powers for boosting war production in a period like the present, when all groups must subordinate their differences in the supreme effort of all freedom-loving peoples to lick Hitlerism and preserve democracy and civilization.

In conclusion, Golden and Ruttenberg develop the idea of national democratic planning, as envisaged by CIO President Murray in his industry council plan—both as a means of winning this war and as a method of effecting a post-war transition to a more prosperous economy, without the dismal slump and the mass unemployment that followed the last war.

The whole book illustrates and develops throughout the fascinating story of labor's increasing participation in industrial and national affairs; its struggle for industrial democracy; and the possibilities for more social justice and a more prosperous economy as labor gains in representation and power.

AUTHORS: Clinton S. Golden (left), eastern regional director of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, and Harold Ruttenberg, SWOC research director. Their new book, dealing with collective bargaining and production problems in the steel industry, has been widely acclaimed by reviewers.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

An old-tmer has passed on. Brother Albert L. Jones, Secretary-Treasurer, Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association, who was past 80 years of age and had served his organization consistently for more than 40 years, died on Monday, May 11, 1942. We surely will miss his wise counsel as a trade unionist. He was respected by all who knew him.

The CIO unions in Buffalo, New York, with the cooperation of Regional Director Hugh Thompson, celebrated the 5th anniversary of the CIO in that city. Our movement has made splendid progress there and now registers more than 80,000 dues-paying members affiliated with our international unions. SWOC heads the list of dues-paying members in that area with 33,847; UAW-CIO, 24,660; District 50, UMWA, 7,587; United Rubber Workers, 2,780. In elections won by the CIO in that city during the last five years there were 33,588 votes cast, of which 28,454 were for the CIO. CIO contracts govern 112 plants, 78% of which are closed shops.

Organizing drives are going on in 10 additional plants, involving 45,000 workers. A great achievement, startng from scratch five years ago. Keep 'em rollin', Buffalo!

Elections Won

The Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee through Regional Director Pete Mosele in New York City reports winning an election at the United Dressed Beef Swift Plant with a vote of 458 for CIO to 290 for the "independent union."

James P. Sweeney, CIO Field Representative, reports winning an election at the Middlesex Paper & Tube Company of Burlington, N. J., involving 300 workers. The score was 167 for UNP&TWA to 56 for no union.

Regional Director F. C. Pieper in New Orleans reports winning another election at the Crescent Bed Company with a vote of 80 for CIO to 22 against.

Regional Director R. J. Davidson reports another election success at the Gebhart Folding Box Company, Dayton, Ohio, with a score of 40 for CIO to 12 for no union.

National Representative Adolph Germer reports two election victories this past week in behalf of the IWA-CIO:

Diamond Match Company, Lightning Creek, West Branch, Washington: CIO, 204; no union, 7.

Diamond Match Company, Skookum, Washington: IWA-CIO, 47; no union, 2.

Regional Director Gillman of Georgia reports two elections won recently, as follows: CIO, 55; AFL, none. CIO, 42; AFL, 21.

Field Representative Geo. DeNucci adds a successful election at Columbus Coated Fabrics, Columbus, Ohio, with the following results: Textile Workers Union, CIO, 323; Independent Union, 144.

The Shoe Workers Organizing Campaign under the direction of Brother Walter Harris reports winning another election at the Higginsville plant of the International Shoe Corporation, with this vote: CIO, 245; aganst, 110. This is another repeater for Director Harris and his staff in organizing the International and Brown Shoe Corporations—one more milestone on the road to complete organization of the workers employed in the plants of these two large concerns.

UAW-CIO reports winning of two elections, as follows: Frank Foundries, Moline, Ill., by a vote of 132 to 38; and the J. I. Case Co. by a vote of 350 to 190.

Many Steel Victories

This was a great week for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and the CIO.

Nine elections were won this week in three of the Colorado Steel Company's plants with these results: Ironton, Utah—SWOC, 207, no union seven; Torrance, California—SWOC, 1,055, no union, 28; Pittsburg, California—SWOC, 1,600, no union, 121; two plants of Scully Steel with the following results: Pittsburgh, Pa.—SWOC, 68, no union, none; St. Paul, Minn.—SWOC, 24, no union, none; two American Bridge Company's plants as follows: Pittsburgh—SWOC, 195, no union, 3; Minneapolis, Minn.—SWOC, 82, no union, 6; Universal Atlas, Duluth, Minn.—SWOC, 126, no union, 1; Virginia Bridge, Birmingham, Ala.—SWOC, 357, no union, 5.

U. S. Steel Bows, Accepts WLB Order

WASHINGTON, May 16—U. S. Steel bowed to the sovereignty of the United States Government this week and accepted—with scarcely-concealed resentment—a War Labor Board decision ordering maintenance of union membership at the Federal Shipbuilding yards in Kearny, N. J.

Big Steel broke its two-week silence 48 hours after top officials of the General Motors Corp. wound up a spectacular hearing in Washington by humbly hoisting the white flag in its own war against the board.

Officials of the WLB were jubilant at U. S. Steel's acceptance of the decision, and said that the Board has weathered its first major attack from industry. Biggest item currently looming on the board's docket is the Little Steel case, on which a fact-finding panel's report on wages and union security is expected shortly.

Other major cases before the board—on which decisions will probably follow the steel ruling—are demands of the United Automobile Workers for $1 a day increase and union security at General Motors and a pay raise demand at Ford involving well over a quarter of a million workers.

The decision in the Federal Shipbuilding case set a 10-day period prior to beginning of the contract in which workers might withdraw from the union without any penalty. It is understood that only a handful of the several thousand members of the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers took any such action.

The company's acceptance of the WLB ruling was based on this minor "out," which its lawyers asserted with some elaborate arguments, kept the decision within the framework of the Wagner Act!

Meanwhile, Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO wrote to the War Labor Board charging that the company's distribution of its letter to the board stressing their opportunity to leave the union was in itself a violation of the Wagner Act.

Murray said the company had no right to attempt to wean away workers from the union.

British Miners Urge Production Board

(By Allied Labor News)

LONDON, May 16—Because of the necessity of increasing British coal production without taking any men from the Army, the powerful, 700,000 strong Mineworkers Federation of Great Britain is demanding immediate adoption of its plan for a nationwide production board, which was turned down by the mineowners a year ago.

There are reliable grounds for predicting that the government's final proposals for solving the nation's coal problem, to be made this week, will include substantial portions of the miners' plan.

The main controversy has revolved around the shortage of skilled miners. In the first year of the war, after Britain's export trade in coal collapsed more than 80,000 miners left the coal pits for the Army and 60,000 for other industries with better wages and conditions.

Government officials have tried to get them back from the Army; the Army has been reluctant to let them go. No more than 35,000 have returned.

UNION PLAN

Now the Mineworkers' Federation, which is among the labor groups demanding both an end to the peacetime muddle in industry and the launching of an offensive against Hitler, has suggested forcefully that its production plan be adopted.

Proper management of the industry, it points out, would not only bridge the gap between production and consumption but would make available enormous quantities of coal for an over-all spurt in British war industry. Union statisticians have told the government that present coal output is 300,000 tons a week below the target.

This increase could be accomplished overnight without taking any miners from the Army and thus detracting from the Army's striking power on the western coast of Europe.

POWERS OF BOARD

The miners propose a national coal board of representatives of government, mineworkers and mineowners. Nationalization of coal mines, which was a first-class political issue in Britain before the war, has been shelved for the duration.

The board would run the industry with powers to decide all matters concerning production and distribution. Regional boards would deal with day-to-day problems in localized areas. The most important unit will be pit production committees in each mine, hundreds of which are already in existence.

Of the miners' plan, the Labor Party says, "We consider the adoption of this plan would further national interests, make possible a greater degree of planning, better organization and would go far to remove the distrust of private ownership which is widespread among miners."

RATIONING PLAN

Only alternative to the plan yet proposed is a rationing system for domestic consumption, which will probably be introduced in Commons by Hugh Dalton, president of the Board of Trade.

Canada Improves Labor Order

Toronto —(ALN)— Canadian labor's sacrifice in voluntarily setting aside the strike weapon for the duration of the war has been rewarded by a new Government Order-in-Council, revoking the section of the Defense of Canada Regulations which permits a man to be arrested and interned for striking or advocating a strike.

A number of Canadian unionists, including C. S. Jackson, international vice-president of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, had been arrested under this section. Jackson, who was arrested in June 1941 during a strike of Toronto electrical workers, was released from internment camp early this year.

The New Order states: "It is considered desirable to amend Regulation 21 of the Defense of Canada Regulations in order to insure that no person will be detained thereunder by reason of his taking part in, or persuading any other person to take part in, a strike."

Labor Editors Meet at WPB Conference

New York, May 16.—Meeting under the auspices of thhe War Production Board and the N. Y. State Labor Press Assn., several score labor newspaper editors from the New England and Middle Atlantic States met here last week for a full day's discussions of problems facing the union publications and methods of building closer cooperation with the government's war agencies.

Editors of CIO, AFL and railway brotherhood papers attended the session, and later heard War Labor Board Chairman William H. Davis praise the union press for developing a high degree of responsibility among workers in war industries.

GOV'T. SPEAKERS

Other speakers during the day were Robert Horton, head of the WPB's information division; Dr. A. H. Feller, deputy director of the Office of Facts and Figures; Melvyn Douglas, screen star now employed by the Office of Civilian Defense; Capt. Donald Robinson of the U. S. Army; and other representatives of the government.

At a banquet following the business session the editors heard brief talks by Len De Caux, editor of The CIO NEWS; Philip Pearl, AFL publicity director; and a representative of the railway brotherhoods.

Discussion topics during the day were conducted by J. B. S. Hardman, editor of Advance, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Max Danish, editor of Justice, Int'l. Ladies Garment Workers; and Maurice Forge, editor of the Transport Bulletin, published by the Transport Workers' Union.

MORGENTHAU'S PRAISE

In a telegram to the meeting, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau praised the support extended by labor papers to the War Bond campaign.

"We, at the Treasury Dept. know how useful labor publications can be," Morgenthau wired. "For many months your papers and magazines have helped us to carry on a nationwide campaign in behalf of war savings, and for this we are deeply grateful . . .

"I know I can count on all labor editors to do their utmost on the home front until victory is won."

Japanese Workers Restive

By ANTHONY JENKINSON

New York, May 14—(ALN)—Despite Japan's acute shortage of skilled labor to man the war industries, increasing numbers of experienced workers are being interned in "Preventive Detention Stations" for anti-war activities, reliable reports reaching Allied Labor News indicate.

SET UP LAST YEAR

These "Preventive Detention Stations" were set up in August 1941 by the Ministry of Welfare to accomodate trade unionists "who have shown active resistance to the efforts of the authorities to convert them."

Worsening conditions in the factories, resulting from the extension of the war after the attack on Pearl Harbor, have given rise to growing dissatisfaction among workers. Opponents of the war policy are quickly singled out by police spies operating in the plants and removed to the camps.

Japan's trade unions, which were abolished in the fall of 1940, shortly after the suppression of all political parties, were never numerically strong. Severe police repression, combined with the fact that industries were broken down into small units, scattered throughout the countryside, made organization difficult.

SMALL UNIONS

In 1925 the organized labor movement had a membership of 254,000 —6.5% of the total number of workers. In 1937 there were 605,000 union members, which was still, however, only slightly less than 7%. Most of these were in industrial unions.

In 1937, out of 1,000,000 textile workers, only 18,000 were in unions. This was primarily because most of the textile workers were women, compelled to live in company dormitories and stay clear of unions. In December 1937 there were only 21,714 Japanese women in unions—1.3% of all employed women.

Coast Guard Asks For Enlistments

Washington, May 16—The U. S. Coast Guard needs men for the operation and maintenance of steam, gasoline and diesel marine engines, Capt. Robert Donohue, chief personnel officer of the Coast Guard, wrote to CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week.

Enlistments are made in the Coast Guard reserve and are for the duration of the war plus six months.

Eligible for enlistment are citizens between 17 and 35 with at least grammar school educations. Men with previous service in the Coast Guard, Navy or Marine Corps are acceptable up to 45 years of age. All applicants must pass a rigid physical exam, but waivers of minor defects will be considered.

RATINGS

Ratings will be dependent on qualifications and experience of the applicant. The pay for petty officers without previous military service in machinists' mates and motor machinist's mates ratings ranges from $72 to $126 a month. Men registered in the draft are eligible for enlistment up to the day they take their Army induction physical examination.

Complete details may be obtained at the Coast Guard recruiting stations in major cities, or from headquarters in Washington.

Soviet Oil Men Offer 7,000 Plans To Speed Output

Moscow, via London — (ALN) — Workers in the newly-developed oil fields of Bashkiria in the Southern Urals submitted 7,000 inventions and rationalization proposals last year, it was announced this week.

Under the Soviet labor-management production set-up, there is a special committee in each union local which encourages inventors and men with ideas for spurring labor efficiency. The value of this system may be seen from the fact that, of the 7,000 ideas, eleven of them alone will result in a saving of $20,000,000 a year.

Primaries Give Workers Chance To Hit Disrupters

WASHINGTON, May 16—Primary elections are beginning to come along these spring weeks, and workers who have watched their Congressmen's voting records will do well to remember them and to vote accordingly.

Chief tests of a Congressman's or a Senator's record is found in votes on the Smith anti-labor bill, on the Vinson bill, the Connally bill and other measures that would hamper war production by hamstringing unions.

The record should be carefully examined on these points, since votes for war measures, appropriations and the like are not a sufficient test. A Congressman is much more likely to vote for a war appropriation, where the military security of the country is obviously at stake, than he is to vote against an anti-union bill where the issues are deliberately clouded by anti-union propaganda.

STUDY TO 1940

The study of the voting record should go back beyond 1941, to include the record on such measures as the Smith amendments to the Wagner Act in 1940, the deportation bill against Harry Bridges, the various Dies committee appropriations and the like.

Such a study has been made by the New Republic magazine, issued in a special supplement to the May 18 edition. This supplement examines the record of every Congressman and Senator. A section is devoted to particularly notorious defeatists and anti-laborites, including such men as Clare Hoffman of Michigan, Gene Cox of Georgia, Faddis of Pa., Sen. Brooks of Ill., and others.

The following is a list of primary dates from this week through Sept. 15. Keep it pasted in your hat and watch for your Congressman's turn.

Seattle, Wash., May 16—Failure of management spokesmen in the Pacific Northwest lumber industry to agree to a joint council with union leaders has helped to retard lumber production, Pres. Worth Lowery of the Intl. Woodworkers of America charged today.

Lowery's statement followed a message from Donald Nelson, WPB chief, urging maximum production to aid the war program. IWA members are already working more than 40 hours a week, he said, and their efforts will help to relieve the production shortage.

OFFER TURNED DOWN

"On two separate occasions, the IWA has proposed to the lumber operators the setting up of an industry council plan along the lines recommended by CIO Pres. Murray and Donald Nelson," Lowery continued.

"On both occasions, the employers turned the plan down.

"Now we are faced with an acute shortage of logs, which has forced curtailments in production. At a time when log inventories should be built up in preparation for the coming fire season and winter months, inventories are lower and the order file is greater than at any time in the history of the industry.

"The IWA foresaw that such an emergency might arise several months ago, and demanded then, and is still demanding, that an industry council be set up. Unfortunately, the West Coast lumber operators short-sightedly persist in their 'business-as-usual' policy of 'too little and too late.'"

Barbers Win Pay Boost

Camden, N. J., May 16—Wage increases for journeymen barbers, lifting their weekly pay from $23 to $30, have been worked out by Local 26 of the CIO Barbers and Beauty Culturists of America.

After a two-hour discussion at a recent meeting, a committee of journeymen and master barbers was appointed to reach final determination of the issues.

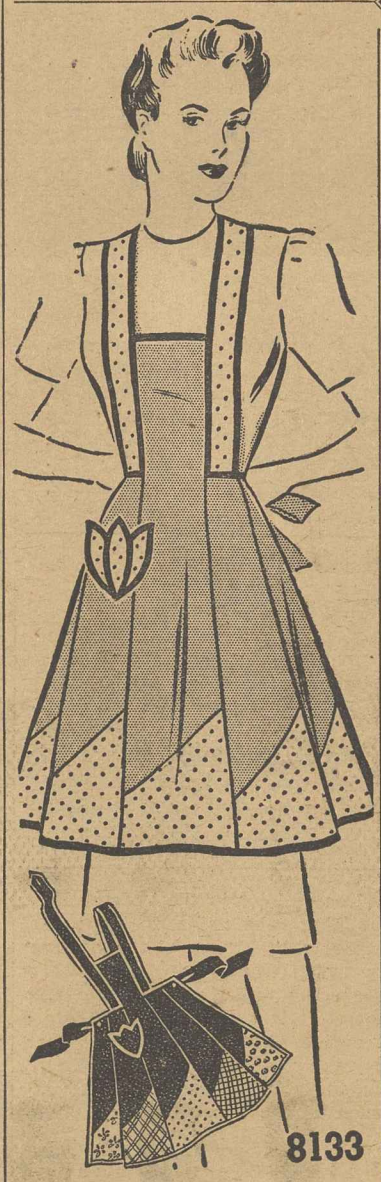
Peter Sessa, president of the local, was chairman of the meeting. The dinner and dance committee reported that its coming show promises to be a big success.

'Take Offensive'

Cleveland, O.—"Today the United Nations are in a position to take the offensive," declares Local 735 of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers (CIO) here in a resolution just passed asking for a western front against Hitler.

Auxiliaries Pamphlet Tells Women's Victory Job

PUBLICATION this week by the CIO of "Union Wives—United for Victory," a pamphlet on the importance of women's auxiliaries, was hailed by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO as a great contribution to the national auxiliary "Organize for Victory" drive.



Scraps and patches can be used to brighten this attractive apron. Make two or three of them and you can always look fresh and charming.

Pattern No. 8133 comes in sizes 14 to 40 and 42. Send 15c in coin, your name, address, pattern number and size to CIO News Pattern Dept., Federated Press Pattern Service, 106 Seventh Avenue, New York City. Enclose 1c for postage.

"Meet the wife, union brother," the pamphlet begins. "She isn't at the movies. She isn't playing cards. she's in the union hall right beside you.

"She belongs to a union auxiliary, and she's there to help you. She's there to help your union with its biggest job—VICTORY.

"The unions of the CIO, like the whole nation, have one goal today—VICTORY. Victory over Fascism and over all forces attacking the right of man to live in peace in a free world. But unions — despite their all-out production program, despite the men they give to the Army and Navy—can't reach that goal alone. They need cooperation, especially the cooperation of members' wives, mothers, sisters, daughters, sweethearts organized into auxiliaries."

The pamphlet outlines the program of the auxiliaries and concludes with a section "How Auxiliaries are Organized." All organizations interested in building auxiliaries are urged to order Union Wives—United For Victory in quantity from the CIO, 1106 Connecticut Avenue, Washington, D. C., 100 copies for $1.25; 500 for $2.50; 1,000 for $8.75.

State Council Formed

Formation of an Indiana State Auxiliary Council, and steps towards establishment of auxiliary councils in Michigan and Pennsylvania were announced this week by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO.

The organizing meeting of the Indiana group was held in Indianapolis. Mrs. Mary Frances Leonard, member of the Executive Board of the Auxiliaries of the United Automobile Workers from Munice, Indiana, was elected president, and Mrs. Amelia C. Gilligan, of the Women's Auxiliary of the Indianapolis Newspaper Guild, was chosen secretary-treasurer.

Blood for Victory

CIO auxiliaries all over the country have lined up their members to serve as blood donors. Women, who cannot go to the front as soldiers, are anxious to give their blood for Victory here at home.

USA-CIO Meets, Pledges All-Out Production for Victory in 1942

Shipyard Workers Win Raise

Chicago, Ill., May 23—Every shipyard worker in the nation will get a raise ranging from eight to 13 cents an hour as the result of an agreement reached this week at a National Shipbuilding Stabilization Conference between the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, the AFL, shipyard operators and the Government.

The agreement sets a uniform national first class mechanics' rate of $1.20 an hour, eliminating a five cents an hour lower differential in Gulf yards, according to IUMSWA President John Green, who headed the CIO negotiating committee.

The unions agreed to take less than they would have been entitled to under pervious zone agreements, and to urge their memberships to invest the present increase in war bonds. While the pact is subject to membership action, ratification of the increase is considered certain, according to union officials.

OVERTIME

Holidays and the sixth consecutive work day will be paid at the rate of time and a half, while double time will be paid for the seventh consecutive work day.

Green said the wage agreement narrows considerably the spread in earnings between the lowest paid and the highest paid workers, in keeping with the determination of the conference not to throw out of balance the government's efforts to control living costs.

The increase will take effect on the Atlantic Coast June 23, on the Great Lakes June 2, on the Gulf August 1, and on the Pacific Coast will be retroactive to April 1, in accordance with expiration dates of zone agreements.

Philip Murray Elected To Head Steelworkers

(See Stories, Pages 5 and 6)

CLEVELAND, May 23.—The nation's 660,000 CIO organized steel workers met here this week to form the United Steelworkers of America (USA-CIO), to pledge an all-out drive for victory over the Axis in 1942. They elected CIO President Philip Murray president of the new organization.

Formerly the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, the USA-CIO heard President Murray review the history of six years of organizing in the nation's basic war industry, heard him pledge all support to President Franklin D. Roosevelt in winning the war, and called for "every ounce of energy and strength in the battle of production for an immediate offensive and victory in 1942."

The 1,700 delegates urged action against defeatists and disruptionists, demanded application of the Murray Industry Council Plan to speed war production, and increased labor participation in government.

The delegates also voted approval of CIO-AFL cooperation through Labor's Victory Board and urged close relations between American, British, Soviet and other United Nations' labor unions for greater international unity in smashing the Hitler Axis.

Win Biggest Office Vote

New York, May 23.—The largest election ever held in the insurance field was won by a two to one majority this week, as the United Office & Professional Workers of America rolled up 2,321 votes to 1,241 for no union in a state-wide election among agents of the Prudential Life Insurance Co.

The election was held as the result of an unprecedented agreement based on the need for labor-management cooperation in the successful prosecution of the war, according to UOPWA President Lewis Merrill.

The company agreed to sign a contract with the bargaining representative chosen by its agents in a state-wide election. In turn, the union voluntarily set aside its certification by the State Labor Relations Board as bargaining representative for Prudential agents in the Greater New York area.

Certify Union

New York, May 23 — A certification as collective bargaining agent for the seven bookstores and office of Doubleday Doran & Co., Inc. was issued this week by the N. Y. State Labor Relations Board to the Book & Magazine Union, Local 18, of the United Office & Professional Workers of America.

Wire Crisis Seen in Bill

Washington, May 23—Warning that a tremendous communications bottleneck would be created if the Postal and Western Union telegraph companies are allowed to merge, as provided by Senate Bill 2445, the American Communications Assn., CIO, this week called on other unions to oppose the measure.

ACA President Joseph P. Selly and 60 workers from the operating rooms warned the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee that an adequate communications system is necessary for successful prosecution of the war. They recommended that the government take whatever steps necessary to maintain Postal as an independent communications system for the duration, with specific sums to be allocated to raise "unbelievably low wages".

Hitler's Rear

Waterbury, Conn., May 23—"It's time we opened a Western Front so that we can kick Hitler in the rear while the Red Army is slugging him in the chin," President Reid Robinson of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union declared this week at a rally for Chase Brass & Copper Workers here.

Convention Season's On

War Takes Center At Aluminum

Eau Claire, Wis., May 23—War problems will take the limelight at the fourth biennial convention of the Aluminum Workers of America which opens here Monday. About 100 delegates representing 45,000 aluminum workers in plants organized by the AWA throughout the country will attend the session which will be held in the Elk's auditorium.

AWA officials said that action taken at the convention is expected to put the AWA on a complete war-time footing. Numerous resolutions have already been received, calling for action to rally the union's activity behind the all-out war effort.

The officers' report which will be made to the delegates by President N. A. Zonarich, outlines the gains made by the AWA during the two-year period since the last convention. Dues paying membership has increased 122 per cent, union contracts covering 45,000 workers are in effect, and wage increases totaling more than $10,000,000 have been won, the report states.

SPEAKERS

Government and CIO leaders scheduled to address the convention include Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization; Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers and Col. A. Robert Ginsbergh, director of the public relations and information division, War Department.

Other guests expected to attend are Jacob Potofsky, secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Pres. S. H. Dalrymple of the United Rubber Workers; Pres. Milton Muray of the American Newspaper Guild; Monroe Sweetland, director of the CIO Committee for American & Allied War Relief; and Philip VanGelder, secretary-treasurer, Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

A special short wave broadcast from British labor will be radioed to the convention from England, and portions of the proceedings are expected to be broadcast over station WEAU in Eau Claire.

Delegates will be entertained at a banquet to be held Thursday evening.

Alabama Council Meets

Birmingham, Ala., May 23—Delegates representing some 50,000 CIO members throughout the state mapped out policies to guide the Alabama State CIO Council through the stormy year ahead, at the third annual convention which met here for a two-day session last week-end.

Noel Beddow, executive director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, was elected president of the State Council without opposition, after William Mitch, former head of the state CIO, declined to run. Five vice-presidents representing various affiliated international unions were also chosen. They are:

E. M. Williams, Marine & Shipbuilding Workers; Frank Allen, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers; W. H. Crawford, Steel Workers; John Rogers, National Maritime Union, and H. S. Williams, Textile Workers.

CIO SPEAKERS

Retail Pledges Victory

Chicago, May 23—Nine hundred delegates representing 110,000 members in 240 locals attended the third convention of the United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes, in session here at the Morrison Hotel this week.

President Samuel Wolchok, in his opening speech told the delegates: "We meet in a war-torn world. It is but fitting and wise that, in planning our destiny for the coming year, we first unitedly devote our attention to the methods best suited to achieve the quickest defeat of the forces of intolerance and barbarism, so that peace and freedom may return to a sorely beset world."

During the first day's proceedings, delegates adopted a resolution, on a special order of privilege, expressing "appreciation and support of Philip Murray in his efforts on behalf of labor."

PRAISE MURRAY

Praising President Murray's "forthright, steadfast and able leadership," the resolution declared that he has demonstrated to the entire nation the CIO's "responsibility and its determination to increase production."

Among the CIO leaders who addressed the convention were National Secretary James B. Carey, Director of Organization Allan Haywood and Richard Frankensteen, executive board member of the United Automobile Workers and director of the aircraft division.

President Wolchok, in his opening speech to the convention, reported that the union, since it was chartered by the CIO in 1937, had grown from 11,000 to 110,000 members. "We are celebrating our fifth anniversary by rededicating the strength of our union to the cause of our nation," he said.

Recounting the gains won by the URWDE, Wolchok reported that closed and union shop contracts providing higher wages, shorter hours, security of employment and better working conditions had been signed with thousands of new employers.

"Even as we have been doing this," he declared, "we have been improving the many old agreements with employers previously unionized, gaining millions of dollars in increased wages for the 75,000 members previously in our fold, gaining shorter hours and many other improved conditions.

BIG CONTRACTS

"Today we have contracts with some of the largest industrialists in the world—Marshall Field; R. H. Macy; R. H. White; Boston Store; Fair Store, C. E. Smith; Butler Bros.; J. C. Penney, Bloomingdales, Gimbels. These are but a few of the large employers who employ our members under our contracts."

During the course of his speech Wolchok praised the leadership of CIO President Murray. "His inspiring leadership, his great devotion not only to the CIO, not only to the worker, but to the nation and to mankind, make him a mighty man among men," he said. "The CIO is a great monument to his endeavors. I am sure I have your backing when I say, we shall always support him and the great organization he so ably leads."

A vociferous demonstration, with delegates snakedancing through the aisles, singing and shouting, lasted for nearly a half-hour after the conclusion of Pres. Wolchok's address.

A radio message from General MacArthur in Australia in answer to greetings sent him by the union was read to the delegates. "I am grateful for your message but even more thankful for the determination and patriotism it conveys," the General said.

The convention went on record as opposed to wage freezing under any circumstances, and voted support for the wage proposals of the CIO steel workers, auto workers and other CIO unions who have cases pending before the War Labor Board.

CIO In Two New Radio Programs

Washington, May 23—Two more weekly, union-sponsored radio shows went on the air this week.

In New York, a regular "Win the War" show will be presented as part of the Industrial Union Council's Win the War Campaign, according to President Joseph Curran.

The shows wil be presented at 9:30 p.m. every Friday on station WQXR. The series, which will dramatize the war effort of all the people, will be prepared by members of affiliated unions in cooperation with the Newspaper Guild of New York.

In Indianapolis, station WIRE has given the labor movement 15 minutes a week for the duration of the war, because the station manager, Eugene Pulliam, head of the State War Savings Staff, was so impressed with labor's cooperation in the war bond drive.

Unity, 2nd Front Mark N. J. Meet

Jersey City, N. J., May 23—Resolutions calling for a second front to defeat Hitler and for working unity between the CIO and AFL featured the third annual Convention of the Hudson County Industrial Union Council this week.

The Convention took strong stands against racial and minority discrimination in industry and against native appeasers. The meeting warmly welcomed President Joseph Quinn of the local AFL Federation of Labor, who brought "fraternal greetings from 50,000 AFL workers."

CIO Wins Farm Aid Fight In U. S. Senate

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The CIO combined with America's working farmers this week in successful support of a drive to give the Farm Security Administration more funds this year than last.

The FSA, devoted to aiding poor farmers and migrant farm workers, came through victorious, 48 to 16 in a Senate vote.

In opposition to Senatorial axwielders who could see only "economy" instead of the interests of the people, CIO Secretary James B. Carey reiterated "the stand of of the CIO in support of more adequate assistance to the 2,700,000 low income farmers of the nation, especially through the essential aid given by FSA."

"The CIO supports the action of the Senate Appropriations Committee in increasing the food for victory program by $55,000,000 in loan authorization," Carey wired in advance of the Senate vote.

"This portion of President Roosevelt's request will promote the efficient use of human and land resources in 1943 and prevent the necessity for ration cards for meats and other foods.

CIO COMMENDS

"The CIO commends your Committee," Carey continued, "for restoring to the Agricultural Marketing Administration $44,500,000 which will allow expansion of the school lunch program and continuation of the stamp plan, both of which are greatly needed.

"Although the Committee has not seen fit to press for appropriations equal in adequacy to the provisions made for production of other war materials such as planes, guns, and tanks, the Committee is to be thanked for repulsing and rebuking those interests and spokesmen who would have used the war emergency to promote economic disfranchisement of working farmers. They are the same interests who have been defeated in their attempts to handcuff labor."

Senator McKellar (D., Tenn.) who led the successful fight on the Tennessee Valley Authority, led the losing battle against the FSA.

Aid Russia Day Set

New York, May 23—"Aid to Russia Day" will be celebrated June 22, anniversary of the Nazi invasion of the Soviet Union, it was announced this week by a sub-committee of Russian War Relief, Inc., whose Board of Directors CIO President Philip Murray has joined.

Plans for national observance of the day have already been approved by 10 governors and 31 mayors in "tribute to the courage of the Russian army and people and as a special occasion for mobilizing new aid for those people," the subcommittee, headed by former New York Governor Alfred E. Smith, stated.

CIO Asks Pay Raise For U. S. Workers—Gets Quick Action

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Less than a week after CIO President Philip Murray urged wage increases for underpaid Federal employes, President Roosevelt, through the Civil Service Commission, recommended that time and a half pay after 40 hours a week be given to an estimated 800,000 "white collar" Federal workers whose salaries are less than $3,800 a year.

The overtime pay is expected to bring increases ranging up to a top of 30 per cent.

In a letter to President Roosevelt, Murray said he had been informed by the CIO United Federal Workers' Union that "statistics indicate that nearly 50 per cent of Federal workers are getting less than $1,500 a year and that from 70 to 80 per cent earn less than $2,000. The majority of Federal workers are estimated to have dependency responsibilities," Murray stated.

"When you cut these wages by 15 to 20 per cent, as the cost of living has cut them, you have a situation wherein many workers cannot bring their full energies to their jobs."

Pledging the full support of CIO members in the government service to the President and his war leadership, Murray declared that inequalities and low wages could be adjusted in the spirit of the Administration's war economic program.

"Overtime pay," Murray wrote, "would be one step toward correcting inequities in the Federal service. Hours of work have been increased from a minimum of 39 to a minimum of 44, with an actual minimum of 48 in all war agencies and with many thousands of employes working up to 60 hours a week.

"The great majority of employes are putting in these hours without any overtime pay. Government workers are willing to work as long as necessary to fulfill their war duties, consistent with health requirements, but it seems only fair that they be paid overtime in accordance with standards in organized private industry.

"I believe," Murray said, "that a broad approach should be taken to the problem and that it should be solved by raising the salaries of low income Federal workers, by overtime pay and by the establishment of machinery for raising pay in accordance with the rise in the cost of living. This would all add to total war efficiency, which is the goal of organized labor."

CIO-AFL Reply To NAM Smear

Canton, Ohio, May 23—Concrete evidence of local unity between CIO and AFL continued to mark the progress of organized labor here this week.

Advertisements paid for cooperatively by the Stark County Industrial Union Council, the Canton Federation of Labor, the Stark Tri-County Building Trades Council and affiliates of the organizations jointly replied to a National Assn. of Manufacturers anti-labor campaign.

The Federation of Labor recently voted to support demands of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in bargaining with the Timken Roller Bearing Co.

Disruption Charged to District 50

New York, May 23 — Charges of raiding and disruption by leaders of District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America were filed with CIO President Murray by Michael Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union here.

The TWU charged that John L. Lewis, John T. Kmetz, UMWA Board Member, and Edward Heckelbech and Henry Johnson, representatives, conspired "with each other and with members of the Transportation Workers Union" to:

"Invade and violate the jurisdiction of the TWU as set forth in the charter granted to it by the CIO; bring about the withdrawal of members from the TWU and to have such members join District 50 of the UMWA; interfere with and disrupt the collective bargaining relations existing between the TWU and the many employers with whom the TWU now has collective bargaining agreements; stir up disputes and conflicts between and among the international unions which compose the CIO with a view to undermining and destroying the unity, effectiveness and prestige of the CIO."

Earlier, the TWU put several of its members on trial for their part in the plot to break up the union. They turned out to be violent opponents of the war against Hitler, and to have open defeatist connections.

If Hitler Wins

Denver, May 23—If Hitler wins this war, trade unionists will be the first to suffer, Eugene Cervi, regional representative of the Office for Emergency Management, told the Denver Industrial Union Council this week, at a special production conference.

Tax Monkeying Imperils Nation's War Program

WASHINGTON, May 23.—This week's finagling with the tax bill, still being carried on behind closed doors in the House Ways and Means Committee, resulted in further presents to the rich and to the corporations and consequent further threats to the workers and other low income groups and to the nation's war program.

To date, the Committee has cut off about one and a half billion dollars of revenue from excess profits and high incomes, despite Treasury Dept. recommendations. The bill as it now stands will bring in about seven billion dollars in revenue. Over $700 million has been handed back to the corporations in the form of reduced excess profits levies. Another $600 million has been lost in reducing high level income taxes, while $200 million has been tossed away by permitting companies to deduct for "depletion."

STEAL

This depletion business, incidentally, is one of the biggest steals in history. Under its terms, mine owners, oil well owners and the like are allowed to deduct huge sums from their taxes on the ground that carrying on their business uses up their resources. It actually means that the owners get a premium for selling their goods.

Purpose of the House Ways and Means Committee in reducing desperately needed war revenue is to put on a squeeze play for the sales tax. This will be attempted, it is felt here, either at the last moment in Committee or even on the floor of the House, and will be accompanied by a great deal of "patriotic" ballyhoo about the need for equal sacrifice. Actually, as many economists and experts have repeatedly pointed out, the sales tax is the most unfair method of raising money that could be evolved, since it falls with greatest weight precisely on those who can least afford to pay.

CIO observers here pointed out that the tax bill is the most important test of the nation's war economy to come before Congress since the President's message. Problems of inflation, wages, cost of living, and health and efficiency standards for war production are all directly involved.

CIO members were urged to keep pressing their Congressmen to enact a program of taxes for victory, based on ability to pay and on the war needs of the country.

CIO and Auxiliaries Urge Higher Aid For Dependents

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Higher allowances for dependents of men in the Armed Forces were asked this week by the CIO and its Congress of Women's Auxiliaries, in testimony before the House Military Affairs Committee.

Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, in a letter to the Committee, urged larger allowances than those proposed in the present bill, H. R. 6948.

"The CIO is very definitely concerned over the problem of adequate allowances for the dependents of men in the armed forces," Cowan wrote the Committee. "By and large these men are drawn from their ranks of American workers. While they serve their country, it is obviously essential that their wives and children be assured of freedom from want.

"Our organization has a much larger concern with this problem. The effectiveness of our armed forces must obviously depend to a large extent upon the morale of the men who compose those forces.

"We cannot conceive of a more favorable contribution to morale than an assurance to men who have left behind their homes and families to serve their country that their loved ones at home will receive the best possible care that the nation can offer."

Representing the CIO Auxiliaries Mrs. Eleanor Fowler, secretary treasurer, said that they endorsed the bill but believed it could be effective only if Senate Bill 2025, which raises the pay of service men to $42 a month, becomes law.

A plan to deduct $20 a month from present soldiers' pay would leave little for necessities, she pointed out. The Auxiliaries recommended, she said, that service men contribute $20 a month but that the Government's matching sum be double that, providing $60 a month instead of $40 for wives and mothers, and that the allowance for children be raised from $10 to $15.

Declaring that women are as ready to sacrifice for victory as are men, Mrs. Fowler pointed out that "the morale of our men in the Army and Navy cannot be maintained at its highest pitch if their minds are racked by worries over the financial suffering their families may be enduring."

International Action

American labor's desire to cooperate closely with labor in other countries, and its appreciation that there must be the utmost solidarity between the people of all the United Nations to assure victory, was demonstrated repeatedly at the United Steelworkers' convention.

President Philip Murray told of the visit of Sir Walter Citrine of the British Trades Union Congress to establish closer ties between American labor and the unions of the other United Nations. He indicated that the British labor leader would meet shortly with the officers of the CIO on this subject.

Murray expressed the desire of CIO to join with other trade union movements "to prepare together our joint program in about the same fashion that the United Nations prepared and designed their joint war program."

Besides reaffirming CIO pledges of complete cooperation and aid to the people of China, the Soviet Union, British and other American allies, the Steelworkers' convention adopted a resolution on international labor unity, which read in part as follows:

"The organized trade union movements of the world can strengthen the unity within and among the United Nations through greater cooperation with each other in accordance with the experience of the united action which has already been achieved between the British and Soviet Union trade unions."

The Steelworkers therefore called upon the CIO "to take steps toward securing closer cooperation and unity of action between the organized workers of America, including the AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods and the trade unions of the United Nations, including the Latin American nations, to the end that a united world labor movement may be the basis for winning the war against the Axis and securing a peace which will establish for all the people freedom of speech and assembly, freedom of religion, freedom from fear, and freedom from want."

USA-CIO

The initials of the United Steelworkers of America, CIO, the new international union into which the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee transformed itself at its recent convention in Cleveland, tell a story in themselves.

Article 1 of the union's constitution, adopted at the very opening of the convention, includes just two points—the new name and the union's affiliation with the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

USA-CIO—what initials could be more appropriate for a union that is basically American and basically CIO?

Steel was the first industry the CIO set out to organize. The achievement of more than 90% organization in six years, and the benefits won through collective bargaining with all the major corporations, demonstrate conclusively the soundness of CIO principles.

Consider the successes of CIO industrial organization in the steel industry:

Union membership increased from little more than 4,000 in 1936 to a total of 660,052 in 1942.

More than 900 union contracts won with nearly all the steel manufacturing, fabricating and processing firms in the country.

Consider some of the benefits won for the steel workers by CIO organization:

Minimum wages raised almost 55% since 1936—from 47 to 72½ cents an hour; and average wages raised from 72½ cents to around a dollar an hour.

Paid vacations, seniority rights, fair grievance procedure and countless other measures to give the workers better conditions, more job security and more democracy.

As to the Americanism of the CIO steel workers union, it's as American as the USA itself. Founded on American democratic principles and composed of one of the most essential groups of American producers, it has advanced American ideals and contributed to the welfare of the American people beyond measure.

Every action of the steel workers' convention on the present war confirmed the union's sterling Americanism. Every action made all-out effort for victory the first consideration.

USA-CIO is a backbone union of the CIO. Its president, Philip Murray, is also president of the whole CIO. And the CIO, along with the rest of American labor, as General MacArthur put it, forms "the indestructible backbone that will determine the present vital struggle."

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

ANYONE who is afraid that unions will produce too much uniformity, ought to get around to a few CIO union conventions. He will find differences of attitude and behavior that are often as startling as they are refreshing.

All of the new CIO industrial unions started about the same time. They drew their inspiration from a common center and from the same national leadership. Their programs and policies are similar. Yet in the space of a few years, each union has developed a distinctive flavor of its own that strikes even the most casual visitor to their conventions.

The convention of the United Steelworkers of America, for instance, could not fail to suggest comparisons with those of its big sister union, the United Automobile Workers.

The UAW-CIO always leaves an impression of dash, daring, youthful impetuosity and streamlined modernism that befits the makers of the fastest and most modern means of transportation, autos and airplanes.

The USA-CIO (as the steelworkers' union is now to be known) impressed visitors to its big Cleveland convention with the basic strength, stability and permanence that one associates with steel.

At an auto workers' convention, large numbers of the delegates wear brightly emblazoned union caps and colored shirts. They applaud uproariously and will break into snake-dances and other demonstrations at the drop of a hat.

The steelworkers are more restrained in both dress and behavior. But on one could look over the sea of faces at their Cleveland convention and observe the reactions of the 1,700 delegates without noting the vigor, determination and lasting power that have built one of the strongest unions in the world.

But serious and sober-minded though these steel delegates seemed, in comparison with the exuberant auto workers, they too, revealed strong emotions at times.

They showed them in their response to a moving talk by a crippled artist, who presented a mural painting depicting the steel workers' part in the war against Hitlerism, and spoke on the people's goal of freedom.

They rose to a man in a spontaneous ovation when a Negro delegate, his voice choking, told what the union's fight against race discrimination meant to his people; urged struggle against "Hitlerism at home as well as abroad", and declared: "When you delegates look at me, I know you see not a Negro but another steelworker."

Another incident that deeply moved the convention was the recital by two seamen (brought to the platform by NMU President Curran) of the perils encountered by the men who deliver the steel to the war fronts of the world, and their call for a western front.

And throughout the convention, the delegates revealed their emotions again and again in their responses to their beloved leader, Phil Murray.

In Murray, the steelworkers have found a leader after their own heart. His reasonableness, his tolerance, his unassuming manners, his democratic approach, and the wisdom of his guidance have inspired a genuine confidence and devotion on the part of the steelworkers that is without challenge.

Of course, the magnificent successes of a union that has brought industrial democracy to what was the most benighted stronghold of industrial feudalism, would establish the prestige of any labor leader. But one sensed in the delegates' confidence in Murray a quality that would weather adversity as well as success.

The most basic factor, however, in Murray's unchallenged leadership is the fact that his policies reflect most exactly the steelworkers' sentiments on the overpowering issues of the present war.

Steel is the basic fabric of our modern industrial civilization. It is also the basic and most essential material for the conduct of modern mechanized warfare.

The steelworkers therefore are the very backbone of the present war effort of the United States—and, for that matter, of the other United Nations as well which draw on us for war supplies.

The enthusiasm of these basic war workers for the objectives of this people's war for freedom was evident every moment of the proceedings. It was a win-the-war convention above all else, and it found in CIO President Murray a win-the-war leader that it claimed for its own.

CIO Relief Gifts Rolling Along

By HARRY RAPPAPORT

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Union sailors organized in the New York port area in the National Maritime Union of the CIO agreed last Thursday to adopt the plan of the CIO War Relief Committee for a contribution of an hour's pay per month for the relief fund of the Committee.

According to union officials, this contribution will swell the war relief chest of the CIO by about $30,000 a month from the New York port area alone. The plan for making regular donations each month of an hour's pay amounting to approximately $1.00 per man, to be used for American and foreign war relief during the duration of the war, was offered to the New York port of the NMU by the executive board of the union, and a similar recommendation has been sent to all the locals.

The NMU was one of the first international unions to participate in the campaign of the CIO to establish its own war relief committee, for collecting and administering funds not only for CIO members in the armed forces, but also for extensive aid to the needy civilian populations of Russia, China, Great Britain and others of our Allies. One of the first contributions received by the National CIO War Relief Committee was one for $6,307 sent by the NMU.

OFFICE WORKERS TOO

Members of the office staff of the national headquarters of the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, Greek letter college fraternity, also contributed last week to the CIO committee. Both union and non-union employes voluntarily requested that they be allowed to work full time on May 1st, a holiday with pay, and contribute their wages to the fund. The plan was carried out with Local 18 of the United Office and Professional Workers of America, CIO.

An agreemnt has just been concluded between the National CIO War Relief Committee and the United Service Organizations. According to Monroe Sweetland, national director of the CIO Committee, this agreement provides for a working arrangement whereby unions in which the war relief program of the CIO is already functioning will not be solicited by the USO, while the CIO Committee agrees to collect funds for the USO from its affiliated unions.

The arrangement between the two organizations, said Sweetland, also makes it possible for the first time for unions to collect funds earmarked for special commodities for service men, such as cigarettes, razors and blades, records and radios, books and magazines, etc., with the understanding that goods provided by labor will bear suitable identification so that the service men will know the name of the contributing labor organizations.

In Akron, Ohio, the General Executive Board of the United Rubber Workers of America sent a donation of $500.00 to the CIO War Relief Committee, and agreed to contribute $100 monthly during the continuance of the war. This was apart from the contributions to be made from the monthly pay of the individual rubber workers.

Other unions recently contributing include the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, District Council 7 of Cleveland, Ohio; the International Fishermen, United Instrument Workers, United Optical Workers, and the Watch and Jewelry Workers' Union.

Local 147 of the latter organization reported that employers as well as workers have contributed to the CIO War Relief Committee drive, and that some of the employers have expressed their intention of making monthly contribution to the CIO fund.

Delegates Condemn Jim Crow

Cleveland, May 23—A high point of the United Steelworkers' convention was the spontaneous demonstration which accompanied adoption of a strong resolution against all forms of discrimination against Negroes "in industry, in government and anywhere else."

The delegates rose cheering to their feet after a speech by William Fountain, a Negro delegate. His voice choking with emotion, Fountain praised the CIO for its efforts on behalf of his people.

FIGHT HITLERISM

He called for a vigorous fight against all forms of Hitlerism "at home as well as abroad," and declared: "When you delegates look at me I know you see not a Negro but another steel worker."

Joe Cook, another Negro delegate, related that he had been president of a SWOC local since 1937 without opposition, though there were only eight or nine Negroes in the plant. He warned against Axis propaganda among Negroes.

The resolution adopted pledged the United Steelworkers to "fight to secure equality of treatment for all workers, Negro and white, and all races and creeds in industrial employment and promotion, in vocational training, in union leadership and service in government and in the armed forces."

Steel-USA Meets, Pledges All-Out For Victory in 1942

CLEVELAND, May 22—A great new CIO International Union, the United Steelworkers of America, was born here this week. It will be known by the initials USA-CIO.

Some 1700 delegates, representing 660,052 organized steelworkers, took part in the convention which transformed the Steel Workers Organizing Committee into a regularly constituted international union.

Elected head of the new Union was CIO President Philip Murray, formerly head of SWOC.

The newly adopted constitution calls for the election of an international secretary-treasurer, two assistants to the international president, and a district director from each district, who together with the president, shall constitute the international executive board.

David J. McDonald, formerly secretary-treasurer of SWOC, was elected as international secretary-treasurer, and Van A. Bittner and Clinton S. Golden, former regional directors, were elected as assistants to the international president.

VICTORY ISSUES

War issues dominated all the convention deliberations, and the following were among many actions taken to demonstrate the steelworkers' determination to make all-out effort for victory the first consideration:

(1) Adoption of a resolution pledging "every ounce of energy and strength in the battle of production for an immediate offensive and victory in 1942;" supporting the program of the War Production Board; urging adoption of the Murray industry council plan; asking increased labor participation in administration of the war program; and urging action against defeatists, disrupters and fomentors of disunity.

(2) Adoption of the officers' report declaring that "this is labor's war and American labor must win this war"; projecting plans for increased production; and calling for national democratic planning to "win the peace that follows a victorious war."

(3) Approval of CIO-AFL cooperation through Labor's Victory Board to "rally a united labor movement behind our war effort," with a recommendation that such cooperation be extended still further both locally and nationally.

(4) Adoption of resolutions urging the CIO to establish closer cooperation and unity with the trade unions of the United Nations, and pledging complete support to the peoples of China, the Soviet Union, Britain and the other allies of the U. S.

(5) Recommendation that the CIO Executive Board consider urging offensive action against Hitler from the West, so the Axis forces may be caught in "a gigantic pincer" between the Soviet armies and those of the Western Powers.

(6) A declaration that "victory in war must be followed by a victory in peace for the common people of the world," so war energies and resources may be turned to "maximum production to achieve full employment and decent standards of living for all the common people of the world."

Particular attention was given to the welfare of the men in the armed forces in a resolution urging increased pay for them, proper provision for their families, and assured re-employment and social security protection on their return to civilian life.

HIT DEFEATIST CONGRESSMEN

Taking note of the coming Congressional elections, the convention denounced those Congressmen who have "engaged in defeatist tactics, promoted disunity and placed special interests above national necessity."

It called for the election of those candidates who "may be relied upon to back to the full the objectives of labor and the war effort and to promote national unity in wholehearted support of the President's leadership in our war against the Axis."

Following the advice of President Murray, the convention avoided issues of internal strife within the labor movement and concentrated on constructive measures for promoting organization and unity to win the war.

AVOID BICKERING

"Men's minds must rise above internal bickerings when a nation is embroiled in a world war," Murray declared in his opening speech. "I do not want this convention to waste a single, solitary moment of its time discussing internal differences of any description within unions in America.

"The steel workers have a job to do, and that job is to help America win this war. The steel workers must become missionaries of good will and national unity. There is nothing to be gained and everything to be lost through the promotion of national discontent or national confusions."

Murray was honored by many ovations during the convention, and a resolution of "gratitude and affection" was unanimously adopted on the first day.

PRAISE MURRAY

The resolution praised Murray's "wisdom and courage and his tireless efforts." It declared that "in the present national crisis he has distinguished himself as a public-spirited leader of labor and has made a vital contribution to the development of the production offensive so vital to win the war."

The full support of the United Auto Workers to Murray was pledged by UAW President R. J. Thomas. "By the test of the crucible of war, no man has been rated so high as the President of the CIO, Philip Murray," he declared.

"I know there are some in high position in our labor movement who would detract from the record and activities of Philip Murray. I say to those men that, on the record, Philip Murray towers mountain high above them."

EXPRESS GRATITUDE

The convention also expressed its gratitude to the United Mine Workers for giving of its resources and leaders to organize the steel workers.

It extended its "friendship and loyalty . . . to cement a unity between these two organizations and the other CIO affiliates which shall be the rallying cry for national and international unity on behalf of the common people of the world to fight and win the war against the Axis powers."

The officers' report declared the Steelworkers had paid back $601,000 to the United Mine Workers, "which completely eliminates our financial indebtedness to that organization."

The convention adopted a vigorous stand against wage freezing, which it declared would "be destructive of all collective bargaining and labor unions, and would have a disastrous impact on the war program."

FOR EFFICIENCY

"Our desire to secure adjustment of wages is not based upon selfish motives," Murray declared, "but rather upon a wholesome desire that through readjustments we might be able to give labor an opportunity to maintain that high standard of efficiency and productivity necessary to the expeditious winning of a great war."

Murray asserted that there are sufficient profit surpluses in the steel industry to permit the granting of the union's wage demands "without agitating the inflationary spiral by a single decimal point."

Some debate and opposition was provoked by the officers' recommendation to approve the CIO policy of surrendering premium payments for Saturday and Sunday work, when this falls withing the 40-hour week.

But this recommendation was finally adopted by a large majority after Murray had urged such action as a patriotic response to the urgings of President Roosevelt.

SEAMEN SPEAK

Pres. Joseph Curran and Jack Smith and Earl Wolf of the Nat'l. Maritime Union presented a ship's clock inscribed "To Philip Murray, captain of the good ship CIO, from the crew of the NMU."

Wolf told of manning a gun which sank a German submarine, and Smith described the sinking of an American tanker on which he had sailed. The delegates responded with an ovation when Smith declared, "We'll deliver the steel you produce," and expressed the hope the seamen would soon be landing it on the continent of Europe for a western front.

Another noteworthy presentation was a mural depicting the part played by the steel workers in defeating Hitler. It was presented by Joseph Haber on behalf of the CIO Artists' Union.

ASK WPB ACTION

The convention called upon the War Production Board to take effective action to take up the slack in steel production, raise steel ingot capacities to more than one hundred million net tons a year and eliminate bottlenecks. It urged the removal of $1-a-year men responsible for "criminal neglect to expand steel capacities."

The Canadian Government was asked to enact legislation assuring the right to organize, to end discrimination against trade unionists and assure them fair trail, and to establish joint labor-management committees similar to those in the United States and Britain.

CIO speakers to address the convention included Director Allan Haywood, Secretary James Carey, Leo Krzycki of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, representing the American Slav Congress, and Chairman Irving Abramson of the CIO War Relief Committee.

Resolutions adopted pledged support to women's auxiliaries, denounced the poll tax, called for expansion of social security, asked adequate funds for FSA, CCC and NYA, urged extension of fair and democratic rationing, pledged cooperation with "all progressive and legitimate farm groups," and defended civil liberties in war-time.

Roosevelt Hails Steel Convention

Cleveland, May 23 — President Roosevelt extended his congratulations and good wishes to the United Steelworkers' convention, in a message which the delegates greeted with an ovation.

"I wish the organization many years of successful operation in the interest of the nation, of the thousands of members and of the basic interests which are of such vital importance to all of us today," the President declared.

"In our war against the Axis powers we are now approaching the maximum of steel output and must reach that goal at the earliest possible moment and keep it till success is ours.

"Every operation in the war, whether by the Army, the Navy, or in the all-important field of transportation, depends on steel. Every day lost in production will prolong the struggle and delay the victory."

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

A banner week! The SWOC, now the United Steelworkers of America, followed up previous election victories by overwhelming majorities at 21 more plants. It is conclusive proof of the confidence that the workers in the steel industry have in the CIO and its representatives.

This sentiment was reflected at the splendid and history-making convention now in session in Cleveland, Ohio, where after six years of functioning as a committee, they have now adopted a constitution and elected officers. This period of building this union will live in the memory of every living man and is a tribute to the leadership of our president, Philip Murray.

The United Office & Professional Workers have demonstrated once more their ability to keep on winning elections. In a statewide election in the State of New York, employes of the Prudential Insurance Company won by a vote of 2,321 for CIO to 1,241 for no union.

PWOC continues on the forward march by winning an election at a plant in Evansville, Ind., over an Independent Union, the vote being 255 for PWOC as against 197 for the Independent. Brother James Robb is regional director for PWOC in this area.

Some more samples of the CIO's forward march:

George Craig, CIO regional director in Philadelphia, reports winning an election at Consolidated Cigar Company, Lancaster, Pennsylvania, with the following results: UCAPAWA-CIO: 494; AFL: 80. He also reports completion of negotiations at the A. N. Stollwerck Chocolate Company in Camden, N. J., on behalf of United Chocolate Workers, LIU 961 with time and one-half for overtime; vacation with pay, and eight cents an hour increase in wages. This is the only contract in N. J. with a clause stating that all men who either enlist or are drafted into the armed forces of the United States shall receive a week's salary in the form of a bonus for one year's service with the company and a maximum of four-weeks' salary in the form of a bonus for employes with the company for four years or over.

Cincinnati CIO Regional Director R. J. Davidson, reports winning an election at the General Machinery Co., Hamilton, Ohio, with the following vote: UAW-CIO, 1,911; AFL, 569.

The International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers reports winning three elections recently, as follows:

Galena, Kansas: MMSW, 137; no union, 54. Kansas Explorations, Inc.

Galena, Kansas: MMSW, 33; no union, 20. Oronogo Mutual Mining Company.

Frank Bonacci, CIO regional director in Denver, Colorado, reports signing a very good contract for the employes of the Coleman Motor Company of Littleton, Colorado. UAW Representatives Schilling and Gensler report the contract gives a 10 cent per hour increase in wages retroactive to March 14, 1942, and full recognition of the UAW-CIO.

By a vote of 52 to 4 the workers at the Southern Cotton Oil Mill in Little Rock, Ark., chose the UCAPAWA-CIO. Subregional Director Doll in Akron advises that Brother Geiger of the United Steelworkers of America has just completed a contract with the Wright Tool and Forge Co., in Barbetron, Ohio, providing for union shop, wage increases, etc.

Regional Director Fulton in Chicago reports the following election victories: Studebaker Corp. (aviation), UAW-CIO, 1,906; AFL, 314. Ammunition Container (American Can), SWOC, 929; no union, 79. Fred A. Snow Co., UAW-CIO, 73; against, 27.

After three election attempts the United Furniture Workers, CIO, came out victorious in the election held at the Lewittes Manufacuring Company, Beacon, N. J., with a vote of 106 for CIO to 97 for no union.

MORE COMING

Before the month of May is ended ,there will be a number of other elections won, judging by the reports received from the field.

The United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes of America at their convention held in Chicago this week reported a splendid growth and plans will be laid to intensify organizing activities among the employes of Sears-Roebuck and other large concerns in this industry.

The International Fur and Leather Workers Union reported to their convention held in Chicago last week a considerable growth in membership for the past year and the delegates left for their homes determined to keep up the work of organizing the unorganized. I had the pleasure of addressing these two conventions.

Director of Aviation Frankensteen reports the UAW Aviation Division won the election at the Buick Company at Melrose Park, Ill. CIO, 3,883; no union, 471; tool room, 241 to 142 for AFL.

Regional Director Paul Miley reports that the General Machinery at Hamilton, Ohio, UAW, won 1,900 to 500 for the AFL. AFL previously had bargaining rights there for 26 years.

Laundry Workers Win

New Orleans, La., May 23—Sixteen laundries here this week were ordered to abide by the terms of collective bargaining contracts they had signed with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. In issuing the order, the War Labor Board pointed out that the union had agreed to abide by a WLB panel recommendation, but the companies had refused.

Win Raise

Detroit, May 23—A 4½ cents an hour in wages was won this week in a contract negotiated between the United Auto Workers Union and the Springfield Works of the Int'l. Harvester Co. The agreement, among other things, contains a harmony clause to prohibit anti-union activity, and a maintenance of union clause after the War Labor Board has certified that a majority of the union members have voted by secret ballot for this provision.

CIO-AFL Urge USO Support

New York, May 28—Support for the armed forces through the USO this week was pledged jointly by CIO and AFL.

Urging donations, the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief stated:

"CIO unions may earmark their USO contributions for the purchase of such commodities as cigarettes, candy, razor blades, etc. by sending donations through the CIO Committee.

"The stamp and insignia of the local or international union making the gift will be placed on every package so that the men in the armed services may know the gift came from a union and what union it was."

Double Dependent Aid, Auxiliaries Urge

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Doubling of the government allowance to wives of soldiers and sailors proposed in H.R. 6948 was urged this week in testimony presented to the House Military Affairs Committee by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO.

The bill under consideration would give a wife $20 from the government and $20 deducted from the man's pay plus $10 government money for each child. The Congress of Women's Auxiliaries proposed $40 from the government and $15 for each child but no increase in the contribution from the enlisted man. This would give a wife with two children $90 a month as opposed to $60 under the bill as proposed.

The importance of additional financial aid to families for which the regular allowance proves inadequate as proposed in Title II of the bill, was also emphasized by the Congress spokesman. This second part of the bill, which would give the Federal Security Administrator power to grant further aid to families suffering hardship because a man was called to serve his country, has not been supported by Army and Navy spokesmen.

Auxiliary members were urged to write letters on his bill to Congressman Andrew J. May, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee and to their own Congressman in an emergency legislative letter issued by the CIO Auxiliaries. It was suggested that they emphasize (1) importance of an adequate basic allowance (2) the necessity of provision for additional funds for hardship cases if real freedom from want is to be assured the families of our servicemen.

Labor Baiters Defeated

Washington, May 23—Good news for workers and plain people who want to win the war came out of Pennsylvania's Congressional primaries this week, when three anti-labor Congressmen were defeated.

The three, Reps. Faddis, Moser and Jarrett, were among the worst of the labor-baiting gang in the lower House. Faddis and Moser had the distinction of being the only two Pennsylvania Congressmen to vote for the Smith bill that would have outlawed all union contracts.

Faddis was defeated for the Democratic nomination by Dr. Grant Furlong. Political observers here are predicting a great many more upsets in the ranks of the union-haters before all primaries are in. Chief targets of progressive voters of course are men like Howard Smith of polltax Virginia, Clare Hoffman of Michigan and Martin Dies of Texas.

Win 3 to 1

Buffalo, May 23—A three to one victory for the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union was chalked up this week at the Metal & Alloy Co. Organizer Forrest Emerson reported 161 votes for CIO, 54 for a company union and 10 for neither.

Auxiliary Adopts Camp

A barrel of home baked cookies for the guests to take back to camp was one feature of a very successful party run by the FAECT Auxiliary in Berkeley for the boys in the camp they have adopted. The party, aside from being a great social success, netted $20 with which the auxiliary has bought a ping pong table for the camp.

Mrs. Saundra Collins, chairman of the Auxiliary Committee in charge, reports that this is just the beginning of the women's program for the boys in their adopted camp and suggests that other auxiliaries might like to start similar projects.

Buying Shows for '42

"Fashions of '42" first of a series of six shows on consumer problems, was given this week by the New York Newspaper Guild Auxiliary in cooperation with the New York Guild. "Buying as usual" is out for the duration, the announcement says. "Our country's resources must not be wasted. To maintain your family's standard of living, and to help conserve America's materials for the war effort, you'd better learn how to buy better."

Mrs. Mabel Pollock, Guild Auxiliary Consumer Chairman, urges all New York Auxiliary women to come to the shows each Monday night at the Guild club, 40 East 40th street.

Murray Records Growth of Steel-USA; Pledges All-Out Effort For Victory

Following are excerpts from CIO President Philip Murray's opening speeches at the first constitutional convention of the United Steel Workers of America, formerly the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee. Convention was held this week in Cleveland, Ohio.

The Record In Steel

The first meeting I had the honor of presiding over was in the city of McKeesport, Pa., on the 23rd day of June, 1916. If I remember correctly we advertised that meeting for about a week. We placarded every billboard in Western Pennsylvania. We put bills on telegraph poles and distributed dodgers around all the steel mills in the Pittsburgh area, because on that great day the steel workers were inaugurating their national campaign of organization.

We brought a band with us that day, and fortunately for the steel workers we also brought an audience, because had we not brought one there would not have been anyone there. We could not get a building in the city of McKeesport. We could not get a field, we could not get a parking lot. We had to hold our meeting on an old ash dump down on the river front, and the chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee spoke from the back of a truck to about 75 enthusiastic followers that we had brought into the meeting with us.

THE BEGINNING

That was the beginning of our campaign. That was in the good old days when the leaders of industry in America were conducting advertising campaigns against us and telling the universe that "it can't happen here"—in other words, that we could not organize the steel industry.

If I remember accurately, and I think I do, I made the statement to the few steel workers who were at that meeting that day that we had come into the steel industry to organize it and that we were going to stay, and nobody was going to drive us out, we were going to stay until we had oragnized every eligible man and woman in the industry. People did not believe us then, particularly the steel workers, because they thought we might do what had been done before—we would come, and would leave.

But we stayed, and we are here today sitting in this convention, after six years of toil and work, with 1,700 delegates representing 600,000 steel workers. And I don't mind telling you that we haven't even got started yet to do this job.

There is still a tremendous amount of work to be done—the perfection of the organization, the stabilization of the functionings of the various branches of the union, the perfection of better contracts for the industry, further improvements in the conditions of the people who are employed in the industry, and the further extension of our organizational activities to finally embrace and bring within our folds all of those who are not yet members of our union.

THE DAY IS HERE

And that day has come. The achievements of this organization today are not so much attributable to the leadership of the organization as they are to the fidelity, the loyalty and the love of the workers employed in the organization for an organization as such. I should hate, and I say this with all of the sincerity at my command, if anyone should promote a single, solitary idea that the successes brought into the life of this organization or the dependents of this organization are attributable to any one man or to any particular group of officers.

I want this organization to be builded upon the basis of love for the union rather than for the man. If you hew to the pursuit of philosophy of that description your organization will endure. Men will come and men will go, but the union will live forever.

That is the premise upon which I should like to see this union builded. That is the rock, the very rock upon which this union must be builded, and if it is builded upon that kind of a foundation, as I have said before, even the gates of hell itself shall not prevail against this union.

UNITY FOR VICTORY

I do not want internal strife within this union or within CIO. Men's minds must rise above internal bickerings when a nation is embroiled in a World War. There is today superimposed on every institution in this country and upon every leader in this nation the cry to unite and to work together for the purpose of winning a war. I do not want this convention to waste a single, solitary moment of its time discussing, by resolution or otherwise, internal differences of any description within unions in America.

The Steel Workers have a job to do, and that job is to help America win this war. The Steel Workers must become missionaries of good will and national unity. They must invoke the power and influence of this great organization in bringing that about. There is nothing to be gained and everything to be lost through the promotion of national confusions.

Might I reiterate to this convention at this time a commitment that I have made to our nation and to its President, as the President of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and as the Chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, that I am supporting my country and I am supporting its President.

On Wage Freezing

As a result of the introduction of our cases before the War Labor Board the officers of your organization have been compelled during the past few months to make repeated appearances before Congressional committees defending the Steel Workers of America, defending the workers of the nation, and particularly defending the cases now before the War Labor Board.

It was out of these discussions before the War Labor Board that there was precipitate action taken by some leaders in the Federal Government to freeze wages and freeze union security, to do dastardly acts, to do those acts out of a spirit of malice after premeditation, to destroy labor's opportunity to give to the nation its maximum effort and its maximum efficiency. And so there was promoted on the floor of the Federal Congress bills designed to freeze the wage standards of the American workers, to definitely freeze those standards.

Can America conceive what the ward "freezing" in a situation of this description really means? It means in substance that the wage would be frozen, living costs would go up and conditions of life and work would gradually and consistently and effectively degenerate and go down, down, down, thereby impairing not only the standards of American workers but definitely impairing the lives, the health and the efficiency of American labor.

FOR WAR EFFICIENCY

So we who happen to be your representatives at the moment sought then, as we seek now to impress America with the fact that our desire to secure readjustments or adjustments of wages in America was not based upon selfish motives, but rather upon a wholesome desire that through readjustments we might be able to give labor an opportunity to maintain that high standard of efficiency in the field of productivity necessary to the expeditious winning of a great war.

And so your organization and its officers have consistently fought every day of their lives since this matter was first brought before the public every attempt that has been made to put into effect in this country of ours national wage freezing. That is our attitude today, not only because it seeks the destruction of, or may result in the eventual destruction of trade unions in this country, but also because it is economically unsound. It is not workable, it is impractical and cannot be put into successful operation in a country such as the United States of America.

RATIONING

Let us analyze what is tied up in this problem. American labor, as I have said repeatedly, is prepared to lose its shirt to win this war. Everybody knows that. American labor is prepared to make the supreme sacrifice to win this war, because the war is necessarily the most important thing confronting American labor.

But American labor has consistently advocated in this country of ours the establishment of that thing we all call equality of sacrifice—everybody sacrifices. We contend, no matter who may argue to the contrary, that price fixing and wage freezing won't solve this problem unless the country is prepared to immediately make effective a system of the equitable distribution of such civilian goods as may be left here for the American population to consume.

There is nothing wrong about that. That reflects equality of sacrifice. Is it workable or democratic, equitable or reasonable to impose a rule that freezes a wage and that permits a fellow who is getting $2.00 an hour under that system to buy more goods in the store than the man who has a big family and who is only receiving 50 cents an hour? I contend that any system which seeks the imposition of equality of sacrifice upon the American people must necessarily carry with it the invocation, the immediate institution of a system of rationing that will result in equality of treatment. That is all that American labor asks for.

COSTS

In addition to that, your organization in the presentation of its case to the War Labor Board has contended that living costs in steel towns throughout the United States of America, by and large—and we have made a study of almost every steel town in this nation—that study indicates that weighted averages of living costs in these communities have gone up from March of last year until March of the present year approximately 13½ per cent.

Our people got an increase of 80 cents one year ago last April. That increase has not been absorbed by higher living costs, but the higher living costs have surpassed it by far, and your organization has not been asking American industry or the steel industry to give American wage earners wage increases. They have been asking, they have been insisting that adjustments in these standards be made, so that the health and the efficiency of the people we are privileged to represent will in no wise be impaired.

On Taxes

A very wholesome tax bill was introduced in the Federal Congress just a few weeks ago. Your organization subscribed to it, because it sought to take from those who have the most and who are most able to do it enough money to help finance the payment of this war—a very wholesome, very constructive tax program. You go down into the Congress, and I will swear to the heavens that you wouldn't know that it is the same bill today.

Do you know that they are attempting in the Federal Congress today to impose income taxes upon people whose income is only $500.00 per year? Talk about getting the people who are fit to pay for the war to pay for it, and to relax a little upon the poor, the poor fellow underneath here who is not able to pay it.

How can America intelligently solve its war and its economic problems whilst a Federal Congress struggles with the possibility of imposing an additional taxes upon these low income groups that are not now earning enough money to live upon?

Murray Pittsburgh Speech Published

The pamphlet, illustrated with a picture of President Murray addressing a CIO audience, carries the quote from the speech on the cover:

"There is only one war that I am interested in at the present moment, and that is the war to defeat Hitler and his Axis partners."

The speech received wide publicity when it was made, and numbers of CIO affiliates have already placed orders for the pamphlet. Publication was ordered by unanimous vote of the convention delegates.

Order from Publicity Dept. CIO, 1106 Connecticut Ave., NW, Washington, D.C. Quantity prices on application.

Urge Vigilance On Rent Levels

Washington, May 23—If you're in one of the 300 defense areas where the Office of Price Administration has ordered rent freezing, you may want to do something about the freezing date before a June 23 probable deadline, R. J. Thomas, chairman of the CIO Committee on Housing, warned today.

Thomas pointed out that in most defense areas March 1, 1942 has been chosen as the freezing date, but that in 64 of them rent levels have been ordered fixed as of January 1, April 1 or July 1, 1941 levels.

Thomas advised that in communities where the rent date is deemed to be unjust because of earlier rent increases, protests backed up by positive proof should be filed with the OPA before June 23.

Chinese Unionists Harrass Jap Invaders

By Allied Labor News

CHUNKING (ALN)—Of the 700,000 Japanese troops still in China, at least half are in the so-called "occupied areas" of the north, pinned there by the never-ending activities of Chinese regulars and guerrillas. These activities would not be possible without the support of Chinese workers organized into trade unions.

Not only do the trade unionists produce the weapons, uniforms and other equipment used by the regulars, but they themselves become guerillas at the approach of the enemy.

When scouts give warning that the enemy is drawing near, the workers put down their tools, seize rifles and hand grenades and hurry into the surrounding hills, where they become part of organized partisan units. To recapture the plants, they cut the Japanese supply lines and attack the enemy from the rear. As soon as the Japanese retreat, the workers return to their plants and resume production.

BUILD UNIONS

Since the effectiveness of the workers, both as producers and as fighters, depends upon their degree of organization, trade unions throughout the North China area are given every encouragement possible. Federations of unions in each geographical area have been formed, and periodically delegates from each unit meet in conferences to find ways of increasing production and improving military tactics.

In areas in the North under Chinese control, there are considerably more than one million trade unionists, including organized farm workers.

Workers in districts under Japanese domination play an equally effective role. When the Japanese invaded China, driving ahead by reason of their superior military equipment, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek decreed that the civilian population, with the exception of certain skilled workers, should not retreat into the interior—where they would create an insoluble refugee problem—but should remain behind and organize resistance to the enemy.

Today the Japanese invaders have wiped out all trade unions in the areas they control, but nevertheless the Chinese workers have found ways of fighting back. Those who are forced to work for the Japanese frequently destroy by night what they produce by day.

Maintenance men on the important Peking-Hankow and Tientsin-Pukow railways, upon which the Japanese depend for the movement of troops and supplies, cooperate with local guerrillas in destroying bridges and tearing up the tracks they have laid during the day. They work hard during the daytime, knowing that the more materials they use, the more the resources of the enemy will be strained.

Leaders of these demolition squads among the guerillas are usually former members of the Federation of Railwaymen's Unions. Their previous experience as railway workers makes them doubly effective as saboteurs, as they know best how to fix a track so it will cause the certain wreck of an enemy troop train.

Peasants and workers in the areas occupied by the Japanese have their own way of tying up the enemy's road motor transport. At night they dig a trench down the center of each road, six feet wide and three feet deep. This trench is too narrow for a Japanese car, but wide enough for a Chinese cart.

During the daytime the enemy forces the peasants to fill in the trenches, but when night comes they dig them out again—working faster than they did during the day. Recently in central Hopei, 30,000 peasants dug up 110 miles of important roads in two nights.

Workers in Japanese-controlled plants bide their time until, in cooperation with the guerillas, they can turn upon the enemy and seize the plants. They then quickly form trade unions and organize production on a cooperative basis.

Russian Unions Aid War

Kuibyshev, USSR., May 23.—"Everything for the front—everything for victory"—this watchword has been the Soviet trade unions' constant guide to action ever since the German fascists attacked the Soviet Union.

Unions concentrate their activity on rallying their members for a greater effort to cope with the big tasks dictated by the needs of the front to wage a successful struggle against German imperialists. How to boost production, raise the production of labor and best mobilize the labor resources of the country are the major problems tackled by the trade unions in their day to day activity.

HEROES OF PRODUCTION

One of the most important phases of the war effort of the trade unions is their leadership in the Stakhanov movement which bears the name of miner Alexei Stakhanov, who was the initiator of highly productive methods in the coal industry. In wartime Stakhanovites have done much to improve production processes and get the maximum out of their machines, with the result that many workers have been producing double, treble and even ten times standard output.

Workers in an automobile plant in Gorky pledged to produce by May Day, over and above their regular schedule, enough of a certain type of arms to outfit two divisions, and sufficient quantities of another type for three brigades. The pledge was exceeded. Thousands of workers who, in January, produced just their daily quota, turned out double and more their schedule in February as a result of learning the advanced methods of the Stakhanovites.

Under wartime conditions production conferences, in which the workers, engineering personnel, management and trade union participate, assume special importance. These conferences take up problems pertaining to improving quality, output and raising productivity of labor and help to bring to light shortcomings hampering production, as well as to outline ways and means for their elimination.

TRAINING NEW PERSONNEL

Soviet trade unions render aid in training new personnel. To take the place of those called to the colors, hundreds of thousands of people, a majority of women, youths and girls, have come to the plants, factories and mines and railways. Unions organize special courses and schools where oldtime workers pass on their skill to new contingents entering industry.

Assistance is given by Soviet trade unions in the promotion of training new cadres for the Red Army. This is done by helping organize military training for future draftees, lectures in clubs or directly in shops on military topics, and by intensifying the activity of sport societies which concentrate on forms of sport that can be useful at the front.

Training war nurses is another form of valuable aid to the Red Army. Many thousands of war nurses have received their training in courses organized by trade unions.

Now these nurses from Moscow, Leningrad, Tbilisi, Tashkent, Stalinabad, Kazan, Archangel, Kuibyshev and other cities as well as villages are valiantly tending the wounded on the field of battle.

Pegler Helps Hitler, Says Indiana CIO

Fort Wayne, Ind., May 23—A Congressional investigation of Westbrook Pegler, Hearst's "pro-Fascist" poison pen artist, was demanded this week by the Fort Wayne Industrial Union Council in petitions circulated in this city.

Asking the Fort Wayne NEWS-SENTINEL to remove Pegler's "fifth column filth" from the paper, the Council pointed out that "in the past two weeks alone this disrupter has helped Hitler" by:

"I. Attacking efforts of the AFL and CIO to promote victory over the Axis. 2. Calling for radio attacks on unions by scab-minded reactionaries. 3. Attacking the struggle of the Negro people for equal rights and for full participation in the war effort. 4. Attacking the administration's victory efforts."

The Council, in a unanimously adopted resolution, declared that Pegler "daily pours out from his poison pen lies and half-truths aimed to provoke internal strife and destroy the national and international unity needed to win the war."

"President Roosevelt," the Council stated, "has declared that our great war effort must not be impeded by a few bogus patriots who use the sacred freedom of the press to echo the sentiments of the propagandists in Tokyo and Berlin."

Urge Parley On Output

TORONTO—(ALN)—Support is growing for the proposal by Col. George Drew, leader of the Conservative Opposition in the Ontario Legislature, for an Ontario conference of unions, management and Government. He made the proposal after a recent visit to Great Britain.

An Ontario meeting of the UAW locals this week endorsed the plan and urged Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn to call the conference. Labor's primary interest in the war effort is clear from the fact that both Premier Hepburn and Col. Drew have been bitter enemies of the UAW and the CIO. Col. Drew has usually referred to them as "communists and criminals."

Conscript Dutch

Washington, May 16 — The Nazis are preparing to conscript another 250,000 Dutch workers for slave labor in Germany, the U. S. Office of Facts and Figures reports. Already 180,000 have been taken.

Letters in Uniform—

New York, May 23—"Every time I looked at the bull's eye I imagined I was looking at Hitler's face!"

Just a line from a letter, yet it's typical of scores of them from army members of New York affiliates of the Int'l Fur & Leather Workers Union, gathered into a new pamphlet entitled "Letters from our Brothers in Uniform."

"Crushing Fascism" is the central theme of most of the letters from the Zeleakas and the Finkenbergs and Tates and Langmans and Petrillis from stations such as Northern Ireland, the Panama Canal, Texas, Florida, Washington, Illinois and way points.

The pamphlet was published to bring home to unionists in "civies" their tremendous responsibility toward their brothers in arms.

EVERY OUNCE

"Surely, when we read their story, we cannot help but exert every ounce of energy, make every sacrifice, and give everything we have to win the war," the union pamphlet stated.

What letters and gifts from back home mean to the soldiers is summed up in a letter from Private Alexander Zeleaka:

". . . I shared the package (the Union) sent me with the rest of my fellow soldiers, who haven't any such brothers and sisters back home, but who still would like to have a bite of sweet dates, a bite of Macy's chocolate or a handful of Brazil nuts.

"No book on history, no economic analysis of current labor conditions, would have convinced these sunburned, determined flyers more than a bite of dates or candy sent by you brothers, that there is real unity behind the worker in uniform, and that the workers in gray in that army of construction—that we call union—are fighting in this war with us."

It all adds up to the conclusion of the pamphlet:

"Our brothers in uniform are doing their part at the front. We must do ours at home. Boost production. Buy war stamps and bonds. Join civilian defense. Donate blood to the Red Cross. Contribute to Allied War Relief.

"Together—Smash Fascism in 1942—Open a Western Front!"

British Unions Map Shipping Plan For Second Front Drive

London (ALN)—At a conference in Manchester recently, called by the National Council of the Engineering and Allied Trades Shop Stewards, 175 delegates representing more than 100,000 workers in the nation's key shipyards, put forward detailed proposals for increasing the output of ships. One of these pointedly suggested the removal of the head of the Shipping Control, who was accused of hampering production.

Stressing that greater output in the industry was necessary in order to deliver supplies to Russia and facilitate the opening of a Second Front, Len Powell, secretary of the National Council, said:

"Our shipping losses are exceptionally heavy. The certainty of offensive attacks on the Northern Supply Route to Rusia is clear to all. The fact that we have to tighten our belts and accept fresh restrictions in regard to domestic amenities through shortage of shipping space, indicates the seriousness of the problem.

"It is often alleged that one of the reasons why there is no Second Front in existence is because we have not the shipping facilities through which it can be made possible. We reject that excuse, but at the same time readily accept the inevitable responsibility which falls on the shipbuilding and ship-repair industry."

12 POINT PLAN

The conference drew up a 12-point program, which was forwarded to the Ministry of Production and the Admiralty.

Points included were: supervision of work in each yard by workers' committees; setting up of labor-management councils in the yards; 100% unionism; more women in the industry; training of women for skilled work and union leadership; punctuality by workers; better allocation of supplies to avoid idle hours through lack of tools and materials; and strict government control of the industry.

The conference unanimously adopted a resolution demanding the resignation of Sir James Lithgow as Controller of Merchant Shipbuilding. In moving this resolution, Bob McLennan, worker in John Brown's yard and leader of the shop stewards on Clydeside, heart of Britain's shipbuilding industry, stated:

"It is a contradiction that this man, who closed down the shipyards in 1931-32, should now be occupying this vital post. He cannot inspire shipyard workers to supreme efforts or insure that our resources are being used to the utmost. He is not a fit and proper man for the job. He must go."

CIO Board Meets, To Counter Drive On Murray, War Effort

WASHINGTON, May 31—Leaders of CIO's two-score unions move into the nation's wartime capital this week determined to beat off disruptive internal attack on the CIO and its president, Philip Murray.

The Executive Board will meet June 3 at Washington's Natl. Press Club auditorium to discuss the arbitrary removal of Murray from the vice-presidency of the United Mine Workers, a number of charges brought by affiliated unions against disruptive activities of certain UMWA leaders and officials, and to hear further demands of the mine union for repayment of an alleged debt of $1,665,000.

Murray's removal from the UMWA elective position that he has held for 20 years occurred while he was in conference with Pres. Roosevelt at the White House. It followed two days of slanderous attacks during meetings of the miners' policy committee and executive board. His removal was explained on the "constitutional" ground that since his election to the presidency of the CIO United Steelworkers of America, he is barred from holding office in the mine union—though numerous other UMW officials have held two or more positions simultaneously in the past.

Apparent basis of the mine union leaders' complaints against Murray is his strong support of the government's war policies and of Pres. Roosevelt's leadership of the democratic forces against the fascist Axis.

Demand Housing Probe

Detroit, Mich., May 30—Demanding a Congressional investigation of the war housing situation, R. J. Thomas, chairman, CIO Housing Committee, today sent an eight-point recommendation to President Roosevelt, including:

1. Immediate ban on all private construction, unless such construction is earmarked for war workers and unless there has been a predetermination that the occupancy will be that of a war worker.
2. Elimination of the 30-day priorities escape clause and the institution of an honest priorities system which would forbid all but genuine war worker housing.
3. Immediate freezing of all building material held in private yards, and the rationing of such material to ensure that it is used from now on only for war housing under Federal supervision.
4. Registration of all vacancies with the local housing administrator or rent control administrator and control of vacancies. All houses for rent should be subjected to rationing to ensure that priority to war workers obtains.
5. Construction of all housing in critical war areas to be put in charge of the local housing authority which should have labor representation on it, or establish a working committee of labor representatives.
6. Disassociation of the FHA from any part of the Federal war housing program, for the duration of the war. All future housing, with few exceptions, should be done on a public basis.
7. Title 6 of the FHA should be rendered null and void. Workers should not be forced to buy a home at inflated prices, as a virtual condition for jobs in a war plant.
8. We urge an investigation of the over-all housing situation by the Truman or the Tolan Committee, or both.

Hit Timber Barons for Bottleneck

SEATTLE, Wash., May 30—Business-as-usual tactics by lumber operators who have refused for months to cooperate with the CIO in production councils are responsible for one of the worst war bottlenecks, President Worth Lowery of the Intl. Woodworkers Union charged this week.

Pointing out that the union twice in the last six months has proposed industry councils like that advocated by the War Production Board, Lowery said that management's refusal to cooperate has in large part been responsible for the fact that logging operations are at only 50 per cent capacity.

TWO REASONS

Lowery said that the traditional low-wage and anti-union policies of the lumber kings are two of the chief reasons for the production mess.

Logging, he pointed out, is a hazardous trade that once attracted young men who could get nothing better. These men now find that they can get higher wages, more comfortable living conditions and enjoy family life that is denied them in the woods, by working in shipyards and elsewhere.

The only remedy for the situation, Lowery said, is for the operators to cooperate with the union in working out a more equitable wage policy and in finding ways to attract more loggers and develop speedier production methods.

Lambastes Chamber 'Blindness'

WASHINGTON, May 30—The U. S. Chamber of Commerce was lambasted this week as "incredibly blind" for advocating no restraint on profits while proposing abandonment of the 40-hour week and freezing of wages.

The critic was Marriner Eccles, governor of the Federal Reserve System, who did not mention the chamber by name but definitely identified a recent meeting of it as "a convention in Chicago of one of the largest organizations of business."

MISTAKEN POLICY

"I can imagine no more mistaken policy than that expressed in resolutions adopted by one of the largest organizations of business at a convention in Chicago recently, when men who dominated these councils proposed that no restraint or limit be placed upon their own profits, bonuses, commissions and other compensations because to do so might damper their ardor for winning the war by impairing their incentive," Eccles declared.

"Yet, at the same time, they did not hesitate to proclaim the necessity for abandonment of the 40-hour week. They did not hesitate to condemn increases in wages.

"That sort of leadership is incredibly blind. It scarcely makes for successful voluntary cooperation. It is not calculated to make for equality of sacrifice, if you call it a sacrifice to fight for the preservation of your country."

Eccles said "it particularly behooves business leaders at this time to impose upon themselves the restraints they recognize as necessary upon others."

To Mobilize Negroes For Victory in '42

Chicago, Ill., May 30.—Mobilization of the Negro people "without reservation or qualification, behind the all-out effort to win the war by the defeat of the Axis powers in 1942" will be the task set by union leaders for a Negro Labor Conference to be held in early June.

A call issued by CIO and AFL Negro leaders stated that: "Negro labor must take the initiative in mobilizing the entire Negro people to win the war. Hitler can and must be defeated. The freedom of America from the menace of Hitler savagery is the only guarantee for the security and extension of democracy at home."

North American Urged To Bargain

Inglewood, Cal., May 30.—The National Labor Relations Board this week recommended that North American Aviation Inc. bargain on request with the United Auto Workers' Union, as sole agent for production workers.

In an intermediate report, an NLRB trial examiner held that the company had established a system of individual bargaining that opposed the self-organizing rights of employes.

The examiner held that the company had distributed a notice which in part took the place of a signed contract with the union.

N. Y. Newsstands Now 100 Pct. CIO

New York, May 30—Complete organization of newsstand chains in this city was announced this week by the Book and Magazine Union, Local 18, United Office and Professional Workers of America.

A final contract, signed with the Garfield News Co., this week provided wage increases of $2 to $10 a week for 29 workers, shortened hours from 72 to 54 a week, and established one-week vacations for all employes of at least a year's standing.

The pact also provides for a closed shop, dues checkoff, hiring through the union and three holidays with pay.

'Redcaps' Accept CIO Bid to Affiliate As New International

CINCINNATI, O., May 30—Setting its goal for 25,000 members by 1944, the Third Biennial Convention of the United Transport Service Employes of America came to a dramatic close here as the assembled delegates of red caps, dining car employes and train porters voted unanimously to accept the invitaion of the CIO to affiliate as an international union.

Realizing its great responsibility to the welfare of its growing membership, the convention adopted plans to institute an insurance department within the organization and a program of liberalization of the Railway Retirement Act which would destroy existing barriers against red caps and station porters relative to their eligibility for full retirement benefits.

President Willard S. Townsend and Secretary-Treasurer John L. Yancey were unanimously re-elected to their respective offices. New vice-presidents elected were John Hoskins, of Oakland, California, and J. P. Covington, of Washington, D. C., representing the Dining Car Employes Division. Cleveland, Ohio, was selected as the next convention site.

HIT PEGLER

The convention went on record condemning the attack of Westbrook Pegler against the Negro press and the trade union movement and voted the institution of a boycott against all Scripps-Howard newspapers and others using Pegler's column. It also called for the passage of stringent federal legislation embodying the principles of the President's Executive Order which created the Fair Employment Practices Committee.

It voted to support the nation's war effort and set as its goal for 1942 the purchase of $250,000 worth of war bonds by the members, and commended the Negro and the liberal press for fair handling of labor news stories.

UTSEA President Willard S. Townsend set the keynote to the mass meeting when he declared that "We of the UTSEA are here to lend every effort towards winning the war. But in this fight, surely one or two things must be sacrificed by those in the control of America. Either they must give up their freedom or they must sacrifice their prejudice, and if they think more of their prejudice than freedom, then surely we will lose our freedom."

Win RKO Election

New York, May 30—By a vote of 194 to 46, the home office employes of RKO-Radio Pictures, Inc., chose the Screen Office and Professional Employes Guild, Local 109, UOPWA, as collective bargaining agent, in a National Labor Relations Board election this week.

Win Five Elections In Two Weeks

Denver, Colo., May 28 — Five Labor Board election victories within two weeks were announced today by President Reid Robinson of the Int'l Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers-CIO.

At Long Island City, N. Y., Local 541 was chosen by workers in the Laurel Hill Refinery of Phelps-Dodge Corp. The score: CIO, 601; AFL, 219; no union, 13. This was a key election for the union, with elections scheduled shortly at two other Phelps-Dodge properties larger than Laurel Hill.

An election victory at Kellogg, Idaho, climaxed a long struggle of Local 18 against union-busting practices of Bunker Hill and Sullivan Mining & Concentrating Co. The local immediately went into joint negotiations with 13 other IUMM &SW local unions for a contract to cover the whole Coeur D'Alenes mining area. The vote was IUMM &SW, 367; no union, 327.

Nine craft unions of the AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods opposed IUMM&SW Local 63 at Santa Rita, N. M., and Local 69 at Hurley, N. M., at Nevada Consolidated Copper Corp. properties. The IU MM&SW polled more than 700 votes to take the one big bargaining unit. The small craft unions won within their jurisdictions.

At Omaha, Nebraska, Local 461 won a consent election, 125 to 72, at the American Smelting & Refining Co. in that city. Local 587 won an easy victory over a company union at Metal & Alloy Specialties Co., Buffalo, N. Y. The score was IUMM&SW, 161; company union, 54; no union, 10.

TWU Hails Woodside Mill Settlement

Greenville, S. C., May 30—Members of the CIO Textile Workers Union's local at the Woodside mill celebrated the winning of a War Labor Board case at the biggest meeting ever held in the union's hall here. Reports on the successful hearings were made by the eight members who represented the union at the hearings.

The board unanimously recommended that the union's president, Charles Suddeth, be taken back; that 13 employes fired in April be reinstated without loss of seniority and that the union and the company start negotiations on a contract covering all points at issue except wages.

Aluminum Workers For Murray

Eau Claire, May 30—Full support of the Aluminum Workers of America to CIO President Philip Murray was voted at the fourth convention of this CIO union which opened here last Monday with about 100 delegates from all parts of the country in attendance.

In his address to the delegates, AWA President N. A. Zonarich outlined the responsibilities and achievements of aluminum workers and union labor in general under the war program and stressed the necessity of preserving labor's gains during and after the war.

Recalling that labor has pledged not to strike during the war emergency, the AWA president called upon the industry to meet labor halfway and stop its attempts to weaken the trade union movement. If labor's gains are not safeguarded, he said, "we will find ourselves conquered from within by our native Fascists."

URGE DRIVE

In approving the officers' report submitted by Zonarich, the delegates urged a 300 per cent increase in organizing activity to match a similar increase in the size of the industry under the war expansion program.

Among the CIO leaders who addressed the delegates were Jacob Potofsky, secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and Monroe Sweetland, director of the CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief.

Sweetland told the convention that the CIO was now conducting a nation-wide program to solicit one hour's pay a month from every worker for the various war relief organizations who are aiding British, Chinese, Russian and other war victims.

SHORTWAVE

A shortwave broadcast from London arranged with the British Information Office by the CIO relief committee was scheduled for later in the week.

At the opening session City Councilman Orville Christianson presented a large golden key to the gate of the city to AWA President Zonarich and brought greetings from the mayor who was unable to be present.

The main address at the first morning's session was made by Col. A. Robert Ginsburgh, chief of the public relations and information division of the War Department. Greeting the unionists as "fellow soldiers," Colonel Ginsburgh told the convention that if the war is to be won, more and more aluminum must be produced and that workers in the aluminum industry are therefore "in the vanguard of the first great battle of the war."

Later in the convention, Thomas F. Burns of the War Production Board's labor division, in an address to the delegates declared that "no one person or groups of persons can be permitted to interfere with the production of aluminum or its fabrication into the essential needed articles of war."

Italian Workers Shot by Nazis

Washington, May 30 — Italian workers who refused to renew their contracts for labor in Germany, were executed after a riot in a plant near Dresden, the Khabarovak (Russian) radio reported today. According to the broadcast the Italians asked for a settlement of wages and repatriation when their contract expired. The Germans demanded that they renew the contracts. The Italian refused and stopped work. The Gestapo carried out arrests and the ringleaders were shot in the courtyard of the factory.

CIO Oil Union Licks Independent

Avenal, Calif., May 30—Workers on the properties of the Kettleman North Dome Association voted 170 for the CIO Oil Workers International Union to 141 for an independent group at a recent Labor Board election. The Association is owned and controlled by 15 big companies including Standard Oil.

Eating Places in War Plants Inadequate, U.S. Survey Shows

WASHINGTON, May 30—American manufacturers apparently don't believe that an army fights on its stomach, for they have largely failed to provide eating facilities for production soldiers who often are laboring long hours overtime to help win the war.

First returns of a government survey show that among 51 established plants, 38 have no cafeterias or restaurants at all and 33 have neither cafeterias, restaurants nor rest rooms where workers can sit and relax while eating.

The survey showed that in most plants from one-half to 90 per cent of the workers are compelled to rely on lunch boxes for their mid-shift meal, either because the plant has no facilities or because they are inadequate.

"The eating situation in the 51 plants is much better than in many new defense factories where plants were thrown up in rural areas where housing and eating facilities were not prepared in advance and are even now, months after the plants have been ready, horribly inadequate," the preliminary report states.

In the 13 plants that provide cafeterias among the 51 surveyed, the facilities cannot care for all the workers. Long lines are common, intensifying irritation over short lunch periods.

An hour for lunch was common to only three of the 51 plants. In 34 only a half hour was provided; in several of these less than half an hour was granted for second and third shifts. In six plants, no time off for lunch was given.

Will Picket Gas Chiselers In New Jersey

Newark, N. J., May 30—The CIO will picket New Jersey filling station operators who violate gasoline rationing restrictions, President Irving Abramson of the State Industrial Union Council announced today.

Abramson said that the Council's Executive Committee has received many complaints of wholesale violations and declared that "gasoline station owners who take rationing seriously have become wholly demoralized by the feeling that the violations are the general rule rather than the exception."

"We in the CIO take rationing of commodities seriously and look for equality of sacrifice and its strict enforcement," Abramson said. "We feel that strict enforcement is essential to our morale and to victory.

"It is obvious that if these conditions persist, the whole system will break down because of the lack of enforcement. Furthermore, it is unfair to those dealers who want to comply with orders, when other selfish gasoline station dealers don't take this matter very seriously.

Wins Shoe Poll

Los Angeles, May 30—A Labor Board election among workers at the Joyce Shoe Company here was won by the CIO United Shoe Workers 189 to 14 for an independent outfit.

CIO Technical Workers Urge Plan for 2nd Front

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 30—A call for a Western Front and plans to increase production so that battles on it could be successfully prosecuted were issued this week by the General Executive Board of the Int'l. Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians.

The meeting was highlighted by the Board's request for representation on the War Production Board and the Manpower Commission so that it could transmit the skills and talents of its entire national organization in increasing war production.

The union urged Manpower Commissioner Paul McNutt to adopt its plan for complete conversion of all technical and engineering skills now employed in civil service or in non-essential industry to productive war work.

To further spur production, the organization asked CIO President Philip Murray to call a national conference on output and to create a CIO War Production department. FAECT praised Murray's leadership and offered complete support for his policies in unity negotiations with the AFL.

The union adopted a plan for active working cooperation between it and the technical organizations of the United Nations, in line with previous trade union action, and to implement the creation of an international production council to increase the output of war goods to beat the Axis this year.

Bridges Ouster Blow to Victory, Murray Says

WASHINGTON, May 30—In an astonishing reversal of all the evidence and the findings of his own Board of Appeals, U. S. Attorney-General Francis Biddle this week ordered the deportation of Harry Bridges, CIO Maritime leader on the West Coast.

Biddle's order was immediately described by CIO Pres. Philip Murray as "a blow not only to all concepts of American justice but even more a blow at national unity and morale necessary for victory."

"The Attorney-General chooses to rely on hearsay evidence for his order," Murray said. "This evidence was shown to be unworthy of belief, not only in the first deportation hearing by Dean James M. Landis, but also in the findings of Mr. Biddle's own Board of Appeals following the second trial. This evidence has not become any more credible in the time between the report of the Board of Appeals and the issuance of the present order."

COMPLETE SURPRISE

The arbitrary order from Biddle came as a complete surprise, following months after the Board of Appeals had set aside the biased findings of Judge Sears at the second hearing. The first hearing, held in 1938, resulted in an acquittal by Dean James M. Landis, then presiding inspector.

Both Landis and the Board of Appeals in the second hearing described the evidence and the witnesses as absolutely unworthy of belief, tagging some of them with descriptions out of the dictionaries on psychiatry.

Confers With FDR, Ousted

Washington, May 30—Philip Murray was blitzed out of the vice-presidency of the United Mine Workers while he was conferring with President Roosevelt at the White House on questions relating to the welfare of American workers.

The CIO president told a press conference a few hours later:

"This act on the part of the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers took place while I was meeting the President of the United States at his request.

GRAVE PROBLEMS

"At this meeting, I was discussing grave problems of national importance affecting the welfare of our nation and the welfare of labor. The balance of the morning was devoted by me to preparation of a speech to be delivered to European workers in the allied and conquered nations, which, of course, was reproduced and will be distributed for European consumption.

"That was my work this morning while these things were going on and part of the work alluded to by me yesterday when I said I would have to leave the conference (of the UMWA policy committee) for attention to more important problems affecting the welfare of our people."

PHILIP MURRAY

Members Score Lewis

WASHINGTON, May 30 — Recent actions of the United Mine Workers' leadership have been severely criticized by large groups of the membership, CIO President Philip Murray indicated today.

The CIO leader's comment followed his blitz ouster from the UMWA vice-presidency. Murray said that while he cannot question the authority of the board to endorse John L. Lewis' actions, "the justice or injustice of the act in itself will be eventually passed upon by the membership of the United Mine Workers.

MANY RESOLUTIONS

"I have in the files of the CIO, in my office, resolutions of protest from local unions representing the overwhelming majority of members of District 50 (of the UMWA) against the acts of officers of that organization, and demands that I am quite sure have been presented to the United Mine Workers because they have been presented to me, for the establishment of an independent, autonomous organization.

"These locals expect the officers of the national CIO to present in their behalf these charges to the CIO executive board against the officialdom of District 50."

At various times in the past, locals of the UMWA have expressed to Murray their strong support of his policy of all-out support of the war, and have criticized the activities of many leaders of their own organization.

'ONLY ONE WAR'

Pres. Murray gave a thorough review of the entire situation a few weeks ago at the convention of the Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council. At that time he said: "There is only one war that I am interested in at the present moment, and that is the war to defeat Hitler and his Axis partners."

In the course of his address at the Pittsburgh session, Murray told how officials of the UMWA have used all sorts of excuses to avoid paying dues to the national CIO. In West Virginia the state organization of the UMWA ceased paying dues to the CIO council, and its secretary-treasurer urged

CIO Fights Off Lewis Disruption, Hits Ouster

WASHINGTON, May 30—Bitterly aroused by attacks on the CIO and its president, Philip Murray, members of the CIO's Executive Board meet here June 3 to hear a multitude of complaints and charges against officials of the United Mine Workers of America.

The anger of the board members, and of CIO members everywhere, reached fever pitch this week when President John L. Lewis of the UMWA arbitrarily removed Murray from the vice-presidency of the miners' union—a position which he has held for the past 20 years.

The ouster, coming on the third day of a meeting of the policy committee of the UMW, was allegedly based on the fact that in accepting the presidency of the CIO United Steelworkers of America last week, Murray was no longer subject to the instructions of the miners' executive board.

Lewis' action—which was subsequently endorsed by the UMWA board with only one member, Martin Wagner, dissenting—had been anticipated for some time. In recent months the miners' president has been increasingly critical of CIO President Murray's all-out endorsement of President Roosevelt and his close co-operation with the government in its prosecution of the war against the Fascist Axis. Murray's frequent reiteration of his loyalty to the President and the war effort has been criticized by some of the mine union leaders, though it has won the hearty endorsement of workers everywhere—both in the United Mine Workers and throughout organized labor generally.

It was an ironic fact that while the mine union leaders were taking their action against Murray, he was in conference with President Roosevelt at the White House—at the President's request—to discuss problems affecting the welfare of American workers.

LEWIS BACKED DOWN

The attitude of the mine union leadership towards President Murray and the CIO has steadily cooled since the day in April, 1941, when Lewis promised the CIO leader his support "right or wrong."

At the Detroit CIO convention last autumn, the UMWA delegation—together with that of the United Construction Workers' Organizing Committee of which Lewis' brother, A. D. Lewis, is chairman—was conspicuous in its refusal to join many of the demonstrations in support of President Murray's leadership.

While Lewis' alleged reason for ousting Murray from the vice-presidency of the mine union was his election to a paid post in the steel union, a number of other issues have served as pegs in recent months for Lewis' cohorts to attack the CIO and its distinguished leadership.

PRINCIPAL CHARGES

These issues include:

1. Charges that the CIO owes the United Mine Workers a debt of $1,665,000, and a claim that the UMWA is justified in withholding its monthly per capita tax to the CIO as a credit against that debt. The claim was first brought before the CIO executive board at its meeting here in March.

Acting on instructions of the board, the CIO's executive officers—its president, secretary and six vice presidents—studied the UMWA claims, looked over the old records, and came unanimously to the decision that the funds had been given, not lent to the CIO. All the financial transactions occurred in the days when Lewis was president of both the miners' union and of the CIO, and public and private utterances were cited to show that these advances of money were made in the form of gifts to speed the task of organizing American workers into industrial unions—a process which has benefited the UMWA as much as any other union.

2. CIO refusal to accept a "bombshell" proposal made by Lewis that the CIO and AFL take immediate steps towards "accouplement." CIO leaders were incensed by the fact that Lewis had not consulted Murray in advance of his sudden proposal, and charged that a deal had been made between Lewis and William Hutcheson, Republican pre-Pearl Harbor isolationist head of the carpenters union.

SHOW DANGERS

Pointing out that organic unity between the two union groups would bring problems that would seriously interfere with labor's support of the war effort, the CIO Board—and subsequently the AFL—accepted instead a proposal for a six-man Labor's Victory Board representing both organizations. This group has met frequently with President Roosevelt, and through it President Murray has been able to voice directly to the White House the aims and aspirations of American workers.

3. The disruptive activities of District 50 of the United Mine Workers, which has broadened out its activities to the point where it has stirred up jurisdictional disputes with a dozen CIO unions.

STIRS DISRUPTION

Originally created with the laudable purpose of organizing the gas and coal by-products industries, District 50 has in recent months been dipping into scores of various industries. While its successes are reportedly small, it has stirred up a hornet's nest of disputes, both within its own ranks and in its relations with other CIO unions.

These started with the dismissal of a number of organizers and officials, and the withdrawal of charters from a number of District 50 locals.

Most of the victims of District 50's wrath have been individuals and groups which have outspokenly voiced their belief in the CIO policies pursued by President Murray, and in the anti-Fascist war policies of the Roosevelt administration.

TRANSIT CHARGES

A few weeks ago District 50 was charged by the CIO Transport Workers Union to be conspiring with dual-union elements in that organization, and charges made to the CIO Executive Board by the TWU and other affiliates will be heard at its meeting this coming week.

Head of District 50 is Ora Gasaway, longtime member of the UMWA executive board, while its secretary is Kathryn Lewis, daughter of the miners' president.

MURRAY'S VIEWS

Murray's views on all these subjects were placed before the miners' policy committee during the course of a three-hour debate behind closed doors with President Lewis. It was understood that although the policy committee has no more than 200 members, almost 400 persons were in the room and presumably took part in the voting.

The CIO president expressed the hope that he could fill out his term as miners' vice-president, which ex-

Victory Aim of CIO Parley in Michigan

By HARRY REED

Muskegon, Mich., May 30—Meeting significantly enough in an armory that had to be temporarily vacated to house a number of inductees on their way to the fighting line, the Fifth Annual Convention of the Michigan CIO Council got off to a flying start here May 26 with a keynote of victory.

The invocation was delivered by the Rev. Raymond Clancy, director of Catholic Social Action for the Detroit Archdiocese. Father Clancy who gave the invocation at the National CIO Convention in Detroit, sounded a new note by asking the Diety to "give us Thy strong help to repel the assaults of our enemies and enable us to conquer our adversaries to the attainment of a just and lasting peace."

With that solemn request, still echoing, State President August Scholle made his report to the convention. He read the complete text of the Victory Program already adopted by the Executive Board, and similar to the Victory through Equality of Sacrifice program recently adopted by a nation-wide conference of the United Auto Workers Union delegates.

ADOPT VICTORY PROGRAM

The chair called for a rising vote and practically all the 1,100 delegates surged cheering to their feet. Only a scatter twenty arose to vote in the negative.

Earlier, Scholle announced that he had been informed by the UAW research department that no fewer than 170,000 members of the UAW-CIO alone were in the armed forces. The announcement brought a storm of cheers.

Scholle's mention of Congressman Hoffman, Bradley and Woodruff of Michigan brought an equally vociferous wave of booes and catcalls.

John Brophy, national director of CIO Councils, and George F. Addes, secretary-treasurer of the UAW-CIO, spoke.

Both stressed the role that organized labor, and particularly the CIO, must play in the war effort.

PRAISES DEMOCRACY

"Labor believes," said Brophy, "not only that present democracy is preferable to disctatorship, in whatsoever guise and for whatsoever purposes, but that democracy is perfectable, that it affords us the one road along which we may travel, if we have the courage, to the Republic of Man.

"Whether we come out of this war with the substance, as against the shadow of freedom, may depend on how hardhearted we are in our thinking about this matter of democracy."

Addes told the delegates that he was heartened by the overwhelming vote given adoption of the Victory Program.

WORKERS' WAR

"This is a workers' war," he said. "No man can say it is a war by our Government nor that it is a capitalist war. Some months back we might have said that, but not now.

ONE WAR against the Hitler Axis — is the message of President Philip Murray, delivered at the recent convention of the Pennsylvania CIO Council, held at Pittsburgh. Printed on unanimous demand of the delegates to the convention, Murray's fighting speech can be ordered from Publicity Dept., CIO, 1106 Connecticut Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C. Printed in brown and black. Price, 100 for $2.25, 500 for $7.25.

Lynching Bee

In the midst of our country's life-and-death struggle with the Axis, when labor and national unity are imperative, officers of the United Mine Workers have found nothing better to do than to stage a lynching bee against the President of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

In violation of all the rules of common decency, District 50 was permitted to introduce scurrilous charges against President Philip Murray and other officers of the CIO—he was attacked as president of the CIO rather than as an officer of the UMW—and he was later removed as vice president of the Mine Workers.

President Murray is devoting all his efforts for national unity and victory, in accordance with the heartfelt wishes of the membership of both the CIO and the United Mine Workers. He is being harrassed, reviled and persecuted by elements whose record of union disruption runs directly counter to both labor's and the nation's interests.

The executive board of the CIO will meet in Washington June 3, to take action on these disruptions in proper democratic fashion.

In the meantime, the sorry performance of the officials at the UMW meeting can only result in the CIO rallying behind Murray as never before. For there can be no question that he is now attacked for one reason only—for his forthright support of President Roosevelt and the war effort in accordance with the mandate of all the workers he represents.

Good News

There is good news for labor in the defeat of three of the worst labor-hating Congressmen in the recent Pennsylvania primaries.

Congressmen Charles Faddis and Guy Moser were repudiated by the Democratic voters, and Congressman Benjamin Jarrett by the Republican voters, in their respective districts.

All three of these Congressmen joined repeatedly in legislative efforts to smash labor, and Faddis and Moser were the only Democratic Congressmen from Pennsylvania to vote for the notorious Smith anti-labor bill.

The American people want national unity to win the war. They scorn the efforts of profiteering interests to use the national emergency to take a selfish advantage of labor.

These three Congressmen have been taught a lesson which many others will learn.

Be sure to register and vote in forthcoming primaries. Vote against labor-baiting divisionists and defeatists. Vote for those candidates who stand for national unity and all-out effort for victory.

A Blow at Unity

Attorney-General Biddle's order for the deportation of Harry Bridges came as a shocking surprise to labor and to all Americans concerned about national unity for maximum war effort.

To renew the persecution of the longshoremen's leader at a time when he and his union are giving magnificent service in speeding war supplies to the fighting fronts, is not only a grave injustice to an individual repeatedly proven innocent of the charges against him, but it is also a most demoralizing blow to labor and to national unity and morale.

Murray's Birthday

Last week there was celebrated the birthday of a great American. There was no fanfare, no press attention. But countless friends sent birthday greetings. So did many labor unions, and the man was honored in the minds of millions of working people who did not even know it was his birthday.

Phil Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and newly elected president of the United Steelworkers of America, spent the day battling for labor, battling for national unity, battling for victory.

But the battlefield was a peculiar one—and certainly not of his choosing. He was fighting a disruptive conspiracy in his own union, heckled and traduced by a clique of officials bent on creating disturbance and division in the ranks of labor.

Murray celebrated his birthday, the same as every day, by standing up as the fearless champion and spokesman of millions of American working people, in the Mine Workers and throughout the CIO, who have reposed their confidence in him.

He expressed their democratic demands for unified effort by labor and the whole nation to win the war above all else. He defied the disrupters and traducers, confident that their puny efforts will break on the rock of American labor's determination to tolerate no division of its war effort.

It was a tough day for Murray personally, but it brought him one great gift—the knowledge that the rank and file of labor stand by him, because he stands by them, at no matter what personal cost.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

IT'S WONDERFUL what you can do with figures. A trim female figure exerts an attractive power exceeding that of 100 locomotives, it is estimated. It can divert tourist traffic from Florida to California or vice versa. Effectively displayed on a magazine cover, it can extract a million nickels or dimes from a million male pockets.

Then there are the other kind of figures—the kind that repel rather than attract. Of course, this refers only to the statistical kind. It is estimated that each percentage figure on a broadcast will turn off a thousand radios. And an article full of figures will turn away a million readers' eyes.

That's the big trouble with the tax question. It can hardly be discussed without flinging statistics all over the shop. And that means that an issue which intimately affects every man, woman and child in the country gets only the minimum of democratic attention.

It also means that selfish interests can confuse the issue with little difficulty and get away with murder. Which is exactly what is happening in Congress at the present time.

Taxes to beat the Axis—that's what the American people want. Enormous sums of money have to be raised without delay to supply our armed forces, and those of our allies, with all the weapons of war necessary for speedy victory. But it is also important this money be raised in such a way as will promote and not impair the war effort.

If most of the money is taken from the poorest people and the rich are left free to profiteer, this is not only socially unjust at any time but it is particularly dangerous and demoralizing in wartime. More than this, it may impair the health and efficiency of our soldiers of production, by cutting already low rations.

Having all this in mind, and making victory its first consideration, the U. S. Treasury worked out a tax program designed to distribute the burden equitably. And Pres. Roosevelt called for a limit of $25,000 on personal incomes, so the American people may know no individuals are enriching themselves while added burdens are placed on the rest of the population.

So far so good. The Treasury tax program was not perfect. It still left loopholes for excess profits. But by and large, the CIO approved it as the best means of raising the necessary funds without impairing war efficiency.

Since then, however, the House Ways and Means Committee, dominated by a tory majority, has gone to work changing this program to meet the demands of selfish minority pressure groups.

It has drastically cut down the amount of money to be raised by taxing corporation profits. It has failed to close loopholes for large fortunes in tax-exempt securities. And it has studiously avoided doing anything about the President's call for a $25,000 limit.

At the same time, the House committee proposes to add greatly to the tax burden on the poorest sections of the population. It would even impose income taxes on workers earning as little as $9.60 a week.

And there is every reason to believe that the above sabotage of the Treasury tax program is designed to prepare the way for the most unjust kind of soak-the-poor taxation, the sales tax, to make up for the revenue which the committee refuses to levy from those best able to pay.

Here's a sample of the way the House committee has been changing the Treasury program. The Treasury asked an income tax of $80 on incomes of $1,700, and a tax of $2,549 on incomes of $10,000. The committee says O.K. on soaking the $1,700 people as much as asked. But it wants to cut about $500 off the tax for the $10,000 group, which includes the Congressmen themselves.

So it goes up the list, proposing to relieve the tax burden for the well-to-do and the rich—and to make up for it by taking more from workers who don't earn enough to live on.

All this is dangerous to our war effort. For money can be taken from the lower income groups only at the expense of their health and efficiency.

About 400 million man-days of work a year are lost through illness. And Government nutrition experts report that some 7,000,000 low-income people can't afford the food they need; while their studies show that sickness increases in direct relation to lack of nutrition and low income.

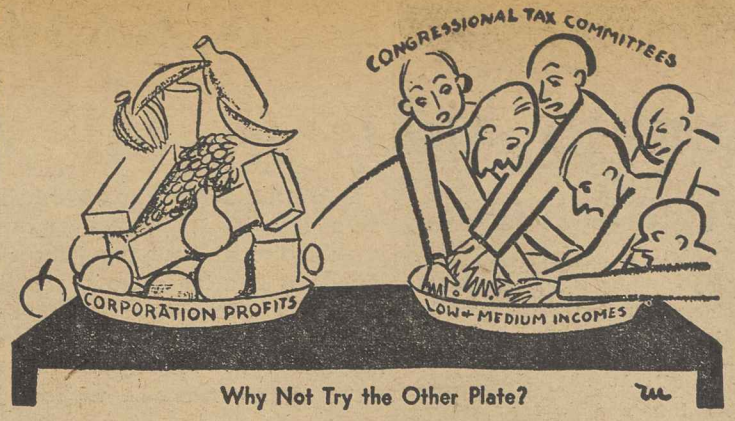
other mine union district officials to take similar disruptive action against the CIO and its affiliated groups.

CITES SLANDERS

Murray told of the "idle prattlings of men who may skulk in your midst or sneak around to secret places in the dark of the night to tell wild stories, none of which is true," but all of them designed to slander Murray and the CIO.

He added that when he took over the CIO presidency at Lewis' insistence in October, 1940, the organization was "in the red," but that under his leadership it had established healthy finances and added several hundred thousand members.

Throughout his address Murray told of his devotion to the war and domestic policies of President Roosevelt, and how he had sought in every possible way to assist the nation in bringing victory for the democratic forces. At the same time he was bitter in his criticism of those who would disrupt the CIO at the time it was doing its utmost to help win the war.



Why Not Try the Other Plate?

Hit Housing 'Squeeze Play'

Detroit, May 30.—Real estate interests are working a new kind of squeeze play on war workers here, President R. J. Thomas of the United Auto Workers charged today.

He said that workers taking up residence for employment in war plants are being compelled to buy homes, thus forcing out other workers who have been renting the homes.

Calling on the Federal Rent administrator to prevent evictions, Thomas pointed out that some landlords are forcing tenants to buy homes at exhorbitant prices or else have them sold out from under them to incoming employes of war plants.

Protest Bridges Exile

ership of the United Mine Workers, pointed out that Biddle's order came at a time when Bridges and his union are rendering the nation "the utmost in service" for the war effort.

"The CIO has consistently defended Harry Bridges as the elected leader of thousands of organized American workers. Harry Bridges, and the organization he represents, are today giving the nation and our allies the utmost in service for rapid and efficient shipment of war supplies to the fighting fronts throughout the world," he said.

"It would be a grave dis-service to our country and to the cause of the democratic nations fighting Hitlerism to undermine this contribution by carrying out an order that is based neither on the facts nor on plain common sense."

Murray's reference was to the top quality of the work of Bridges and the CIO Longshoremen and Warehousemen in speeding shipments from the docks to the war. Only a month or so ago Bridges was in the lead in securing the first industry council, with equal representation from labor and management, to speed shipments.

This work has drawn praise from high government officials, who have expressed gratitude to the union and to its leader. None of these factors—all important in the victory drive—were apparently taken into account by the Attorney-General.

CIO Political Meet

San Francisco, May 30—CIO endorsements of candidates for Governor and other leading political offices in California will be made at a State-wide CIO "Votes for Victory" conference, called by the California State CIO Council, to be held in Fresno this week-end.

FDR Asks Raises For U.S. Employes, Acts on CIO Plea

In a forceful demonstration of the meaning of his seven-point program to American workers, President Roosevelt this week outlined to Eleanor Nelson, national secretary-treasurer of the CIO-United Federal Workers, proposals for adjusting wages of nearly 1,000,000 Government employees.

The President called for raising the sub-standard wages of the lowest paid Federal workers from a minimum of $900 to $1,200, and proposed payment of time and a half overtime after 40 hours a week to some 800,000 Government employes who now work long hours of overtime without any compensation.

The United Federal Workers is conducting a vigorous campaign to secure Congressional adoption of the President's proposals. The union has taken a half-page newspaper ad, weekly time on the air and has started a nationwide petition campaign.

Miss Nelson had written President Roosevelt on May 1, transmitting a statement from the National Executive Board of the union. The statement outlined the United Federal Workers' war role and urged that Federal wages be adjusted to give every Government worker a "Full-Production Living Standard."

"This is in acknowledgement," wrote the President, "of your letter of May 1 transmitting the statement of your organization concerning your war role.

"I appreciate the loyalty of your organization as expressed in this statement and the devotion of your members to the necessities of our war program.

"I have delayed replying to your letter until it had been possible to work out a uniform wage and overtime policy for Federal employes.

"As you are no doubt aware, the Civil Service Commission has recently, with my approval, submitted a proposal for legislation which would, if enacted, eliminate the existing inequalities among various groups of Federal employes with regard to overtime provisions, and which would establish a uniform policy on this subject. The result of the adoption of this policy would, of course, be to bring about an increase in the earnings of the lower paid Federal employes which would approximately commensurate with the increase in the cost of living.

"There are certain low-paid Federal employes, particularly those in the custodial service, whose basic wage rates are generally recognized to be substandard. Legislation is already pending before both houses of Congress (H. R. 6217 and S. 2150) to bring about an adjustment in these basic wage rates.

"My support for the provisions of this legislation has already been indicated. If enacted, the most critical problems of substandard wage rates for Federal employes would be alleviated."

The two bills mentioned by the President—H. R. 6217 and S. 2150—would fix a $1,200 minimum wage in the Federal service. They were introduced last December and have since been stymied by House reactionaries. The President's strong endorsement of the bills in his letter to Miss Nelson should blast them out of the pigeonhole.

House Tax Plans Threaten Victory Aid Profiteers

By Ralph Hetzel
CIO Economic Director

The preliminary actions of the House Ways and Means Committee on two main sources of federal taxes, corporation incomes and individual incomes carry the threat that war profits and war profiteers will benefit at the expense of workers and other low income groups in the new federal tax bill.

The decisions of the Ways and Means Committee on these taxes are still tentative, however, and may be improved if workers and other voters of the country clearly register their views to their Congressmen. Already liberal minority members of the Committee are fighting the conservative majority decisions and are threatening a fight on the floor of the House to support the Treasury's tax program.

The Treasury asked the Committee to provide $3 billion of new revenue this year from corporate taxes and $4.5 billion more from increased individual income taxes. The Committee's scales of taxes would provide only about $2.3 billion in corporation taxes and $3.5 billion in individual income taxes.

In addition, the Committee has rejected the Treasury's proposals for closing the loopholes in individual taxes and corporation taxes which would provide some $600 million more in revenue. Thus, the Committee's tax program is already nearly $2 billion short of that asked by the Treasury.

No attempt has been made by the Committee to put into effect the $25,000 limitation on individual incomes asked for by the President. In fact, the Committee's action so far gravely threatens the whole war-time economic program set forth by the President to Congress.

FIRST TEST

The tax bill will be the first test as to whether or not the war-time economy can be kept under control. If the Committee's action falls far short of the Treasury request for revenue, or if the Committee resorts to a general sales tax, it will be almost impossible to carry out the meaures necessary to prevent war-time inflation from setting in.

The Treasury's original proposal to the Ways and Means Committee in May asked for a reduction of the individual income tax exceptions from $750 for single persons to $600 and from $1,500 for married couples to $1,200, with a reduction for dependents from $400 to $300. This was estimated to bring the total on individual incomes up to $1,100 million. Of this $100 million was calculated by the Treasury to come from the new income tax payers who would be brought in under the law.

The CIO protested this lowering of exemptions, pointing out that it would be utilized by the Committee as a means for making up the revenue lost by reduced corporation taxes. Thus the low income groups, the workers, would be paying taxes that should be paid by the corporations.

The Committee's corporation tax looks on the surface much heavier than it actually is. The Committee laid a 93 per cent tax on all excess profit, a heavier rate than that asked by the Treasury. But in doing so it reduced the rate on the corporation flat tax and surtax in such a way as to reduce by $700 million below the Treasury figure the amount of new taxes on corporations.

GRAVE ISSUES

Grave issues are at stake in the tax bill. The President's economic program and the war effort will be in jeopardy if the Committee fails to follow the general tax principles laid down by the Treasury and by the CIO.

The CIO has so far led the fight to enact a sound tax program but even greater efforts than in the past must be made if the fight is to be successful. The CIO Tax Committee of Vice-Preidents Robinson and Rosenblum is active in translating CIO policy into action with the cooperation of National Legislative Representative Nate Cowan. They have already appealed to all CIO affiliates to give them every support in the critical tax situation.

pires in January, 1943, even though he ceased drawing pay from the United Mine Workers after his election as head of the United Steelworkers of America at Cleveland last week. Murray previously had been serving as chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee since its inception in 1936—a post which he took at the insistence of Lewis.

It was also pointed out that Murray accepted the presidency of the CIO at Lewis's insistence, following the former CIO leader's retirement after the defeat of Wendell Willkie, Republican presidential candidate whom he endorsed in October, 1940.

USA-CIO Pledges Aid To Auxiliary Growth

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Womens Auxiliaries

"All aid" to the growth of women's auxiliaries by the great new United Steelworkers of America (USA-CIO) was pledged this week in a resolution adopted at their first constitutional convention in Cleveland.

The USA-CIO resolution is the most recent expression of the growing union emphasis on the importance of women's auxiliaries which has been expressed in resolutions adopted by conventions of the American Communications Association and the International Fur Workers Union and by action of the Executive Boards of the United Federal Workers, the United Shoe Workers and the International Union of Fishermen and Allied Workers.

All these unions have gone on record urging each local to take steps to establish an auxiliary and have pledged the full cooperation of the national organizations in the drive.

RESOLUTION

The Steel Resolution reads:

"WEREAS: (1) The mothers, wives, sisters and daughters of industrial workers are at all times an indispensable aid in maintaining effective union organization; and

"(2) Women's auxiliary groups have proven their great value to their respective labor unions and particularly to the steel union; and

"(3) Quickly changing industrial and economic conditions, calling more and more women to work with or in the place of men in the strategic industries indicate an increasingly vital role which can be played by women's auxiliaries, now, therefore, be it

"RESOLVED: That the United Steel Workers of America pledges its support to the development of a women's auxiliary and urges that all aid be given by its officers and its members to the growth of women's auxiliary organizations."

Mrs. Philip Murray was guest of honor at a luncheon given by the Cleveland Steel Auxiliary, No. 18, at the Hollenden Hotel during the convention. Mrs. David McDonald, Mrs. Van Bittner and Mrs. Bertha Perrin, president of the Ohio State Auxiliary Council, and a steel auxiliary member were among the more than 150 wives of delegates and Cleveland auxiliary women who attended. Mrs. Faye Stephenson, national president of the CWA, presided. Discussion of problems of auxiliary organization followed the luncheon and continued all afternoon.

The Chicago Fur Workers Auxiliary also entertained the wives of delegates and women delegates at a luncheon during the convention of United Fur Workers Union in Chicago. Mrs. Esther Markus, chairman of the Chicago auxiliary, presided.

WOMEN'S NIGHT

For the first time in its history the Los Angeles Industrial Union Council turned over the program of their last meeting to the Auxiliary Council on "Women's Night."

After hearing the reports of the auxiliary officers on Red Cross work, first-aid classes, plans for nursery schools, rationing and price control, and cooperation in the North American organizing drive, Council delegates pledged support in the auxiliaries own drive to "Organize for Victory." Five new auxiliaries in Los Angeles by July 4 is the goal and each Los Angeles local has been urged to hold a Women's Night following the lead set by the Council.

CIO Backs Senate Aid Measure

Washington, May 30—Approval of a Senate soldiers dependency bill considerably more liberal than that passed by the House was voiced today by the CIO and its Congress of Women's Auxiliaries.

The Senate bill, for instance, would provide $40 a month for a soldier's dependent wife and child while the House bill would provide only $30 from the government. Under the Senate bill, the soldier would contribute $22 for his dependent, while under the House bill he would contribute $20.

While the House removed a flexible provision to meet the problem of inadequate subsistence, the Senate virtually restored it in principle by giving the Selective Service System authority to reject those men for whose families the regular subsidies would be inadequate.

The Senate bill, like the House, provides $10 extra for each child after the first. Under the Senate bill a wife would get $28 a month and a wife and child $40, while under the House bill the sums would be $20 and $30 from the government.

The CIO and Auxiliaries asked the House to accept the Senate bill, hoping that if the allowances were reduced at least the flexible Senate provision for large families would be retained.

Remember Pearl Bergoff?

New York, May 30.—One of rugged individualism's most notorious stooges this week barely avoided a good long experiment in social regimentation.

He is Pearl L. Bergoff, self-styled "King of Strikebreakers," who for 35 years made a thriving living by furnishing thugs to employers in attempts to defeat the legitimate aspirations of workers for a better standard of living and honest collective bargaining.

CAUGHT STRIKEBREAKING

The latest page in Bergoff's police record found him convicted this week of illegally reestablishing himself in the strikebreaking business in New York.

The 68-year-old tool of anti-labor industrialists was fined $500, which he paid to avoid 30 days in the workhouse, and was given a one-year suspended term in the penitentiary. A brother, Leo, and Bernard Haas, a private detective, were fined $100 each.

Bergoff's private detective license was revoked after the Senate Civil Liberties Committee exposed his notorious activities. But he was accused of returning to the field under the "fronts" of a daughter and Haas.

'Labor for Victory' Is in the Groove

WASHINGTON, May 30—"Labor for Victory"—as the swingsters say it—is in the groove. Letters to the CIO this week indicated that the joint CIO-AFL weekly national radio broadcast is a big success, and that a lot of people are looking forward to it.

From farmers, soldiers, lawyers, housewives, businessmen, radio script writers, industrial workers—and a lot more—came songs of praise.

There were, of course, a few complaints. Some letters showed the influence of the Peglers and Kaltenborns and the anti-labor employer press. There were some obvious misunderstandings about strikes (virtually non-existent), about high wages generally (they haven't kept pace with the cost of living), and about aid to the war effort (the unions have been in the forefront).

One of the most heartening letters was from a farmer's wife in Las Cruces, New Mexico. She said:

"The biggest thrill that ever came to me over the radio came last Saturday night . . . Suddenly—clear, calm and confident—came the voice of Philip Murray.

MAN OF THE PEOPLE

"More important than what he said, even, was the way he said it. Here was a man of the people talking the people's language. It seemed as if he were with us—big, strong, sure of himself—like an older brother telling us that everything was going to be all right.

"We are small farmers. Our only son is a soldier. We feel that not only must the war be won, it must make the world a better place here at home.

"We believe that you of the CIO are our best hope for creating a world worthy of the sacrifices, the blood, sweat and tears of the people. May God be with you."

HELP AND ADVICE

There were letters of help and advice. "Take the offensive against the native Fascists was their theme.

There were letters of appeal. A man 61 years old making only $20 a week to support a family of four, wrote to ask what he could do about it. A soldier's wife, "sick from worry" because she couldn't get a defense job, was referred to the UAW-CIO for assistance.

An Army corporal's letter said he "enjoyed the program to the highest." An Army private explained how fast a soldier's $21 a month is spent. He was told the CIO has plugged for double that pay.

There were post cards—"magnificent job, heartening answer to the Fascists at home, swell, much needed message in excellent manner."

AFL MEMBERS WRITE

There were letters from AFL members. One of them said:

"Regardless of what union we may belong to, we are all working for the same thing. I hope to see the day when we all will be under one union the country over."

From New York and Daytona Beach, Florida; from Denver and Alameda, California; from Bloomfield, Iowa; and Rainelle, W. Virginia; and Kalispell, Montana; and Toledo, Ohio; and Holliday, Texas—from all over these United States came the letters of the listeners.

And from their letters, you got the idea that whether they agreed or disagreed with everything that organized labor advocates, at least they'll be twirling their dials every Saturday night at 10:15 EWT for the NBC Red Network station in their vicinity.

Try it some time!

LABOR FOR VICTORY tells labor's own story, in labor's words, of what labor is doing on the production front, on the home front, to beat the Hitler Axis in 1942.

LABOR FOR VICTORY is shared by the CIO and the AFL on alternate Saturdays. CIO's programs for June, July and August come June 6 and 20, July 4 and 18, August 1, 15 and 29.

U. S. Library Forms Production Committee

Washington, May 30—The Library of Congress is the latest Federal agency to establish a joint labor-management committee to increase war efficiency and production. The committee is composed of four administration representatives and two each from the United Federal Workers (CIO) and the National Federation of Federal Employes.

Women's Army Starts— To Enlist Negroes

Washington, May 30—Two Negro companies will be part of the 10 to be recruited for Uncle Sam's new Women's Auxiliary Army Corps, Mrs. William P. Hobby, director, told the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries this week.

Women without home responsibilities have an opportunity to join the WAAC, each company of which will be made up of 150 specialists, including stenographers, file clerks, telephone operators, radio technicians, cooks, laundresses and librarians. Each auxiliary will have a special skill needed by some department of the Army.

SPECIAL SKILLS

Recruits, at least at the beginning, will be chosen in part for their knowledge of special skills.

Recruiting for officers of the corps began this week. The 440 women, 400 White and 40 Negro, who are chosen for the officers training corps, will go through an eight weeks' training course at Fort Des Moines, Iowa. They will be paid $50 during training.

Recruiting for the auxiliaries will begin around July 15, and the first women will be inducted in September.

WHAT'S COOKIN'? CIO Auxiliary gals in Los Angeles rustle the food for banquet in the new CIO building. After dinner speeches followed, in which they told CIO union officials of plans to organize women to back CIO's victory effort.

Unions Back Hour's Pay Relief Gift Drive

WASHINGTON, May 30—Two conventions last week, representing almost a million organized members of the CIO, heard pleas by Irving Abramson, national chairman of the CIO War Relief Committee, for pledges of an hour a month's pay as donations to the war relief program of the CIO, and both adopted the program without a dissenting voice.

At the USA-CIO meeting in Cleveland last week, the representatives of 660,000 steelworkers heard Abramson ask for support of the war relief program sponsored by the official committee of the CIO. Abramson ask for support of the Servicemen's Manual issued by the CIO War Relief Committee had just come off the press and was available for free distribution. This handbook gives legal and other advice to the men in the armed forces.

President Philip Murray, of the CIO and the USA-CIO, warmly endorsed the call for donations to the CIO War Relief fund, and the convention then adopted the program unanimously. Thousands of copies of the Servicemen's Manual were ordered by the delegates to the convention.

In Chicago, just one day before the action of the steelworkers, the convention of the United Retail and Wholesale Employes of America also went on record in support of CIO War Relief, and pledged the membership to support of the hour-a-month campaign.

GUILD TOO

Newspaper reporters, members of the American Newspaper Guild, recently attended the first showing of the movie "Native Land" in New York at a party dedicated to the war relief campaign and raised almost $300, which was sent to the CIO committee.

Five widely separated locals of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America last week went into action simultaneously to contribute a total of $2,130 to the CIO war relief program, to be used for various specified purposes. The largest contribution came from Local 1227 for $1,563. One of the donations from a local in the New York City area included contributions of the management as well as the workers.

OFFICE WORKERS

A contribution of $2,000 was received this week from the treasury of the United Office & Professional Workers of America by the CIO War Relief Committee, earmarked for Russian war relief. The UOPWA membership has sent a steady stream of contributions to the national itself.

Twenty thousand shipyard workers in Local No. 1 of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers have pledged to contribute $10,000 this month to the Committee, and have earmarked the collection for Navy Relief. This pledge was given to Rear Admiral R. W. Ryden, supervisor of shipbuilding in South Jersey, at ceremonies held in the recreation hall of the union in Fairview, N. J.

Several locals of the United Mine Workers of America have this week shown their support of the CIO Committee by sending in hour-a-month donations.

Bargaining Ordered By Board

Washington, May 30 — Finding that the Botany Worsted Mills of Passaic, N. J., has repeatedly refused to bargain with the CIO Textile Workers Union, the National Labor Relations Board this week ordered the company to bargain wtih the union and to post a notice of compliance in its plant for 60 days.

The TWU was certified by the NLRB as sole bargaining agency after it won an election in November, 1940. Since then the union has made repeated unavailing requests for bargaining conferences. In March, 1941, the company finally replied in a letter which challenged the Board's determination of the unit and alleged that the majority of the workers in the unit had changed their minds on union affiliation.

The Board's decision points out that the company's claim was brought out at a hearing in which the company was charged with unfair labor practices and received months after the election in which a majority of the employes had cast their ballots for the CIO union. It found, that Botany's challenge of the Board's certification was neither "timely nor meritorious."

Workers Choose Security

Chicago, May 30.—Special polls on union security held in eight plants of the International Harvester Co. last week ended in a sweeping victory for the unions involved, with 91 per cent of the workers voting in favor of maintenance of membership. The vote showed 9,716 for to 1,000 against.

The elections were directed by and held under supervision of the War Labor Board. In five of the plants, the CIO Farm Equipment Workers is the union involved. The CIO United Automobile Workers is the recognized bargaining agency in one plant, and AFL unions in the two others.

APPRECIATION

Grant Oakes, chairman of the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee, sent wires to William Davis, head of the War Labor Board, and to Thomas Neblett, Board official who was in charge of the polls, expressing appreciation for the Board's stand and for the capable way the elections were handled.

"Election results reaffirm the WLB's correctness in granting union maintenance clause," the wire to Davis said. Oakes declared that as a result of the elections, more than 12,000 Harvester employes in the five plants involved will remain members in good standing for the duration of the contracts.

The Shoe Workers' Drive marches on! CIO Representative Walter Harris, director of the drive, reports two more victories, one at the Intenational Shoe Company, Hannibal, Missouri, where the score was: CIO, 576; Western Brotherhood, 129; no union, 301, and the others at Bluff City, Mo., where the score was: CIO, 190; Western Brotherhood, 42; no union, 58.

Regional Director George Craig, of Philadelphia, reports two victories in that area. One was in the E. G. McAleer Company, a plant organized by the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, where a vote was: UERMWA, 78; company union, 73. The second victory was won in the Dodge Cork Company in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, by the United Rubber Workers with the vote: URW-CIO, 144; against, 78.

The United Office and Professional Workers marked up another win at RKO Radio Pictures Corp. by a vote of 194 to 96. Earlier successes were scored in votes at Columbia Pictures, Loew's MGM and 20th Century Fox.

Paul Christopher of Tennessee reports an election victory at the Union Compress and Warehouse Company's Navy Yard plant at Memphis by a vote of 80 for the UCAPAWA to 7 for no union.

OPTICAL WORKERS

Thomas E. Andert, chairman of the Optical Workers Co-Ordinating Committee reports that they have increased their membership in the last few months by organizing Detroit, Milwaukee and Green Bay, Wis., 100 per cent. Buffalo, N. Y., through the efforts of Sebastian Rebaldo, is close to 100 per cent organized now. Organizing activities are proceeding along rapidly in Kansas City, Mo., and he commends the CIO for the assistance given by the organizers and the help given in the areas mentioned.

Regional Director Sandefur of the Carolinas reports four contracts. They are the United Stone and Allied Products Workers, the United Furniture Workers of America, the Textile Workers Union of America and District 50 United Mine Workers of America, as well as winning an election for the Quarry Workers at Rolesville Quarry at Rolesville, North Carolina, and installing a charter of the United Federal Workers of America at Charleston, South Carolina.

The United Transport Service Employes of America, an organization embracing red caps, etc., voted unanimously at their convention, May 16th, to seek affiliation with the CIO. A meeting has been arranged to effectuate this declaration and to lay plans to put into motion an organizing campaign, having in mind the organization of all the workers engaged in this calling.

MURRAY LEADERSHIP

The Steelworkers Convention adjourned after electing the man who has guided them through six years of struggle from scratch to a powerful labor organization of 600,000 men and women, one of the most powerful in the world. Having overcome the traditional opposition surrounding an industry entrenched in special privileges, CIO President Philip Murray was elected president, Van A. Bittner and Clinton S. Golden, assistants, and David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer.

All of these men were elected by unanimous vote. The board members were elected by their respective territories. The constitution was adopted. The delegates went to their homes determined to continue the drive to complete the organization of their industry. More than 1700 delegates attended the convention.

Five regional directors of the CIO were elected as executive board members of the United Steelworkers of America. The men elected are: Pete Mosele in New York and New Jersey area, Thomas Shane of Newark for the Detroit area, Charles H. Millard of Canada, Al Kojetinsky of the St. Louis area, and Albert Atallah of the Baltimore area. This recognition of these men of the CIO who have served Steel so faithfully, is a fine tribute. The Steelworkers will benefit by these selections. CIO wishes them all well in their new positions.

Board Smacks Plan To Kill Bargaining

Washington, May 30—A company concocted scheme designed to nullify the collective bargaining rights of employes of the North American Aviation plant at Inglewood, California, was exposed in the intermediate report made to the National Labor Relations Board by Trial Examiner C. W. Whittemore, the NLRB announced this week.

Whittemore recommended that the company be ordered to bargain collectively upon request with the CIO United Automobile Workers, as sole agent of its production workers.

CERTIFIED

After the CIO was certified by the Board as the exclusive bargaining group in August 1941, the company distributed to its employes a contract between company and union with a notice attached signed by J. H. Kindleberger, company president, outlining procedure for individual bargaining.

"Thus while the respondent has made a contractual gesture of yielding to the desires of a majority of its employes," Whittemore reported, "it has set at naught both the contract and the rights of employes under the (National Labor Relations) Act by establishing . . . a system of individual bargaining as company policy."

The Trial Examiner found that the company had thereby refused to bargain with the union.

Three CIO Conventions Meet in June

WASHINGTON, May 30—Three CIO conventions will be held during June, according to information received at national CIO headquarters. Two state Councils, New York and Tennessee are scheduled for June 6, the first in Syracuse, N. Y., the other in Memphis, Tenn.

The American Newspaper Guild convention will be held in Denver, Colo., June 22-26.

Charge Bias

Indianapolis, May 30.—Charges of discrimination against labor in the Indiana price control and rationing program were filed this week by the Indiana State Industrial Union Council with Price Administrator Leon Henderson.

"The labor movement is being deliberately and systematically discriminated against in the establishment of committees, boards and organizations for administration of price controls, consumer information centers and rationing," a council statement said.

Tory Newspapers Lie 'Down Under' Too

Melbourne, May 21 — (ALN) — After a recent tour of the coalfields, Labor Minister Edward Ward has described the "epidemic of strikes" which has been reported to be sweeping New South Wales as a newspaper fiction designed to discredit Australia's Labor Government.

Three of these strikes, Ward showed, were brief stoppages after miners had been killed in the pits. Several others were lockouts. The rest resulted when pitowners refused to abide by awards of arbitration boards.

In one case Ward directed the Northern Coal Reference Board to call a compulsory conference of all parties to the dispute. In the midst of the conference the owners walked out. The Chairman of the coal board said, "I'm amazed to hear that the owners have never effected the award handed down a year ago last March."

Despite widely advertised interruptions of production, Minister of Mines Baddeley has announced that the last six months' coal production in New South Wales coal pits has broken all existing records.

Eddie Ward, former streetcar conductor and knockabout professional boxer, now the youngest minister in the labor cabinet, has been the target of the most virulent press campaign ever conducted against an Australian minister. Sir Keith Murdoch's Melbourne Herald, the spearhead of the campaign, refers to him consistently as "a wicked liar."

The misgivings of labor observers here, who are accustomed to the antilabor attitude of tory newspapers, are due to a fear that the campaign may be used as antilabor propaganda among American and Australian troops.

Prime Minister Curtin, observing that coal production in Australia as a whole is larger than it has been in a decade, has summoned a special convention of the Australian Trade Union Congress to meet in Melbourne May 29. The occasion will be used to rally the unions to the support of Eddie Ward.

It is expected that the convention will echo its March statement: "It is because we have a minister like Ward who has the unions' confidence that we are prepared to accept the wartime suspension of cherished principles."

Output Setup Seen For Canada

Toronto—(ALN)—Canadian labor demands for labor-management committees in war industries are beginning to bear fruit. A delegation of United Automobile Workers' representatives from auto plants in Windsor, Ontario, was informed by C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply, that the government has written all companies holding war contracts instructing them to set up joint production committees.

Mr. Howe indicated that the government would take steps to get the program under way if industrialists failed to respond of their own accord.

The UAW has conducted a vigorous campaign to work up public interest in production committees. Newspaper advertisements, radio broadcasts and pamphlets, all paid for out of UAW funds, have explained how these committees could speed up the war effort.

White Collars In War Work

London—(ALN)—Due to the efforts of 1000 white-collar workers, several important arms factories in the Midlands now give their workers, exhausted at the end of a week's heavy work, Saturday afternoon and Sunday off and still keep production going 168 hours a week.

Several months ago a Volunteer Labor Service, composed of 70 clerks, storekeepers and teachers, was started in a small Midlands town. The service now has more than a thousand workers enrolled and has spread to neighboring towns.

Those enrolling in the service volunteer to give their week-ends to war work in the factories. Some white-collar workers have become so proficient that they now operate heavy capstan lathes turning out 25-pound shell cases. Others, who have become expert at skilled jobs, have been formed into a mobile group which is assigned to any factory where it is needed.

Volunteers work all day Sunday and from noon Saturday. A third are women.

The Upper Crust

IN RING: Irving Abramson, president of the N. J. CIO Council, seeking Democratic nomination for Congress in the forthcoming primaries.

Jersey Labor Endorses Abramson

Trenton, N. J., May 30—Strong support for the Congressional candidacy of Irving Abramson, New Jersey CIO president, was voiced here last week at the convention of the American Labor League of New Jersey, representing 200,000 CIO and AFL members.

The delegates voted authorization for Abramson to accept the Democratic nomination for Congress in Passaic County, big industrial center, where he will oppose Republican Rep. Gordon Canfield, who has voted against the Administration's foreign and domestic policies.

The American Labor League is the successor to the Jersey Labor's Non-Partisan League. The state branch seceded from the national organization headed by John L. Lewis and changed its name.

HIT LEWIS' POLICIES

Condemnation of Lewis' opposition to policies and programs of President Roosevelt and the CIO were voiced by the 200 delegates, who passed a resolution charging the mine union leader with "attempting to form a 'labor front' of anti-war and discredited elements within labor itself, and further, with elements outside of labor such as Father Coughlin and other appeaser forces."

Carl Holderman, an official of the CIO Textile Workers Union, was re-elected head of the organization.

Unions Ask Raise for Tommies

London—(ALN)—The close ties between the fighters in the war factories and the fighters in the armed forces are recurrently demonstrated in the series of annual conventions of British unions, now being held.

Recent conventions of the biggest unions have adopted resolutions urging pay increases for soldiers. Married men in the Army have now been given a pay rise of 70 cents a week, plus an extra 70 cents deferred pay, but unionists insist that these increases are not enough.

The Record, organ of the Transport and General Workers, with a membership of more than a million, surveyed the sentiments of the men at one Army camp and reported: "The widest interest was displayed in the attempts we had made to keep up the standards of those who were filling the places which the soldiers had temporarily vacated in industry."

Tens of thousands of union members are in Britain's regular Army of 2,000,000, while most of the 1,500,000 members of the Home Guard—Britain's part-time army—are workers in war industries.

The Labor Reader

Goal Posts for Democracy in the South

By Fred D'Avila

"The South might be called a land of differentials. The South has more low income farmers, farm tenants, and farm workers than are to be found in any other region of the country. It has two-thirds of the nation's '12,000,000 black voices,' who have never been emancipated from differentials, even with the spread of the defense program.'

Thus are south of the Mason-Dixon states described in a recently published pamphlet, "The Southern Workers Outside the Legislative Pale," issued by the American Labor Education Service Inc., in cooperation with the Southern School for Workers, Inc.

The South is a land ridden with agricultural difficulties, unorganized, uneducated and plagued with poverty. In industry as in agriculture, unions have only scratched the field and employer-employe relations are "in the main either paternal or tooth and claw," the pamphlet states.

Despite the fact that national social legislation has been passed, the South lacks organized progressive pressure groups to cooperate in enforcement of laws. Hence statutes that mean something to northern industrial workers are worthless in a large part of the mainly rural area "below the line."

Child labor provisions, unemployment compensation laws, the National Labor Relations and Wage-Hour Acts are difficult to enforce because solid community support is lacking.

The southern differential is, of course, particularly noticeable in among the Negro people, extending into every phase of their lives, to jobs and schooling and health care and political participation.

"Democracy in the South," the pamphlet states, "is as yet very largely a vague concept. It is a principle, a theoretical way of life, an architect's elevation of what is possible to achieve."

Despite these restrictions, plus the poll tax that handcuffs millions of Southern citizens politically, democracy has not yet failed in the South, the pamphlet holds. "It simply has not been known or tried."

The goalposts in the solution to the problem of the South lie in: elimination of the poll tax; equitable distribution of educational and welfare funds; decrease in the many current differentials such as wage, freight, etc.; increase in unionism; widespread farm program improvements; and improved legislation.

The writers who contributed to the pamphlet see the South both sinned against and sinning, and "hope for readjustments by which the South can get a square deal from without and apply a square deal within during this period of rebuilding America and the world."

Russian Women Aid War

Kuibyshev, USSR, May 30—"My husband is smashing the Nazis at the front, and I am working at the plant, overfulfiilling my quota for myself and my husband. And I pledge to work still better," said Varushkina, the speaker at a women's anti-fascist meeting held in the city of Molotov. She tersely expressed the aims and deeds of thousands of Ural women, working on the industrial front.

Women were not uncommon in Ural plants before the war. But after June 22, 1941, when the Nazis attacked the Soviet Union, and the problem of replacing men called up for service arose, thousands of women flocked to the plants in response to their country's needs for more labor power.

ON HONOR ROLL

The Ural mountain region, center of rich natural resources and big plants, has long been known as the region of hardy folk and determined women, no less than men.

The clothing mills, for instance, count 290 women workers who systematically overfulfill the production quota. At the Stary Burlak plant, the honor roll of workers includes the names of women heroines on the industrial front. There 30-year-old Kapitolina Knyazeva, an electric welder who was formerly an illiterate woman, and now bearer of the Order of Lenin, can be found at her job at all hours, performing miracles at repairing vessels in short order.

Another newcomer at the plant is Katherina Potapova. One day after the war broke out, she was walking past a plant when a large index finger pointing at her arrested her attention. Behind the steadily pointing finger was a Red Army man as big as life on a large poster with the inscription, "What have you done for the front?" She went into the plant. "I am a housewife," she said. "I've never in my life done electric welding, but I'd like to learn."

'Hell-Bent On Disunity,' Murray Charges to Board

WASHINGTON, June 6—John L. Lewis was bluntly charged with being the active head of a "studied campaign of disruption and disunity," designed to wreck the nation's victory effort, in a dramatic three-day session of the CIO Executive Board here.

"John L. Lewis is hell-bent on the creation of national confusion and disruption," President Murray told the delegates in a fervent speech before passage of the resolution condemning the Mine Workers' president. "For my part, I will fight with every drop of my blood to preserve our organization, to promote our national well-being and our national war effort," Murray said.

Murray uncovered a long list of Lewis attempts to cripple the fight against Fascism by his attacks on Murray as president of the CIO, on the unions of the CIO and on the President of the United States.

Following this blast at Lewis and his pro-appeasement henchmen in District 50 and among the officialdom of the Mine Workers, the CIO Executive Board outlined a victory program of needed social, political and legislative advances, including fair taxation, rigid price control and rationing, raising of wages to take care of living costs, and similar measures.

In a rising unanimous vote, the Executive Board also denounced Attorney General Biddle's attempts to exile Harry Bridges, and urged the President to intervene as well as demanding that Biddle reverse his arbitrary order.

While the CIO Board met, Lewis' hand-picked stooges put their "Ja" on a resolution that hit a familiar low in anti-unionism—by attempting to brand Murray as a "Communist."

Shipyard Signs After Months of Stalling

KEARNY, N. J., June 6—After months of stalling, the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., U. S. Steel subsidiary, finally yielded last week and signed a contract with the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers containing a maintenance of membership clause.

The company's stubborn refusal to accept the clause brought on a three weeks' strike last summer and forced the government to take over the shipyard. It was under government operation for four months, being returned to the company on January 6.

Acceptance of the maintenance of membership clause was ordered by the War Labor Board on April 25. L. H. Korndorff, president of the company announced on May 8 that the firm was ready to sign the contract, but at the conferences with the union which followed, a controversy developed over the interpretation of the Board's order.

WLB Chairman William H. Davis set May 26 as the deadline for signing the agreement in a letter to Korndorff advising him that it was the "unanimous judgment" of the members of the WLB that he sign in accordance with the Board's directive order of April 26.

The union charged that without consulting either the union or the Board, Korndorff arbitrarily postponed the May 26 deadline two days and informed Chairman Davis that he would meet with the union May 28. At that meeting the dispute over the wording of the maintenance of membership clause continued and the signing of the contract was again delayed.

GM Salary Secrecy Laid To Pay Talks

Indianapolis, Ind., June 6 — Charges that the General Motors Corp. is withholding publication of its officials' 1941 salaries because of present wage parleys, were made here by Walter P. Reuther, director of the GM department of the United Automobile Workers Union.

In a wire to the SEC, which released figures on the majority of 1941 salaries on May 28, Reuther recalled that June 15 is the deadline and said that the company "may ask and receive an extension and that, when the figures are reported, they may be withheld because of 'military' reasons.

"Under no circumstances, I believe, should the pretext of military censorship be permitted to suppress these figures. GM appears to be withholding publication because of their possible effect on wage negotiations in Washington."

Court Holds Wage Act Covers Building Workers

WASHINGTON, June 6—Adopting a liberal view of the phrase "interstate commerce," the Supreme Court, voting eight to one, this week held that the Wage-Hour Act covers employes of buildings in which firms engaged in interstate commerce have their offices.

The decision was based on an appeal by owners of the 22-story Arsenal Building in New York City's garment manufacturing district and the A. B. Kirschbaum building in Philadelphia, Pa.

Justice Frankfurter, writing the majority decision, contended that the employes of the building were engaged in interstate commerce because interstate commerce could not be carried on by the tenants of the building without light, heat and elevator services.

Maintenance of a "safe, habitable building," Frankfurter's decision stated, is indispensable to the production of goods for interstate commerce.

CIO Board Acts for 'V'

This week's meeting of the CIO Executive Board was one of the most significant in the CIO's six year history. During the meeting, the Board took action to drive out defeatism and disruption from the labor movement and from political life, worked out a positive program for gearing the nation's economy to war, and struck sharp blows against the nation's enemies.

This issue of THE CIO NEWS brings you detailed accounts of all these actions and full text of all the important resolutions, including excerpts from President Philip Murray's fighting speech on John L. Lewis' conspiracy against the nation.

Turn to inside pages of this special 12-page issue for full, authentic accounts of what CIO did for victory in Washington this week.

To Back Pro-Labor Congressmen

Washington, June 6—The CIO Executive Board pledged its full efforts to secure election of representatives to Congress, regardless of political faith or allegiance, "who have demonstrated that they may be relied upon to back to the full, the objectives of labor and the war effort of the government."

Urging national unity "in wholehearted support of the President's leadership in our war against the Axis," the Board instructed CIO national officers to take the necessary steps to effectuate this pledge by rallying all CIO affiliates behind this program, and to obtain "joint action with AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods throughout the nation."

DEMAND MORE WAR WORK

Members of the United Steelworkers of America parade past the American Steel Foundry Co. in East St. Louis, Ill., in protest against management's refusal to work the plant at more than 50 per cent capacity.

Transport Service Workers Get Charter from CIO

WASHINGTON, June 6—The CIO Executive Board chartered a new international union this week, the United Transport Service Employes of America, with a potential membership of nearly 30,000 and with 24 agreements already signed for 77,000 miles of railroad trackage.

The jurisdiction of the new affiliate includes: Redcaps, ushers, station porters, attendants, Pullman service workers, laundry workers and other service employes. Following CIO practice, white as well as Negro employes are admitted on equal terms.

Officers of the new CIO union, which has headquarters in Chicago, include:

Willard S. Townsend, president; John L. Yancey, secretary-treasurer; and John Hoskins and J. P. Covington, vice-presidents.

The union's recent convention pledged complete support to the war effort and urged the abolition of discrimination that hampers the drive for victory.

Big Job Lies Ahead, Reports Cowan

WASHINGTON, June 6—In its report to the Executive Board, the newly established Legislative Department pointed out the importance, in these days of increasing governmental control due to the war emergency, of CIO legislative activity.

Nathan Cowan, whose appointment as Legislative Director was approved by the Board, outlined the two-fold nature of the work: (1) Activities in Washington; (2) Work in the field with CIO affiliates.

"Activities in Washington cannot be confined merely to the issuance of statements on bills or appearances for testimony at hearings before various committees," he declared. "The CIO must follow the course of proposed legislation step by step before it reaches the crucial stage, by constant contact with key members of various committees.

"The Washington office will have to be developed into a central information point on the current legislative situation and on the records of members of Congress," he said.

TO BUILD FILE

As the work progresses, a file will be built up, Cowan declared, "which will enable us to note bills introduced in Congress, analyze those of significance to the organization, plan and study the action which should be taken on each, and when that action should be taken, follow each bill into the committee into which it is referred, and keep in touch with the deliberations of the committee and the needs produced by the progress of a particular bill."

The work in Washington, the report stated, will have results only "to the extent that CIO forces can be rallied in the localities to take action, to visit, wire or write their Congressmen when action is necessary."

This means that the department must find effective means of getting information into the field and working with the industrial union councils and affiliated unions.

Immediate legislative problems outlined in the report include the Tax, Anti-Racketeering, Senate Dependency, and the Anti-Poll Tax bills.

CIO Smelter Union Wins Seven Polls

DENVER, Colo., June 6—Seven labor board election victories within two weeks were announced today by President Reid Robinson of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

By nearly 4 to 1, workers in the big Chase Brass & Copper plant at Waterbury, Conn., chose Chase Brass & Copper Workers Union 565 as their bargaining agency. The vote was 1,591 to 456. This overwhelming victory was a big boost to the MMSW in other organizing drives, particularly at the Scovill plant in Waterbury, where an election had been petitioned for by Scovill Brass Workers Union 569.

At Long Island City, N. Y., Local 541 was chosen by workers in the Laurel Hill refinery of Phelps-Dodge Corp. The score: 601; AFL, 219; no union, 13. This was a key election for the IUMM&SW, with elections scheduled at two other Phelps-Dodge properties larger than Laurel Hill. They are a refinery at El Paso, Texas, and mines at Bisbee, Ariz.

An election victory at Kellogg, Idaho, May 26, climaxed a long struggle of Local 18 against union-busting practices of Bunker Hill & Sullivan Mining and Concentrating Co. The local immediately went into joint negotiations with 13 other local unions for a contract to cover the whole Coeur d'Alenes mining area. IUMM&SW, 367; no union, 327.

Nine craft unions of the AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods opposed Local 63 at Santa Rita, N. M., and Local 69 at Hurley, N. M., at Consolidated Copper Corp. properties, May 26. The IUMM&SW polled more than 700 votes to take the one big bargaining unit. The small craft unions came out ahead within their jurisdictions.

At Omaha, Neb., Local 461 won a consent election, 125 to 72, at the American Smelting & Refining Co. smelter, and Local 587 won an easy victory over a company union at Metal & Alloy Specialties Co., Buffalo, N. Y. The score: IUMM&SW, 161; company union, 54; no union, 10.

At Hanover, N. M., the International Union's newest local, Hanover Mine & Smelter Workers 604, won a consent election, 31 to 7, at the Blackhawk mine of American Smelting & Refining Co.

Shipyard Workers Get Union Security at Robins Drydock

Washington, June 6.—The Robins Dry Dock Repair Co., Brooklyn, N.Y., has been ordered by the War Labor Board to insert a maintenance of membership clause in its contract with the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

The board's order was based on the unanimous recommendation of the three-man mediation panel which heard the case. The four employer members of the board dissented on the ruling which was passed by a vote of eight to four.

Fight 12c Wage In Cotton

Chicago, June 6—To insure uninterrupted maximum production in Southern cotton fields, the CIO United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers appealed this week to the War Labor Board and the U. S. Conciliation Service to set up conciliation and arbitration machinery to force landlords to work out a program to establish fair wages and working conditions for the cotton chopping workers.

12½ CENTS AN HOUR

Donald Henderson, president of the union, stated that "due to the fact that there is no representative or existing agency operating to settle such disputes, thousands of cotton field workers in Missouri, Arkansas and Tennessee are now staging a stay at home form of strike.

"We have not called any strike and do not intend to, but workers who are being starved to death on 12½ cents an hour are refusing as individuals to take jobs with those unpatriotic planters whose policy is contrary to the public interests and the war emergency."

A widespread union campaign to secure a minimum of 30 cents an hour for cotton chopping is under way, Henderson said.

Taft Empire Under First CIOContract

Cincinnati, June 8—A year long fight, waged by the Cincinnati Newspaper Guild an affiliate of the American Newspaper Guild, CIO, against the Cincinnati Times-Star, influential southern Ohio Newspaper owned and controlled by the Taft family, was culminated with the signing of a Guild contract last week, covering 173 employes of the paper.

Negotiations for the contract had been in progress for the past two and one-half months, ever since the Guild won a NLRB election. The Taft interests opposed the Guild to the very last, and attempted to thwart the drive with every means of bribery, and intimidation at their disposal. Thus, two weeks before the election, employes were granted increases totaling $37,000.

During a deadlock in contract talks, which arose over the question of a three-week vacation and a death benefit clause, the Times-Star unit of the Guild received the full cooperation and aid of Regional Director Robert J. Davidson of the Cincinnati area and of the Greater Cincinnati CIO council. After two conferences with the Taft's in which CIO leaders participated the controversy came to an end with the Guild getting its three weeks vacation and $1,200 death benefits for all employes.

The contract was negotiated by a committee composed of Times-Star employes, with Resident organizer John Weilburg of the American Newspaper Guild as its chief spokesman. Wage increases obtained through the Guild's efforts amounted to $50,000.

Negotiations for a renewal of the Guild's contract with the Cincinnati Post, Scripps-Howard paper, also were concluded recently. The new Post contract put another $22,000 into the pay envelopes of Post employes.

Labor's War Stake Is Democracy, Says Brophy

Chapel Hill, N. C., June 6—"Labor's stake in the outcome of the war is labor's stake in democracy," John Brophy, director of CIO industrial union councils, told a war production conference here, attended by CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhood members.

"Labor is convinced," Brophy said, "that the methods, the institutions, the ideals of democracy, even of such a limited democracy, political and economic as now prevails in this troubled world, are better than tyranny."

SMALL ARMS workers at St. Louis, members of Local 825 of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, make a unique presentation at a recent War Production Conference held here by the UE. The union presented three famous heroes—General MacArthur, General Wavell and General Timoshenko—engraved .50 calibre cartridge cases which read, "In Solidarity for Victory." In the picture are (standing, left to right), Otto Maschoff, president of UE Local 825, shown handing Naval Lieut. J. D. Logsdon the MacArthur cartridge. Seated are Julius Emspak (left), General Secretary-Treasurer of the UE, who was the principal speaker, and Henry I. Adams of the labor production division of the War Production Board.

CIO's One Aim To Win, Murray Declares In Shortwave Speech

WASHINGTON, June 6—Millions of starving European workers, their unions broken and their lives haunted by fear of the cruel Gestapo, will receive new hope for freedom this year through a series of trade union broadcasts from 11 powerful short wave stations in the United States.

President Philip Murray of CIO and William Green of AFL inaugurated the series, which is expected to go on a weekly and perhaps a daily basis in the near future, with the speeches broadcast in English and translated into practically every other major tongue of civilized man.

President Murray, in a speech transcribed for re-broadcast through cooperation of the CIO, its War Relief Committee and the Federal government, said of the CIO membership:

ONE AIM

"The single aim of these 5,000,000 organized working men and women is to win the war against the Hitler Axis—to win the war this year—to see that 1942 becomes the graveyard of Hitlerism and all it stands for.

"The workers of America are in this war because it is our war," Murray told the enslaved millions of Europe and other workers the world over who have access to short wave receivers or to the messages they bring.

"We know that Hitler plans our enslavement just as he has planned the enslavement of workers in the countries his armies have occupied. We know that Hitler and his Japanese and Italian puppets plan to make the entire world a gigantic slave market, in which the rights and national traditions of all people will be destroyed.

"We are in this war because we know that this is a world war for freedom, that the struggle to preserve freedom for America depends upon the struggle for freedom in Europe, in Asia, in every continent and in every nation where the Hitler Axis has set its brutal armies in motion," Murray said.

He declared that American workers are grateful to the workers of Britain, Russia, China and other nations that have bravely resisted the Axis, and said that "we salute, too, the anti-Fascist workers of Germany and Italy, who dream and fight for a world free from Fascist tyranny."

Declaring that the CIO has pledged all-out, continuous production for victory, is supporting the purchase of war bonds to the utmost, and is contributing to the Red Cross and the Allied War Relief Fund, Murray said:

DECENT WORLD

"We are fighting to make this world a decent place to live in, to make a future world where workers and common people can live like human beings guaranteed the right to live and the right to work in security.

"In this world, only possible after we have smashed Hitler and the whole of Axis tyranny, workers will have a deciding voice in the councils of government."

Labor-Management Groups Urged for Civilian Defense Efficiency

Washington, June 6—Joint labor-management committees for air raid protection of industrial plants as well as for boosting output were urged today by James M. Landis, director of the Office of Civilian Defense. Where unions are organized, they should be represented, he declared.

"In the interests of national safety and maximum production," Landis said, "it is important that some framework for cooperative effort be set up.

"We believe that this can best be achieved by the formation of a joint employer-employe committee on air raid protection in each industrial plant. The function of such a committee will do much to insure continuous and maximum production and the safeguarding of the lives of the employes and of the plant itself.

"It is important that this joint committee truly represent both employer and employe and that this committee function be made permanent for the duration of the war.

District 50 'Refugees' Welcomed at CIO Meet

WASHINGTON, June 6—More than 18,000 workers from locals of the Mine Workers District 50 were represented by delegates to the CIO Executive Board meeting here—all of them, and many more, thoroughly fed up with the Lewis brand of disruption and seeking their rightful place in the CIO.

Led by Martin Wagner, former head of District 50 in the UMWA who resigned as Mine Workers board member, the 150 delegates told the CIO Board through their spokesmen a detailed story of anti-labor acts by District 50's strongarm men, plus the concerted drive to hinder the nation's war effort carried out on Lewis' orders.

A full day's discussion was devoted to the issue, with the District 50 delegates bringing a petition asking for full CIO affiliation and denouncing the tactics of such Lewis henchmen as Ora Gasaway, Henry Johnson and others.

QUILL CHARGES

The Board also heard a detailed account from Michael Quill of attempted District 50 raids on the Transport Workers Union, whose agents set out to work with dissident elements in the union to wreck the TWU. These charges were first made some weeks ago, when TWU leaders caught Johnson and others in a conspiracy with pro-appeasement forces in the organization.

The Board gave the District 50 "refugees" close and sympathetic attention throughout their recital, showing by their applause that they would be welcomed into the CIO.

CIO Blasts Lewis' Disruption, Outlines Victory Program

WASHINGTON, June 6—In a three-day session here this week, the CIO Executive Board took action to clear labor's decks of John L. Lewis' disruption and defeatism, to work out an economic and political program for the war effort and to crush all remaining obstacles to full production for an offensive and victory over the Axis.

Led by President Murray, the board put the finger bluntly on John L. Lewis for his failure to support the nation in the war, charging him with leadership of a "studied campaign of disruption and disunity, both within and outside the labor movement" and condemned his acts "as a grave danger to the security of our nation and the future of the workers of the entire world."

This action, taken in a unanimous resolution presented by UAW-CIO President R. J. Thomas, followed on an hour and 40 minute speech by President Murray, in which he reviewed the steady conspiracy plotted out by Lewis to undermine his leadership and to attack the President of the U. S. and the nation's war program.

Murray revealed that Lewis had tried to persuade him to join in attacking Roosevelt's foreign policy as long ago as last November, when he suggested that he go to the Detroit convention and there launch an all-out drive against the President.

"I refused," Murray said. "I said that to do so could only be regarded as an act of treason." Following this, Murray declared, officials of District 50 of the UMWA and the Construction Workers undertook their "insidious campaign" to disrupt the CIO in earnest.

CIO's reply to this anti-victory, anti-labor drive by Lewis and his UMWA henchmen was clearly indicated in the applause from the delegates and others attending the Board meeting at Murray's speech and in the rising vote for the resolution condemning Lewis.

It was further made clear in the reception given some 150 delegates of District 50 locals who came to the meeting with a detailed bill of complaint against the Lewis dictatorship and to ask the help of CIO in rebuilding their organization along anti-Axis, pro-labor lines.

"HELL-BENT"

Murray uncovered a shocking history of Lewis's continued attempts to betray the workers of America and to hamstring their struggle against Hitlerism, revealing that he had been ready to sell out the entire CIO to the most reactionary elements in the country to further his hatred of President Roosevelt and his own personal ambitions to rule labor in this country.

"There is no other way out," he said. "John L. Lewis is hell-bent on the creation of national confusion and disruption. For my part, I will fight with every drop of my blood to preserve our organization, to promote our national well-being and our national war effort."

At the same time, both Murray and the Board in its resolution made it clear that there was no quarrel with the rank and file of the Mine Workers, the resolution declaring that the CIO would at all times keep "the closest bonds" with them "for the preservation of unity in our war effort."

WAR PROGRAM

Turning from its thorough job of blasting Lewis, the Executive Board passed a series of resolutions designed to strengthen the nation for the victory drive on economic and legislative fronts.

Of these, the first resolution passed called for support of the President's program to gear the nation's economy to war needs, urging strict price fixing and rationing, taxes from those able to pay, union security, wage raises to bring living standards up to efficiency levels for top production, and similar basic economic steps.

Political action to sweep disrupters and defeatists out of Congress was urged in another major decision of the Board. Disruption was also attacked in a resolution urging an immediate end to discrimination against Negroes and other minority groups.

BRIDGES PROTEST

A rising vote put the resolution pledging all support to Harry Bridges through to unanimous passage. This resolution followed the lines of President Murray's first protest against the Biddle exile order, pointing out that Bridges and his union were making a major contribution to the war effort. It called on Biddle to reverse his arbitrary order and asked the President to intervene to countermand it.

LABOR UNITY

CIO-AFL unity was also urged in a resolution calling for a joint

Vote Out Defeatists, CIO Urges

Washington, June 6—Full support from a Congress "committed to a program for unity and victory" is vital if President Roosevelt is to "lead this nation to a final drive for victory in 1942 over the Axis powers," the CIO Executive Board said in a unanimous resolution passed this week.

For this reason, the resolution declared, labor must work to unseat all defeatist, disruptionist Congressmen who spend their time on Capitol Hill trying to split national unity in the interests of pro-appeasement policies.

To do this, the resolution urged all CIO affiliates to rally behind Congressmen who are pledged to all-out support of the war effort and to promoting national unity for victory. It also ordered the national officers of the CIO to "obtain joint action with the AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods throughout the nation."

Ask Aircraft Conference On Wages

Washington, June 6.—Asserting that stabilization of wages in the aircraft industry through collective bargaining can reduce the heavy turnover of labor and increase production, Richard T. Frankensteen, Director of the UAW-CIO Aviation Division, today requested the War Production Board to hold a labor-management conference on the subject.

Frankenstein invited H. W. Brown, Int'l. president, Int'l. Association of Machinists, AFL, to participate in the proposed conference. The UAW-CIO aviation director sent this letter to Wendell Lund, director of the WPB's Labor Production Division:

"As you know, all-out production in the aircraft industry is a vital necessity in the nation's war effort. However, one inpediment to greatest possible production in this industry is the large turnover of labor occurring in various sections of the country.

"The chief factor responsible for the large turnover of labor in the aircraft industry is substandard and unequal wages.

CIO Unionists Join Nurse Corps

New York, June 6—The Red Cross program of enlisting nurses from the civilian population so that already trained nurses can be freed for Army duty has met with enthusiastic response from the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, members of which have registered for the work.

New Low for Lewis

Murray Hits 'Red' Charge as Part Of Disunity Plot

Washington, June 6 — Wild charges by Mine Workers officials that CIO President Murray is a "Communist" were branded as "so ridiculous and completely untruthful" as to be scarcely "deserving of any serious consideration" in a statement made by Murray at the Board meeting here.

The red-baiting attack was made at a meeting of Lewis appointees while the CIO Board was listing Lewis' anti-victory moves and denouncing him as a disrupter. On hearing of the attack, Murray declared to newsmen querying him:

"Of course the nation knows that Philip Murray is not a Communist, and that neither he, nor any member of his family ever visited the Soviet Embassy or engaged in social pow-pows with Soviet diplomats. My actions throughout life have been purely trade union. I have never been politically minded and am not now. My ideological beliefs are purely and unadulteratedly American. They are now, and with the help of God in whom I believe, always will be."

PORT OF DISRUPTION

Speaking to the Board members, Murray branded the Lewis red-baiting attempt as another step in his studied campaign to create national disunity, declaring:

"No group of men can support this war and at the same time resort to tactics such as this. Such men are indulging in diabolical plots to undermine not only the trade union movement but America as well.'

Referring to the UMWA resolution, which demanded that Murray purge the CIO of all "Communists" or stand convicted of being one himself, Murray explained that this was simply part of the scheme to promote disruption and to lay the groundwork for expelling him from the UMWA.

Such red-baiting smear attempts were particularly reprehensible in this time of war, he added; "when one of our outstanding allies is defending the well-being of the world and of America."

"Every reactionary newspaper in the country will pick this up," he said. "John L. Lewis will be the leader of a bigoted drive, a drive of prejudice and hatred, a drive to divide the house of labor under the cloak of this subtle, insidious and vicious resolution."

Seek Unity Of Anti-Axis Labor

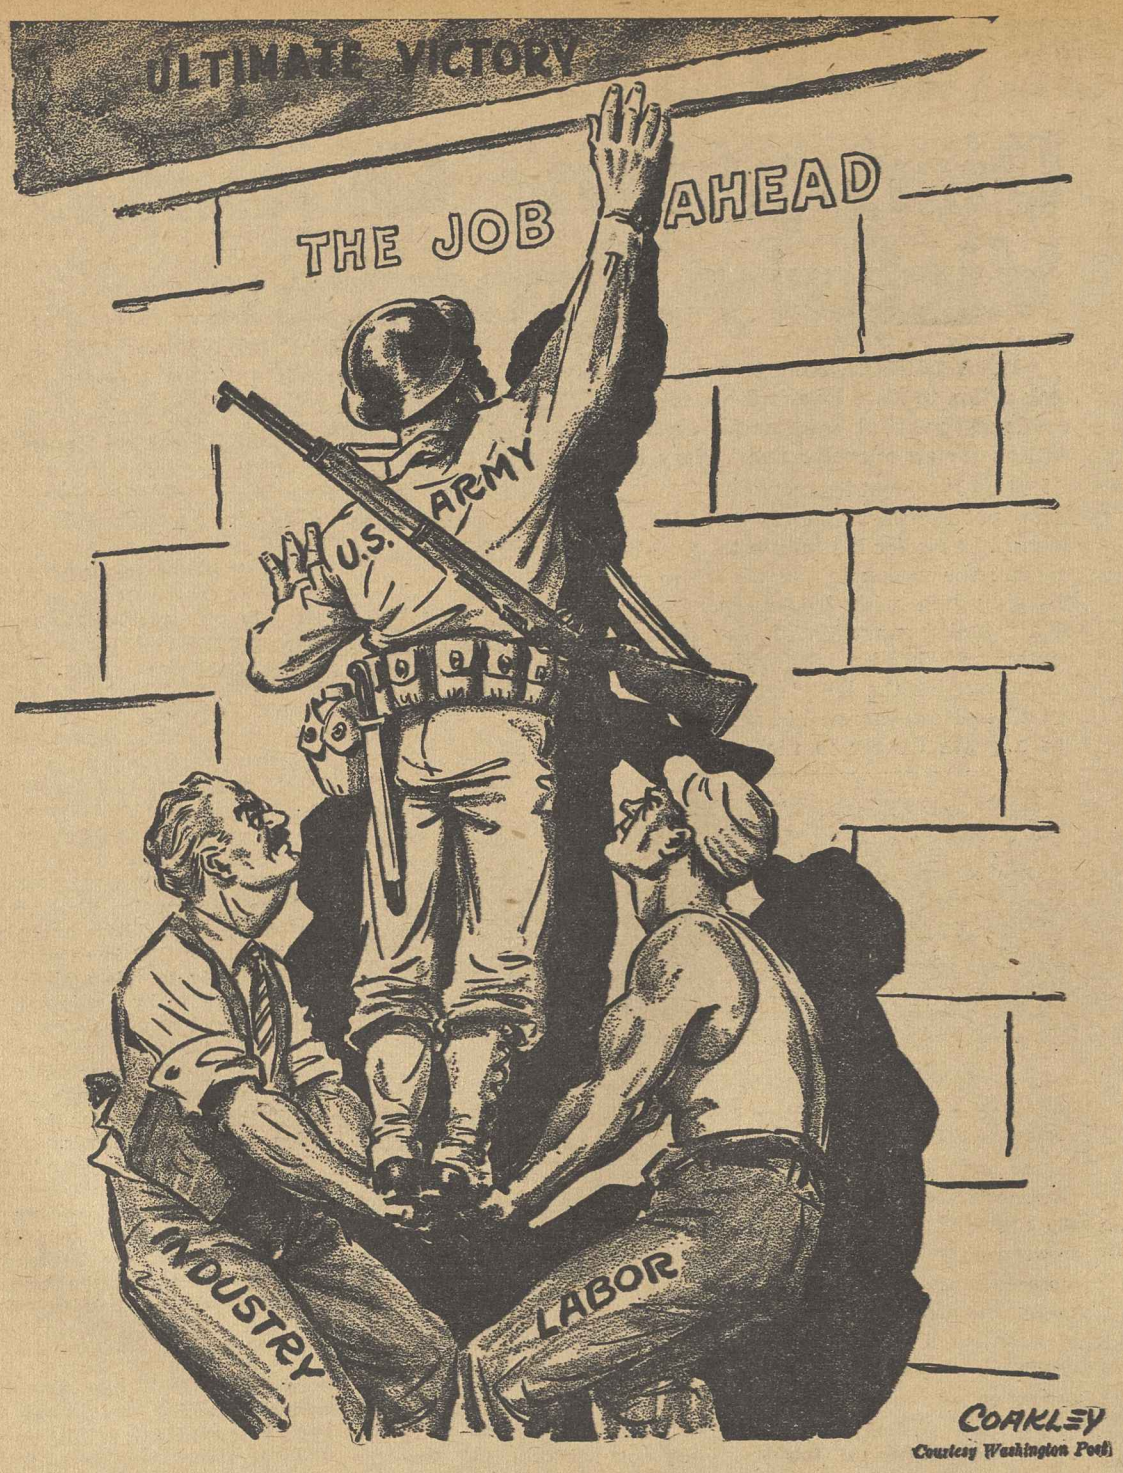
Washington, June 6—Unity between the organized labor movement of the United Nations was urged in a resolution passed by the CIO Executive Board meeting here.

Declaring that such unity would "strengthen the United Nations through greater cooperation" among all forces fighting Hitlerism, and pointing to the example of the British and Soviet labor organizations in setting up a joint committee, the resolution authorized the CIO executive officers to:

". . . take steps toward securing closer cooperation and unity of action between the organized workers of America, including the AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods, and the trade unions of the United Nations, including the Latin American nations."

Furniture Unionists Buy War Bonds

New York, June 6—Compulsory weekly deduction of 5 per cent of each member pay for purchase of war bonds was voted this week by a membership meeting of United Furniture Workers Union Local 76-B.



Conspiracy Exposed

The CIO has fought and defeated many frontal attacks and many attempts at disruption from within since it was formed. But few of these have been so treacherous as the back-stabbing assaults with which the last CIO executive board meeting was called upon to cope.

Particularly bitter is the fact that these assaults should be engineered by John L. Lewis, who slanders the fair name of the United Mine Workers, in arrogant disregard of the wishes of its membership, by associating this great union with his personal vendetta.

What makes the assaults particularly treacherous is the fact that they are designed not only to destroy the movement that gave Lewis national fame, but also to disrupt labor and national unity at a time when this is needed most of all to win the war against the Hitler Axis.

CIO President Murray charged Lewis with being "hell bent on creating national confusion and national disunity." The black record of plots and disruptions which he reported to the board fully bore out his charge.

The board members heard too from many rank-and-file delegates of District 50, which Lewis has sought dictatorially to use as the instrument of many of his assaults on the CIO. And all present knew from their own experience what Lewis had been doing to oppose the policies of CIO, to undermine its elected leadership, to raid its affiliates, and to turn the Mine Workers against the great labor movement they did so much to create.

The refusal of Lewis to pay per capita to the CIO and the disgraceful proceedings leading up to the removal of Murray from his elected position as vice president of the United Mine Workers have brought into the open an undercover conspiracy of long duration.

This conspiracy has involved reactionary isolationist and appeasement elements in and out of the labor movement. It has included maneuvers with AFL leaders like Hutcheson to disturb the practical unity of war effort now in effect between the two major labor movements.

And one must be blind indeed to fail to see that the underlying purpose of the whole conspiracy has been to build opposition to the national leadership of President Roosevelt and his foreign policies, which have united labor and the American people as never before for victory in the war of all freedom-loving peoples against fascist enslavement.

The propaganda of the divisionist clique with which Lewis has associated himself reveals its essential character. It seizes on every opportunity to preach hate, division and dissension between Americans, when unity is most needed; to undermine confidence in our war administration; and to create distrust among the United Nations.

Typical of this propaganda is the constant red-baiting, on the Hitler model, which culminated in the fantastic charges of "communism" directed by Lewis against President Murray and the CIO.

But now this whole conspiracy has been forced into the open it has lost much of its power for evil. The healthy revolt of the great majority of the membership of District 50 against the Lewis distatorship; and the indignation of the Mine Workers' rank and file against the betrayals of their leadership are the first symptoms of the storm of anger which Lewis has created in labor ranks.

The CIO executive board meeting showed the whole CIO united in militant determination to beat down the assaults and to expose the machinations of the Lewis conspiracy. In the spirit which this meeting revealed, there is no doubt that the CIO and labor generally will defeat the disruptionists and preserve the solidarity and unity so essential to victory over the Hitler Axis.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE SIMPLEST way to describe a social conflict—particularly in press headlines—is to personalize it as a fight between the leaders of the two opposing sides. But it is not the truest way.

A great historic development like the birth of the CIO used to be popularly described as if it were a prize fight between Lewis and Green.

Similarly today the papers are full of the personal conflict between CIO President Philip Murray and Mine Workers President John L. Lewis.

But we have to probe far beyond headlines and personalities to get the real story of a clash which concerns millions of people besides these two men.

Philip Murray took his stand at the Washington executive board meeting as president of the CIO, not just as plain Phil Murray. He was accorded the unanimous support of the movement he heads, not just because the union representatives felt he had been rottenly treated, but principally because they recognized him as spokesman and champion of the policies desired by their memberships.

Lewis, on the other hand, was denounced by the same meeting because he had come to be identified in the minds of the delegates with policies abhorrent to most of the membership of the CIO.

Just a few years ago Lewis was the unchallenged leader of the CIO, the hero of millions of workers who saw in him their champion. But last week not a voice was raised in his defense at a representative meeting of the national CIO. What are the real causes of such a basic change?

Many people date the beginning of this change to Lewis' endorsement of Willkie in the 1940 elections. This was admittedly a shock to millions of labor admirers of Roosevelt. And Lewis himself interpreted the labor vote for Roosevelt as an expression of lack of confidence in his own leadership when he retired from the CIO presidency.

But political endorsements in themselves have seldom been enough to determine confidence in union labor leadership. It was much more the issue of the spreading world war that created an increasingly sharp contrast between the policies of Lewis and those of the new president of CIO.

The America First group was widely distrusted by American working people, more because of the reactionary and even pro-Fascist character of many of its leaders than because of its isolationism. The association of Lewis with this group, through his daughter's membership, created wide labor suspicion and concern.

And when in the summer of 1941 Hitler turned east, transforming the conflict between Britain and Germany into a world war without discernible limits, Lewis continued such associations. He joined with discredited reactionary politicians like Herbert Hoover, Charles G. Dawes and Henry Fletcher in a statement opposing aid to invaded Russia and denouncing Roosevelt's policies of preparation for the increasingly inevitable involvement of the U. S.

By the time of the CIO Detroit convention in the fall of 1941, the lines were clearly and sharply drawn. American labor was now almost unanimously convinced—as shown by every democratic union expression — that Hitlerism was a world menace to freedom and democracy everywhere, including the United States; and that President Roosevelt's policies of all-out opposition to this menace must be supported.

Murray was the outstanding spokesman of this conviction on the part of American labor. The Detroit convention followed him without qualification because he voiced what every delegate knew to be the true sentiments of labor's millions.

But Lewis' personal representatives at this convention, both by their committee opposition to Roosevelt's foreign policies and by their refusal to join in the demonstrations for Murray, confirmed the growing impression that Lewis had parted company with the rank and file of American labor on the war issues.

None of the events since that time have deleted this impression. On the contrary, all the disruptions for which the CIO board has now publicly indicted Lewis—his attempts to undermine Murray's leadership, his refusal to pay per capita to the CIO, his maneuvers with Hutcheson, the raiding activities of District 50, etc.—give evidence of being an outgrowth of a basic policy.

This is the real background to the Lewis-Murray clash, which explains why the CIO membership now rallies so unanimously behind Murray.

Murray Brands Lewis A Disrupter

Following are excerpts from the address of CIO President Philip Murray reviewing the course of events affecting the relationship between the CIO and the United Mine Workers during the past 18 months. The speech was given at the CIO Executive Board meeting held in Washington June 6-8.

I am taking advantage of this opportunity to present to the members of the International Executive Board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations a history of some important matters affecting the relationships of the Congress of Industrial Organizations with the United Mine Workers of America; and in my resume of these doings I shall attempt to be about as brief and concise as I possibly can, with due regard to the importance of the situation.

I assumed the presidency of the Congress of Industrial Organizations in the month of November, 1940, under circumstances which I know most of you are aware of.

My predecessor, Mr. John L. Lewis, had stated in the course of a broadcast over the radio prior to the presidential election in the year of 1940 that if President Roosevelt were reelected he would consider his reelection as a repudiation of Mr. Lewis' leadership on the part of labor, and that he would accordingly resign his position as president of the CIO.

AT CONVENTION

It was in the fall of 1940 during the course of the Atlantic City Convention that Mr. Lewis, complying with his commitments, beseeched your humble servant to accept the presidency of this organization; and for a period of approximately ten days prior to and during the course of that convention, President Lewis pleaded to me with tears in his eyes to accept the presidency of this Union upon his resignation.

I protested the acceptance of the presidency and told him then that under no circumstances could I be considered as an aspirant to the high honor of the presidency of this great organization. It was after ten days of praying, beseeching, and pleading on the part of ex-President Lewis that I finally in the interest of this movement and its millions of members, accepted the presidency of the CIO.

I did so then with the distinct understanding that Mr. Lewis would lend every possible support to me in the conduct of my affairs as the president of this great Union.

MANY DISPUTES

I have had my personal disputes, personal disagreements with Mr. Lewis over matters of national and international significance. I have consistently supported the President of the United States since his election, day in and day out, without faltering.

I supported President Roosevelt for reelection in the fall of 1940 when President Lewis told me that I should not do so.

Prior to the Detroit Convention of the CIO in the fall of 1941, when my report had been prepared and read for submission to the Detroit CIO Convention, President Lewis evidenced disagreement with my declarations on foreign policy by suggesting that I should go to the city of Detroit and there in convention with him fight the foreign policies of the President of the United States.
